Several daily newspapers have given their approval to the idea advanced in these columns that Ontario should have a commissioner or minister of municipal affairs, says The Canadian Courier. Manitoba has a commissioner; Saskatchewan and Alberta have a minister. At this time, when municipalities need assistance and advice in financing, a provincial minister of municipal affairs would be of great assistance to every municipality. At present the town councils of cities, towns and villages have no adviser. The Provincial Government does nothing to help. These local bodies must blunder along as best they can. The farmers have a minister who is supposed to help them; the mining men have a minister to help them; other sections of the community get help and advice; but the people who look after municipal administration get none. In Great Britain, there is a Local Government Board which not only advises the town councils, but finances them.

This is a reform to which Canada has given too little attention and which is now a pressing national problem

STUDENTS LEFT FOR THEIR HOME UNAWARE THAT FATHER HAD BEEN KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Rose and Mary Convey, two young girls who have been attending the Continuation Classes in connection with St. Peter's School, left this morning via the eight o'clock train for Hastings, en route to their home which is near Brickley, about five miles from Hastings, and less than half an hour after their departure the children's aunt, Mrs. James Moran, 164 Lake street, with whom they had been staying, received a wire to the effect that Rose and Mary Convey's father, Phillip Convey, had been killed last night. The details of the fatality are meagre. All that is known is that Phillip Convey was driving home from Hastings, and the team of spirited horses which he was driving ran away, and in the mix-up which followed he was thrown out and killed.

Rose and Mary Convey left the city in the gayest of moods, happy at the thought of returning to the parental roof for the joyous Christmas time, and expectant that their father would be at the depot at Hastings to meet and welcome them. Instead, a widowed mother and bereaved family awaited them.

The two young girls, who have been very popular among the girls of their age at the school and at the Church of the Sacred Heart, will have the sympathy of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Moran left today at noon for Brickley to attend the funeral.

SUBMIT SCHEME TO CITY COUNCIL

Not Ready to Announce Plans for Display of the Flag

"Just what means will be adopted to promote a wider display of the flag in Peterborough is not yet ready for publication," declared Canon Davidson today.

There was a meeting of the committee last night in the Bank of Montreal chambers, where the report brought in on the question was favorably received and given a careful discussion. Canon Davidson says it is of a very moderate nature, but before publishing it the committee deemed it best to submit it to the city council for their approval.

Just as soon as this takes place, it will be given out.

HAD TIGHT GRIP ON THEIR PURSES

No Thefts Reported From This Morning's Market

Two fur muffs missing and one umbrella was the sum total of articles lost on the market square this morning which were reported to the chief of police. People held on to their pocketbooks and wallets pretty well as no money was reported lost or stolen which is rather surprising considering the hundreds of people who thronged the building all morning.

The chief said that one of the ladies who reported a lost muff had since recovered it.

FRONT IN BELGIUM IS ADVANCED, PROGRESS AT OTHER POINTS

Two Heavy Batteries of the Eneny on the Heights of the Meuse are Demolished, by Fire Directed by Aviators -- Positions Have Been Retained in Face of Violent Opposition

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 19. — The French War Office this afternoon gave out an official announcement as follows:

"During the day of December 18th we organized in Belgium the territory won from the enemy the evening before to the south of Dixmude, and we advanced our front to the south of the Inn at Korteker.

"Our advance to the south of Ypres has been continued over a very difficult and swampy territory.

"From the Lys to the Oise we have progressed, in the region of Notre Dame de Consolation, to the south of La Bassee, by more than one kilometre. During the past two days we also made progress in the direction of Carency, St. Laurent and Blangy.

"In spite of the very spirited counter attacks, the positions taken by us on December 17th have been retained.

"In the region of Albert, during the night from the 17th and during the day of the 18th, we advanced under a very violent fire of the enemy, and we reached the barbed wire entanglements of the second line of German trenches. To the north of Maricourt, we were obliged to abandon a trench occupied the night before and set on fire by the enemy by means of hand grenades.

"Several German trenches have been occupied in the region of Mamets and in the vicinity of Lihons. Three violent counter attacks on the part of the Germans have been repulsed.

"In the region of the Aisne there have been artillery engagements, and in Champagne the artillery of the enemy showed on December 18th increased activity as compared to the 17th.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of Lagruie, we blew up a German undermining trench. Near St. Hubert the enemy by a very spirited attack succeeded in making slight progress.

"It has been confirmed that on the heights of the Meuse our fire, directed by aviators, demolished two heavy batteries of the enemy and damaged a third battery."

RUSSIAN ARMORED TRAIN BLOWN UP.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 19. — A Budapest paper says that a Russian armored train conveying ammunition from Lemberg to the scene of fighting in the Carpathians has been blown up, indicating that Russia's communication with her southwestern army has been successfully attacked.

ONE HUNDRED LIVES LOST WITH MESSUDIEH.

ATHENS, Dc. 19. — A semi-official announcement made here says that one hundred lives were lost through the destruction of the old battleship Messudieh by a British submarine.

BERLIN, Dec. 19. — Allies' aeroplanes on Thursday night dropped bombs on Saarburg in Lorraine, doing considerable damage to the town and killing two soldiers and wounding a servant girl.

ASSESSMENTS FOR STREET PAVING ARE REVISED

Many Appeals are Decided by the Court of Revision Ruling is Made

The Court of Revision, composed of W. F. Johnston, chairman; B. Morrow and J. Finnie, is holding sittings this week to deal with appeals against the assessment for street paving. As was announced in yesterday's Review the court has ruled that only the ground floor tenants shall be taxed, thus tenants of offices and rooms on the upper floors are exempt from paying for the pavement.

At the sitting on Wednesday evening and the sitting yesterday afternoon the following appeals were dealt with:—

Wednesday's Sitting.

White and Ackford claimed they were assessed for 60 feet instead of 30 feet. Judgment that White and Ackford be assessed for 30 feet and Schneider estate for the other 30 feet.

J. H. Hamilton, for Peter Hamilton Co. claimed they were assessed for 190 feet 7 inches instead of 90 feet 7 inches and the Dominion Government should be assessed for 100 feet. Judgment: charge made as requested.

J. H. Metheral, for J. P. Metheral, claimed to be overassessed. Judgment: J. P. Metheral assessed for 30 feet 4½ inches, Dr. Morgan assessed for 65 feet, 9¾ inches.

W. H. Bradburn for Bradburn Estate claimed that he was assessed for 107 feet, on lot one north of Charlotte, east of George, part one, instead of 106 feet 9½ inches. Judgment: reduction made as requested.

W. H. Bradburn also appealed on property south of Simcoe, east of George, part one, claiming assessment should be 50 feet, 1½ inches, instead of 49 feet 9 inches. Judgment, 4½ inches added and 2 inches taken off Simcoe Street.

Lot one, north Brock, west of George, claiming 49 feet should be 40 feet. Judgment: reduction to 40 feet and 9 feet added to property of A. Fairburn.

Another lot in the same locality was assessed for 40 feet 6 inches instead of 40 feet. Judgment: assessment changed to 40 feet 2½ inches charged on Hunter Street.

Stenson estate claimed property on George Street which is assessed for 88 feet 3 inches, should be 87 feet. Judgment: reduction of 1 foot 3 inches off 502 George Street, and the same added to Public Library.

F. Blastorah for lot 6, south Hunter, west George, claimed assessment of 57 feet should be 51 feet, 6 inches. Reduction of 5 feet 1 inch made and added to Mrs. Roach.

J. W. McDermid for property on corner of George and Charlotte claimed assessment should be about 60 feet instead of 75 feet, 10 inches. Laid over.

Peterboro Curling Club appealed against assessment of 114 feet, 4 inches for their property. The judgment gave the club an assessment for 21 feet, and the remainder assessed to J. T. and R. C. Braund.

H. Thompson acting for Toronto Savings and Loan Co. claimed to be wrongly assessed for land on part one south of Hunter, east of George. The assessment was reduced 11 feet 1 inch, and the same charged to city for lane.

AN OLD DOCUMENT

Mr. Chris. Clemence, 395 Walton Street, showed The Review a curious document in the form of a copy of a letter of Jesus Christ which is said to have been found under a stone eighteen miles from Iconium, sixty-three years after the Crucifixion. The document appears to be very old, being yellow with age and the quality of the paper is that of the kind used many years ago. It has been in Mr. Clemence's family for about a hundred years. The document itself does not appear to be much older for there are no double characters or other typographical contractions that are found in old English prints and manuscripts.

The document contains the letter, supposed to be from Christ, King Agbarus's letter to the Saviour with His answer and Lentulu's epistle to the Senate of Rome. A man by the name of Daw was the printer and the place was Totnes but as no date is on it, the exact age of the document is not known.

CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

Ald. Duncan Has Served in Council for Eight Years

In an interview with Ald. Duncan yesterday, he stated to the Review that he certainly would be a candidate for the mayoralty this year, providing there is to be an election. Ald. Duncan stated that he had an understanding with Mayor Buller last year that if he (Ald. Duncan) was not a candidate, that Mayor Buller would not oppose him this year.

It now appears that there is likely to be an election, consequently Ald. Duncan is in the field for the mayoralty. He thinks he has earned the honor at the hands of the electors, having been eight years in the council, two years of which time he has been chairman of the property committee and two years chairman of the board of works, besides in other years having served on all committees of the council. He, therefore, appeals to the people for their support on his public performances.

NEXT CAMPAIGN IN BELLEVILLE

Mr. G. W. Mulligan Will Arrange for Meetings by Dr. Gordon

Mr. G. W. Mulligan, who is assisting Dr. Gordon in his Christian citizenship campaigns, is in the city, and reports successful meetings in Woodstock, where a two weeks' campaign has just been closed.

While in Woodstock, Dr. Gordon waged war on liquor, and, while his assertions were questioned by the police magistrate and the chief constable, Dr. Gordon was upheld by the mayor, who asserted that his statements were true, notwithstanding what the magistrate said.

Mr. Mulligan leaves for Belleville Monday to make arrangements for a campaign in that city after the Christmas holidays. Dr. Gordon is the guest of Mr. Weber. Mr. Greenslaw is visiting his mother in Detroit, and is still associated with Dr. Gordon, despite reports to the contrary.

CHICAGO GETS HUGE ORDERS

British Government Also Preparing Estimates for 6500 Motor Trucks

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 19. — Orders were received today from the government for forty-eight thousand pairs of workingmen's trousers for the use of sappers and miners, at a cost of $1.50 per pair. It is also stated here that the British Government is preparing estimates on sixty-five hundred motor trucks at a total cost of ten million dollars.

PRINCE BUYS STEAMER FOR HOSPITAL SHIP

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 19.—The Canadian Pacific steamer, Empress of India, has been sold to the Gaekwar of Baroda, the wealthiest prince of the Indian Empire and will be used as a hospital ship.

FAR BEHIND THE TIMES AT THE SIGN OF THE SCALES

Advanced methods prevail in Peterborough in most institutions but it has been suggested to The Review that there is one place a comparatively simple but useful change could be affected and that is at the daily police court. Far too much time it is asserted is pottered away in the court room every morning when cases requiring evidence to be taken down, come before the magistrate. The magistrate persists in laboriously copying down in long hand the depositions, a process as tiresome for the public who come to listen as it must be for himself. This trouble in most places the size of Peterborough is obviated by the presence of a court clerk or a stenographer and consequently a comparatively large docket of cases can be disposed of with great dispatch without the ends of justice being slighted in the least and without the magistrate having his attention diverted from the evidence of the witness, the prisoner or whoever is being examined.

Lack of Respect.

It is said also that another simple but appreciable change might be made in the opening of court. It does not look to an observer as if the bench were accorded proper and befitting courtesy in the local court. It is customary when a magistrate or judge of any court enters the court room for the chief of police to call order, whereupon every one in the room rises until the magistrate seats himself. It is only a custom and a recognition of his office, but it looks far better than the method which is in force at the Peterborough police court where no respect is displayed by any outward form.

ACTION OF THE GOVERNMENT IS CRITICIZED

London, Dec. 19.—Criticism regarding the appointment of Sir Henry Howard as a special envoy from Great Britain to the Vatican is now starting.

Rev. Dr. Clifford, the veteran Nonconformist minister, who is generally a staunch supporter of the government, writes in the Daily News, asking whether it was really necessary to add to the troubles of this supreme hour in the world's history by such an appointment. He says that the country should know precisely what the Duke of Norfolk has achieved in thus bringing about direct relations between Britain and the Holy See.

The Globe, in an editorial, says that the public should know that an embargo has been placed upon the discussion of Sir Henry Howard's mission. It thereupon proceeds to discuss the subject, declaring that the mission is a reversal of the Reformation, a policy not lightly to be reversed, even under the pressure of a great war.

London, Dec. 18.—The publication of the correspondence between the Protestant Alliance and the Foreign Office shows that the formed body lodged a protest immediately upon the announcement of the appointment of Sir Henry Howard as a special envoy to the Vatican. The alliance, in a lengthy letter, apprehends a danger that the opening of an accredited channel of communication with the Papacy may involve this country in the entanglement of Papal politics and intrigues. It quotes Cardinal Manning's remarkable statement, in which he held that the only solution of the question of the temporal power of the Pope would be found in a European war, when the Papacy would be reinstated as a sovereign power. By this last act of compromise, the alliance contends, the Government has ignored all the wonderful teachings of England's past history.

In reply, the Foreign Office points out that before the appointment was made the Italian Government was made acquainted with Great Britain's intention, and also that such missions, either temporary or permanent, do not run counter to the Italian law of guarantees, which defines the rights and privileges of the Vatican.

WE LOOK BUSY AND HAPPY HERE

Mr. Joe Marks Judges Peterboro is Better of Than Some Cities

With the same geniality that has made him a favorite in the theatrical world, Mr. Joe Marks is back in the city and while in the Empress Hotel this morning had a few things to say regarding business conditions in other cities compared with what he sees in Peterborough.

"Every one looks to be busy and happy around here," said Mr. Marks, "and I should judge that you are much better off than a good many other Ontario cities. Mr. Marks' standard of judgment in such matters should be valued as the show business is an excellent means to sound the financial condition of people." The company played to bumper houses in London, Ont., and is doing well in Woodstock.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1914

THE LOCAL MUNICIPAL SITUATION.

THE SITUATION of municipal politics in Peterborough is assuming a curious aspect. Those holding down seats by virtue of the last municipal election are generally in favour of working the patriotic idea by calling off an election and devoting the money that would be spent by the city to the Belgian Relief Fund or to some other worthy object. They are sitting, so to speak, on the top of the pyramid.

At the bottom, holding up the pyramid, are a great many citizens who have no interest in those who sit on the top. Then there are others, restless spirits, shifting around uneasily, and rocking the pyramid at times. These want an election. In fact, they have no objection in upsetting the whole business and toppling aldermen and all down on the electors. Things have gone along very quietly, those at the top saying nothing, and trying to keep any bad weather from reaching the municipal ship of state. It remains to be seen whether those riding at the top of the pyramid will be able to hang on.

THE RESULTS OF THE GERMAN RAID.

THE ATTACK by German raiders on English east coast towns seems to have been either foolish or a failure. If no other object than a raid was in view it was foolish, because it has no weakening effect on Britain, while exposing the raiders to death and the loss of their ships. If it had any ulterior motive, such as drawing off a number of vessels from the British North Sea fleet so that the German fleet could attack the British with more assurance of success, it was a complete failure. It did succeed, however, in producing a lot of war extras and groundless reports that had no cause for appearing. Germany gains nothing, the war extras are a losing game, and Britain loses a little complacency, of which she has, perhaps, too much.

THE ONTARIO CABINET.

CHANGES in the Ontario Cabinet are looked for in the near future, and some are already foretelling in what the shake-up will result. Here is what the Hamilton Spectator's prophet says:

> "The approaching retirement of the Hon. J. J. Foy has rendered necessary a reconstruction of the Ontario Cabinet. As attorney-general it is understood that he will be succeeded by the Hon. W. J. Hanna, now provincial secretary. Mr. Hanna's record is a guarantee that, as the mainspring of the legal department of the Government, he will be alert and diligent, responsive to public opinion, and fearless in the fulfilment of every known duty. It seems to be settled that as provincial secretary he will be succeeded by the Hon. I. B. Lucas, now provincial treasurer. Mr. Lucas, like the premier, is personally a total abstainer and prohibitionist. Perhaps it is for this reason that he has been transferred to a department wherein undue sympathy with the liquor-selling fraternity would be quickly discerned and stigmatised. The importance which the premier attaches to the proper regulation and gradual diminution of the liquor traffic may be judged by his determination to take Mr. Lucas away from the department of finance and place him in charge of the work over which, ever since the formation of the Whitney Administration, Mr. Hanna has presided. Mr. Lucas was greatly interested in his task as provincial treasurer, and had acquitted himself brilliantly concerning it. But he is willing to answer the call of duty, and devote himself to social service, including the care of many penal and benevolent institutions. Mr. Hearst himself relinquishes the custody of lands, forests, and mines, and we may rest assured that in Mr. T. W. Garry, of South Renfrew, he has found a man after his own heart for the mingled burden and opportunity. The successor of Mr. Lucas as provincial treasurer will be Mr. George Howard Ferguson, of Grenville, who for some time past has been one of the foremost debaters and workers in the Legislature. He it was, it will be remembered, who unearthed the Trent River Canal scandal of the Laurier Administration. His advancement will be gall and wormwood to the Liberals, Provincial and Dominion; but even in war-time we cannot always spare their feelings. On the whole, the cabinet is well officered, well balanced, and, through the infusion of new blood, likely to be more progressive and efficient than ever."

WE HAVE RECEIVED a copy of a pamphlet dealing with regulations under the destructive insect and pest act governing the importation, sale, shipment and exportation of the common or Irish potato (Solanum tuberosum L.). A pamphlet with a title as formidable as that ought to be sent to the front and fired at the Germans. Otherwise the brochure is a valuable and useful document.

A PASSENGER'S VERSION.

A PASSENGER on the Ortega thus describes in the Westminster Gazette Captain Kinneir's exploit:

> "When the steamer I was on was passing a little way northwest of Cape George, on the southwest coast of Chile, we had a rather thrilling adventure and an exciting escape from two German cruisers. The first cruiser appeared on September 19th, and as it was impossible for the ship to make the Magellan Straits in time, the captain headed straight for a small inlet just by Cape George, in order, presumably, to lie inside Chilean waters and find a safe anchorage. On seeing the intention of our captain, the cruiser fired twice with her bow guns, fountains of spray being thrown up by the shots, which, however, failed to strike the liner. I subsequently learned that the stokers during the critical time had been assisted in the stokehold by the officers of the ship, and, if this is so, great credit is due to them for the promptness with which they took their coats off.
>
> The chase was very close, as, when we entered the inlet—which was the time we were fired on—the cruiser was only ten miles off.
>
> The cruiser then swung broadside on, and we all expected the end. However, she steamed slowly north, and we continued at full steam into the inlet. After going ahead for about an hour the steamer slowed down, and we finally anchored right inside. During the night a searchlight was flashed down the inlet by one of the cruisers, but we were hidden. At dawn the next day we steamed out across the inlet and made for a small channel. This we followed, and entered the Nelson Strait, Smyth Channel, and Straits of Magellan.
> As we crossed the inlet we saw the masts and smoke of the two cruisers, evidently waiting outside for us, thinking the captain would not dare to take the risk he did of trying to find his way into the Magellan Straits through those uncharted channels we followed. The passage through took us three days and nights, and part of the way we were led by a ship's boat, heaving the lead."

The writer, who, we notice, mentions two cruisers, although only one was spoken of in the official report, added that no other steamer had ever been known to have taken the route this liner did from Cape George to the Nelson Strait.

THE CANADIAN WAR.

"THE CANADIAN WAR" is the title of a pamphlet, or series of pamphlets, which are designed to set forth in accurate and authoritative form the Canadian aspects of the present great war. The editors are experienced and well known, including Britton B. Cook, Helen Merrill, and Peter MacArthur. The first number will comprise about thirty-two pages, and will be ready about December 21st. It is edited voluntarily, printed at cost, and any profit will go to war funds. The address is 32 Church Street, Toronto, where orders should be left of those who wish to secure this pamphlet, and at the same time assist the Belgian and other war funds.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE VANCOUVER WORLD has gone bankrupt. This newspaper, one of the best in Canada and one of the leading journals of British Columbia, has been unable to weather the financial storm caused by the war. If we mistake not, this was the newspaper that criticized Marie Lloyd, who attacked the editor with a whip. It is doubtful whether any newspaper in Canada is doing anything better than paying its way. Many are not breaking even.

DESTINY.

(Jean Cameron Smith, in Toronto Globe.)

The needles click on the web of gray,
But the thoughts of the knitter are far away
In the sunshine fair of a long-past day.

Where on a lawn two little boys
Are playing War with their soldier toys,
Care-free and merry with childhood's joys.

"When I'm a man, I'll a captain be,"
Arthur is saying with dignity,
"And I'll lead my men on to victory!

"I'll shoot off the heads of all bad men."
"Then I'll put their heads on right again;
For I'll be a doctor!" cried Baby Ben.

In the first contingent over the seas,
Canada sent none braver than these,
Eager their God and their King to please.

The colonel commands his regiment,
The surgeon has charge of a hospital tent,
And proud is the face o'er the knitting bent.

Germany's Soldiers Are no Cinch.

(Orillia Packet.)

The Packet has never credited stories of the inferiority of German soldiers, or the pictures drawn of unwilling men forced at the point of sword or pistol to face their enemy. As the war progresses one hears less of such tales, and recently the London Times published a letter from a general officer commanding a British brigade, in which the writer says: "I am disgusted by the accounts I see in the papers of the inferiority of Germans as soldiers; don't believe one word of it. They are quite splendid in every way. Their courage, efficiency, organization, equipment and leading are all of the very best, and never were surpassed by any troops ever raised. They come on in masses against our trenches and machine-guns, and come time after time, and they are never quiescent, but always on the offensive. I am full of admiration for them and so are all who know anything about them. It is a pity that such fine soldiers should have behaved so badly in Belgium and here; they have behaved badly, there is no doubt about it."

Liberals of a New School.

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

New Brunswick Liberals have decided that the party will be guided by the principles of right and justice, not by political expediency. Go to it, brothers. To you will accrue the rewards or reverses of a new and startling example.

(Barrie Advance.)

According to recent newspaper references there are twenty-one cities which have the "finest" union station on the continent. Orillia G. T. R. station is not included in this list, however.

BIG AND LITTLE PRICES AT CHRISTMAS MARKET

Offering in Christmas Supplies Was Large and Buying Was Brisk

That Christmas comes but once a year required no emphasis at the market today, where one of the largest crowds in the history of the place was gathered. At times, one had to force his way in the hall, if he desired to buy, and occasionally a persistent customer would be rewarded by a fleeting glimpse of what was on the tables. But the buying was good, nevertheless, and this was the day to buy your Christmas turkey, goose or chicken. There were prices to suit the most meagre pocketbook. Fowl, as might be expected, was the dominating offering, fetching reasonable prices. Plump turkeys were in great demand, and the range of prices went from $1.50 to $3.50, and most purchasers found something to satisfy them between these extremes.

Still, there were some people heard complaining that things were too expensive, and the farmer was getting the best of the deal. Eggs were scarcer than ever, the hen having made up his mind to lay down on the job for a season. What few were offered sold at 45 and 50 cents, although several dozen of "not fresh" eggs sold for 5 and 8 cents less.

Butter was not over-plentiful, either, selling at 29 and 30 cents.

"I think the farmer is getting the best of this deal," said one woman, as she handed over $1.50 for a fine fat goose. She evidently wanted something for nothing, if the reporter was any judge of geese.

A little further on the scribe paused before a woman with several turkeys displayed. "What is the price of your turkeys?" "This one is $1.50, this one $1.65, and this one $2.00," was her answer. They looked good for the prices, weighing about 13, 14 and 16 pounds.

Chickens could be bought at almost any price, but a decent couple brought about 85 cents. Many were sold.

The crowd on the Market Square was not quite so large as last Saturday, but this was due to the inclement weather. There were ample offerings of lamb, beef, and pork. Lamb was 13 and 14 cents a pound, and pork 11 and 12 cents, while beef was 9 to 11 cents. Not many apples were shown today, nor potatoes.

Farmers and the buying public are reminded that another market will be held on Wednesday of next week.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 18.—Liverpool cables were firm and higher this morning, which caused a firmer opening in the market here. Wheat opened ⅜d to ⅝d higher, oats ⅛d higher for May, and flax 1c higher. The advance was not maintained, owing to heavy profit-taking, which offset a decidedly active trade in export. One firm sold early this morning about 120,000 bushels, and later it was claimed that a round 500,000 bushels were sold for export. Terminal elevator companies, Ontario millers and exporters were all in the buying. Wheat closed ¼c up on all months, oats unchanged to ⅛c up, and flax ⅛c to ¼c higher.

There was a fair demand for all grades of cash wheat, quite equal to the offerings. There was also a fair enquiry for cash oats and flax, while for all grades of barley the demand was active. Cash wheat closed ⅛c higher on contract grades. Receipts were not heavy, inspections Thursday being 297 cars, as against 708 last year, and in sight were 155 cars.

Is Sultan Of Egypt

Uncle of the Desposed Khedive is Selected by the British Government

LONDON, Dec. 19.—A British protectorate over Egypt was formally proclaimed yesterday and Prince Hussein Kemal has been appointed sultan and has accepted that position. Prince Hussein is an uncle of Abbas Hilmi, until now khedive. The French Government has recognized the British protectorate over this country, in which France formerly had such important interests, and in return the British Government has given notice that it adheres to the Franco-Moorish treaty of 1912, which, following the Agadir affair, gave France a protectorate over Morocco.

In a letter addressed to Prince Hussein on his appointment as the British acting high commissioner for Egypt, Milne Cheetham, details the efforts which he says Britain made to avoid war with Turkey, and which were frustrated by the war party and the Ottoman Cabinet. Mr. Cheetham states that there is ample evidence that Abbas Hilmi had thrown in his lot with the enemies of Great Britain, with the result "that the rights over the Egyptian executive by the Sultan of Turkey and the late khedive are forfeited."

In inviting Prince Hussein to accept the office as "the prince of the family of Mohemet Ali most worthy to occupy the khedival position with the title and style of Sultan of Egypt." Mr. Cheetham announces that Great Britain accepts all the responsibilities for the defence of the territories under the new sultan, that all Egyptian subjects will be entitled to the protection of Great Britain, that with the disappearance of Ottoman suzerainty the restrictions placed by Ottoman firmans (proclamations) upon the numbers and organization of the army will disappear, that the relations with foreign powers will be conducted by a British representative in Cairo and that the religious convictions of the Egyptian subjects will be respected scrupulously.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—M. Delcasse, the Foreign Minister of France has cabled the Canadian Government expressing the thanks of France for the establishment of the hospital at Dinard. The cable reads:

THEOPHILE EDLCASSE.

"I am happy to take this occasion to once more ask your royal highness to communicate the thanks of the Government of the republic for the liberal contribution made by Canada for the care of the wounded of the allied armies."

The hospital is fully equipped and treating many wounded. It is in charge of Dr. Duckworth Baker.

Turks Lost Last African Holding.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The British press yesterday makes a feature of the annexation of Egypt and the Soudan, which takes from the Sultan of Turkey 14,000,000 subjects and 1,300,000 square miles of land. This action moreover robs the Turk of his last foothold in Africa, Italy having taken Tripoli from him a few years ago.

Limburg Cannot Pay Levy.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 19.—A despatch to The Telegraaf from Maestricht says that the Germans have imposed a new war tax of 2,000,000 francs ($400,000) on the Belgian province of Limburg. The population is extremely poor and is unable to pay it.

British Sailings Suspended.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 19.—The escape of the German cruiser Dresden has caused a suspension of the sailings of British ships to the Pacific. There are rumors here that another German fleet is coming.

NO WARSHIPS WERE LOST

Admiralty Denies German Assertions Regarding East Coast Raid

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The Admiralty has issued a statement denying that any British warships were lost during the recent raid by a German squadron on the east coast of England. The statement adds that all German assertions to the contrary are untrue.

That the British destroyer Hardy was among the warships which engaged the German squadron that made a raid on the east coast of England last Wednesday was disclosed by an Admiralty casualty list issued last night. The list shows that two men weer killed and 15 wounded aboard the Hardy.

As a result of the bombardment the kingdom has been flooded with posters, saying: "Avenge Scarborough! Up and at 'em now!"

PRINCESS PATS WERE INJURED

Canadian Officers are Burned in Tent Fire

SALISBURY, Dec. 19.—Several Canadians who came over with the Princess Patricias left the regiment upon arrival here to rejoin the British regiments with which they were formerly identified. Three of them were wounded in recent battles. Corpl. De Wilton, ex-Life Guardsman, and formerly physical instructor of the Winnipeg police force, is reported killed. The others had their wounds treated in England and returned to the front.

Two Princess Patricia officers, Talbot Papineau, a Montreal lawyer, and Stewart of Halifax, Nova Scotia, were seriously burned when their tent caught fire while they slept. Their colleagues effected their rescue. Both were so badly burned that they cannot accompany the regiment to the front, but will follow later. Their recovery will take weeks.

Fifty men of the 78th Nova Scotia Highlanders have joined the Princess Patricia's Regiment, which was under strength. The Princess Patricias have replaced the Ross rifle with the British arm, which is the standard weapon of the division with which they will serve.

The Patricias form a part of the 80th Brigade. Their colleagues are the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, the Shropshires and the 60th Rifles, all regulars recently returned from Egypt and China. Gen. Snow commands the division.

FALSE ALARM CAUSED SCARE

Hartelpool Heard Germans Had Come Again

HARTLEPOOL, Dec. 19.—Hundreds of the inhabitants of Hartlepool fled inland yesterday when someone spread a false alarm that German ships were again off the port. Workmen rushed to their homes and sent their families to the interior. Many of the refugees were reassured, and returned to their homes last night.

Th list of identified dead in Hartlepool alone as a result of the German bombardment totals ninety-three. The widow of Lance-Corpl. Clark, who was killed by a shell, has received a message of sympathy from Lord Kitchener, and another from the King and Queen.

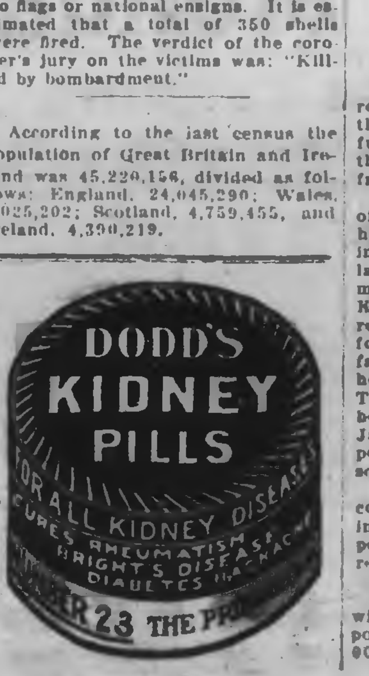
The Admiralty, replying to a request of the town officials for an inquiry into the attack, said:

"We appreciate the composure with which the Hartlepools have borne themselves in this first experience of German fire. All the facts are known to the Admiralty, and no further statement on them can be made at present."

Inquest at Scarborough.

SCARBOROUGH, Dec. 19.—Witnesses at yesterday's inquest over the victims of the German bombardment testified that forty minutes elapsed between the arrival and departure of the German cruisers, which carried no flags or national ensigns. It is estimated that a total of 350 shells were fired. The verdict of the coroner's jury on the victims was: "Killed by bombardment."

According to the last census the population of Great Britain and Ireland was 45,220,156, divided as follows: England, 24,045,290; Wales, 2,025,202; Scotland, 4,759,455, and Ireland, 4,390,219.



Dad's Xmas Surprise—

—the long wished for

New Scale Williams Player Piano

With The Meister Touch

The family did not know how big dad's heart was until this Xmas. It was not all dad's fault, though. He did not believe that it was possible for him to buy a player piano on such favorable terms. So when we came to dad and told him that we would let him have a real New Scale Williams Meister-Touch Player for $25.00 down and $15.00 each month until the whole price of $700.00 was paid in full, he said, "I'll take it and it's certainly the best $25 worth I ever got in Xmas presents."

We have other styles of Players for other fathers, at greater or smaller prices. Ask about them.

STARTS MOVE FOR PEACE

Prince Von Buelow is Working for an Even Break

MILAN, Dec. 19.—Prince von Buelow, who arrived in Rome Thursday, in his new ambassadorial capacity, is said in political circles to be intent on frustrating Italy's threatened entry into the European struggle and against his Imperial allies by inducing the Italian Government to assume the role of the world's peacemaker on the basis of "neither victor nor vanquished." The Kaiser deems the present an opportune time by reason of the persistent deadlock on the Belgian-French front, and the decided check all along the eastern line and to the Russian advance. This version well agrees with the statement in the Vatican press that Emperor Francis Joseph, regretting the failure of the Pope's appeal for a Christmas truce through persistent opposition of Russia and France, has warmly welcomed and supported Benedict XV.'s resolve to exert further diplomatic pressure at the beginning of the New Year, with a view to stopping the war.

HOLD KIACHOW

Japan Will not Lightly Yield Territory in the Far East

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The Tokio correspondent of The Morning Post gives the Japanese attitude regarding the future of Kiaochow and the islands in the Pacific which have been seized from Germany.

To appreciate the Japanese point of view, he says, the circumstances of her occupation of these German holdings must be considered. Emphasis is laid on the conditions of Japan's ultimatum, which promised the return of Kiaochow to China if Germany would relinquish her hold without the use of force, the Japanese pointing to the fact that Germany did not release her hold without heavy cost to Japan. The reduction of Tsingtao cost Japan heavily both in blood and money, and Japan also is put to the expense of policing the Pacific with a widely scattered fleet.

"It is clear," the correspondent continues, "that the general feeling in Japan is that none of the German possessions captured can be lightly released."

France in three months ending with October imported 470,000,000 pounds of wheat, of which 325,000,000 were from the United States.

WILL NOT INTERFERE.

U. S. Does Not Intend to Protest Bombardment of Coast Towns.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Determined that the United States shall continue uninvolved in the controversy which has arisen between the European belligerents over alleged violations of The Hague conventions, President Wilson and Secretary Bryan will make no representations to Germany concerning the bombardment of the east coast of England by German warships.

Suggestions from the British press that the United States should take the initiative in protesting to Germany for the alleged infraction of an article of The Hague conventions, which prohibits naval bombardments of "undefended towns," has met with no response from the Washington Government.

No formal communication on the subject has come from Great Britain.

Something Big Under Way?

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs from Rotterdam:

"During the last few days refugees arriving from Heyst state that they were advised by German soldiers to leave for the Netherlands because something very serious is imminent. Thy tramped all the way unhindered by the sentinels on the coast. At Antwerp 70,000 troops are expected to arrive within the next few days."

CENTENARIAN KNITS FOR BOYS

Mrs. John Hughan, one of the oldest residents of Walkerton, Ont., has just knitted two pairs of socks for boys at the front. The old lady attached a cord to each pair with the following text written in her own hand: "Be of good cheer. Be not afraid. It is I," and on the reverse side of the card, "From Mrs. John Hughan, 90 years of age, Walkerton, Ont., Canada."

The parcel has been sent to Miss McNab for the McNab Red Cross League, and will be sent to the front with the next consignment.

Kindly Warning.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY

Kemptville Pastor Will Preach at George Street Church

Next Sunday is the Sunday School anniversary of the George Street Methodist Church. Rev. G. J. Clendinnen of Kemptville will be the preacher for the occasion. Rey. Mr. Clendinnen is an excellent speaker and thoroughly conversant with Sunday school and young people's work. He is the representative member of the Montreal conference on the Sunday School Board of the Methodist Church of Canada and also a prominent member of the union committee for church union in Canada.

George Street Methodist Sunday School is in a very prosperous condition at present. Large in attendance well organized and manned under a splendid staff of teachers and officers with Mr. S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, as the capable superintendent. Grace Sunday School or Barnardo Ave. is a branch of George St. School and doing equally as good work under the superintendency of Mr. A. F. Hagerman. Both schools are under the same board of management and will unite in the anniversary services on Sunday. On Tuesday evening they will hold their anniversary Christmas concert with an excellent program provided by the children. One interesting feature of the Tuesday night program will be the fact that all the classes this year are giving gifts in money or produce to the Belgian Relief Fund. All friends are welcome to these anniversary services.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The school boys are now having their holidays so the rooms are filled with them, morning afternoon and evening and will be until the 4th of January. The officers of the association have planned many events to occur during the next two weeks to interest and amuse the young men.

Water was turned on the court Friday afternoon and it is expected that the ice will be in condition for use by the fore part of next week.

Mr. W. H. Collier kindly loaned his automobile for a trip to the woods for evergreens on Friday. The building is to be decorated on the first and second floors and soon will be giving evidence of the holiday spirit.

An all day program has been planned for New Year's Day which will include special events for boys in the forenoon, reception of parents, and friends and a musical program in the afternoon and a program of instruments, and vocal music, gymnasium contests and so forth in the evening. The plan will be to throw the whole of the building open to the public on the 1st of January, making privileges free to all young men.

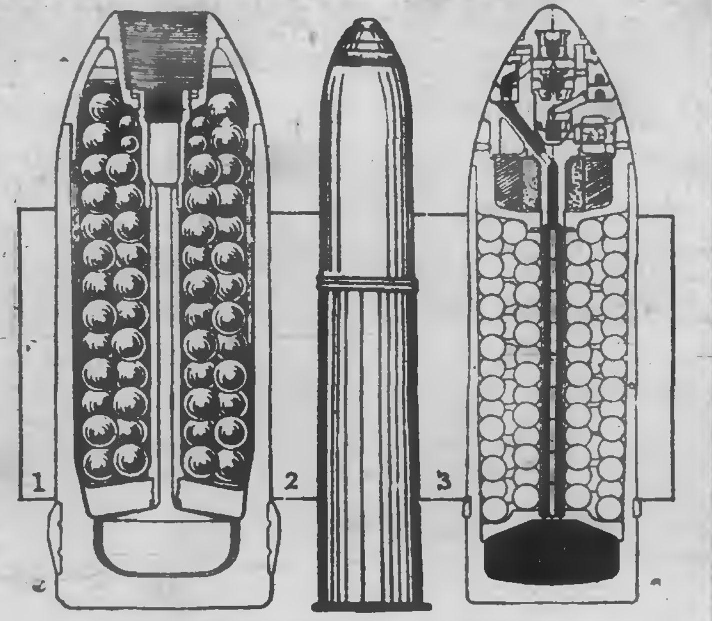
The building will be open as usual on Christmas Day, except it will be closed from 12 to 2 and 5 to 7 p.m. The association extends a cordial invitation to every young man to make the Y.M.C.A. his headquarters during the holiday season.

Dr. J. E. Middleton will address the Life Problem Club Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. Subject: "Choosing a Vocation." We trust that many young men will be present as this meeting is open to all men.

An extra attendance is expected at the Bible Class next Monday night in view of the little contest that has been on this week. Every young man is invited to unite in Bible study work.

The basket ball games will be played this evening between the Jr. Business Men and the Dread-Nots, Excelsior Club vs. St. Pauls, to which every one is invited.

Commander of H.M.S. Glasgow says the German ships fired 600 shots at the Glasgow, five of which hit her. Evidently the temperance movement is making no headway among the German sailors.



SHRAPNEL, ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Figure 1 shows the shrapnel shell as it was first produced, when it was invented to offset the advantage taken by forces which, following lessons learned in the Crimean war, refused to stand in close formation and permit themselves to be cut to pieces by round shot. This is a hollow steel projectile packed with bullets and containing a charge of powder in the base. A time fuse ignites the charge during flight, and the bullets are projected forward, spreading outwards as they go. An 18-pound shell covers a tract of ground 300 yards long by 35 yards wide with 365 heavy bullets. Figure 2 shows a French quick-firer shell, the charge which sends the projectile from the gun and the shell itself being done up together in what resembles a gigantic rifle cartridge. Figure 3 shows shrapnel de luxe. The bursting charge is one of the latest high power explosives. It is known as the "Universal Shell."

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

There was a good turnout again this week, being the final meeting for 1914 of Peterboro's Trades and Labor Council. President J. J. Hartley was in the chair. It is worthy of note that the presiding officer of the past year has been absent from his post but once, with the very good reason of his being out of town on that occasion.

The Musicians' Delegate.

In response to a missive from Secretary Wm. Stevens, George Chambers of the local A. F. of M. referred that official to Mr. Nicholls of the same local. Mr. Nicholls' reply was a curt letter which amounted practically to a pointed injunction that Mr. Stevens should mind his own business. More than this will be expected from Mr. Nicholls later on.

Underpaid Workmen.

The committee appointed to look into the case of a fleeced employe reported that no notice had been taken of the solicitor's letter. Another employe received the magnificent sum of $4.50 for 96 hours' night work, this man having entered his production in a private book and finding at the end of two weeks' effort that his amount and that of the office differed widely. Another complaint is that a day's pay was donated the Patriotic Fund without the men's consent.

McGregor a Labor Candidate.

A representative from the Pattern Makers announced that Mr. R. McGregor would run as Aldermanic candidate. A committee was named to assist and appeared anxious to work for Mr. McGregor's success. The council have other men who are willing but have not the necessary property qualification. During the discussion it was mentioned that Mr. Burnham was strongly in favor of abolishing this handicap, and legislators of a similar build are desirable from the workers' point of view.

One Man, One Job.

There was a kick coming about the council's choice of poll clerks. This job was given to men who already had sufficient, apparently, of life's necessities. Why not give the job to men who are minus employment through no fault of their own, of which Peterboro possesses its full quota.

Election of Officers.

The annual election of officers will be held the second meeting in January. It was felt that probably all new delegates for 1915 would not be nominated by the date of the first meeting.

Another Barber.

The Henderson barber shop, next the Little Windsor on Brock St., has surrendered its card.

A Treat in Store.

Mr. Carey, Ontario representative of the A. F. of M., is to be asked to pay Peterboro a visit, to which request he no doubt will accede.

An Irishman's Raise.

The boys who assisted our gallant postles with sleigh at Xmas during the rush were recompensed at the rate of 75 cents per day in past years. This year it is thought that married out-of-works may take the job so the sum has been increased to $1.00.

Labor Hall is Open All Day.

The labor hall is open to all who may care to enjoy its shelter whilst idle this winter.

The Season's Greetings.

The president closed the last meeting of the year with a few appropriate remarks, concluding with the old familiar greeting: "Happy Xmas and a Glad New Year.

Hang It All!

The village carpenter had given so generously of his services and sound advice toward rebuilding the school that when it was completed the villagers agreed that he should be asked to speak after the luncheon which was to follow the opening service. The day and the carpenter's speech came.

"Ladies and gentlemen — Dear friends," he began, his brown face very red indeed, "I am a great deal better fitted for the scaffold than for public speaking." Then he realised what he had said and sat down amid roars of laughter.—London Telegraph.

Cornering Righteousness.

The world is full of suspicion, which in nearly every case is unfounded. An unbounded and universal trust should take its place. I can give you an instance of what I consider this unhappy state of things when I say that two strangers can seldom speak casually to each other without a mutual caution and suspicion. We all trust ourselves. Our weak point is that we don't trust our neighbor. We each think, as it were, that we're made a corner in righteousness.—H. M. Edginton in "Oh, James!"

Hector Smith was also drunk on Brock street and received the same assessment.

STORIES OF RUSSIAN REVERSES ARE BERLIN EXAGGERATIONS

GERMANS LEAVE LODZ

London Times' Petrograd Correspondent Says Anxiety of Germans to Prevent the Invasion of Silesia is Leading Them Into Erratic Campaigning---Russia Confident of Clearing Flanks.

LONDON, Dec. 19. — A Central News despatch from Petrograd says: According to high authority Lodz has been evacuated by the Germans, who are convinced that the town cannot serve as a base of operations.

The fighting around Lodz was the bloodiest in the whole campaign. Germany sacrificing her men ruthlessly in order to hold this strategic point on the Lowicz-Warsaw railway.

As there is as yet no official statement from Petrograd to bear out the claim made by Berlin of a sweeping victory in the east for German arms, attention is directed here to the warning of the military critic of The Vorwaerts against what it describes as the "misleading exaggeration" of the Berlin press. Another significant despatch is that from The London Times' Petrograd correspondent, which has passed the Russian censors, and which is most optimistic in tone, regarding the outcome of the present manoeuvres in Poland and Galicia.

The London Times' correspondent at Petrograd says:—

Like the Austro-Germanic inroads into Poland, the enemy's incursions into Galicia have been thrice repeated, each time with shorter range. At present the invaders have been arrested on the very borders of the province they seek to reconquer. Some manoeuvring on the part of Gen. Radko Dmitrieff's corps sufficed to check the invading columns, although they crossed the Carpathians along a wide front extending between the salt mines at Wieliczka and the head waters of the River San. We are unable as yet to follow the events now developing in the northern Carpathian valleys. All we know for a certainty is that the greatest animation prevails at Lwow (Lemberg) and among the Russian troops in Galicia at the prospect of finally crushing the foe.

Nor is definite information forthcoming yet regarding the new point of attack in Von Hindenburg's invasion of Poland. The fruitlessness of his efforts to break through the Russian lines on the Bzura must have suggested to him the advisability of action elsewhere — probably farther south, presumably in the region of Wielun. Whether the expected blow from that point will be directed against Warsaw or Kielce must be a matter of speculation. It should be remembered that the enemy's real objective is not the "possession of Warsaw or the relief of Przemysl, etc., but the prevention of the Russian invasion of Silesia. This explains the feverish activity of the German high command and the apparent inability to stick to a consecutive line of operation. Russian and allied plans are well served thereby, as the enemy comes out to be destroyed instead of waiting in the trenches at home, but all his efforts can only stave off the day of reckoning.

The Russian armies are within a stone's throw of the Silesian border, north of Cracow, which is the real pivot of all operations at present developing. The desperate flanking moves on the Bzura and from the Carpathians only serve to indicate that the Russians hold the pivot firmly, whence in good time they will sweep the flanking columns off the road of advance into the heart of Germany.

French Protectorate Recognized.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Great Britain has recognized the French protectorate over Morocco and declared her adhesion to the Franco-Moroccan treaty of March, 1912.

The Franco-Moroccan treaty of 1912 instituted a French protectorate over Morocco with a French resident general who exercises civil and military powers under the sovereignty of the Sultan, at its head. The treaty proclaimed the religious freedom of the people and gave France the right for the maintenance of order to enter into military occupation of any points.

Previously France and Germany had signed a convention whereby Germany's commercial and industrial interests were not to be impeded and Germany undertook not to hinder the establishment of the protectorate.

AWFUL FLOODS OF CHINA

Yangtse on a Rampage is Like the Mississippi.

China has many floods. Along the Yangtse river there is oftentimes a tremendous overflow, just as occurs in America along the Mississippi. A recent account by a missionary well describes a typical devastating flood in China.

This missionary, writing from Wuhu, one of the largest ports on the river, located 60 miles above Nanking, says:

"The rains have swollen the river tremendously in the high plateau of Tibet, and the melting snows from the western mountains have made the Yangtse rise with fearful rapidity. High water mark has been growing higher day by day. The water finally came over the dykes in the lower rice fields. It rose to the floors of the houses located along the river, and the people began to lay plank walks along the streets, elevated to such height as to enable them to get about. These elevated plank walks soon were necessary inside of the houses. Still the water rose. Still higher did the natives elevate their plank walks. The poorer Chinese men and women and children, dwelling in their mud huts, saw the mud which comprised the walls of their homes washed away, and there was nothing for them to do but gather together their household effects and move to a higher part of the city. There they would build another mud house. Perhaps, instead, they would erect on cross poles, like an American Indian tepee, a house built of thick matting. This at least would serve as a temporary shelter from the cold and rain. Still the river was rising. The natives worked day and night. There was no rest for anyone.

"Every effort was being made to strengthen the support of the river's dykes, in much the same manner as along the Mississippi in America. When a break occurred in the dyke that hitherto had been kept intact, groups of highly excited Celestials would gather as the water poured into their fields. One gang of natives set up a furious beating on their gongs to call the neighbors to help repair the break in the dyke before it was too late. Other natives combining faith with work, would burn great bunches of incense and firecrackers, kow-towing to the gods presiding over that district to 'save the rice fields.'

"One by one, however, the dykes gave way. The Yangtse still climbed upward on the high water mark register, and the fields had to be abandoned. Thousands of natives, reluctant to abandon all their earthly possessions, remained until the very last hope had disappeared, and finally could be seen fleeing for their [illegible] the onrushing flood."

Austrians Surrender To Servians.

PARIS, Dec. 19.—The Servian authorities have re-established themselves in the vicinity of Podrine, where the Austrian troops surrendered to them, says a despatch from Nish to a news agency. Prisoners say that the Austrian losses in the recent engagements in killed and wounded were large, and that they exceeded the losses in prisoners. Heavy casualities are shown by the innumerable unburied bodies of Austrian soldiers found on the line of their retreat. Loznitza, where there has been no fighting recently, was burned by the Austrians.

Those Queer Girls.

BRITISH TRAINING METHODS UPHELD BY PRESENT WAR

The British military authorities are raising a new army of more than a million men, and it is natural that those responsible for the training are looking carefully at the record on the continent to see whether the methods of training which have been developed and practised in the last ten years are correct. The result is to be found in certain publications designed to guide officers in their work at home.

The general effect of these records of the experiences of the last four months is that the training of the British army has been conducted on sound and correct lines. Those who would fit themselves to face the enemy must study the text books in use when the war broke out. Of course, certain wrinkles are learned from practical experience.

For example, an officer of high rank, after remarking on the effectiveness of the German artillery fire, says:

"The German infantry, on the other hand, is inferior to our own in developing fire effect. A short field of fire (500 yards or even less) has been found sufficient to check a German infantry attack. Tactically, therefore, in occupying ground for defence, every effort should be made to combine the fire of our own guns and rifles against the enemy's infantry, while denying to the enemy the use of his artillery by the siting of trenches in positions which it is intended to hold on to, behind rather than on the crest line or forward slope.

"This does not mean that advanced posts have been found to be of no value. On the contrary, in order that full advantage may be taken of the strength of such positions as described above, it has been found essential to prevent the enemy's rapid approach by the use of advanced posts supported by artillery, in order to gain time for development and the reconnaissance of the main position, and under favorable conditions for its entrenchments."

March Discipline.

The same officer makes a remark upon a subject, the importance of which civilians are apt to underrate.

"Men who have not been with the colors during the past four or five years do not understand the necessity for good march discipline. It should be impressed upon all ranks and should be resolutely insisted upon at all training previous to arrival in the theatre of war. There has been straggling, no doubt in great measure due to exhaustion during the first phase, but it is not necessary. . . necessary to tighten up the march discipline and to prevent undue opening out and straggling.

"Horsed wagons should not be packed on the road.

"Wagons should never be halted when passing through a vilage.

"When a halt is necessary, it should be made before reaching or when passing through a village.

"Men accompanying trains should carry their rifles and should march in formed bodies.

"Each unit should detail an officer with a small party of selected non-commissioned officers and men to march in rear of the unit in order to enforce orders against straggling, leaving the ranks for water, and so forth."

New Features of This War.

The new features of this war have been the use of aircraft and machine guns. Upon these subjects this authority says:

"The enemy's aircraft are numerous and efficient, and it is clear that he obtained by this or other means excellent information as to our movements. It has been found impossible to conceal movements of large bodies of troops, when on the march, from this observation, and the position of large bivouacs can always be observed from the air. But much can be done to conceal artillery positions and trenches, and the use of overhead cover, as we know from our own experience, makes it difficult to ascertain from the air whether trenches and gun emplacements are occupied or not. Troops should therefore, be taught to understand the necessity for concealment from aircraft whenever the conditions admit of it.

"Machine guns have played a very important part in the war, and the enemy is adept in making use of their surprise effect, which has been found to be very great indeed. Till they are located and engaged, machine guns play havoc with troops in close order, but when located they are easily knocked out by artillery fire, or silenced by a concentrated rifle fire. Great care should, therefore, be taken in selecting the positions for machine guns, in occupying them without attracting attention, and in reserving fire until a suitable opportunity arrives, in order to make full use of their surprise effect. The only way to avoid the surprise effect of the enemy's machine guns is by careful reconnaissance."

Trench Fighting.

Trench fighting has been a feature of the use of infantry. This officer says: "Owing to the accuracy of the enemy's artillery fire, it is desirable that ground which is to be held defensively or to assist further advance should be entrenched. Trenches should be commenced at once with the light entrenching tool and improved later as opportunity occurs. They should be deep and narrow and should show above the ground level as little as possible, and all trenches should be traversed at intervals of five to ten rifles. When siting trenches, it should be borne in mind that the enemy is adapt at bringing enfilade artillery fire to bear from flank positions. At any point, such as a salient, at which trenches are particularly liable to this form of fire, great care should be taken as to their siting, and they should be especially heavily traversed. Where head cover cannot be provided, cover from shell fire for the troops when not actually using their rifles, can readily be obtained by making recesses in the trenches on the side nearest to the enemy. It has been found that head cover or anything that in any way interferes with the rapid use of the rifle is a disadvantage in positions where the trenches have a short field of fire and are therefore liable to be rushed. If immunity from shrapnel fire can be obtained up to the moment of having to resist the infantry attack, no more can be hoped for. Communication trenches for supports and ammunition supply are necessary and they should be wide enough to permit of a stretcher being carried along them so as to facilitate the removal of wounded.

"Support trenches may be close to the firing line trenches, but should be so made that the men can lie down and sleep. All trenches must be assimilated to the surroundings.

"Elbow rests have not generally been found useful.

"Protection against high-explosive shells of howitzers is unobtainable in field operations, but this effect can be localized by traverses."

British Cavalry.

During the past ten years the British cavalry has been training with great diligence. Ignoring the advice of extremists, its leaders have taught the men to be expert alike with the sword and lance and with the rifle. The result is that both the cold steel and the rifle have been used effectively. Certain highly placed observers are quoted thus:

"The training of the cavalry with the rifle has been invaluable, and has given them great advantage over the enemy. There have been no cases up to the present of large cavalry charges with the 'arme blanche,' but the latter has been used a good deal in small affairs."

In distinction to the German method of handling infantry in masses, these officers say that an infantry advance "should not be made in rigid lines, but with clouds of skirmishers, five or six yards apart, thrown forward, according to the ground and available cover."

"The essential thing," says one general at the front, "is to pay attention to the sound principles on which our training has been based."

This is a proud thing to be able to say. British soldiers judged accurately the nature of modern warfare and adapted the teaching of their men to it, on the whole with great success. It took brains to do that.

"The German infantry," writes an artillery officer, "cannot touch ours, and their shooting is deplorable. They seem to depend entirely on their machine guns, which are the very devil and magnificently handled." The same observer says:

"To say that artillery cannot stop an infantry advance by itself is sheer nonsense. The German infantry will not face our artillery fire, nor that of the French."

FIRST COURT INSTALLED.

Dramatic Moment Comes In Thann When France Asserts Rule.

PARIS, Dec. 19.—The first court in the reconquered territory of Thann, Alsace, was installed yesterday with ceremonial that was dramatic in its simplicity. The courtroom was crowded with girls in picturesque Alsatian costumes, and old men who had waited forty-odd years for the day when France should return to Alsace.

The courtroom was silent until the guard of honor of dragoons, posted back of the dais, drew their sabres at the word of command from their officers. Another officer then entered the room and advanced to the judge's desk and in solemn tones said:

"In the name of the French people——" The low sobbing of an old Alsatian unable to restrain his emotion interrupted the officer, but, after a short pause he continued, "and by virtue of the instructions of the general commanding the First Army we declare Monsieur —— judge at Thann with jurisdiction."

That was all. The young people rushed cheering out into the street while the old men remained for a while in their places in quiet ecstacy.

OFFENSIVE IS DETERMINED

Vanguard of Allies on It's Way to Ostend And is Nearing Objective

LONDON, Dec. 19.—A despatch to The Times from northern France says:—

Along the whole front from Nieuport to Lille the allies have assumed a determined offensive. Reports from various points show that the forward movement is meeting with general success. As a result of the activity along the coast the allied advanced troops are said to have passed Middelkerke, which is half way along the coast, between Nieuport and Ostend.

The enemy has been driven back from a number of trenches on the right bank of the Yser, our forces having broken through the German line just below the end of the inundation at Dixmude. The Belgians had the advantage, knowing the exact positions of the dikes and ditches, which were hidden under an expanse of murky waters which had proved death traps for the Germans wherever they attempted an attack. At a number of points the allies waded through the floods knee-deep. The enemy made a poor resistance. A large number of prisoners were taken.

The most effective of the allied frontal attacks was made near Lombaetzyde. The German losses are stated to be very heavy indeed.

It is also reported in London that British and French troops have taken Roulers.

Northwest of Lille the Germans again brought their heavy guns into play and bombarded Armentieres Thursday night. The shells fell on the town at the rate of two a minute for several hours. The allies' artillery replied to great effect. A general action now in progress is expected to continue for several days.

The following official communication was issued last night:

"We have gained some ground along the Downs at the northeast of Nieuport. We have repulsed two strong counter attacks by the enemy at the north of the road between Ypres and Menin.

"The British troops have advanced slightly in the region of Armentieres.

"Our artillery has destroyed two heavy batteries in the region of Verdun.

"There is nothing of importance to report from the other parts of the front."

"The day of Dec. 17 was marked, as we said yesterday, by an advance on our part in Belgium, where every counter attack undertaken by the enemy failed.

"In the region of Arras a vigorous offensive made us masters of several trenches.

"These are located at Auchy, La Bassee, St. Laurent and Blangy. At this last-mentioned place we occupied, on a front more than one kilometre (3-5 of a mile) long, almost all the first line trenches of the enemy.

"In the region of Tracy-le-Val, on the Aisne, and in Champagne, our heavy artillery won distinct advantages.

"In the Argonne the Germans blew up one of our trenches to the north of Four De Paris, and endeavored to move out from their position with three battalions of troops. This infantry attack, as well as the one they undertook at St. Hubert, was repulsed.

"To the east of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

KINGSTON FRONTENACS WILL LIKELY BE STRONG

Seniors Have Many of Last Year's Players and Norm Millan is Confident That Juniors Will Also be There

Kingston, Dec. 19. — Frontenacs senior and junior teams were out for a half hour's workout at the covered rink and the ice was in splendid condition. It was a splendid practice, the players showing up well for the first time on skates this season. Those of last year's senior team on hand were: Cook, in goal; Stanton, and Ferguson, on the defence; Crawford and Brouse, at centre, and Reid at left wing; Boyer being the only one absent. Harry Stewart played on the right wing in his place and showed up to advantage. Norm. Millan, captain of the junior team, had several new ones out and has about fifteen more under the age limit, who will try for places. He says that he has more very good material and the team should make out all right.

THE TRIGGER

The Peterborough Gun Club will hold a shoot at the traps on the club grounds at the end of the C. G. E. car line on Friday morning next at 9.30. This will be an open shoot, and all shooters of the city are invited to attend. The club house will be heated and made as comfortale as possible. Turkeys will be shot for. Bring your shot gun with you. Ammunition can be procured on the grounds. For any further information, apply to C. Wood, secretary, 'phone 654.

BASKETBALL

The Y.M.C.A. basketball league is fast drawing to a close and it looks as if there would be a whirlwind finish. The dope is that Cressmans and the Veterans will have to fight it out. Cressmans have gone through the league with only one loss and it was to the Veterans. The Veterans have to play the Bankers, and if they lose they stack up against Cressmans which will be some lightning fast game, judging by the way these teams have been going. The fixture will be staged early next week it is thought. Cressmans defeated the Pirates last evening 40 to 10.

Will Wear Black Bands

In respect to the memory of the late "Jack" Cousins, the Kingston Frontenacs, junior and senior teams, will wear a black band on their arms in all league matches for a part of this season. The late Mr. Cousins was a very energetic member of the Kingston Club and always took an active part and keen interest in its endeavor. He was honorary supreme rooter of the Frontenacs.

JUNIORS ARE GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS

As Yet no Goal Custodian Has Appeared — Morrow May Join Intermediates

The junior O. H. A. squad had another lively workout last evening and give every promise of being in grand condition for the opening tussle on January 4th. Morrow and Long worked out on the defence, and O'Connell, Jackson, Richardson and Knapman on the forward line. "Abbie" Rose was out, but the age limit will bar him. His younger brother, "Lornie," did not appear.

If the intermediates solve the problem of securing a right wing man, Morrow will very likely be found on the junior defence. If not, the big right-hand shot will unite with Kelly, Park and Halpin, and make up the intermediates' offensive powers. If Morrow jumps to the higher class, Richardson will very likely go back to defence for the juniors.

As yet no goal custodian has applied for a berth, but it is anticipated that Legros, of the Alerts of last season's City League, and McQuaid, a Bank of Commerce clerk, will be out at the next practice. McQuaid is credited with playing for Seaforth two years ago, and, if so, should make good.

ERIE FOR CENTRAL LEAGUE.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 19.—Louis Heilbroner, president of the Central League, is quoted as saying that Erie, Penn., last season in the Canadian League circuit, will be a member of his league in 1915, if it is decided to increase the circuit to an eight-club one.

AHLERS ACQUITTED.

Sentence of Death Passed on Consul Is Annulled.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The court of criminal appeal, consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Reading, and four other justices, yesterday annulled the conviction of Nicholas Ahlers, who on December 10 was found guilty of treason and sentenced to death.

Ahlers, a naturalized Englishman, formerly was German consul in Sunderland borough. He was accused of having aided German reservists to reach their country after the outbreak of the war.

Ahlers' appeal was allowed on the ground that from the evidence it did not follow that his actions were hostile to the country's interests, and also because the material point whether or not the prisoner, when he committed the alleged acts, knew war had been declared was not left to the jury in the way it should have been done.

Advance in Cameroon.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—An important advance in Cameroon, the German possession in East Africa, was announced in a statement from the war bureau yesterday afternoon.

"In Cameroon," the statement asserts, "advance has been made along the railway northward from Bonaberi as far as the important native town of Bare, just beyond the terminus of five locomotives, a quantity of rolling stock, two aeroplanes, and sixty European prisoners were captured."

LONDON, Dec. 19. — A despatch from Athens states that Greece has decided to declare war on Turkey.

KELLY OF PETERBORO IS EXPECTED TO MAKE GOOD

Nebraska Writer Never Heard of Peterborough But Claims it Must Exist as the Dope Sheets Say so

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 19. — When President Jones went gunning in Canada last fall for recruits he not only hooked Bierbauer for first base, but he also nabbed a young catcher by the name of Kelly. This Kelly lad caught for the Peterboro Club of the Canadian League. The city of Peterboro is a stranger to us, but the dope sheets give Catcher Kelly a good recommendation, so there must be such a town and such a player. The official statistics announce that Kelly fielded .952 in 72 games and accumulated a batting average of .269. This is not so bad. If he had been listed with the Lincoln lineup of willow wilders last season he would have sounded like a slugger to the despairing local fans. If both Bierbauer and Kelly make good in Lincoln, President Jones will be given another ticket to Canada next fall to try out his luck once more.

COMMENT

As You Like it

BUTTERFIELD, the former Orillia player is out with Preston. A Preston paper refers to him as follows:—

"The most promising of the new candidates is Butterfield, the brilliant rover of last season's champion Orillia junior team. Butterfield, on his form in the junior series, should catch a regular place at rover for Preston. He has everything which goes to make a good hockey player. Speedy, an excellent stick-handler and a good puck-carrier, he is a hard man to stop when on the offensive. On the defensive he is just as effective. Schlagel, last winter with the Toronto Argonaut seniors, is another of the new-comers."

PRESIDENT STEVELY of the London Canadian League ball club has received a letter from the Omaha, Nebraska, Western League club, stating that the latter club is willing to make negotiations for Shortstop George Dunlap to return to London next season.

Omaha secured Dunlap from the Cleveland A. A. Club which bought him from London at the close of the 1913 session. The Canadian league product did not go strong for Cleveland and went down the ladder.

MIDLAND WILL require watching this season in the senior series. They have Scott for goal, Nichols and "Hobe" Armstrong for defence, Chase, Simple, McDonald, Beatty and Drury to select the forwards from. This Drury is one of the fastest kids in the game.

JACK PETHICK, the golden haired boy trying out for a place on the defence of the Intermediates shapes up favorably. He is big and speedy and has shown absolutely no desire to "grapevine." He moved straight ahead.

KEN. CRANE will rove for the Argos this afternoon at the Toronto Arena against 'Varsity.

Dr. C. W. A. Veditz, Commercial Attache to Embassy at Paris, figures European billegerents will lose biggest part of their export trade, which he estimates at $18,500,000,000 annually, as a result of the war.

"DOC' REISLING FOR HAMILTON

Former London Manager May Sign to Pilot the Hams.

Hamilton, Dec. 19.—According to reports, Hamilton the ball player, who applied to the local club for the managerial berth, has taken a position with another club, and he has wired that his application be thrown out. Hamilton was a good man, according to his records. He will handle the reins of a club in the Southern League next summer.

Who will handle the local ball club next summer? This question is being asked on all sides, and it will be answered just as soon as the annual meeting is held. At the present time it looks as if "Doc" Reisling or Jim McGinley will get the position. Reisling made a good showing with the London Club last summer and this is a great thing in his favor. McGinley, is also a good man and has played on many big league teams during his career as a ball player, and under some big league managers of the present day. The other applicants, Jack White, Walter Ahearn and George Nill also stand a good chance.

LINDSAY CURLERS MAKE START TODAY

There is joy in the camps of the local curlers. The announcement has been made that the ice at the rink will be ready for curling on Saturday. Hoot mon! Do ye ken what that means? Get your stanes and besom ready.—Lindsay Warder.

WANTS OTTAWA ONLY.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—"Dusty" Bullock has written Manager Frank Shaughnessy, stating that he does not wish to be sold or traded to St. Thomas. In fact, he intimates that he would refuse to play in the railroad centre. Bullock wishes to return to Ottawa. He was of little use to the Senators last season, on account of his injuries.

HE REFUSED $30,000.

Boston, Dec. 19.—Shortstop Maranville of the champion Braves, Thursday refused to sign a contract with the Federal League at a salary said to be $30,000 for three years.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Christmas time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB?

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself an Xmas present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

ORPHEUS SOCIETY CONCERT.

The concert given by the Orpheus Society in the Conservatory of Music Hall last night, while in some respects a failure may well be taken as a forerunner of better things to come. The choir appeared to be not well balanced, the sopranos and altos much overmatching the bassos and tenors. However, the men were seated too high on the stage to do justice to them. Miss Ada Richardson was easily the star, her selections being rendered with a finish and fine musical tone that was a credit to her and a delight to the audience. Miss Lettie Drope sang well, especially in "March On." She has a fine stage appearance and gives fine expression to her singing. Others who took leading parts were, Mrs. J. Lock, who excelled as accompanist, Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, Mr. F. Whitehouse and Mr. T. S. Smith.. While many would have preferred to hear the choir unaccompanied, yet much credit is due the conductor, J. Edward Fisher, for the results obtained. The character of the program was excellent, the pieces being well chosen and high class in every respect. The printing of the words of the choir's songs was a good point, but it seems that there should be also a translation of Italian, French or German pieces that are sung in those languages. Very few people in a place like Peterborough understand a foreign language. Further training should result in much improvement.

Those who were instrumental in producing this concert are to be encouraged for the promise of better things, and for the worthy object of the concert the proceeds going to the Belgian Relief Fund. A fairly good audience attended.

Tom Marks and his popular company occupy the Grand Opera House six nights of next week, opening Monday night, Dec. 21st, with the charming comedy "The Golden Rule." In this comedy Mr. Marks assumes the role of Father O'Neil, Pastor of St. Michael's Church, New York City, a part admirably adopted to his mirth radiating personality. This genial person will appear in such well known comedies as "The Hidden Secret," "The Irish Attorney," "His Irish Honor," "The Girl from the Sunny South," "Hello Bill," "Molly McDarlant," "The Game."

From this list of plays, this irristable fun-maker will endeavor to tickle the risibilities of his patrons with some of the latest and best comedies.

STEFANSSON MAY BE SAFE

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—It is believed here that Stefansson, who started north from Hershel Island last winter with the announced intention of traveling 100 miles over the ice and taking soundings and making such observations as he could, really went on 200 miles farther north in the hope of discovering land and spending the summer there. If he did not find land he would have to spend the summer on the floating ice, but there would be an abundance of fish and game for food. Then this winter he would return south over the ice, and he should be heard from next spring.

Gen. Botha Takes a Holiday.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 29. — (Via London.) — Gen. Louis Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa, considers that the rebellion, apart from the rounding up of a few stray bands, is at an end. Accordingly he has gone for a short vacation on his farm before undertaking a campaign against German Southwest Africa.

Host of Russians Coming Up.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—A despatch to The Times from Warsaw, under date of Dec. 13, describes the great strength of the Russian defences between the present battle line and Warsaw and says he echoes the opinion of the authorities of Warsaw in stating that unless the German capture the town within a week all hope of their doing so will be gone forever, as strong Russian reinforcements are arriving.

The correspondent adds that the Germans are said to be very strong in artillery, especially so in heavy field guns.

GERMANS BOMBARD HOSPITAL RUSSIANS HOLD ENEMY AT BAY

Forest is Occupied and a Number of German Trenches Have Been Captured--- Progress Continues at Various Points

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 21. — The official communication this afternoon says nothing of importance occurred in Belgium yesterday except some progress around Lombaertzyde and other points and the bombardment by the enemy of Ypres hospital.

"Between the Lys and the Aisne we have occupied a forest between Noulettez and Souhez and have captured a number of German trenches.

"The enemy has bombarded Arras . At various points our artillery has secured an advantage."

The statement also reports progress in Champagne and in the Argonne between Argonne and Meuse, on the right bank and on the heights of the Meuse.

RUSSIANS HOLD BACK 200,000 GERMANS.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 21.—(Via London)—Russian forces on the right bank of the Bzura river are still holding at bay the German army of two hundred thousand men who have been endeavoring for three days to cross the river and advance on Warsaw, thirty miles away. Russian artillery commands the river to its junction with the Vistula. The Russians' position is part of their third line of defence. Today they are apparently attempting nothing more than to retard the enemy and defeat attempts at a flanking movement.

NOT THINKING OF INVASION BY ZEPPELINS.

BANK'S ACTION TO RECOVER $10,000 IS DISMISSED

The following judgment of Mr. Justice Kelly has been given out at Osgoode Hall, Toronto:

Bank of Ottawa v. R. R. Hall, G. F. Shepley, K.C., and G. W. Hatton (Peterborough) for plaintiffs. G. H. Watson, K.C., and S. T. Medd, (Peterborough), for defendant. Action to recover $10,000 on a promissory note made by defendant, payable to the Canadian Cordage & Manufacturing Co. and endorsed by that company to plaintiffs. Judgment: The conclusion I have reached is that the note was given for the purposes and under the circumstances stated by defendant. It was in possession of the bank under a special agreement recently given, and I am of opinion that it is quite sufficiently established that neither party at any time intended that the terms on which it reached the bank should be varied or that it should be affected by or included in the operation of the hypothecation agreement. There being uncontradicted evidence that all of the indebtedness which existed when the note was given was paid before the institution of this action plaintiffs are not entitled to succeed. Action dismissed with costs. Twenty days' stay.

WORK TO DO BUT NOT FOR JOHN

His Quick Wit Fails to Land Job at Police Court

Habitual police court frequenters are quite common and once more the white crowned head of John Donahue showed over the dock today. John was in again for being drunk. This made the third or fourth time for him lately and John could scarcely expect any mercy from the bench. But as usual he was right there with a little speech explaining how it happened and reasons why it would be terrible perversion of justice to send him to the hillside retreat. He was reminded that they were serving plum pudding this Christmas at the jail.

"All I had to drink was four drinks of whiskey and that isn't enough to make a man drunk."

John sprung a pretty fair one on the magistrate a few minutes after he was ordered to spend the week in goal. It happened that the court room was packed to the doors with the railbirds.

"If there is any decent hardworking old man here among who wants a job sawing wood stand up; don't all speak at once," said the magistrate.

John Donahue was the first to speak sensing a possible escape from confinement. Not another man in the court room except John volunteered but unfortunately His Worship couldn't give the job to him. Donahue's quick wit, however, awoke a responsive smile not only from the magistrate but the entire room.

ALL WELL AND READY FOR ORDERS AT ANY MOMENT

Captain R. M. Dennistoun Writes From Camp of Canadians

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, K.C., of Winnipeg, formerly of Peterborough, and now serving as captain, in company with his two sons, in England with the Canadian contingent, preparatory to going to France, has written Mr. Burnham from Westdown South Camp, Salisbury Plain, December 4th. He says: "I must send you a line to tell you we are all well and ready for orders at any moment. Salisbury Plain at this time of year is swept by sheets of rain, and our camps are seas of mud. When you wake a few hours before daylight and hear the wind howling, remember we are probably struggling, compass in hand, to find a point in our ordnance map, one thousand sleepy and wet men behind us. Our training involves a lot of night work, and it makes for the finest kind of discipline. No talking, no smoking, absolute silence, and orders are passed without a sound. Our men are splendid. They have beyond question that race impulse that drives men irresistibly to fight for the perpetuation of their species. Home, love, kinship, money—all are superseded when the fighting lust takes possession of the male. We must fight the Germans and crush them, if we are to survive and preserve the traditions of our race, but I see great problems arising hereafter for the British Empire. Keep these ever before the Canadian people. They are making a splendid response to the call. Teach them that they are fighting for the perpetuation of the Anglo-Saxon race. We must keep "our place in the sun." Our fathers won it for us, and we must hold it."

CO-OPERATION BY THE NATIONS

Scandinavians Will Unite To Maintain Neutral Attitude

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 21. — The meeting of the Scandinavian kings and their Ministers at Malmoe ended Saturday night. It is officially stated that King Gustave opened the session with a speech indicating the neutrality of the northern countries and the desirability of their common interests. King Haakon and King Christian felicitated King Gustave on his initiative in bringing about the meeting.

The negotiations resulted in the monarchs' unity on special questions relating to the war, and an agreement was reached to continue this co-operation so auspiciously begun. The representatives of these countries—Norway, Sweden and Denmark—will reassemble at some future opportune time to renew their discussions and amenities.

Military chiefs, however, insisted that the emperor spend Christmas with his troops, and he decided to do so.

BELLIGERENT ITALIANS BALKED IN ATTEMPT TO ROB FELLOW COUNTRYMAN

Nicholas Minicola, Assaulted in Early Hours of Sunday Morning, Defeats Plan of Two Men and Police by Following Footprints in Snow, Make Arrests

Nicholas Minicola, fruit dealer, 160 Hunter street, was murderously assaulted with a hammer by two Italians early on Sunday morning while walking home from his place of business. Robbery and a desire to wipe out ill-feelings is said to be the motive of the attack. Luckily, Mr. Minicola escaped with no other injuries save a big lump on the head and a scar on his forehead, although he is feeling rather shaken up. His assailants are said to be two fellow-countrymen, who have been arrested.

Mr. Minicola locked up his store shortly after midnight Saturday, carrying with him considerable money taken in during the afternoon and night. This fact was evidently known to his assailants, who apparently intended to rob him.

Used Hammer.

Mr. Minicola had reached St. Andrew's Church corner, when he was set upon without warning by two men. One struck him a sharp blow with an ordinary steel hammer. While the shock stunned him for a minute, he did not entirely lose consciousness, but grappled with the two. Both flung themselves upon him when it was seen he would fight, and the three fell to the ground together. Mr. Minicola, although well on in years, is a powerful man, and soon got the better of his two assailants, who are rather small in stature. Both took to their heels when they saw they were balked in their purpose.

Traced Footprints.

Mr. Minicola promptly telephoned to police headquarters and Sergeant Kidd and Constable Deannard responded. In the melee Mr. Minicola thought he recognised one of his cowardly assailants. Sergeant Kidd and P. C. Deannard were not to be balked in rounding up the men, and, favored by a fresh snowfall, which left visible the footprints of the men, they took up the trail. The tracks led to one house where they found an Italian, who was suspected. He professed complete ignorance of the crime, but was placed under arrest. By similar means the hiding place of another man was discovered, and both were soon in the cells.

Before Magistrate Dumble today they gave their names as Frank Carnivale and Nicholas Lattanto. They were formally arraigned and charged jointly with carrying a hammer and assaulting, with intent to steal from Nicholas Minicola. Carnivale asked for Mr. Gordon to defend him. Lattanto said he did not want counsel. Mr. Widdifield, of Gordon & Widdifield, appeared in court a few minutes later and, on behalf of his clients, didn't wish to either elect or plead. This was agreeable to his Worship, but Crown Attorney Hatton asked for a week's remand, which was granted. Mr. Widdifield secured bail for his clients at $1000 each.

"Pretty steep," remarked Mr. Widdifield.

Both men will come up for a preliminary hearing one week from today.

Carnivale has been locked up before on a charge of theft.

Are Ready to Quit it

German Landwehr are Heartily Sick of the War

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A report from British army headquarters says:

"From a prisoner captured on Dec. 14 it has been ascertained that both the 23rd Regiment and the Jaegers suffered enormous losses on Nov. 4. The same man described the fifth of November as a terrible day, saying that he had never before seen such mud as that in which the Germans were operating, and that the troops were suffering very much from the presence of water in the trenches. The shelling that he went through on the fourteenth of this month, he states, exceeded anything which he had experienced previously.

"We have reason to believe, from the evidence obtained from prisoners, that many of the Landwehr are heartily sick of the war and resent the harsh treatment of their officers. They have been persuaded that the British ill-treat their prisoners, and but for this some would be willing to surrender."

The mother came the next day.

"Yes, Fertilizer is right," she said. "You see, I named her after her father and mother both. Her father's name is Ferdinand and my name is Liza, so we called her Fertilizer.

Killed at the Meuse

Reservist Who Left Omemee is Reported Among the Dead

Major Fee, commanding officer of the 45th Regiment, has received word that Private Frank Smith of Omemee has given his life for King and country on the Meuse river, while fighting with the allied troops.

When war's tocsin rang out, Smith was working for William McGee at Omemee. He was a reservist of the Royal Indian Horse Artillery, and lost no time in reporting to the colors. He was immediately sent to France, where his life's blood has been poured out — a martyr to world-wide liberty.

The news of Private Smith's death was received with keen regret at Omemee. He was a member of D Co. (Capt. Thorne), 45th Regiment, and was with his company at Petawawa last summer. He was an expert horseman and a fine type of a soldier. His parents are dead, but he has a brother in the West.

TAKE THAW TO NEW YORK

MAYOR BULLER'S POSITION SO FAR AS GOVERNMENT IS CONCERNED

Mr. Burnham, M. P., was asked by the Review if there would be any objection by the Government to Mayor Buller's serving out the usual term of two years. The member replied that, in view of the war and the general dislocation of business which affects municipalities as well as others, the Government would not object to the Mayor's filling the position again, if the people showed that they really needed him. This would refer to election by acclamation. If, however, there was to be a contest, and loss of the Mayor's time from his office unnecessarily, neither the Government nor the Mayor would probably desire it.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1914

THE NOTICES HAVE ARRIVED.

THE REVIEW has just received notice of its assessment under the new Workmen's Compensation Board. It will be remembered that an act was passed in the last session of the Ontario Legislature, which was based on a report of Sir William Meredith, fixing a means for compensating workmen for injuries received while at work. To cover the expense, employers are assessed for a specified sum, and are divided into classes, according to the hazard existing in certain employments. Owing to the fact that the Review's assessment is practically double what it cost for insurance under the Employers' Liability scheme, we have made inquiries of nine prominent manufacturers in Peterborough for their opinion.

Three thought that their assessment was very high, the assessment of one being three times the former amount, one twice as high, while the third man could not give a comparison. Another man had no figures to give out, but thought the whole scheme a hold-up. Four had nothing to say, for various reasons that need not be given. Another manufacturer, who employs a large number of hands, said that, while his assessment was twenty-five per cent. higher, he thought it quite fair, and had no adverse criticism to offer.

Of those spoken to by the Review, it appears that opinion is about evenly divided, with a likely swing in favour of the new arrangement when all the facts are understood. However, it appears that there has been a higher assessment than was necessary, and especially at a time like the present, when many employers have difficulty in meeting their pay-rolls alone, without considering their other expenses. There is really no regard for present conditions, because, while postponement of half the amount for six months is allowed, interest is charged thereon at the rate of six per cent. There is this, also, to be said, that the board has to make a start some place, and, if it has begun at a high mark, there may be considerable reductions next year, if accidents in any of the several classes are few in number. Further inquiry and comparison, however, may lead to considerable opposition to the assessment.

THE KAISER'S JEALOUSY.

A LADY now living near this city, brought to the Review recently an old copy of a newspaper containing an article entitled "The Kaiser's Jealousy." The newspaper is the Parry Sound Canadian of February 21, 1896. She was unaware that the present managing director of the Review founded the Parry Sound Canadian and was its editor and proprietor in 1896.

The article in question deals with the Kaiser's attitude toward England. While the grandson of Queen Victoria, he considered himself in some way the proper heir to the English throne, and took an undue interest in the private affairs of his illustrious grandmother, such as interfering in certain proposals of marriage, and assuming a superior attitude to the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII. The article says Englishmen are too prone to look at the North German States with Protestant spectacles, and they forget the Germans have coined the strongest word ever used to express hatred, envy, and malice. It is "schadrenfreude," meaning malignant pleasure at our neighbour's misfortunes, or malignant hatred at the sight of his prosperity. Thus, a naval review at Portsmouth, or the display of wealth in London caused the Kaiser to feel this malignant hatred, and at the same time to regard himself as the head of his kindred. These facts show the feelings and ambitions of the Kaiser so long ago as 1896, feelings that have crystallized into an insane desire to dominate Europe, destroy Britain, take possession of the Overseas Dominions, and do it all at the cost of the greatest war in history.

EATING HIS OWN WORDS.

IT MUST BE a cause for uneasiness and chagrin to many prominent Grits to have their old speeches held up to public ridicule and condemnation. For those who were conspicuous in the House of Commons and on the public platform by their whole-hearted opposition to every reform of the Conservative Government, whether there was reasonable ground for opposition or not, the vindication of those Conservative reforms and policies has been for them a refutation and a reprimand. The number includes the most prominent Liberals in Canada, from Sir Wilfrid Laurier down, whose declarations as to an emergency in European affairs have been triumphantly refuted. They even went so far as to say that Germany had no evil intentions as to the British Empire, and refused to acknowledge facts that have since come home to them with telling condemnatory force.

Among these was Mr. F. B. Carvell, M. P. for Carleton County, New Brunswick, and likely to be leader of the Liberal Opposition in the provincial legislature there. He is now bestirring himself to raise recruits for future Canadian contingents, and is the same Mr. Carvell who, on June 1 1914, said in the House of Commons:

> "The principal cause of the trouble with the minister (Colonel Hughes) and his top-heavy militia, is the report of a general by the name of French, who came to this country some years ago, and, in my judgment, his visit was one of the greatest misfortunes that have befallen Canada. I told the minister, publicly and privately, that in adopting the ridiculous and unreasonable report made by this gentleman (General French), he had committed a great mistake. His (General French's) ideas are ridiculous."

Either partizan spleen actuated Mr. Carvell's words six months ago, or he was mistaken in an extraordinary degree.

Note the change in Mr. Carvell within a period of six months. In June, only two months before war was declared, he held up to ridicule the very man who, in a few weeks, was to be commander-in-chief of the British army on the field of battle. He did so because he held that there was no emergency, no cause to fear Germany. That Mr. Carvell was sincerely mistaken in his opposition seems hardly possible. He must, therefore, have opposed the Government for purely partizan reasons. Such men are not wanted in Canadian politics. There are too many who have no mind of their own, no independence of action, who are simply registering machines for whatever party they belong to, and who are able, on occasions, as in this case, to oppose successfully legislation that is sorely needed. It is time oppositions in Canada got away from that beggarly and mistaken conception that their sole duty is to oppose the Government.

A NATION OF SELF-HELPERS.

THE MAN that is able to work and is out of work is the kind of man that we are determined to make into a busy producer. This is a problem for practical people. Now that winter is here, we cannot afford to leave this problem to the charitable organizations. Canada is a poor land for organized charity. This is no country of slums. It is a land of self-helpers. Suppose that for every man, woman and child in Canada, a hundred dollars were spent every year in buying Canadian goods. Total, $800,000,000. That is more than half the total amount of goods turned out of Canadian factories. That eight hundred millions of goods made means more than $150,000,000 paid out in wages. Add that $150,000,000 to the gross amount of money spent for Canadian goods, and you add enough to keep the machine going as near as possible to the peak-load. Bear in mind that every dollar spent for Canadian goods adds about 20 cents to the amount of money paid in wages. It means twenty cents more to spend for goods made in Canada. The man who gets the wages becomes a partner with the man who buys the goods, to keep up the grand total of goods made by the workers of Canada, for Canadians. This is the practical side of self-help. It's the wages paid to the workers that represent the business done in the factories and the prosperity that affects everybody's pocket.

THE WAR has made several changes in the styles of ladies' clothes. The only change made regarding men's clothes seems to be in getting the change.

A Transportation Feat.

(New York Sun.)

Some day the transportation of the British expeditionary forces to France may be written. For obvious reasons it is suppressed now. The English newspapers dare only hint at the magnitude of the undertaking. During the Boer war, 250,000 men, with artillery, horses, equipment and stores, were carried 7,000 miles to South Africa and the achievement was without a precedent. But the seas were clear of hostile ships. England had the means to move the troops, and it was only a question of how quickly the work could be done. No other maritime nation would have been able to solve the problem so smoothly and in time so brief. Granting that England had the tonnage, high praise was her due for the celerity with which the transportation was effected.

In sending army corps to the aid of England's ally in the great war on the Continent, distance to be steamed by the transports was a negligible factor. The big factor was assembling the men at the point of embarkation and getting them across the Channel without accident in time measured by days. Mr. H. A. Walker, general manager of the London and South Western Railway, thinks that his line has made a record in handling troops destined for the front. The Government gave him sixty hours to make preparations to dispatch 350 trains of about thirty coaches each. He was ready in exactly forty-eight hours. He does not go into details, but the presumption is that the 10,500 coaches called for carried the first expedition to the point of embarkation. It probably consisted of two army corps and an extra division. In the first three weeks of war, seventy-three trains were unloaded every fourteen hours, arriving from all parts of the country about twelve minutes apart.

Ship after ship took her place in turn at the wharf, filled up with soldiers, horses, guns and equipment, and steamed into deep water at once. A naval officer was in charge of each vessel, and everything went like clockwork with the help of a host of well-drilled stevedores. Tonnage of the transports, of course, varied greatly. One Atlantic liner carried three thousand men across the Channel, but no ship less than a thousand. Men-of-war were waiting to escort the fleet, and scouts ran round in the van to look for submarines and to sound warning of attack by the enemy. No accidents worth reporting occurred. What risk there was had to be taken, and speed was the essence of each undertaking. The transports in ordered procession were strung out across the Channel, and the disembarkation went as smoothly as the taking of the troops and munitions aboard the English side.

WONDERFUL RECORD OF ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

In Exceptional Year Bank Makes New High Record for Cash on Hand --- Position Maintained to Help Protect Interests of Country

Montreal, Dec. 21. — In a year when the statements of the principal banks of Caada are being closely scrutinized in all the leading banking centres of the world, there is reason for congratulations that they should show, in some instances, exceptional strength and solidity.

To a very marked degree is this the case with the showing made by the Royal Bank of Canada which is today sending out to shareholders its forty-fifth annual statement. For a number of years past the Royal Bank has been making such steady progress that shareholders have become somewhat accustomed to satisfactory statements, but what should be especially gratifying to them this year is that under the very unusual conditions that prevailed throughout the financial world the bank should have been able to make a record showing in the departments that make for strength, namely, in cash on hand and liquid assets.

New High Record of Cash on Hand.

It is perhaps owing to the peculiar conditions that prevail in the country, as a result of the European war, that the banks have found it advisable to keep themselves in a position that would enable them to help in any contingency that might arise, and in this way secure the real interests of the country at large. To what extent the Royal Bank has followed such a policy can be best appreciated from the general statement which shows that at the close of its fiscal year, Nov. 30th, 1914, the amount of cash on hand reached the high level of $27,683,855, equivalent to such a large percentage as 17.93 per cent. of liabilities to the public. At the end of the previous year the cash on hand was equivalent to 13.83 per cent., so that for the year an increase of over $6,000,000 is shown. The liquid assets, in which the cash on hand is also included, amount to $71,244,377, equivalent to as much as 46.16 per cent. of liabilities to the public. The principal accounts included under this heading are:—Railway and other bonds, debentures and stocks, not exceeding market value, $13,557,741; Canadian municipal securities and public securities other than Canadian, $2,885,062; cheques on other banks, $5,752,485; balances due by banks and banking correspondents elsewhere than in Canada, $3,144,502. In its valuation of its investments the bank has evidently followed its usual conservative policy, as this year an allowance for depreciation is made of a half million dollars. It would seem as though this allowance was only one of precaution as in time the securities should more than make up the depreciation now being allowed.

Business Well Maintained.

Notwithstanding the general contraction which has occurred in business throughout Canada, more particularly in manufacturing, the volume of business done by the bank has been well maintained, the current loans amounting to $84,585,472, as compared with $86,989,390 at the end of the previous year, while other current loans and discounts elsewhere than in Canada show a very slight change, amounting to $15,002,488, as compared with $15,551,594.

Deposits Bearing Interest Show Increase.

A rather surprising feature of the statement is that the deposits bearing interest reached a new high level at $104,827,078, as compared with $101,900,790, an increase of close to $3,000,000, in a year when it was thought saving accounts, owing to unusual conditions, were showing a tendency to decrease rather than increase. Deposits not bearing interest amounted to $21,224,129, as compared with $36,276,871, and making the total deposits at the end of the year $136,051,208, as against $138,177,622, a decrease of approximately $2,000,000. In this connection, however, it will be remembered that during the year the bank repaid the deposit of the Alberta and Great Waterways Co. of Alberta, amounting to $7,000,000, and allowing for this the ordinary deposits during the year would have shown an increase of $5,000,000.

Special Provisions in Profit and Loss Account.

There are some unusual provisions made in the profit and loss account this year. This applies to the allowance of $500,000, which has been made for depreciation in investment and a contribution of $50,000, to Patriotic Funds. The profits for the year showed a falling off as compared with the previous year, due perhaps to the fact that such attention was being given to the maintenance of a strong position. They amounted to $1,886,142, equivalent to 16.30 per cent. on the paid up capital. The amount carried forward from the previous year totalled $1,015,119, and this added to the profits for the past year made the amount available for distribution $2,901,262. Of this amount $1,387,200 was distributed in dividends; $100,000, was transferred to officers' pension funds; $250,000, written off bank premises' account; $50,000 contributed to the patriotic funds; $500,000, allowed for depreciation in investments. This left a balance to be carried forward to profit and loss at the end of the year of $614,062.

A Marriage Maker

There are scores of Jews who live comfortably in old London simply by contracting marriages between their co-religionists. These marriage-makers are known as "Shadchans." The custom which prevails among the Ghetto Jews of getting married through the agency of a marriage broker is imported from the Continent, where Jews consider it immodest for young men to do their own courting without intervention of a "Shadchan."

The Jews who dwell east of Aldgate, have great respect for the "Shadchan," for they never know when they might have to utilise his services. The remuneration of the "Shadchan" usually consists of a fee from the bride and bridegroom, according to their means, and often he also claims a percentage of the dowry as his perquisite.

The business of the "Shadchan" is, apparently, in a very flourishing condition. One of the fraternity informed a writer that a Jewish marriage broker would consider it a bad year indeed if he did not make $2,000. Only recently a "Shadchan" well known in the East End of London died, leaving more than $35,000 accumulated by fees for bringing couples together.

A "Shadchan" sometimes employs curious means of persuasion. He threatens the prospective bridegroom, whom he has introduced to one of his clients, with a breach of promise action should he refuse to marry her. Fortunately, the majority of the matches turn out well, and the most prominent individual under the "Chuppah" (wedding canopy) is the "Shadchan," who is held in high esteem by all assembled on the happy occasion.

The occupation of the "Shadchan" has been a highly respected one for over 1,000 years, and formerly even great Rabbis did not think it beneath their dignity to engage in it as a means of subsistence.

The Boy Next Door

By FRANK M. OBRIEN

Two little houses side by side in what the rest of the city called "Shantytown" held two boys who had known each other all their lives and who had until now lived those lives exactly the same.

From veriest brathood the red head of James Doherty and the black head of James Moore had bobbed along together.

They had dived from the same stringpiece on the docks, drunk from the same ink bottle at school, and each had honored the Great Telegraph company by entering its service on the same day.

But now their lives had come to a fork in the road and separated, for, though each lay with closed eyes in his respective little attic room in his respective little house, James the Red was only thinking, thinking hard, but James the Black was dying—dying hard.

In the abstraction caused by grief for his friend, however, James the Red had ceased to be useful to the messenger service of his employers.

There was nothing to do but loaf, and the Red could not stand off the fascination of sitting at his window watching the Black's window and listening for the scream that came at intervals from the sick boy.

When Jimmy went downstairs to supper his mother told him that Jimmy—the Black—was still alive.

At 8 o'clock James the Red found himself with enough courage to go to the Moore door. He wanted to see Jimmy, please.

"Nobody can see him, the doctor says," said Mrs. Moore.

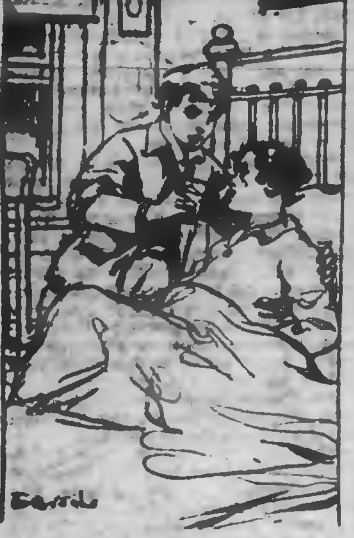
As Jimmy turned to go Dr. Whiffer came out, very young and very important.

He ran quickly down the steps of the front stoop and started up the street.

James the Red went after him.

He wanted to know whether Jimmy would get well—whether something couldn't be done about the screaming.

But just as the questions were framed an obstacle came from a saloon doorway into the doctor's path, and the doctor, seeing no way to dodge, stood still.



"DRINK IT QUICK!" HE SAID.

"Good evening, Jameson," said Whiffer, knowing he was about to have alms wrung from him.

A loan, Jameson called it.

Had he not been the patron of the young doctor in the first days of his own Daddy as a practitioner, the days when Whiffer was struggling up and he was struggling down? Whiffer, not an ingrate, had a dollar to spare.

"Patient in the neighborhood?" asked Jameson, to show a dollar's worth of interest in his young friend.

"Boy with typhoid pneumonia," said Whiffer.

"I used to have lots of 'em," said Jameson. "They're usually tough jobs too."

"This is bad," replied Whiffer. "Tough youngster, but it's hard to beat the disease off when it has malnutrition on its side. A poor family like this can't afford to have a trained nurse to pump in the strychnine when the heart begins to go. If he holds out tonight he'll pull through, I think."

Jameson's eyes, pale and wet as they were, kindled reminiscently.

"I had to tackle a case in camp once when there wasn't any strychnine to use when the crisis came," he said, "and nothing else in the drug line was handy, either.

"I found a cure out of my own noodle," continued the rummy one. "When the man was fading and I had to do something, champagne was handy, and I poured about a quart of it into him. Well, I remember poking the fizz into the fellow at 4 o'clock in the morning and nobody about to dispute my judgment," he said as he shambled away.

James the Red stood still. What he had learned was discouraging.

He wandered the streets until 10 o'clock and then went home.

His mother had more news of the patient. Jimmy the Black was very weak, but his fever seemed to be going down, and he slept most of the time.

James the Red went to his room, made ready for bed, put out his light and went to sit at the window which looked upon the sickroom.

And so, watching and listening, he fell asleep. At last, dreaming he was weeping, he woke. One o'clock and silence!

Darkness, too, but for the lamp through the open window in the room of James the Black.

No movement was there, for the tired women, finding their boy asleep, had crept away to the rest they needed so much.

James the Red put on his shirt and his uniform, cap and all. From a corner he dragged a pair of old canvas shoes, rubber soled.

From a cigar box in a closet came a revolver which must have cost $1.20 when it was new and which had cost nothing on the happy day when young Mr. Doherty captured it in honorable combat.

It wouldn't shoot, and James the Red knew it, but he was going to see James the Black—peaceably if he could; if not, then by force of arms.

The surreptitious entrance appealed to him more than the loud and dramatic, hence the sneakers.

He left his own house without sound or challenge and from the yard surveyed the job to be done. It was simple.

Across the street was the house of Henkel, the painter, and Henkel had every style ladder but Jacob's. James the Red chose one twelve feet long.

He crept to the sidewalk and surveyed the street. No sound—therefore no cop!

He lugged the ladder to his own yard and, staggering, raised the end to the window where the light burned. The ladder, as if a conspirator, never creaked, and presently the Red poked his head into the dimly lighted room.

On the bed lay the wraith of his friend, hollow cheeked and white—a sight that made the Red's throat close.

He crept into the room, silent as a thief and feeling like one. Not until he had reached the head of the bed did he whisper:

"Jimmy!"

The sick boy's eyelids rose slowly as if the weight of death had been on them, and his eyes, dull of expression, moved toward the intruder.

"'Lo, Jim!" he gasped.

Then his eyes closed again as if the effort had been great.

"How d'ye feel?" Jim asked. The eyes slowly opened again.

"I'm all cool now," said Jimmy faintly. "I've been so hot, and now I feel sleepy—awfully sleepy."

The eyes closed again, but the boy in the bed spoke once more.

"Why do all the flowers have stars in them?" he asked dreamily.

James the Red had watched his own cousin die months before.

Out of the window he went and down the ladder into the street.

It was raining in earnest and the night was black.

James the Red stepped into it and was swallowed up.

An hour went by.

"Jimmy!"

The eyelids lifted weakly.

James the Red knelt on the floor, but not in prayer.

He had taken a blanket from the bed, and in its folds was something with which he struggled.

He twisted and wrenched and his face contorted in unison with his wriggling arms.

An explosion, muffled by the blanket, announced his triumph.

He held a glassful of foaming, jumping stuff to Jimmy's face.

"Drink it quick!" he said.

"I never take no booze," said James the Black. "I never will touch it."

"This ain't booze," said James the Red.

What was a lie to him now?

"Drink it!"

He put his arm around the Black's shoulders and, lifting his head, poured the stimulant between his lips.

The sick one made a face. He took the next dose in silence and, when the third was ready, took it with a little sigh.

"Jimmy," he whispered twenty minutes later, "feet gettin' warmer now. Give s'more medicine!"

But Jim, with the caution of a nurse, withheld the flagon. It was half empty, and he guessed that that would do.

The first of dawn showed through the window.

"I'm going, kid," said James the Red. But James the Black made no reply. He was snoring.

He was still snoring when Dr. Whiffer came at 5 o'clock and gave a verdict that made Mrs. Moore weep with joy.

In the complaint book of a police station was written, synchronously with the beginning of the Black's convalescence, an article from the pen of one Sergeant Mulqueen, famed for his terseness:

"An undersized young man in messenger boy's uniform rang the basement bell at the home of Henry Carstairs, 20 Remington avenue, early this morning and, flourishing a pistol, held up the butler and forced him to give him a bottle of champagne. The butler says the fellow looked like a desperate criminal."

Newspapers of the day, in an effort to gild the rhetorical lily, added that Mr. Carstairs was a leading citizen who founded the Great Telegraph company and made a fortune thereby.

TIDY ATTICS.

They Are Evidences of Thrift and Neatness on the Housewife's Part.

Many garrets are regarded as the natural dumping ground for the castoff furnishings of all the other rooms in the house. Pictures and bric-a-brac which have fallen into disuse find their way there until some promised day when they will be thrown away. Often this day never comes, and each cleaning day the general riffraff of a household is dusted and then put back into place.

This is a mistake and adds but extra care and trouble for the housewife. And, as to old letters, they accumulate so quickly that there is no staying them unless one has the strength of mind to destroy most of them at once before they find their way into boxes and thence to the garret, where they remain to gather the dust of ages and perhaps become the prey of prying eyes. One cannot bear to sever all the links that recall pleasant associations of the past, but the hoarding of material things—scattered and broken—is but catering to a sentimentality which is neither wholesome nor wise.

Economical Salads.

Vegetable salad for luncheon may be made of left over vegetables found in the refrigerator, any combination of vegetables being acceptable.

Potatoes and beets, with or without the addition of cucumbers, string beans, cold baked beans, all afford delicious material for a salad.

These salads find a natural complement, both in food value and flavor, in cheese, and this may be served in sandwiches for variety.

When Welsh rabbit or cheese pudding is made the left over portion should be put in a cup and set away in a refrigerator, to be used later as a sandwich filling, and this is particularly good with the addition of a few drops of Worcestershire sauce.

NOVELTIES IN STYLE.

Dyed laces are to be used.

A new idea is the combination of black satin and plaid serge.

Frocks of net arranged in plaits or ruffles are favorites.

Skirts are made entirely of roman stripes.

Extreme suppleness of tissue and shot metal effects will lead in silks and velvets.

Flounces and ruffles share the interest with tunic and pleats.

Many of the new suits are trimmed with bands of velvet.

A pretty new fashion is that of "the court panel" of velvet worn with the afternoon or evening frock of different material.

Checked materials with rough surfaces, such as zibeline, velours de laine and duvetyn, are numbered among the smartest fabrics for topcoats. For a schoolgirl there is one of checked blue and green woolen velours.

Most of us would rather preach than practice anyway.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 19.—The wheat market was decidedly strong from the outset. Local prices opened ⅛c to ⅜c higher, and before noon had gained ⅝c to 1⅛c over Friday's close. A keen demand for export was the cause of the strength, and, while accurate figures on the quantity sold could not be ascertained, it was admitted that about 1,000,000 bushels were worked for export. One prominent firm alone sold over 500,000 bushels, and declared that wheat was easier sold today at present prices than when the market was 10c to 15c per bushel lower. The cash situation is firm, few offerings being put on the market, but a keen demand exists for all grades. Oats in good demand and barley keen, but of the latter there is little to offer.

Deliveries thru the clearing house today were:—Wheat, [illegible] bushels; oats, nil, and flax, 39,000.

Inspections on Friday totaled 215 cars, as against 601 cars last year, and in sight today were 190 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—Cables today on Manitoba spring wheat were strong at a further advance of 3d to 6d per quarter, with a fairly good demand from foreign buyers for supplies, and sales of 200 bushels were made for January-February shipment. The market for coarse grains was without any new feature, prices being steady. Demand for flour continues slow, but there is a good trade passing in mill feed, which is firm. Butter is firmer. Receipts for the week were 1721 packages, against 2107 for the same week a year ago.

Cheese is quiet, but the undertone is strong. Receipts for the week 1249 boxes as against 487 a year ago. Eggs fairly active.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.23½; No. 1 northern, $1.19½ to $1.22½; No. 2 do., $1.16½ to $1.20½; December, $1.17⅝.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 58½c to 60¾c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 46½c to 47c.

Flour—Unchanged.

Bran $22.50.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Dec. 19.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.22½; No. 1 northern, $1.21½; No. 2 do., $1.18½; December, $1.20⅛.

Tom Corwin's Mouth.

Tom Corwin had an enormous mouth. He once said he had been insulted by Deacon Smith. The good brother asked for further explanation about the insult.

"Well," said Corwin, "when I stood up in the lecture room to relate my experience and I opened my mouth Deacon Smith rose up in front and said, 'Will some brother please close that window and keep it closed?'"

Seymour's Long Hit.

There have been many sensational four baggers knocked out by the heavy sluggers of the big leagues, but a bit once made by Cy Seymour in Boston is the daddy of them all. The ball sailed over the fence and fell into a coal car attached to a fast freight and was found by a brakeman when the train reached New York.

Milady's Mirror

The Business Woman's Toilet.

The business woman has no time for morning prinking. As one young woman puts it, "Before I go to bed at night I have to be dressed for the next day." She does not spend more than an hour in the evening over her toilet, but in addition she spends an hour once a week at a first class beauty parlor. One week she has a shampoo and scalp treatment, another facial massage and manicure treatment; on another visit her feet are put in order, and so on.

She takes her warm, cleansing bath at night, but before this she cleanses her face and neck thoroughly with a good cleansing cream, then anoints it with massage cream, which for the moment she leaves on the face.

Grooming the Hair.

She lets down her hair, brushes it thoroughly and leaves it pinned up lightly, but sufficiently high to escape a wetting in the bath. Then she files her nails and jumps in her bath, which is soft and fragrant with soap powder. She does not allow the water to touch her face or neck, but she uses a flesh brush vigorously over her body and scrubs her finger nails and toe nails before she empties the tub and rinses off well with a fine spray. This spray or thorough rinse is absolutely necessary, for, after the soapy water has done its cleansing purpose, it should be well rinsed off the skin.

Massaging the Face.

When she returns to her toilet table the heat of the bath has started a mild perspiration on scalp and face, and the massage cream that she has left on her face has been largely absorbed. She gives her scalp a five minute massage, and, slightly wetting her hair, she rolls the locks about the face and nape of the neck over kid rollers for the night. The skin of the face being now well lubricated, a few minutes' facial massage quite removes the tired lines of the day, and she finishes with a brisk douche of cold water.

Caring For the Nails.

The skin about the nails has been softened in the bath, and a few minutes' work with a nail stick, followed by a little polishing, is sufficient to put them in good condition. Nails that are never neglected are not difficult to keep in order.

If any artificial hair is worn this is the moment to brush it and arrange it for the morning. If there are any changes to be made in the dress—a stitch to take, a fresh collar to be added—do it now. Lay out clean clothes; put soiled ones into the laundry bag. The few extra minutes this will take are largely compensated for by the restfulness of going to bed in a tidy room and the consciousness that there need be no rush or disturbance in the morning.

How to Wash the Hands.

There is a right and wrong way of doing everything, and this maxim applies as much to washing the hands as to anything else.

Choose your soap carefully. It must be good and pure and not too highly scented. A little borax or ammonia in the water will serve the double purpose of softening it and assisting to remove stains.

Every time you wash your hands wash them thoroughly, taking care that the lines on the palm are perfectly cleansed. If this is neglected the lines will become coarser and deeper, which is just what we are most anxious to avoid.

It is very important indeed that the hands should be thoroughly dried and that they should not be exposed either to cold or the heat of the fire immediately after being washed.

If they are left with a little dampness on them you are encouraging the formation of chaps, and roughness and redness are sure to follow.

Foot Ease.

Nothing is more trying to the temper than a corn. If the corn is a hard one and very bad bind a slice of lemon over it every night till it is less painful.

If you have soft corns between the afflicted toes put pads of absorbent cotton saturated with boracic powder. Use a fresh pad every day. It is wonderful how quickly this treatment relieves the pain.

If your feet get tender and blister easily when walking you should always wear woolen stockings, and before pulling them on your feet should be well dusted over with boracic powder.

Beautiful White Hands.

To whiten hands that have become browned through exposure the following is an excellent mixture:

Take a wineglassful each of honey, lemon juice and eau de cologne.

Mix well together, pour into a china jar and keep closely corked. Apply night and morning after washing and drying, rubbing the mixture well into the hands.

The Powder Puff.

Instead of powder puffs requiring frequent cleansing there are now offered tiny balls of absorbent cotton tied with pink, blue, yellow or mauve ribbons to match the toilet table color. These are to be used once and discarded. They should be kept in a wide mouthed jar or box.

STEAMER IS BLOWN UP

Tritonia Believed to Have Foundered After Striking Mine

LONDON, Dec. 21. — The British steamer Tritonia, of the Donaldson Line, struck a mine off the north coast of Ireland Saturday morning, and is believed to have foundered, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Admiralty. The crew of the steamer was saved.

The Tritonia, which was of 2,720 tons, was bound from Partington for St. John, N.B.

Owing to the fear of striking mines sown by the German squadron engaged in the recent raid on English east coast towns, the sailings of steamers between Hull and Copenhagen have been suspended. That the British Admiralty is making progress in coping with the danger from mines is indicated by its announcement Saturday that the route between Newcastle and Flamborough Head had been re-opened during daylight, but that vessels were required to keep within two miles of the coast.

Official statement says there are 3,700,000 Russians left in the field. Still, that is not going to prevent the official scorer in the Berlin War Office taking 7,000,000 Russian prisoners in the next battle.

ITALIANS IN FERMENT

Demonstrations Against Austria Mark Anniversary of Oberdank's Death.

ROME, Dec. 21.—The police at various places in Italy had some difficulty yesterday in keeping down riotous demonstrations at celebrations of the anniversary of the death of the Irredentist leader, Oberdank, who organized the unsuccessful plot to assassinate Emperor Francis Joseph in Trieste in 1882 and was put to death for it.

The Republican deputy, Cola Anni, delivered a speech to a sympathetic audience, which frequently broke into applause as the speaker recited the history of the "Triestan martyr" and his ideals, and declared it was necessary soon to realize them. The demonstration reached its climax when Ricciotti Garibaldi, son of the Italian patriot Garibaldi, leaning on his crutches, arose and said: "Long live Triesti! A voice is still ringing from Caprera Island, where my father is buried. It asks for facts, not words, from the committee promoting the enlistment of volunteers."

As Garibaldi ceased there was a tremendous outburst of applause and cries of "Long live Italy!" "Long live Trent!" and "Long live Trieste!"

The ideal man is a creation of woman's imagination.

MILLIONS FOR WAR

The Coming Session of Parliament Will Deal With the Second Loan

OTTAWA, Dec. 21. — It is stated definitely that the coming session of Parliament will be essentially a war session. Only matters relating to the war will be introduced by the Government.

The chief legislation will be of course the authorization of a second loan. That authorized at the emergency session of Parliament last August was for $50,000,000. The second, it is expected, will be for $100,000,000, although this might be increased largely if there is any expectation that a great length of time will eclipse before the summoning of Parliament again.

The war is costing the country at the present time about $250,000 per day, or about $100,000,000 per annum. The cost will increase considerably as more troops are recruited and sent to Europe. Ammunition alone will be a tremendous item.

Immense Booty Taken.

ROME, Dec. 21. — The Corriere Della Sera publishes a complete list of casualties and captures effected by the Servian troops in the recent big battle at Belgrade. It is as follows:

Killed and wounded, 60,000; prisoners, 80,000; flags, 8; guns, 126; mortars, 29; maxim guns, 50; ammunition-laden wagons, 362; horses, 2,700; bands, 3; kitchens for the camp, 32. Further booty seized after the evacuation of Belgrade is as follows: Four flags, 150 maxim guns, 1,200 horses, 150 provision wagons and 180,000 rifles.

Italy To Raise Money.

ROME, Dec. 21.—A royal decree authorizes the issue of a milliard lire at four and one-half per cent., the loan to be redeemed in twenty-five years at a price of 27.

A milliard lire is equivalent to about $200,000,000.

BOER LEADER IS EXECUTED

Captain Fourie is Shot in Pretoria for Treason

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A despatch from Pretoria tells of the first military execution of a rebel leader involved in the uprisings in British South Africa which followed the outbreak of the European war. Captain Fourie was shot after being convicted of treason. His brother, Lieut. Fourie, also was condemned to death, but sentence was commuted to imprisonment for five years on account of the captain's admission that he had induced his brother to join the rebellion.

Both men had been officers of the South African Defence Force, and being Boers were tried by a court-martial composed of Boers. The captain met death with fortitude.

To Intern Frenchmen.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—(Via London.)—Following the enforcement of a similar measure against Englishmen, the German Government will intern all French males between the ages of 16 and 60 who are residing in Germany. They will be taken to a camp near Holzminden.

Warsaw is Again the Objective of Huge German Movement

Russians Are Reported to Have Retired Over the Bzura River and the Germans Who Followed Were Annihilated—Times' Correspondent Says German Offensive Has Been Suspended.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army which is advancing on Warsaw over a wide front between the Vistula and the Pilica rivers and which on Friday occupied Lowicz, reached on Saturday the new Russian positions along the Bzura river and southward to Rawa, with the result that another big battle is in progress.

The Russians retired across the Bzura river, destroying the bridges behind them, and two German detachments which followed over a partly burned bridge were attacked and are said to have been annihilated, fifty survivors being taken prisoners.

This is only the beginning of the great battle for Warsaw, from which the Germans are now only thirty miles or less. Field Marshal von Hindenburg, however, expects strong resistance, which the strongly reinforced Russian army is certain to offer to his further advance, protected by the Vistula river, which the Germans have been unable to cross.

The Russians are continuing their operations against East Prussia as though the capital of Poland were not threatened, and by counter attacks are attempting to throw off the Austro-German attacks in Galicia. An Austrian sortie in force from Przemysl, according to the Russian official statement, has entirely failed, and there, as well as at other points, prisoners and guns were taken.

The Petrograd correspondent of The Times telegraphs:

The German offensive is at present abandoned. The enemy is again throwing in reinforcements in the direction of the Vistula.

A force consisting partly or wholly of fresh troops tried to cross to the right bank of the Vistula river. At Dobryzn a division of the enemy's forces sent thither was repulsed. The defeat of his Mlawa corps exposed the whole left flank of the Lowicz army, which is not sufficiently covered by the Vistula from Russian attack.

The latest communique announcing the development in the fighting on the Bzura confirms the report of the recrudescence of German activity in this quarter.

The following official communication was issued Saturday night from general headquarters:

"On the right bank of the Vistula (North Poland) there has been no change. An attempt by the enemy to proceed from the right bank of the Vistula, near Dobrzyn, was repulsed by artillery fire. The enemy has been compelled to evacuate quickly an island in the Vistula, which he had occupied. We seized at this point several pontoon bridges.

"The fighting on the Bzura river has begun to develop. We have repulsed several German attacks in other regions. On the left bank of the Vistula there have been engagements of the enemy by advance guards.

"In West Galicia on the left bank of the Dounaletz on the night of Dec. 17-18 we captured as many as 1,000 prisoners belonging to a German division, which already had been engaged in this region.

"A strong force from the Przemysl garrison attempted to open the railway in the direction of Bieroza, to the southwest. Our troops are fighting here under favorable conditions."

The following statement of the Russian General Staff was issued last night:

"On the left bank of the Vistula river, on the front of the Bzura and Rawa rivers, a number of encounters, some of them of a very fierce description, took place on the 18th instant.

"Two German companies which had crossed the Bzura near the village of Dakhova, on a half burned bridge, were immediately attacked by our troops and annihilated. Of this force only 50 men remained. These we made prisoners.

"Fighting also is reported in the region of Opoczno (to the east of Piotrkow).

"In Galicia the situation is without important change. At certain points we have made counter-attacks and captured some prisoners and machine guns.

"In the district of Przemysl the Austrians attempted a sortie in great strength. The movement failed and the outcome was that we took them on the flank and captured a great many prisoners."

Events north of Cracow also reveil a strengthening of the Russian position. The leading German corps, which were driven westward Saturday from the left bank of the Dunawetz, yielded more than a thousand prisoners. Southwest of Przemysl in the valley of Byrzha, the Russians had to deal with a substantial portion of the garrison seeking to escape and engaged in a battle, in which the Austrians were badly defeated.

Four Thousand Poles Enlist.

WARSAW, Russian Poland, Dec. 21.—(Via Petrograd and London.)—By authority of Grand Duke Nicholas, a Polish legion has been organized. The Russian army contains many Polish volunteers, but the legion will be the first Polish contingent flying a distinctive flag to be accepted.

Four thousand Poles are now enrolled in the legion and will be ready to go to the front in six weeks.

A wide line of trenches south of the Somme, in the environs of Richeburg has been seized by the French, who have also retaken an important position not far from Marincourt, after a combat lasting three days.

OFFICERS LEAVE FOR FRANCE

Canadian Battalion Commanders to Watch Style of Fighting

LONDON, Dec. 21. — After having taken a short training course in the Isle of Wight, the commanding officers of all battalions comprising the Canadian contingent have gone to France to learn, at first hand, the war situation, and to get acquainted with the ground and style of campaign being carried on. The officers include Col. Rennie and Col. Currie, Toronto; Col. Hill, Col. Maggard and Col. Sabatt of Hamilton.

A significant camp order was issued yesterday outlining the work which was to have been done during the next three weeks and crowding it into one week. The men will get several hours of extra drill every day, and signs point daily to an early transfer of the men to the firing line.

PROGRESS IS SLOW.

Positions of Enemy Stronger Than Before Says Eye-witness.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The great difficulties under which military operations in Franec and Belgium are being conducted, are described in a narrative of recent developments written by an official observer attached to the British headquarters and made public yesterday by the official information bureau. The recital brings the story of war, as covered in these eye-witness reports, up to Dec. 17.

"The opposition now being encountered resembles to some extent that met with by us in the beginning of October, when we first reached the Franco-Belgian frontier and before the Germans brought up their full force and assumed the offensive," says the report. "It has one great difference, however, and that is that the enemy is in much greater force and his positions are much stronger and better organized than they were two months ago.

"At that time an advance on the eastern end of the line implied a movement across a very difficult country, as it does still; and for us it meant an attack on skillfully, but hastily fortified strong points or villages, held to a large extent by cavalry and jaegers. With the large proportion of machine guns that we have in front of us yesterday, it is no longer a succession of isolated points. There are still such points, and some are the same, but they are stronger and form part of a practically continuous defensive zone, consisting in some places of several lines of cunningly sited and carefully constructed works.

"This scheme really amounts to a maze of trenches and obstacles. Every known form of obstacle is used. Entrenchments — to select the most common form—vary from loose coils of wire to securely staked net works of from 18 inches to nearly six feet in height, and of different widths."

Good talkers are more pitiful than good listeners.

DREADNOUGHT SUNK?

British Battleship Thunderer Reported Mined in North Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—A report that the British super-dreadnought Thunderer was sunk in the North Sea on Nov. 7 by coming into contact with a mine or being hit by a torpedo, was brought here yesterday by George Rootweller of Chicago, a passenger on the steamship St. Louis, from Liverpool.

According to Rootweller, the sinking of the Dreadnought was witnessed by eight men, members of the crew of a small Swedish sailing ship called the Scefjord, that put into Liverpool with survivors from the Dreadnought on board.

"These men were taken in charge by British officers, and were kept under surveillance at an out-of-the-way sailors' mission," said Mr. Rootweller. "I heard of the report in a roundabout way, and through a friend I managed to talk with one of the crew. He told me that the Thunderer blew up and sank in full view of himself and his mates on the Scefjord. The crew hastened to the scene, and a dozen or so of the men were picked up from the water."

Mr. Rootweller said he is the European representative of the Western Metal Products Co. of Chicago.

The Thunderer was a super-dreadnought, completed in 1912. She had a displacement of 22,500 tons, 27,000 turbine horse-power, a speed of 21 knots and an armament of ten 13.5-inch guns and sixteen 4-inch quick-firers. Her crew numbered about 900 men.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS JOIN ON ANNIVERSARY DAY

Bright Services Mark Another Milestone in History of George Street Methodists

Inspiring messages to young people were preached yesterday from the pulpit of George Street Methodist Church and in the Sunday School, the occasion being the Sunday School anniversary. The biggest attendance in the history of the school for several years took in the afternoon service, Rev. Mr. Peever, the pastor, putting the figures at over six hundred including the Grace Sunday School scholars who came down in a body. The sermons morning and evening and the afternoon address were delivered by Rev. Mr. Clendinnen of Kemptville, and the pastor is to be congratulated upon securing such a capable and powerful speaker for the day. Rev. Mr. Clendinnen's messages were specially for young people and his words plainly made a strong impression on all. In the morning he spoke on "Air," taking his text from the book of Genesis showing how God first created expanse.

His audience in the morning comprised the primary and Sunday School scholars who marched into the church and occupied reserved pews. Rev. Mr. Clendinnen made his address as simple as possible and used various articles to explain his meaning. His evening discourse was an appeal for increased zeal and energy in the carrying on of life's activities. He declared that there was one thing greater than resources, mineral wealth, or electric power, and that was man power. The future success of the nation would depend upon the boys and girls who were growing up today. They must be encouraged and helped in their undertakings and their ambitious fostered instead of being discouraged by thoughtless parents and friends. He recited the names of famous men like Dr. Alexander Bell who invented the telephone, William E. Gladstone, who enriched the world with his greatest wisdom by his indefatigable efforts and men of similar calibre. It had been said that nine-tenths of human energy was lying dormant. What an immense revolution in human life would follow if everyone put their full forces of mind and body into operation.

Appropriate music of a Sunday School and Christmas character was supplied by the choir. Rev. Mr. Clendinnen has long been identified with Sunday School work throughout Canada. He is a member of the board of clergymen who legislate on Sunday School matters and was returning home after attending a Sunday School board conference in Toronto when he was prevailed upon by Rev. Mr. Peever to come to George Street Church for their anniversary Sunday.

At the evening sermon the pastor pointed out that the greatest need of their church was a new Sunday School. Expansion was taking place in business and educational circles everywhere else and the Sunday School which was the very basis and foundation of youthful education was without adequate or suitable accommodation. He threw out the suggestion with the hope that the congregation would speedily take steps to remedy such a situation.

ABLE SERMONS BY PROF. JORDAN AT KNOX CHURCH

Rev. Professor Jordan of Queen's University, Kingston, occupied the pulpit in Knox Presbyterian Church at both services yesterday. The morning lessons were from Psalm 137 and the first epistle of Paul to the Corinthians. The two lessons were read to show the contrast in spirit and temper of the two periods some 600 years apart.

For his sermon Professor Jordan took as his subject "The Significance of Exile," based on the Psalm read. He referred to the Jewish exiles in Babylon. This poem, Psalm 137, was written not less than 2400 years ago. Now you may say what have we to do with a poem written in a land so far off? Because it has been so written is no reason why it has nothing to do with us. So far as what we truly call the world, we cannot say no great event has nothing to do with us. The exile of the Jews was such an event.

The Book of Psalms is said by some to be a commonplace book. If we want to get works parallel to Shakespeare and Browning for poetic power and beauty in the Bible we must go to the books of Job and Isaiah. In many senses the Psalms are not poetry. It was the book of the common people. It expressed the life of the earnest men and women—the rank and file.

"Happy shall he be who shall take thy little ones and dash them against the stones," read the preacher. This shows the great discord of war, the wild, natural cry for vengeance. That reminds us that this Psalm is not a little poem of no consequence. The speaker instanced Belgium as an example, where homes were destroyed, the people scattered and driven out by a cruel invading foe. How would you feel? he asked. Would you not cry for justice and vengeance? God do so to them. It is a natural language.

Coming of the Conqueror.

The conqueror came up to Jerusalem, besieged it, starved the people out, committed great cruelty, and burned the temple. The walls were levelled and many people were carried into a distant land. They were taken 700 miles from their loved native land. They went across deserts, many dropped by the way side, and their bones had to be left to whiten in the sun.

The New Land, Different.

The new land was altogether different from their own. It had the highest culture perhaps as the Germans understand that word. It had a network of canals, a great architecture, magnificent temples.

These people looked at all this culture and military splendor, and they said: "How can we sing the Lord's Song in a strange land?" We have got to change this to "How can we sing Jehovah's Song?" the speaker explained. The Lord ought to be God of the universe. When I came to Canada twenty-five years ago I had something of the feelings of an exile, but I had no need to ask if it was possible to pray to the God of England in Canada. You see they had not reached the stage where God is a spirit. When flung into Babylon, they were flung far away from their God. Humanity has been 2500 years working out this. The Jews had a national religion. The state is not the highest thing but God.

Professor Jordan said of a book by a German military authority who exalted the state that he could show it was on the plane of 2500 years ago and not in the highest plane even of that time. No nation now can set itself apart and say it has made civilization, has the highest culture and that you can worship it alone. The British Empire has no such nationality. It rests on spirit and loyalty for the men of every colour and of every clime. May God preserve it.

Twenty-five hundred years ago a little nation smaller than Belgium was crushed but its soul was not.

Suppose you have a song and you cannot sing it. If it is a little silly song it will pass, if it has life it will last. You can think of it. It was in the hour of silence that these people got to know the meaning of their song.

There is a revelation in the hour of silence and three things came of it to the Jews. The Jew came out of it to some extent a man of commerce. He was not allowed to hold land in other countries and was driven to trade. Secondly in a fuller sense the Jew became literary. He had no temple so he read the old book. This was the beginning of the Bible being put together. He placed reliance on the Book. Five hundred years later when the temple was destroyed the Bible could live. Thirdly the Jew became in a sense a missionary. God acted through circumstances and not committees. Every city around the Mediterranean had its synagogue. We do not have to go to synagogues. We have a higher church and movement in Jesus Christ.

No Double Standard.

This is not national but personal. God doesn't ask us to sing the song when we cannot. There is no double standard. Politics is wrong that is not reconciled to Christianity. How can we believe in God with all this chaos and darkness? It has happened before many a time. Out of this exile and suffering, God has brought some great tribute, and, if after this the people can say the light has fallen on pleasant places, there is something greater than life—there is God and righteousness.

Choir Sang Well.

The singing of the choir was very creditable. Miss Kenyon was the soloist at the morning service and Mrs. Gillespie of Port Arthur was heard at the evening service. The services which marked the anniversary of the church, were well attended. Prof. Jordan did not feel able to attend the Sunday School session, as he was suffering somewhat from a cold contracted recently. The evening lesson was the eighth chapter of Deuteronomy, from which also the text of the sermon was taken.

Large Congregation for Carol Service

The service at St. Luke's Church Sunday evening took the form of a Christmas carol service and an exceedingly large congregation was present. All the children took their places in the centre of the church and sung carols appropriate to the Christmas season. The rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, preached a special sermon for the children.

SOME LESSONS FROM THE PATRIOTIC FUND EFFORTS

That Which Brought Success May Well be Used by the Individual

To his evening congregation at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, on Sunday, Rev. James Rollins, brought out some life lessons from the Patriotic Fund efforts. He dealt with the two efforts, the first of which had been a failure and the second a success. Why?

The first effort the speaker said had been a failure, because it did not have a sufficiently clear objective. No amount was aimed at. People were asked to give as much as they could and they were told that it would all be needed. Indefiniteness was one element in the failure. Another element was too long a time being given in which to do the work that could have been done in three days. Men went about the task leisurely when they had a little time to spare. They were not keyed up to a patriotic pitch. Their personality was slumbering.

Also there were some knockers and these knocks met such a responsive note that they began to think that they were the people.

Causes for Success.

A definite, clear cut objective helped in the success of the fund. Everybody knew the objective—$50,000. It rang through the editorials of the local papers. It blazed on a big placard in front of the committee rooms. If one wanted to get in touch with the headquarters he had to use 50,000 as a phone number. The objective was not only definite, it was large enough to challenge the attention of all the people and enlist the services of our biggest men.

Comradeship was provided for the hundred men at work. They took dinner together and planned together. Everybody knew just about where the enterprise was at, all the time.

The boy in the man was encouraged to show itself. All kinds of men marched in a body to the public meeting in the opera house and shouted and sang and cheered in the open streets. It was the boy in them that did it and it is the boy in man that makes the man irresistible.

There was no place anywhere for the man with a grouch. There were a few knockers who wrote letters to the papers but the papers declined to publish the letters and referred the writers to headquarters. The Boosters had the field.

Life Lessons.

Pointing to life lessons, the preacher said: Know what you want to do in life, see it so closely that can never unsee it. See it so closely that neither temptation, or pleasure, or sin can blind your eyes. Choose an objective, big enough to challenge the biggest things in you. See that your objective is not a selfish one. Find a place for comradeship, the kind of comradeship that will be an inspiration to you as well as to the other fellow. In your life plan see that the boy in you has a chance to live. Don't be a knocker. You will have to strike many a blow, but let the blows you strike, be the blows a booster strikes in his enthusiasm to get things he believes in, done.

THE CHRISTMAS MESSAGE AND PRESENT WAR

Taking his text from Isaiah 11th chapter, 1-10 verses, Rev. L. Phelps, pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church, spoke last evening on "The Christmas Message and the War." The speaker, in his opening remarks, referred to the influence the idealist has on human life, and what we owe the idealist for his refusing to believe that the worst is yet to come. Men are asking, "Is there a God?" and, "If there is, where is He?" Eight nations are at war, grasping at each other's throat; casualties are growing larger every day, and those nations were recognized as Christian nations. Christianity is the best form of religion the world knows of, and is this the best Christianity can do? We believe the ideal will become the actual, because of the abiding purpose of God to make the earth a heaven. This promise is referred to all through the Bible. In the working out of this divine purpose there are permissions, strange to our thoughts. War may be necessary in the achieving of this purpose, because of the weakness and folly of human nature. The divine purpose is to be realized by righteousness and justice.

The reign of peace is to follow justice; it does not precede. In all human history, war has been as heaven's scourge. If the King of Peace, Love and Brotherhood is to come via righteousness, sometimes pressure must be handed out to those who oppose. When a nation, like a challenging bully prepares for war through forty years in order to attain national glory and world dominion, the lovers of peace may be pained, but no self-respecting people can simply look on at a broken covenant and allow the wrong to go and innocent thousands to be slaughtered by the bully. Rev. Mr. Phelps spoke of the United States as being a party to The Hague convention which the Germans have broken, yet they do not express themselves one way or the other. He thought the United States should condemn either the cause of Germany or the cause of the Allies.

During this Christmas season we must remember that the soldiers are up in arms to vindicate God's righteous rule of man and lay the proud oppressor and murderer low. The day of peace cannot come to Europe, to the British Empire, whilst the monstrous practice of the Germans exists. The speaker appealed not to the God of battle but to the God of righteousness and hope that every one, as the prophet did, will keep undimmed the glorious vision of what shall be, for the time will come upon the earth "when Might with the Right and the Truth shall be, and come what there may to stand in the way, that day the world shall see."

So She Was!

The two oldest inhabitants were very ignorant, neither of them being able even to tell the time of day. A friend of Uncle Ben's gave him a watch of which he was very proud. One day before the crowd at the corner store old Pete, being slightly jealous of such wealth and wishing to embarrass his rival, said, "Say, Ben, what time have ye got?"

The other old fellow drew out his watch and turned its face toward his inquisitor. "There she be!" he exclaimed.

Peter was almost at a loss, but he made a magnificent effort and retorted, "Blame if she ain't!"

Figures show the temperance movement is very rapidly gaining ground in the States. Germany, no doubt, looks upon this as another glaring breach of neutrality.

Underdone.

A French peasant once made a visit, his first one, to Paris. He went into a cafe and ordered a glass of beer. The waiter brought the beer, together with, as usual in good cafes, a small round piece of felt, on which he placed the glass. The countryman looked at the felt doubtfully. Then he lifted it and tried to bite it. Glancing round to make sure that nobody was watching him, he took out his knife and glanced around again, and then cut the felt into small pieces. These he gulped down one by one and finally washed them down with his beer.

Rather exhausted by his efforts, he called the waiter again.

"Another beer," he said. "But no biscuit this time!"

Not On the Map.

Mrs. Norman had a maid, Jane, who had a lover in the army. One day, after receiving a letter from him she sought her mistress and asked if she might see a map. A while after she returned to Mrs. Norman again and said she could not find the place where her lover was.

"Where is it, do you say, Jane?" asked the mistress.

"Duranceville," replied Jane, after another careful perusal of the letter.

Mrs. Norman searched the map, but no such place could be found.

"Jane," she said, "please let me see the part of the letter which gives the name of the place where he is."

Jane complied, and Mrs. Norman read: "I am in durance vile, but hope soon to be sent home."

WAS INSPIRED BY HATE ARISING OUT OF FEAR

Winston Churchill, in Letter to Mayor of Scarborough, Says Frenzy of Hatred Which Resulted in Attack on Defenceless Towns is Proof of Effectiveness of British Navy—Germans Are "Baby-killers."

RT. HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL.

LONDON, Dec. 21. — Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a letter to the mayor of Scarborough, in which he expresses the sympathy of himself and of the navy at the losses sustained through the German bombardment of Scarborough, and disappointment over the escape of the German warships, says:

"We await with patience the opportunity that will surely come. But, viewed in its larger aspect, the incident is one of the most instructive and encouraging that has happened in the war. Nothing proves more plainly the effectiveness of the British naval pressure than the frenzy of hatred aroused against us in the breasts of the enemy.

"This hatred has already passed the frontiers of reason. It clouds their vision, it darkens their counsels, and it convulses their movements. We see a nation of military calculators throwing calculation to the winds; of strategists who have lost their sense of proportion, of schemers who have ceased to balance loss and gain.

"Practically the whole of the fast cruiser force of the German navy, including some great ships that are vital to their fleet and utterly irreplaceable, have been risked for the passing pleasure of killing as many English people as possible, irrespective of sex, age or condition, in the limited time available.

"To this act of military and political folly they were impelled by violence of feelings which could find no other vent. This is very satisfactory and should confirm us in our course. Their hate is a measure of their fear. Its senseless expression is proof of their impotence and the seal of their dishonor.

"Whatever feats of arms the German navy may hereafter perform, the stigma of baby-killers of Scarborough will brand its officers and men while sailors sail the seas."

Honorable.

Marjorie, aged four, was in the library with her father while her mother was superintending the preparation of dinner. The attention of the head of the house was attracted by a scratching sound, and he looked up to find his daughter at work with a pair of scissors on the top of a polished table.

"Marjorie," he said sternly, "go tell your mother what you've been doing!"

"I won't do it, papa," she said. "Do you think I'm a tattletale?"—Judge.

TERRIBLE FIRE OF BIG GUNS OF THE FRENCH DRIVE BACK GERMANS

New Artillery is Dislodging the Enemy From Their Positions Along the Oise and the Aisne and They Are Rapidly Being Cleared From the Argonne—Allied Forces Pierce German Lines in Flanders.

LONDON, Dec. 21. — Battered incessantly by the effective new Creusot guns used by the French troops on their firing line, the German armies have been forced from their strongholds along the banks of the rivers Oise and Aisne, are being driven rapidly eastward to the out confines of the forest of Argonne.

For a stretch along the battle line of 150 miles, the German infantry has been obliged to give way before the constant deadly cannonading which has silenced and destroyed a number of the Kaiser's powerful batteries, leveling the machine gun shelters and creating panic in the German ranks.

The German defences northeast of Nieuport have been pierced by the Franco-Belgian forces, who have captured new positions on their march to Ostend. East of Ypres and south of it as well, the French-British forces have beaten back a German counter-attack and made important gains in a new offensive.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Amsterdam says:

"The Germans have evacuated Dixmude, but the report that the allies have taken Middelkerke is untrue."

The offensive operations of the allies in the west are being carried out under conditions of siege warfare, and are being stubbornly opposed by the Germans, who in their entrenchments and surrounded by wire entanglements, make an advance of even a few yards a costly matter for the attacking forces.

The following official communication was given out in Paris Sunday afternoon:

"From the sea to the Lys we have gained a little ground, before Nieuport and Saint Georges.

"To the east and south of Ypres, where the enemy reinforced his organizations, defensive artillery battles occurred, and there was slight progress on our part.

"From the Lys to the Oise, the allied forces have seized a portion of the German trenches of the first line on the front running through Richebourg, l'Avoue and Givenchy-lez-la-Bassee.

"To the southeast of Albert, the trench captured by us on the 17th, near Maricourt, and lost on the 18th, was recaptured yesterday.

"In the region of Lihons, the Germans made two very violent attacks for the purpose of retaking the trenches won by us on the 18th. They were repulsed.

"From the Oise to the Argonne, the superiority of our artillery continues to be manifested by the interruption of the enemy's fire, the destruction of machine gun shelters and observatories, and the dispersion of a considerable number of troops.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Grurie, we have repulsed three attacks, two upon Fontaine Madame, one at Saint Hubert.

"Between the Argonne and the Vosges there has been no salient incident to report."

Last night's official communication was as follows:

"In Belgium, in the region of Steenstraete, an attack by the enemy has been repulsed, and we have made sensible progress in the neighborhood of the Korteken Inn.

"The British troops have lost in the vicinity of Neuve Chapelle several of the trenches which they captured yesterday. In the meantime the Indian corps has advanced a few hundred metres towards Richebourg l'Avoue.

"The enemy has displayed activity in the direction of Thiepval and Lihons. At the latter place a detachment of the enemy was taken by surprise in marching column and literally mowed [illegible]."

Stage Bells.

"Parsifal" is interesting, quite apart from its artistic merit, as having had a musical instrument invented for it and named after it. The reproduction of the sound of church bells in opera was long a difficulty. Real bells simply drowned the orchestra, and all substitutes were tried in vain until Dr. Mottl designed the Parsifal bell instrument, somewhat on the principle of the grand piano. Each of its five notes has six strings, which are struck by large hammers covered with cotton wool. And the result is as near to the solemn sound of church bells as the theater has been able to get.—Boston Herald.

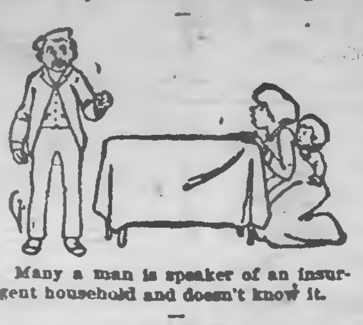
SOME of us are so busy thinking about the halo we are going to wear in the next world that we forget to secure transportation.

Setting a good example is certainly praiseworthy, and following it is apt to be strenuous.

Walking is good exercise. It is especially commended to those who are short on car fare.

The people who are scared at their own shadows have plenty of entertainment always on hand.

We haven't the slightest sympathy for the pain and distress of others when they are of our own causing.



Many a man is speaker of an insurgent household and doesn't know it.

Who wouldn't give his best endeavors for sympathy, but who gets the chance to make the trade?

Some persons say that they don't know how to be mean, but on occasions they have been known to learn rapidly.

Chance to Be Celebrated.

Take a good look at the comet.
When you are aged and gray
And it is once more returning
Then you can swell up and say:
"Yes, on the square,
I was there
When it came.
Like a flame
In the air.
Nothing, I say,
Like the comet today.
That was a comet for fair."

Then all the people will wonder,
Then to your words they will hark,
Then they will think you a marvel
While you look wise and remark:
"Nothing to me,
Comets, for, gee,
I was on hand,
You understand,
When they were first
To be seen in the land.
Really they used
To eat out of my hand."

How it can grow as you view it
When such a distance away!
You can make fun of their comet.
You then offhanded can say:
"This little spot
Looks like a dot.
You folks are stung.
When I was young
Comets looked more
Like a haystack ablaze.
Really but these Are degenerate days!"

Just Incidental.

"What line of work is he in?"

"I believe as a side issue he is clerking in a shoe store."

"But what is his main business?"

Pie Seasons.

Really there are two pie seasons—one when the blackberries, raspberries and blueberries are ripe and when apples are green and the other when the frost is on the pumpkin. The pies of the in between times are as lead to gold to the pies of other times. No pie except the pumpkin pie is a pie at all unless the juice runs from between the covers, the juice of ripened fruit charged with sun and dew. Custom makes us eat pie last. It is a hard rule, deemed only by the anticipation which helps us to go through the preliminary staples, glad in the thought of the delectable to come.—Chicago Post.

First to "Put His Foot In It."

It was a bishop of olden times who first "put his foot in it," and ever since then the most ordinary layman who makes a blunder is said to "put his foot in it."

It wasn't the bishop's fault after all, but the housewives who ran to doors and windows every time the good bishop passed and asked for his blessing and while getting it they let the porridge burn. Then they blamed the bishop for the trouble and said "the bishop put his foot in it."—Milwaukee Journal.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY COMING IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Percy Lesueur Thinks N.H.A. Will Split and New York, Boston, Detroit, Buffalo, Syracuse and Cleveland Will be Admitted

Percy Lesueur of the Ottawa Hockey Club has assumed the role of a prophet. He has glanced into the future and foresees the time when hockey will be as popular in the Northern States in winter time as baseball is in summer. Percy predicts in the near future a new international hockey association in which teams from a dozen American cities will be contenders with the old N. H. A. clubs for premier hockey honors.

"I know for a fact that they are already making plans for the entry of the program in New York and Boston and that it may be only a question of another season when the N. H. A. will receive application for membership from these two cities," he says. "I believe that the N.H.A. eventually will be split up and that there will be a western and eastern section with probably Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, New York and Boston in the eastern section, while Toronto, Hamilton, Detroit, Buffalo, Syracuse and probably Cleveland will be in the other. It's only a question of time."

According to Lesueur, the formation of the hockey commission, with the players under control as in baseball, will attract the attention of American sport magnates. Under the old hockey conditions the game was too much of a gamble for anyone to take a chance. The players were at liberty to jump the job without any warning or reason, and the clubs had no way in which to discipline them. With a strong governing body the game is now on a business-like basis and the money making possibilities are much greater.

Lesueur suggests that, in the event of the American cities coming into hockey the game could be made to conform with a lot of the ideas associated with baseball; such as the teams playing series of games in the different cities. He would also suggest that the teams play four nights a week. He points out that the time taken up in a trip to Boston or New York would not interfere with this plan.

Champion Skater Not Fast Enough for Pro. Hockey

Edmund Lamy Says the Game is too Speedy for Him

Ottawa, Dec. 21. — Edmund Lamy, the professional speed skating champion, who came here last week for a tryout with the Ottawas, has gone to his home in Saranac Lake. Though Lamy has made remarkable progress in his workouts with the Ottawas, he was convinced that he was far from a finished hockey player, and lost no hesitation in admitting that such was the case. He was grateful to Coach Smith for the attention he had shown him, and promised before departing that he would come back again this season to try his skill at the Canadian winter game.

Lamy is in the jewelry business with his father at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and one of his chief reasons for leaving was the fact that his services are required there for the Christmas rush of trade. He will likely compete in many of the big skating championship meetings.

Hamby Shore and Harry Broadbent remarked that they had never seen anyone pick up hockey so rapidly as Lamy. When he came Lamy was so raw that he could hardly handle a stick. On Thursday evening he did some very good work. Lamy learned baseball in a few days and will undoubtedly make good at hockey if he sticks to it. Lamy would like to play ball here and is anxious that Frank Shaughnessy should endeavor to put through a deal to purchase him from London.

"If London couldn't win in the Canadian League last season, I was glad to see Ottawa do so," said Lamy.

ERIE CLUB FOR SALE

Owner O'Neil is Willing to Sell out at $10,000

Erie, Pa., Dec. 21. —Owner O'Neil, of the Erie baseball club, announces that he is willing to sell out. A deal is now pending to increase the Central League to eight clubs, thus giving Erie, Youngstown, and Wheeling, W. Va., a berth. It will take $10,000 to make the deal, but Erie backers are confident it can be accomplished.

O'Neil bought the Erie franchise last season, placing his team in the Canadian League. However, Erie never took kindly to the Canadian circuit, and O'Neil lost a large sum of money.

Kaiser Claims Victory.

KARLSRUHE, Dec. 21. — (Via Berlin to London.)—Grand Duchess Louise of Baden has received the following telegram from Emperor William:

"Field Marshal von Hindenburg has just reported that the Russian army, after desperate fighting, retreats and is being pursued along the entire front.

"It is evident that the Lord aided our heroic troops. To Him alone is due the honors."

Emperor William also thanked in a telegram the 14th Army Corps, which participated prominently in the fighting on the Russian centre.

The Kaiser's message was apparently based upon the claim of a sweeping German victory made several days ago, but not later confirmed.

"Those Senators did more fighting and cursing than all the other clubs put together, but they were sure there with the punch on the home stretch."

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE LONDON HOCKEY CLUB is seriously considering a movement that might well claim attention from the hockey organizations in this city. It is to organize a city league to develop the players who do not make a place on the O. H. A. teams. There have been many leagues in Peterboro in former years, but this season there is absolutely nothing doing along that line. Many fans in the city would only be glad to co-operate with the Peterboro Hockey Club in such an endeavor. Commenting on the proposal a London paper states as follows: "The club could easily afford to run this new league at its own expense. It would not cost a great deal, and the city would profit considerably by it if some good hockey players were turned out. At present there is plenty of material for four good teams, and the sevens could be picked with an eye to making them as evenly matched as possible. The city league and manufacturers' league, together with the church leagues, have done wonders in the past in developing players, and every effort should be made to keep up the good work. London is fast growing into one of the best hockey cities on the map, and everything that will tend to increase this growth should be encouraged in every way possible."

IT NEVER OCCURRED to us before, but evidently the reason for the Mercantile League being abandoned can be credited to the absence of "Goke" Harris, the former Tool Room Hockey Club manager. The "Connie" Mack of the Tool Room outfit nursed the league from its infancy, and now that he is stationed in Detroit, the league has become defunct. Funny what one fellow with a little "pep" can do.

ART PRIMEAU, who performed on several local hockey teams, including the Tool Room squad, champions of the Mercantile League, will be missing this winter. He is in Detroit. This D town seems to be a mecca for Peterboro boys.

LINDSAY, YOU are welcomed. We thought it would require very little effort to gather a junior O. H. A. team in the village to the northwest. All that remains, so that our joys will be complete, is to take both games from the new entry.

FRANK BARRIE, the Annette Kellermann of last season's junior O. H. A. team, is missed by the railbirds. "Dank" is in the vicinity of North Bay and will not be down till spring.

CHURCH HOCKEY.

There will be a meeting tonight of the junior church hockey league at seven-thirty in the Y.M.C.A. parlors.

"BOB" CARSON JOINS CORPS

Popular Local Young Man With C.G.E. Engineering Force

Robert M. Carson, better known to a host of friends as "Bob," left today for Quebec, where he will join the engineering corps supplied by the Canadian General Electric Co. His absence will be greatly felt by pals and acquaintances, particularly members of the sporting circle in which he always figured prominently. Until recently he was employed at the south end branch of the Union Bank and wore a bankers' uniform in the Mercantile Baseball and Hockey Leagues. During the past summer he twirled for the De Laval nine.

He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Carson, Romaine street.

FIRST CURLING OF THE SEASON

Knights of the Stane and Are Busy Again

An important meeting of the Curling Club is called for this (Monday) evening, at 7.45, to receive the report of the committee which was elected to manage the open bonspiel.

There will also be a meeting of the skips at 8 p.m. to select the rinks for the district cup and tankard games.

The first curling of the season was held on Saturday afternoon and the ice is now in splendid condition.

JUNIOR O.H.A. IN LINDSAY

New Club Will Probably be Grouped With Peterborough

Lindsay at last has awakened. The old town was sound asleep for quite a while, but some kind Gabriel came through with a few notes from the trumpet, and we find Lindsay organizing a junior O. H. A. team. The meeting was held Friday evening, and the following officers elected:

President—C. Squier.

Vice-President—F. Carew.

Secretary—A. Simpson.

Treasurer—R. Butler.

According to the Warder, Lindsay has material. We have known that for a couple of years, and judging by the class of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute seven which performed here last season, the new team will make other towns step hard. Lindsay will very likely be grouped with Peterboro, Port Hope, and Cobourg.

Lindsay has been admitted to the Junior O.H.A. group and this necessitated the schedule for this group being re-arranged. The revised schedule is as follows:—

Jan. 1—Lindsay at Port Hope.
Jan. 4—Port Hope at Peterboro.
Jan. 7—Peterboro at Cobourg.
Jan. 8—Port Hope at Lindsay.
Jan. 12—Cobourg at Peterboro.
Jan. 15—Cobourg at Port Hope.
Jan. 15—Peterboro at Lindsay.
Jan. 19—Lindsay at Cobourg.
Jan. 19—Peterboro at Port Hope.
Jan. 26—Cobourg at Lindsay.
Jan. 29—Port Hope at Cobourg.
Jan. 29—Lindsay at Peterboro.

PLAY IN TORONTO NEW YEAR'S NIGHT

Intermediates Will Meet the Toronto Rowing Club

The Peterboro Intermediates will play the Toronto Rowing Club in Toronto on New Year's Day. The Toronto Club invited the local septette to perform on the Arena and the Petes were anxious to have the exhibition game to put the finishing touches on their training. Ottawa College has written for a game in Peterboro during the first week in January and the executive of the local club meets tonight at the Empress to decide whether or not Father Stanton's offer will be accepted. The Ottawa team would undoubtedly be a big attraction as the reverend coach has many friends and admirers in this city.

Secretary Moran has given a little attention to the price of admission for the coming season. He has decided to ask the executive tonight to sanction the idea of charging 25 cents as a general admission for all quarters of the rink, excepting a couple of hundred seats on the west side. It is the intention to screen the section off, and have a seat plan in one of the principal stores of the city. The reserved seats will be sold for 50 cents.

The Intermediates practice tonight between seven and eight and the Juniors will be out at the same hour tomorrow evening.

When a man acts like an idiot he may be acting on the square.

If every man got as much salary as his wife thinks he ought to have sorrow would cease from the face of the globe.

The trouble is that there are so many persons that have a great distaste to wasting time in work.

Attending to one's own business may be dull and monotonous, but if strictly adhered to it often proves profitable.

A reformer is sometimes a person who has not been able to make good at anything else.

Success when it does come gets here by such slow degrees that no enthusiasm is left for the reception.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

The Christmas party on Saturday at the Y. W. C. A. for the junior department was a most enjoyable affair, one hundred and forty children being present. The program was an impromptu one of recitations and songs by the children. A visit from Santa Claus, who distributed candies and oranges, was greatly enjoyed.

Prizes were awarded for darning: Juniors, from 10 to 12 years: First, Lizzie Howarth; second, M. Sullivan.

Seniors from 12 to 14 years: First, Isabel Turner; second, May Millard.

There are 186 enrolled in this department under 14 years. Classes are held on Saturday from 2 to 4. The work has been sewing, darning, making buttonholes, needle books or scrap books for the younger children. The senior and junior classes have taken a course in household science which included sweeping, dusting, bed-making and table-setting.

Christmas and New Year's at the W. Y. C. A.

SPLENDID WORK BY CHARLOTTE ST. CHOIR

The service at Charlotte Street Methodist Church Sunday evening was of a musical character, a sacred cantata being sung by the choir. The choir deserves much praise for the manner of the singing which showed that a good deal of hard training had formed their preparation. Miss Lettie Trope sang a solo, and the leading parts of the cantata were taken by Miss Ada Richardson, soloist of the Charlotte St. Church, Miss Stevens and Messrs. Staples and Lee. The musical program was divided into two parts, the first one preceding the reading of the lesson by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., with some explanatory remarks, and the second part following the lesson. The church was completely filled, many going away for lack of seats. There will be special music next Sunday.

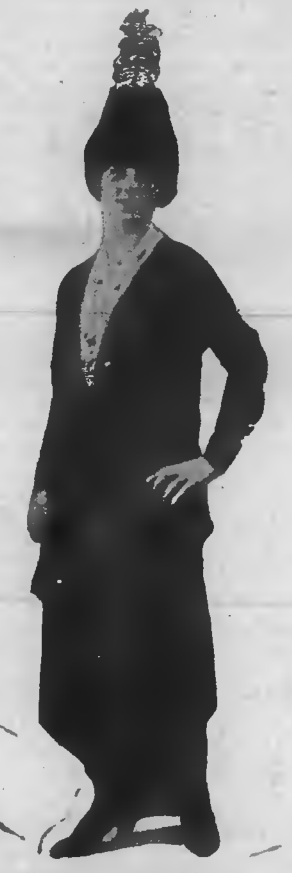
CHIC STREET SUITS.

Fabrics Which Fashion Approves For Their Construction.



SUIT WITH DOUBLE TUNIC.

Broadcloth and serge are always in demand for street dresses, but this year there is even a greater vogue for peau de souris, velours de laine and duvetyn, the latter now being woven to give as much satisfaction as broadcloth itself.

Ripple cloth, which looks exactly as its name implies, but is actually a smooth weave material, is being used for many smart models, while woolen crape and poplins and even old fashioned cashmere are seen. This latter material is splendid for the new military cape.

The gown of black satin which is illustrated has a double trimmed skirt, with bodice of black fabric fur, built on lines which suggest the basque. The vest is of white chiffon.

Dodged.

Jones' little boy came home from school one day very boastful of the fact that he could spell dog, but when he was asked by his father to do so he hesitated.

"What kind of a dog?" he asked.

"Why, any kind of a dog," said Father Jones.

"A dog like Blank's dog?"

"Yes."

"Well, Blank ain't got any dog."—Woman's Home Companion.

Typhoid and Cocoanut Milk.

An English writer tells of a colored woman in Trinidad who was dying, beyond all hope, of typhoid, and pleaded to be allowed to drink of cocoanut juice. She was beyond the reach of good or harm, so she had her cocoanuts and drank the juice, not of one but of eight in succession—perhaps a gallon of liquid, and the orgie indisputably saved her life.

Hearing Heart Beats.

If you hear your heart beat in one ear, as many persons do, it is no proof of anything wrong with the heart. It is much more likely to be a local defect such as chronic catarrh of the middle ear or stiffness and retraction of the drum. This on the authority of Dr. Robert H. Babcock of Chicago.

THE SKATING RINK.

Sir,—What is the motive underlying the Examiner's knock at Mayor Buller's scheme to provide a free skating rink? Is it because the receipts at the Brock Street rink might suffer, or is it only the usual guff?

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

The Life Problem Club on Sunday afternoon was addressed by Dr. J. E. Middleton, subject, "Choosing a Vocation." The Dr. related a number of instances of men who have fitted themselves for some particular vocation in life at considerable expense to themselves, and found that the business or profession was not adapted to them for a life work. The Dr. stated that it was unwise for any young man to drift into an ocupation, but a deliberate choice should be made. For any young man is qualified for some particular sphere in business life, and he must find this particular sphere or be out of place.

GERMS ON FRUIT.

These May Be Effectually Removed by Disinfection.

Fruits should be fresh, ripe and clean. Fruits exposed long in the market often undergo partial decomposition. When decomposition has not actually begun the surface of the fruit is sometimes covered with mold, dust and germs of various sorts, often of a deadly character. Careful selection of fruit to be served and a thorough cleansing of it is always of the utmost importance.

Such fruits as apples, plums and grapes may be dipped for two minutes in a 5 per cent solution of peroxide of hydrogen. After disinfecting the fruit must be thoroughly rinsed. Berries, salad greens and, in fact, all fruits and vegetables may be thus rendered safe for eating.

The most active cause of diseases is germs of various sorts. These are communicated through dust, in which they rapidly multiply by decomposition, especially in cities, where the air is often charged with millions of germs to the cubic yard.

GENERAL SAM HUGHES AS A SCHOOLMASTER

Some Interesting Reminiscences of a Man Much in the Public Eye—Insisted Upon Discipline.

"His brother, Mr. J. L. Hughes, has let the public enjoy an autobiography," said a well known trust company manager, "but some reminiscences from Major-General Sam Hughes himself would make good reading, too. He was one of the best teachers Jarvis Street Collegiate, Toronto, ever had, and before he exchanged the classroom for the Warder sanctum, at Lindsay, in 1885, 50 per cent. of the men of my own age in similar positions in Toronto passed through his hands. Sam Hughes was undoubtedly a great disciplinarian.

"I often wonder what kind of predictions he used to mak to himself about his different pupils, as he sat at his desk, eyeing them over at their lessons, his stern jaws usually going. Sam had a curious habit of nibbling a bit of blackboard chalk in the schoolroom. The good, old-fashioned custom of caning had not gone out then, and we boys certainly dreaded one from the muscular Sam, whose good right arm was always in shape from playing lacrosse. 'I will not cane —to-day,' he would generally inform the class concerning some offending student. 'I might give him more than he deserves. I do not wish to punish anybody in anger.' That sort of thing tended to impress the class as well as the individual delinquent, and was salutary. Sometimes Sam Hughes' temper would get the better of him. One day a boy was caught sticking a pin playfully into the back of the boy who sat in front of him. Now the joker's father had been a drawing-master in the schools, and probably he thought he ought to be allowed latitude. When he saw the cane produced from the desk he made a bolt from the room and into the school yard, with Sam after him. The boy was a school sprinter, but the lacrosse expert was in better training, and the pair—Sam in the rear—went up and down that yard fully a dozen times. Eventually the pupil was lugged, breathless, into the class-room, and after the teacher had exhibited to the grinning class a certain pin of his own that he had been using on the culprit, out in the yard, the latter was induced to stand up and take his medicine. The class saw the 'point' of the joke. That and many such incidents, too, were salutary. No matter who the lad was, if he deserved a 'licking' he had to take it."

Ready to Die.

Field Marshal Sir John French is popular with both the French and the British soldiers, despite the fact that he is the strictest of disciplinarians. A French soldier who had just been brought to the base hospital from the front with a shattered leg, on hearing that the British commander was in the vicinity, requested his nurse to ask Field Marshal French to come and shake hands with a humble ally who did not know whethere he would survive an operation. Sir John immediately complied. The soldier kissed the commander's hands, saying: "I am ready to die after meeting this famous general."

The Savage's Brain

The savage found a champion in Mr. W. McDougall, who lectured on "The Mind of Savage Man" at the Royal Institution, London.

Fifteen years ago, he said, he was one of a party of scientists who journeyed to Torres Strait, and in carrying out their investigations they discovered that the head measurement, or cranial capacity, of the natives was just about the same as that of the average Oxford undergraduate.

Mr. McDougall dealt chiefly with his experiences of a savage tribe in the interior of Borneo, who live in houses a hundred yards long, raised on twenty-foot poles, with chambers for each family and a long corridor for the communal life of the joint tenants.

A German's Opinion

Wounded Private Has Reasons to Respect British Infantry.

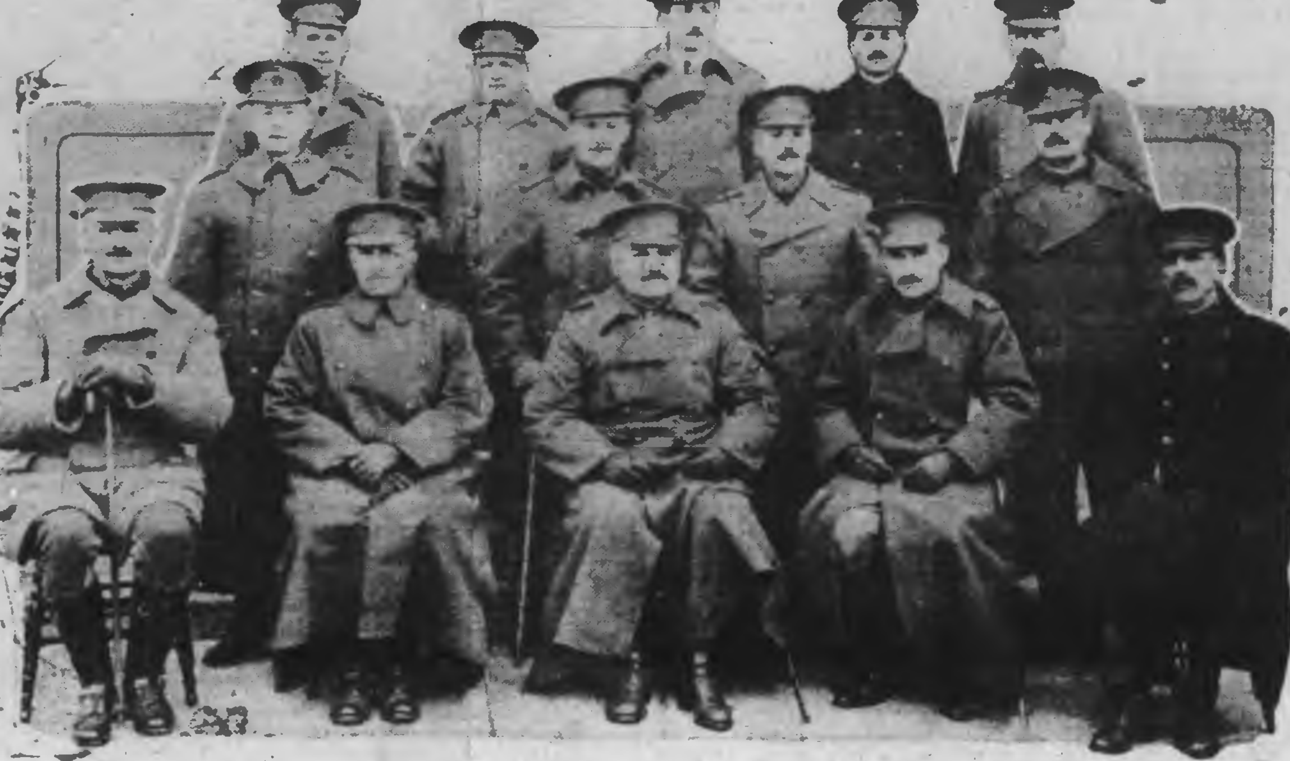
Private Hannan, 2nd Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers, like many other soldiers, has a very poor opinion of the German infantry, who, when advancing to the attack, do not take aim, but fire from the hip. The Germans did not strike him as being very keen for fighting. A number of captured whom he had spoken to on the point said that they were forced by their officers to fight. In some cases the men had refused to fire, and the officers turned and shot them. Private Hannah received a rifle wound in the left foot, and was sent to hospital. In the next bed was a wounded German prisoner named Peters. These two men, who would have shot each other at sight on the field of battle, became quite friendly while lying side by side in the sympathetic atmosphere of a hospital, where friend and foe alike were cared for. Peters spoke broken English. "English artillery," said Peters, "no good; English infantry—Mein Gott!" This tribute to the British foot soldier was accompanied by a facial expression which more than compensated for the lack of words.

A Novel Royal Salute

The King and Queen paid a surprise visit to 200 wounded "Tommies" at the London Hospital when a delightful incident occurred, into the humor of which their Majesties entered thoroughly. Included among the wounded were several so far recovered as to insist upon "doing something to help." They were "armed" with long brooms, and were sweeping out a ward when one of them suddenly caught sight of the King and Queen. Lost for a moment, the soldier quickly recovered, and, in a tone indicative of his astonishment, exclaimed, "The King!" In an instant the men had drawn up in close formation, facing their Majesties, each presenting a broom, in lieu of a rifle, at the salute.

Roumania an Isolated Country

Roumania has been described as a Latin island in the midst of a Slav, Teutonic and Turkish sea. She traces her descent from Rome, and has a closer kinship with Italy than with any other European power. The history of Roumania is a long chronicle of invasions and conquests by alien races.



GENERAL LESSARD AND STAFF OF THE SECOND CONTINGENT.

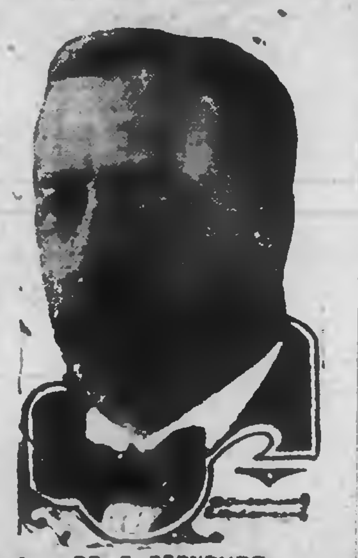
GERMANY'S APOLOGIST

Dr. Dernburg, who is in the United States trying to create pro-German sympathy on behalf of the Kaiser's Government, is a son of the editor of the Berlin "Tageblatt," and was born in Darmstadt fifty years ago. After graduating from the Berlin Gymnasium (as colleges are called in Germany), he went to New York City in order to learn American ways and was for some years in the banking house of Ladenburg, Thalman and Co. After his return to Germany he became director of the Bank of Darmstadt. He stands for what is most admirable in modern Germany: its industries, its commerce, its technical schools, and its efficient organizations. When the Kaiser put him at the head of the Colonial Office in 1907 it was a great shock to the Junkers, who thought that such a high position was the natural monopoly of those of noble lineage. He made a personal inspection of the African possessions and would probably have made them in time as profitable as the British colonies if he had been able to carry out his program of reforms.



DR. E. DERNBURG

Care of Sweaters.

The following method, if carefully followed, will result in great satisfaction to the one who wants a shapely sweater after it has been subjected to the process of cleansing. After the ordinary methods, as we all know, the sweater is such an unsightly object as to be forever shorn of its original beauty.

Prepare a suds with lukewarm water, being particular to have plenty of water so that the sweater can be thoroughly cleansed. Pass it through the suds, gently pressing and lifting until it appears to be perfectly clean. Pass through several lukewarm rinse waters and then through water slightly blued. Do no wring or stretch in any way. Next pin a clean piece of muslin firmly on a board wide enough to take the sweater in its natural shape. Place the sweater on the board dripping wet with front out, placing and shaping it until exact shape and size as when worn. Put in a strong sun and when front is thoroughly dry turn over carefully and dry the back. When it is thoroughly dry you will find that it is in its natural shape, with pockets, cuffs and sleeves in perfect proportion.

QUEER NICKNAMES FOR SOME REGIMENTS

Extraordinary Sobriquets Borne by Some of Britain's Most Famous Fighting Corps.

There is scarcely a regiment or a corps in the British army that does not possess a nickname of some kind or another, and some of these are distinctly curious, while others are, of course, obvious. No one, for instance, needs to be told why the Scots Guards are called "the Jocks," or the Life Guards "the tin bellies."

Others, however, are not so obvious. Perhaps the most extraordinary of all these names is "Pontius Pilate's Bodyguard!" to which all ranks of the Royal Scots Regiment cheerfully answer. When it was serving under the King of France in the seventeenth century, a dispute arose between the men and those of the Picardy Regiment as to which was the oldest corps. The Picardy Regiment laid claim to having been on duty the night before the Crucifixion. To this the Royal Scots promptly retorted: "Had we been on duty then, we should not have been found asleep at our posts."

Another nickname that needs explanation is that of the Norfolk Regiment, which is known as "the Holy Boys." This arose during the Peninsular War from the fact that their badge is the figure of Britannia. The ignorant Spanish peasantry could not understand whom this figure was intended to represent, and took it to be the Virgin Mary.

These Sound Insulting

The "Pig and Whistle Light Infantry" is not exactly a title of respect, but the Highland Light Infantry accept it with equanimity. This name, like that of the Norfolk Regiment, arises from the badge, which is an elephant over a bugle. Another similar title is that of the West Riding Regiments, known generally as "the Monkey-up-a-Stick," their badge being the crest of the Duke of Wellington, a rampart lion holding a banner aloft.

"The Murdering Thieves" is the scarcely complimentary title bestowed upon the Royal Army Medical Corps, from the fact that when this was first formed as a regular portion of the army it was known as the "Medical Train," and all its wagons, equipment, etc., was stamped accordingly "M.T."

Some of the nicknames bestowed upon regiments have a distinctly slanderous implication. Thus the Royal Irish Regiment is often known as "the Drink Mosts," while the Gordon Highlanders have been dubbed "the Whisky Washers."

Some reflection, too, is cast upon the Royal Munster Fusiliers, who for many years have borne the unjustifiable appellation of "the Dirty Shirts," while the Queen's Own Royal West Kent Regiment still bear bear their nickname of the "Dirty Half-Hundred," with complete equanimity, as do the Rifle Brigade, who are "the Sweeps" to the entire army.

More Complimentary

Of quite a different type is the name proudly borne by the Middlesex Regiment, "the Die-hards." This title they richly earned at Albuhera, when out of under six hundred of all ranks they lost nearly four hundred, and had their colors riddled by no fewer than thirty bullets. Their colonel constantly exhorted them to "die hard, fifty-seventh," and this name will adhere to them so long as the British army exists.

It was in a similar fashion that the Black Watch gained their well known title of "the Invincibles," and the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, "the Lacedonians." This latter name came from their perfect steadiness under fire towards the end of the eighteenth century.

There are some nicknames that utterly defy explanation, though many efforts are made from time to time to elucidate the mystery. Thus the 10th Hussars are known far and wide as "the Chainy Tenth," while the Buffs bear the somewhat gruesome nickname of "the Resurrectionists," and the West Surrey Regiment, "the Sleepy Queens." The Bedfordshire Regiment has the rather curious nickname of "the Peacemakers," owing to the small number of battle honors on their colors, and the fact that upon several occasions they have arrived at the seat of war just as preliminaries for peace were being negotiated.

The 11th Hussars were called "Prince Albert's Own," because they formed his escort in 1840 when he journeyed from Dover to Canterbury to be married to the Queen. They were afterwards nicknamed "The Cherry Pickers." This was because some of the men were taken prisoners while on outpost duty in a fruit garden in Spain.

"The Nanny Goats" is a title conferred upon the Royal Welsh Fusiliers because it is their custom to have a goat with shields and garlands on its horns, led at the head of the drum.

FIGHTING AT DIXMUDE

Germans Advanced Over the Bodies of Their Slain Comrades.

Here is the story of the tremendous fighting for Dixmude, as told by an eye-witness.

"I shall never forget our occupation of the town," said a Belgian officer, who was wounded in the course of the operations. "My regiment, after having resisted for several days in the trenches, was ordered into the place, and had scarcely got there when in the middle of the night a tremendous commotion took place. The officers were calling up the men by whistles, and shouts of alarm were raised. We were on the point of being surprised, but, fortunately, our machine guns had been installed in good positions, and, served by determined men, a hail of bullets were thrown on the Germans, who, during the night, advanced fifteen times to the attack, and as many times were thrown back by our troops. The German soldiers were even brought to the point of marching over their own dead and wounded. I shall never forget the cries of the latter amidst the infernal noise of rifles and machine gun fusilade. In a single street, when daylight came, I counted over 800 German dead and wounded. These tactics cost the Germans thousands of lives, but enabled them to cross the river and establish themselves at several points on the left bank."

COLUMN FOR THE YOUNG FOLK

Smart Boy Corn Grower Who Has Achieved Fame.

LEADS THE LITTLE FARMERS.

Wonderful Agricultural Success of Walter Lee Dunson of Alabama. Taught His Elders a Lesson—Interesting Things For Small People.

Great success has come to a small lad all because he worked to do the best that he knew. As the result proved he knew a whole lot, and he also knew how to apply his knowledge. The lad here mentioned and pictured is Walter Lee Dunson of Alexander City, Ala., and he is president of the junior organization of the American Topnotch Farmers' club, representing all the corn growing states and made up of boys and girls. There are 9,000 members of the organization, each of whom to become a member must have produced over a hundred bushels of corn on one acre of land. The whole membership has been invited to become guests of the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco next year, and as plans have been perfected to that end most of them will be there.

WALTER LEE DUNSON.

Walter Lee Dunson has beaten all corn growers from everywhere. He is only fourteen years old, but his record for last year was 232 bushels of corn harvested from one acre. That made him president, the head of the club being always the best corn grower.

There are thirty-three vice presidents, living in thirty-three different states of the Union. Each of these holds the topnotch record for the state in which he lives. The record of Vice President H. Jones Polk, Prentiss, Miss., is 215 bushels; of C. J. Wadsworth, Oregon, Ill., 192 bushels; Ray Cameron, Kinston, N. C., 190 bushels; Edward Eelborn, Madison, Ga., 182 bushels; Homer Fletcher, Ionia, Mich., 175 bushels. Mother Goose Revised.

I had a little motorcar,
  And it was dapple gray.
For eyes it had two lamps of brass

I lent it to a lady

She ran into a motor bus

She smashed the pretty lamps of brass

ATTITUDE OF THE CHINESE

In an article in a recent number of The Chinese Review, a London publication edited by two Chinamen, the attitude of the Chinese toward Christianity and the profound difference in the modes of thought which characterise the east and the west are discussed.

In the China of the more recent times, says the writer, the same vivid contrast is discernible. One looks in vain for a Thomas Carlyle or a William Wordsworth; nor can the ecstasies of the modern mystic find any affinity in Chinese thought. There is no unspeakable agony, no mortal strife between faith and unbelief; and it is highly doubtful whether such states of mind can be made so much as intelligible to the eastern understanding.

The Chinese of to-day pursues his even course with equanimity as he has done for ages past, and is less perturbed by questions of faith and delicate casuistry than the Sage (Confucius) who had determined for him, irrevocably it may seem, his summum bonum. His needs are few and his ambitions attainable with ordinary effort. "To see God!" and "to be persecuted falsely and yet rejoice" are beatitudes after which he entertains no aspiration. If he is literary he may hope for honor, for state employment and for power to rule. For the rest he is content to live in easy affluence without undue luxury or extravagance.

The lower classes are permeated with the same atmosphere of imperturbable contentment. In spite of economic pressure, of the many uncertainties of life in a frequently disorganized state, living is cheap and easy; and the Chinese peasant is no less remarkable for his simplicity of life than for his philosophical calm in adversity, and for the elasticity with which he recovers from disaster.

Hit His Pocket.

He was a young man, more or less in society, according to the state of his pocketbook, and he had invited two young ladies to dine at a fashionable restaurant. Before the repast was brought in he called the waiter aside and said confidentially:

"When I order Bordeaux you must bring us a cheap, second class wine."

The waiter replied that he understood, and the inferior wine was accordingly served. When the bill was brought in, however, the young man looked considerably annoyed and tried to attract the attention of the waiter by discharging a series of sly winks and nods upon that functionary.

Finding his efforts fruitless, he said, "Here, waiter, there is some mistake in the wine item."

The waiter courteously denied the charge, stating that Bordeaux had been charged for, as ordered.

The ladies at once confirmed this statement, and the economical young man had nothing to do but pay up.

FRIENDSHIP.

IT'S very fine to have a friend
  Who loyal is and true
Until some day you find out why
  He has been good to you,
Who has been laughing at your jokes,
  So modest, old and tame,
That he might later come around
  And work you on his game.

He seems a sweet, unselfish soul,
  From dark designs so far,
When cheerily he chases up
  And hands you a cigar.
Nor can you notice through the fumes
  That wreaths of friendship weave
A faint suggestion of the scheme
  That's hidden up his sleeve.

So pleasantly he comes and says,
  "Old man, how's tricks and such?"
You would not guess he meant to make
  A more than modest touch.
You would not guess that when he gripped
  So gleefully your hand
That he was wondering how large
  A shakedown you would stand.

There may be friendships that are not
  Of selfish motives born,
That anything suggesting gain
  Most haughtily would scorn,
But all do not cavort along
  On such a lofty plain,
For more have their foundations laid
  In sordid greed for gain.

Simple Way.

"Yes; I saved a man from drowning once."

"Do you wear a medal for it?"

"No; I am too modest."

"How did you do it?"

"Bought him a drink when he wanted to go swimming."

Knew How It Was.

"Were you ever struck by lightning?"

"No, but I have been struck by a book agent."

"I see you survived."

"Yes; he spared my life after getting all my money."

As Usual.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Of course."

"Why of course?"

"Because it is more expensive. Isn't that the way you measure desirable things?"

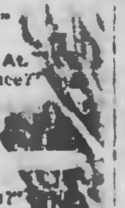
Knew How to Handle It.

"He is thrice armed whose cause is just."

"Does that apply to a woman also?"

"Certainly!"

"I'd rather have a hatpin."



Something to Look At.

"What does he call his place?"

"Pleasant View."

"Pleasant view of what?"

"The mortgage, I guess."

A Safe Bet.

"Have you any references?"

"Yes; my former boss."

"What's his address?"

"He's dead."

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

THE DOUBLE CURE

In Which Honesty Gets its Own Reward.

"THE hair," said the assistant, "is very thick."

"If you refer to mine," I replied, "it is frightfully thick."

He looked at it reflectively. "It is very thick," he said, "very thick," and he jabbed the comb into it.

"On the other hand," I pointed out, "my skull is very thin."

"Yes, sir."

"And the comb is very sharp."

He apologized, pulled the comb out and jabbed it back not quite so severely.

"Very sharp." "Very thick," we murmured together.

"I will thin it out," he suggested.

"As long as you get it out painlessly I don't mind," I said.

"It's a curious thing," I observed. "For any degree of baldness you provide remedies by the hundreds. You offer to invigorate the hair, to dress it, to bring it up in the way it should go and to produce it in any quantity."

The light of battle came into the assistant's eye.

"Yes," he said, picking up a bottle, "this preparation, for instance, is really to be recommended. The famous Crinilline."

He held it aloft, and the neighboring assistant barely suppressed a cheer. "I've sold"—

"That's all very well," I objected, "but where do I come in?"

"Well, sir"—he held out his scissors—"these surely are effective."

"Cutting only makes it grow more quickly. The beastly stuff's so thick," I complained. "What I want is some stuff for thinning my hair."

"For thinning the hair? Yes, sir." He combed the atmosphere thoughtfully. "I should like to sell you something, sir."

Of a sudden he snipped excitedly. "I have it!" he exclaimed. He picked up a bottle. "The very thing!" He looked round cautiously, bent down toward my ear and coughed nervously. "Of course," he said, "this is—er—not a preparation for your particular complaint. I—er—it—between our two selves, sir, it was—er—intended for other purposes."

"Yes?" I said.

"But, sir, it may be just what you require."

"Yes, yes!" I held my hand out for the bottle.

"Yes, sir," he whispered. "It may be. At any rate I happen to know for a fact that there is no possible danger of its increasing the growth of the hair."

And he handed me the famous Crinilline.

To show my appreciation of his honesty I bought two bottles.—Punch.

All Around the Mulberry Bush

Story of a Wife's Devotion.

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

All the afternoon the thud of flatirons on the ironing board had gone on steadily.

Now, with the coming of dusk, they began to lag. In the overheated little kitchen, potently smelling of starch and clean linen, Mrs. Whalen paused at intervals more and more frequent to listen for the sound of familiar footsteps on the back steps.

At last they came—dragging, tired footsteps, pausing at the rubber mat on the top step to wipe the mud from the big boots before they should enter that spotless domain.

Mrs. Whalen whisked her iron back to the stove and sped to the back door to throw it open.

"Wheriver have ye been all this long, dearie?" she gently chided the gray haired, bent figure on the doormat. "I was beginnin' to feel a wee bit worried about ye."

The pallor of his pinched face made his eyes seem unusually large. His clothes hung loosely and baggily on his shrunken frame.

"Now we'll have supper," she announced. "A bit of tay'll be puttin' the heart into ye. I've made ye the iligant mutton broth this afternoon too."

"Ye've been ironin' the livelong day," said Whalen at length. "I take shame to myself to think av yer doin' it, Nora."

"'Tis no wor-rk for me at all; I love it," she declared briskly, but Whalen noticed how tired her eyes looked and how thin the gray hair was getting at her temples. A spoonful of the mutton broth he was swallowing at the moment seemed to choke him.

"Ye'd say that annyway," he averred, looking at her with admiration.

"There's foine money in doin' this fancy stuff," she declared. "Tin dollars a week we can be countin' on now!"

The little clock on the mantel was striking 9 when from the bedroom she heard sleepy, half audible mumblings.

She put down her iron and tiptoed to the threshold. Whalen was tossing restlessly on the bed.

"Foind me anny kind av wor-rk, Brady—anny kind," Mrs. Whalen heard his unaisy mutterings. "Sure, I'm strong enough for wor-rk now. I can't see her workin' like she does to kape us goin'. She's too old for it, Brady. Foind me somethin' to do. Yep, I'll take tin dollars a week to start in on, if I have to."

"So!" she breathed softly to herself. "That's why he's so tired iviry night, hey? 'Tis no sittin' on a par-rk bench that does it. 'Tis lookin' for a job already he is and himself not half over the sickness yet."

She sat for a long time staring thoughtfully at the distorted reflections in the polished nickel of the stove.

At last she arose, smiling and nodding to herself as she whisked another skirt from the basket beneath the board and, with a hot iron, began to smooth out its many flounces.

There were several bundles of laundry to be delivered the next afternoon. No sooner had Whalen poked abroad, ostensibly for his brief walk to the park, than Mrs. Whalen donned her rusty best clothes and fared forth herself.

The little suburban town was mellow with the warmth of early summer. Mrs. Whalen delivered her bundles and then turned her eager steps to one of the town's more pretentious streets. Here each house had its trim bit of lawn, a few shade trees and not infrequently a hopeful little garden.

Up to one of the smaller houses Mrs. Whalen made her way and whirred the bell.

"Would I be findin' Mr. Evans at home?" she inquired of the trim maid who answered her summons.

Mr. Evans was home, and Mrs. Whalen was ushered into a dim library, where a pleasant faced man was poring over a pile of papers.

"Why, it's Nora Whalen," said he, rising to get her a chair. "You want the money for the past few washings, of course?"

Mrs. Whalen shook her head. She began pulling at the fingers of her black cotton gloves.

"Ye—ye couldn't be usin' a man about the place, could ye, Mr. Evans," she asked diffidently, "sort of a gardener, say, or the likes av that?"

"A gardener—me?" Evans inquired, with a slow shake of his head. "Why, that little patch of lawn isn't enough to keep me in trim, Nora. A gardener?"

Mrs. Whalen pulled more nervously at the glove fingers.

"'Twill cost ye nothin' at all," said she.

Evans looked puzzled.

"'Tis like this," she hastened to explain: "Ye know the sickness Mike has had and the bad shape it's wint and left him in. Well, I'm doin' foine wit' the washin' and keepin' things goin' first rate. But Mike do be worrited to death all the time about the way I have to wor-rk. I've found out he's been tryin' iviry day to get him a job instead av pokin' out to the par-rk to set on a bench, like he tells me he does—him that ain't the stren'th av a fly back in him yet. And I'm afraid he'll get a job somewhere, wan that'll lay him out again be the wor-rk in it.

"If he had aisy wor-rk, now, somethin' that wouldn't hurt him none, but would take up his mind and let him think he was earnin' the money that's keepin' us goin', 'twould not be bad at all, I'm thinkin'. So I thought maybe you'd take Mike on as a sort of a gardener here and see he didn't do too much. And if ye would and pay him tin dollars for it I'd sind ye the tin iviry Saturday mornin', so yer could be payin' it to him Saturday night."

"I see," said he. "Why, yes; I think I could afford a gardener under these conditions."

* * * * * * *

"There's a letter for ye the postman just brought, dearie," said Mrs. Whalen that night as Mike came shuffling in somewhat later than usual. "Who's it from?" she asked when her husband had torn it open and read the brief missive.

"Just a bit of an advertisement that don't amount to annything at all," said he.

"He's afraid I won't l'ave him take the job," thought Mrs. Whalen, noting him closely.

Whalen was early away from the house next morning—indeed, quite early enough to stop on his way to his new job at the Cobb place and catch Charlie Cobb before he should leave for town.

"Well, well, Mike," said Cobb as he met Whalen coming up the walk, "what brings you round here at this time of day?"

Whalen caught the other man by the arm in his eagerness.

"Would ye be doin' me a favor, Mr. Cobb?" said he.

"You know anything I can do for you, Mike"—

"Would ye moind, now," Whalen went on, "takin', say, a few av yer clothes over to Nora for her to press and mend? 'Twill cost ye nothin'," he hurried on, catching the perplexity and doubt in jovial Charlie Cobb's eyes. "Not many, moind ye, just a few. And I want ye to tell her ye'll be payin' her tin dollars a week to look after the clothes av ye for awhile.

"Ye see, I've just got the foine, aisy job weedin' a few pansy beds and the loike that's to pay me that much, but Nora did she know av it would put her fut down and say I wa'n't yet well enough to do the wor-rk. She'd say she'd kape on wit' the washin' she's doin', which same, God knows, is cruel har-rd for a woman av her age. But she can't know I'm workin', or she'll be unhappy and worrited to death. So I'll slip ye a tin each Saturday, and when Nora brings back the mended clothes av ye ye can slip it to her, and 'twill be aisy for her and she none the wiser where it comes from. See?"

And so, after going into details somewhat more minutely, it was arranged that Cobb should furnish Mrs. Whalen an easier job than the washing she had heretofore been doing.

* * * * * * *

Now, on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock Charlie Cobb came into the Evans yard and made for Mike Whalen, who, seated comfortably on a low stool, was holding the nozzle of a sizzling hose with which he watered the lawn.

"Mrs. Whalen's just brought back the suit I sent over to her this week," said Cobb. "She's waiting over at the house for her money, although I've had hard work to convince her the work is going to be worth $10 a week. So, if you'll just slip me the ten, Mike, I'll pass it over to her."

"The boss ain't handed me me pay yet," said Whalen. "She's waitin', yer say? Well, I'll run up to the house and"—

"Oh, never mind," said Cobb. "I'm going to have a word with Evans, anyway, before I go back. I'll just tell him to pass your wages over to me."

"Sure!" said Mike and went on comfortably with his sprinkling.

Evans looked up quickly in the library a few minutes later at Charlie Cobb's request.

"Come again, please," said he.

"I say I just saw Mike out here, and he says for you to pass the week's wages that are due him over to me. You see, it's like this"—

Whereupon he explained the deal into which he had entered with Mike Whalen.

"Wait!" said Evans, holding up a hand before Cobb was fairly through. "Now listen to me!"

And he told of his little business arrangement with Mrs. Whalen.

Charlie Cobb began to laugh delightedly, but in the midst of it he stopped short. His face became grave.

"It's a fine circle to chase around, isn't it?" he mused. "But I'm hanged if I'm not going to find a beginning and an end to this particular circle. Why, if you'd see that old codger hatching up that scheme with me so that Nora wouldn't have to wash any more and at the same time not be worried to death about him"—

"Or if you'd seen Nora planning it out so he would think he was earning the money," Evans interrupted.

"I'm hanged if it isn't worth $10 a week to have my clothes looked after!" said Cobb vehemently, bringing down a doubled fist on the corner of the library table.

"Oh, no, it isn't," Evans demurred. "Never in the world, Charlie! But, I'll tell you what, maybe it's worth $5 to you and $5 to me to have Mike look after the lawn. I always did hate watering it and weeding the pansy beds. But we can't be bothered chasing around the mulberry bush with that $10 each week. Suppose you trot back and bring Mrs. Whalen over here in your car, and then maybe all together we can straighten this thing out satisfactorily."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

VANITY and shopping acumen have a hard tustle when a woman goes shopping because she likes to have the attention paid to an extravagant shopper and also likes to reap the benefits due a bargain hunter.

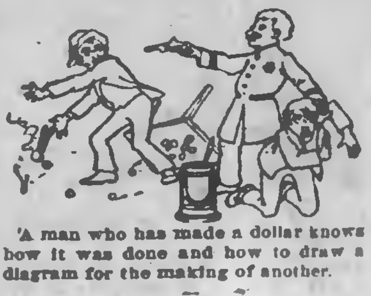
When a man doesn't come home till morning it keeps him guessing to determine why he came at all.

The man who sows wild oats very often makes a tame finish.

Any man knows he can marry any girl he wants to—until he wants to.

The difference is that the wives of some men set them up in business and the wives of other men break them up in business.

A daughter in the kitchen is worth six in the parlor.



A man who has made a dollar knows how it was done and how to draw a diagram for the making of another.

After a man has been married a year he forgets that he was ever anything else.

Children soon learn that, though their parents may be master hands at making jokes, they are bad takers of the same.

These Glorious Evenings.

The summer nights are coming.
Those evenings made to spoon,
The long and lingering twilight
Of mild and mellow June,
When lovers love to linger
And rubber at the moon.

Not in the noisy city,
Where ice cream signs hang low,
But in the balmy suburb
They much prefer to go
To lean against each other
And wander to and fro.

God made these nights for courting,
Or so the poet sang,
For two to get together
And deftly dodge the gang,
To stroll off by their lonesome,
As we would say in slang—

For two to talk in whispers
And formulate a plan,
For her to be his lady
And him to be her man—
To him that travels single
To neatly tie a can.

They tell the old, old story,
Though freshened up a bit
And rounded at the edges,
Their special case to fit,
And, though it is a chestnut,
It makes with them a hit.

Quite Adequate.

"Are the police of your town proficient?"

"Oh, quite so indeed!"

"That is good."

"Yes."

"They are always on hand in a difficulty, I suppose."

"Well, I couldn't say about that, but I do know that they are always first aid to the uninjured."

Conscientious Girl.

"She married him for his money."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, but she afterward fell in love with him."

"Splendid!"

"Then she saw it wasn't right for her to keep him under false pretenses, so upon his settling a fine income on her she divorced him."

More Original.

"He owns the earth."

"Pshaw!"

"What?"

"I've known lots of men who do that."

"Own the earth?"

"Yes. I'd like to see a man who has been able to annex the comet."

Same as the White.

He wed a Choctaw maiden,
And when he tried to balk
She took him by the collar
And made him tow the chalk.

Good Formula.

"Do you know the most successful way to raise children?"

"No. Do you?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Blow the hot waffle man's horn at 8 o'clock in the morning."

Eradicated.

"Lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

"So I have heard. I wonder why."

"Because it can't find it."

"Can't find it?"

"No. There isn't any left."

Too Formal.

"Did you make a formal demand for your money?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I hit him with a club."

No Dry Sport.

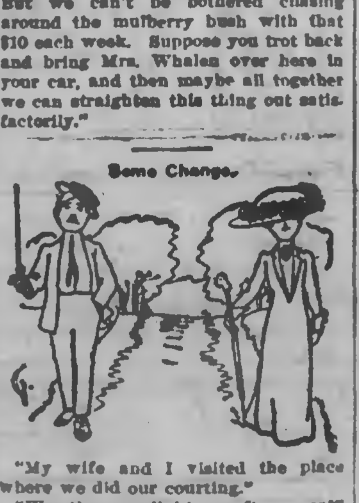
"Going fishing this summer?"

"No; I have signed the pledge."

"Against fishing?"

"Well, it amounts to that."

Some Change.



"My wife and I visited the place where we did our courting."

"Was the moonlight as soft as ever?"

"Yes, the moonlight was as soft, but we weren't."

Apt Question.

"He says he wishes to be free from the ties that bind him?"

"I see. Who does he want to tie to now?"

Herself Before Her King.

In the great war at the beginning of the last century the British public was asked to subscribe not merely for relief funds, but for the actual raising of forces. And by no means everybody subscribed even for that.

Dean Ramsay reckons as the best of his stories of the old women of Montrose the one concerning the old maid who was canvassed for funds to organise a volunteer corps for the King's service.

"Indeed," she replied, "I'll dae nae sic thing. I ne'er could raise a mon for myself, and I'm no gaen to raise men for King George." — London Chronicle.

Didn't Have to Ask.

Mrs. B. saw her little three-year-old daughter come from the back door of the house next door eating a cookie, and when the little lady came into the house her mother turned to her and said:

"Why, Elsie, you must not ask Mrs. K. for cookies."

"I didn't ask her, mother," said Elsie; "I know where she keeps them."—Delineator.

The Wolf's Serenade.

The hunting-cry of the wolf-pack resembles almost exactly the "music" of a pack of fox hounds, save that it is rendered indescribably doleful by the echoes of the forest. Theer is no more heart-rendering experience than to hear them calling at night-time in the northern Canadian wilds, with the grim desolation of the forest all round, dimly lighted by the beams of the aurora. A writer recounts that when he was camping near Arrowhead Lake in the spring of 1911, an old wolf sang a nightly serenade to us, and words cannot describe the sound as it echoed away into the peaks, coming and going, and finally fading into the gorges with multitudinous ghost-voices.

"Fence Post" Artillery.

Experiments made recently at the Old Fort, Toronto, represent something new in warfare. The new device is an improvised mortar gun which shoots a fence post. A hole is dug in the ground at the required angle, a charge of gun cotton placed in it, and on top of that a fence post. The gun cotton is touched off and away goes the post, the idea being that to the fence post is attached a light but strong cable, the post being shot over wire entanglements and then hauled back by those who shot it, bringing the entanglements with it and thus clearing the way.

EXPLORING FAR NORTH

Hunters' Paradise Described in Old Book Aroused Interest of Canadian Geologist.

In an endeavor to throw more light on a subject which Samuel Hearne only partially developed after his Canadian Arctic exploration trip of 1771, Mr. Charles Camsell, geologist of the Canadian Department of Geology undertook a trip to that broad territory northwest of Fort Churchill seeking particulars of territory heretofore unexplored by the modern white man, excepting, of course, Hearne. The latter passed over the district lightly in his book published in 1795 in London, England, in the account of his three inland trips from Fort Churchill, then the Hudson Bay Company post, Fort Prince of Wales.

At the time of Hearne's journeys, which preceded the successful trips of Sir Alexander McKenzie by a few years, Northern and, in fact, Western Canada was to a great many a barren area of unpeopled and unfertile waste. One hundred and fifty years have almost rolled by and still a vast part of that land is undiscovered and mapped only in vague lines.

But the curiosity of Charles Camsell was piqued by Hearne's reference to one piece of territory which he but faintly outlined.

To use Hearne's own words from his book, "Great numbers of deer throng to these forests, where they thrive. Wild ducks, geese, swan, and a remarkable specie of partridge as large as an English fowl are said to abound in these domains. The Indians also told us of fine fish in the clear streams that net the territory. "In fact," wrote Hearne, "I have not seen or heard of any part of this country which seems to possess half the advantages requisite for a residence that are ascribed to this little spot."

Hearne did not visit this place, as it was several hundreds of miles out of his course, and his statements are based on the assertions of various tribes of Indians met, which, the explorer stated, he thoroughly believed. Mr. J. B. Tyrell, who edited Hearne's book, in a footnote stated that it is his belief that the situation of this spot is on the banks of the Thelon River, a northern waterway emptying into Hudson's Bay. The source of the Thelon River has never been mapped, and the location of this spot which Hearne spoke so highly of will not be known until Mr. Camsell's report is made.

It is believed to be situated midway between the mouth of the Coppermine River at th Arctic Ocean, Fort Chipewyan on Lake Athabasca, and Fort Churchill.

First Woman to Pay Alimony

MRS. G. DEIMER

Wealthy Mrs. George Deimer, former wife of an oil operator and contractor of Lima, Ohio, is said to be the first woman in the world to pay alimony. Her husband alleged that she was too intimate with a man whom she employed as a business agent, and she sued him for divorce. Deimer filed a counter-suit for alimony. The court gave him the divorce and the alimony, in the sum of $2,000, also. The divorced wife was given custody of their two children.

As for Davy Jones, he opened his locker and took in four more.

A COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA
Will Complete the Family Circle Christmas Morning

It is the Columbia Grafonola that completes the family circle. Prices from $20 to $650.

Columbia Records
Note the Notes

A Columbia Grafonola, with a well-chosen series of records, is the one ideal gift for all your family, for all the year around.

All the music of all the world, always at your command;—can you possibly decide on any one thing that will give so much pleasure to so many people, for so long a time, at so little cost?

NOW when you get to the dealers, please don't lose sight of the fact that it is music you are buying, not a mere article of furniture. Don't be satisfied by seeing—don't decide until you hear a Columbia. Once you have heard the round, rich, full-colored tone of the Columbia, Grafonola you will realize (possibly for the first time) what a difference there is.

WILL you inspect these six representative Columbias with us—having in mind that any one of our 8,500 dealers will deliver any Columbia Grafonola to your home at any time you say from now till Christmas morning, and that a small first payment is all that he will require, the balance to be paid in easy sums from time to time after the holidays?

PLEASE consider first the new "Leader." It has one distinctive feature in the Columbia Individual Record Ejector. Press the numbered button, and out comes the record from its cushioned rack. If you have believed that the difference between "talking machines" is mostly in appearance, hear the new "Leader" Columbia. A beautiful, simple, convenient musical instrument. $110—or $100 with ordinary record racks.

WHATEVER your final decision is to be, you must see and hear the splendid big $250 "De Luxe." The "De Luxe" represents the apex of achievement in cabinet instruments. Built to a conservative, tried-and-accepted type, it is an expression of quality in every detail—quality of material, quality of craftsmanship, quality of finish. In tone-quality and in general appearance, it will justify its place of honor in any home.

THE "Mignonette" for $130 most resembles the $250 "De Luxe." As a compromise between the bigger, higher-priced, fully cabineted, elaborate uprights and the smaller instruments, the "Mignonette" has proved to be exactly what thousands of careful people had in mind. We are proud of the "Mignonette" and you will be proud of yours if you select it and let its music start the day on Christmas morning.

SIXTY-FIVE dollars will place in your home the model that has been sold, as we believe, to more people than any other instrument, regardless of name, price or make. "Favorite" in name, and favorite in fact. We present it here in its improved form, better worthy of its "Favorite" name and of its reputation than ever before. It has every Columbia tone-feature, including the tone-control "leaves" at the front instead of the little double doors, which are now out of use on all Columbias.

THE 'Eclipse,' for $32.50, will give you the true Columbia tone. The difference between this instrument and the more expensive ones is not so much in the tone quality, but more in tone volume, and in various items of size, record-compartments, covering-lid, finish, and motive power. If $32.50 is the limit you have set for your Grafonola, hear this "Eclipse" and you may discover that your $32.50 will go farther than you thought.

AT $20, the "Comet"—a Columbia, like all the others, and that means its tone is natural, its motor is reliable, its appearance is faultless. For the man who has never owned a modern "talking machine" and hardly realizes what a continual pleasure such an instrument becomes; and for you, if you have nothing in mind but an instrument for as little money as possible, that will play any record, and play it absolutely evenly, and that can be carried around anywhere, the "Comet" is truly the ideal gift. You can add four double-disc records to the $20, and for just $23.40 be sure of one present that is a present.

Now, take them all in all, which is to be your "star" Christmas present? Only be sure that the instrument you select is a Columbia, for otherwise you will not be able to enjoy that very different and superior tone. Prove it by hearing, for in this case "hearing is believing."

Be sure to hear the two new Columbia Double Disc Records, entitled "Tangled Tunes." Over 100 selections on the two records. Price 85c each. Will play on any disc instrument. Makes a splendid Christmas gift. On sale at all Columbia dealers.

There Are Thousands of Records for you to choose from in the Columbia catalogue—mostly double-discs, at 85 cents each. The Columbia dealer has ready selected lists of Christmas music, and lists of every other class of music—from solos, duets and choruses by the greatest stars of opera to the songs of the nations at war and the hymns of the peoples at peace—lists of fine old ballads, lists of popular "hits" and lists of the most beautifully recorded dance records you ever heard. Every month, on the 20th, a new Columbia supplemental list of records goes on sale all over the country. (Incidentally, all these Columbia records will play on any standard make of machine.)

TERRITORY IS RESTORED TO BULGARIANS

Agreement With Roumania is Reached Without Pressure

TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 22.—The Bulgarian minister announced today that an agreement had been reached between Roumania and Bulgaria, under which Roumania will restore to Bulgaria the province of Dobrudja and most of the other territory which she acquired from Bulgaria as a result of the second Balkan war.

"This agreement has been reached without pressure from either Germany or the Allies," said an official connected with the Bulgarian ministry. "We shall continue to be neutral, and believe that Roumania, although she has no cause to fear us, will also remain neutral."

It has been asserted here that fear of Bulgaria alone had prevented Roumania from invading Austria and entering the war on the side of the Allies.

When the local association decided the act jointly with the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the association had to disband and a new set of officers elected. Although there were two funds, which would have to be kept separately the meeting decided that one organization with the one set of officers could do all the work in better discord, hence the organization formed will be called the Peterboro Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Relief Association. The following resolution governing the organizations were passed:—

Resolution No. 1.

That those present at this meeting form a branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund to be known as the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and that application be made at once to the Canadian Patriotic Fund for recognition of this branch and that members of the Peterborough Patriotic Relief Committee not present also be members of the branch on fyling consent thereto.

Resolution No. 2.

That those present at this meeting organize and form themselves into the Peterborough Relief Association.

That the funds raised in the recent campaign or that may be contributed to the Association for local relief purposes be deposited in a bank to the credit of this Association, and used for the relief of persons in need in this locality.

That the by-laws or rules of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund be adopted, mutantis, mutandis, as the by-laws or rules of this Association.

Regular meetings of the Branch shall be held on the evening of the third Tuesday of the months of January, April, July and October and the regular meeting in January shall be the annual meeting.

Special meetings may be called by the President, of which not less than three days' notice shall be given by written notice to each member or by a notice published in the local newspapers. The president shall within one week, call a meeting when requested to do so in writing by five members.

Officers.

The officers of this branch shall be as follows: President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Auditor, who shall be elected at the annual meeting, or, if not then elected, at a subsequent meeting, and shall hold office until the next annual meeting or until their successors are appointed. In the event of the death or resignation of any officer a meeting shall be called within fourteen days at which the vacancy shall be filled.

The President shall preside at the meetings of the Branch. He shall have general supervision of the work of the Branch and shall be a member ex-officio of all committees.

In the absence of the President, the Vice-President shall perform any and all of the duties of the President and the Vice-President shall also be ex-officio a member of all committees.

The Secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of all meetings of the Branch and of its committees, shall conduct its correspondence and perform such other duties as may be required of him.

The Treasurer shall receive all moneys contributed for the purposes of the Branch and deposit them in a bank to the credit of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and shall have authority to endorse cheques for this purpose. He shall issue all cheques on the bank account of the Peterboro Branch to assist the wives, children and dependent relatives of soldiers upon the order of the Relief Committee, and for expenses of the Branch and of the recent campaign to raise funds on the order of the Finance Committee, and all cheques shall be signed by the Treasurer and countersigned by the President. The Treasurer shall at the end of each month furnish the Finance Committee with a statement of the receipts and payments in such form as that committee shall require, and shall at each quarterly meeting of the branch present a financial statement of the previous quarter, and shall also present a statement for the previous year at each annual meeting.

The Auditor shall at the end of each quarter, or oftener if so requested by the Finance Committee or the Branch, audit the books and vouchers of the Treasurer and make a report to the Finance Committee to be presented to the Branch meeting, and at the end of each year shall similarly report on the accounts and vouchers for the year.

There shall be three standing committees, namely, Finance Committee, Relief Committee and Membership Committee.

The Finance Committee shall consist of seven members in addition to the ex-officio members three of whom shall form a quorum. It shall be the duty of the Finance Committee to supervise the financial affairs of the Branch, to take such action as it may deem wise to raise needed funds, to supervise the collection of amounts that have been or may from time to time be subscribed to the fund, and to examine and order the payment of accounts for expenses of the recent campaign for funds or in carrying on the business of the Branch.

The Relief Committee shall consist of seven members in addition to ex-officio three of whom shall form a quorum for the transaction of business. It shall be the duty of the Relief Committee to disburse aid to those for whose assistance this Branch has been formed as set out in paragraph 2 of these by-laws, such assistance to be given in accordance with the scale recommended by and the regulations of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The Relief Committee shall have authority to incur expenses necessary in the performance of its duties and such expenses shall be paid upon the authority of a resolution of the Committee by a cheque issued and signed by the Treasurer and countersigned by the President.

The Membership Committee shall consist of five members in addition to the ex-officio members three of whom shall form a quorum and shall receive and decide upon applications for membership in the Branch.

The provisions in paragraph 5 in regard to the election and term of office of the officers shall apply to members of the Committees. In the event of a vacancy in the membership of any Committee that Committee may temporarily fill the vacancy until the next meeting of the Branch.

Amendments.

These by-laws, except as to the purpose of the funds, may be amended, repealed or otherwise altered at

THE LOCAL POWER SITUATION

WHAT is Peterborough going to do about its power problem? This problem also affects its water supply and constitutes one of the serious difficulties with which this city has to deal. Will it necessitate an expensive auxiliary plant? The Review has been making inquiries from various sources, and as this problem may mean an expenditure of some thousands of dollars, it will give the public the information it receives, from time to time, on Page 2, column 1. The first articles are in today's issue.

SHOW GERMANS THEY BELONG TO BULLDOG BREED

Canada Will be Prouder Than Ever of Her Soldiers, Says Writer

Mr. Chas. Kitney has received a letter from his brother, George, of Radfield, Sittingbourne, Kent, England, who says: We are making all preparations for the Germans. All the farms are being trenched, some being one thousand yards long. East Kent was never like this before. We are getting a lot of recruits but more are wanted. Canada has again in England's hour of need, sent us of her best and when the time comes, they will show the Germans that they belong to the "bulldog breed." You will all be prouder than ever of your army. H.M.S. Bulwark was blown up at Sheerness. It shook our house and about 800 men lost their lives. We have a lot of wounded Belgians in Sittingbourne, so we see some of the horrors of war. The people can hear the big guns booming on the Belgian coast, so you see we are not far from it. I trust it will soon be brought to an early and lasting close. We wish you all a merry Christmas and a brighter New Year, which won't be for us at home in England but we shall win.

The writer also sends a postcard which depicts Kent as the doorway of England. A soldier is on guard

LOCAL CONCERN AFTER SOME OF THOSE SHOVELS

There is a possibility of an order for shovels for military use being placed with the Lundy Shovel and Tool Company although the firm have received no intimation of it. It is stated that an order for 120,000 shovels has been placed by Frederick Stobart, British Government purchasing agent in Canada, and Mr. Lundy said today that he is hourly expecting a wire from his representative in Montreal where the order was given.

Another Order.

It is understood that the Canadian General Electric Company have been successful in landing another large order from the government for punchings similar to those that they are providing to the satisfaction of the government.

FRICTION IS SAID TO BE INCREASING

Austrians Claim They Are Exposed to Slaughter to Save Germans

INVESTMENT BY THE RUSSIANS CONTINUES

Offensive Movement of Allies in France Has Met With Striking Success

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Special cables to the Herald this morning say that friction between the Germans and Austrians is rapidly increasing. The Austrians claim they are exposed to slaughter to save Germans. Duels are numerous, and the German staff are replacing Austrian officers with German non-commissioned officers. Marshal Von Hindenburg is quoted as saying he would not continue the direction of the campaign unless the archdukes were kept three miles behind the firing line.

ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

Russia continues the investment of Cracow and Przemysl, as though she was not threatened by German and Austrian pressure on her flanks. Sorties from Przemysl on Saturday and Monday were repulsed with a heavy loss to the Austrians. Austrian advances through the Carpathian passes have been checked, and Vienna admits Galicia and South Poland are again well occupied by Russian forces.

THE WESTERN OUTLOOK.

The Herald also says that the general offensive movement of the Allies in France, which began last week, has met with striking success. Extraordinary conditions in Flanders preclude any possibility of a decisive victory, but the Allies are driving the Germans from the trenches and consolidating the positions gained. If the progress is slow, it is deadly sure. The advance is general and confined to no particular area.

SOLDIERS HAVE CHRISTMAS BOX

Major Bennett Cables That Gifts Have Been Received

That the big Christmas gift of socks, wristlets, etc., sent to the Peterborough soldiers at Salisbury Plain was received in time for Christmas, and that it was most welcome and greatly appreciated is shown by a cablegram received this morning from Major Bennett. It reads as follows:—

"Kindest remembrances, season's greetings. Sincere thanks from "A" Company, to ladies of Peterborough for the Christmas parcel received O. K."

MORE RECRUITS FOR HOME GUARD

Membership Shows Steady Increase and Shooting Improves

That interest in the Home Guard is not relaxing is borne out by the steadily increasing membership. Col. Goodwill figures that it will be but a short time before the one thousand mark is reached, as it is well over nine hundred now. Last week, on one night alone, thirty-nine recruits were sworn in.

Shooting practice is taking place every night at the ranges, with splendid results. Men who formerly often missed the target altogether, can now shoot with a reasonable degree of accuracy and come considerably closer to the bull's-eye, while others have become quite expert. Record is kept of every mans' shooting, which will be turned in to the militia department in due time.

No further action has been taken in connection with the proposed organization of an auto corps for home defence. The matter has not been officially brought before the Home Guard executive, and Lieut.-Col. Goodwill stated today that it would undoubtedly be held over until the New Year.

LIEUT. JOHNSTON AMONG OFFICERS FROM SALISBURY

Norwegian and Swedish flags have been presented to St. Peter's English Lutheran Church, Ottawa, by King Haakon of Norway and the Crown Prince of Sweden, son-in-law of the Duke of Connaught. Formal presentation is to be made by the Consuls of the two countries.

Take Trenches of the Enemy and Maintain Themselves --- Territory on the Right Bank of the Meuse is Retaken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 22. — (Afternoon official statement)—

"Between the sea and the Lys during Dec. 21st, there was nothing but artillery engagements. Between the Lys and the Aisne we repulsed a German attacking column and we took several houses at Blangy. In the region of Lihons three attacks of the enemy were repulsed.

"We made slight gains to the east and the west of Tracy-le-Val, in Champagne, and in the Argonne. In the vicinity of Souain there have been violent bayonet engagements. We have not made perceptible progress in this region. We have occupied, in the suburbs of Perthes-les-Hurlus, three German positions, representing entrenchments 1,500 yards long. We have occupied all trenches in the immediate vicinity of Mount Calvaire. Between the Argonne and the Meuse there has been slight progress.

"In the suburbs of Vauquois, to the north of the forest of Malancourt, our troops were successful in making their way through barbed wire entanglements and in taking possession of certain trenches of the enemy where they maintained themselves.

"On the right bank of the Meuse, in the forest of Consenvoye, we first lost and then reconquered, after a lively fight, territory gained by us on December 20th."

POSTERS CALL MORE RECRUITS

Printers Ink Sets Forth the Appeal Throughout England

In England the appeal for more men to go to the war is being made with all the vigor possible. Over there every available space is being occupied with posters appealing to all classes to join the army. In The Review windows may be seen a few of the posters that are decorating the walls and windows everywhere in Britain, having been sent us by Major Mills of the 57th, who is with the first contingent from Canada, now at Salisbury Plain. England needs more men, and while Canada is doing her part, more men should be ready to join the ranks when called upon.

Some of those employed there will even have an opportunity of making time and a half wages if they so desire.

THE LOCAL POWER SITUATION.

SOME TIME AGO the Review criticized the power and water situation in Peterborough. Owing to the fact that some disagreed with the Review, and also because there seems to be considerable confusion in the minds of many people regarding the exact nature of the situation, we have conducted some inquiries, and will give the public the result of our inquiries, in the hope that a better understanding of the problem may lead to its amelioration.

We have spoken to several prominent citizens concerning the matter. One assures us, with a confident smile, that he does not think there is much information on the subject of needle or frazil and anchor ice. Another informs us that this is a condition of temperature, and dismisses the whole question with a wave of the hand by saying there is no remedy for it. Still a third gentleman gave us the benefit of considerable technical knowledge and description of local phenomena, and says there is no remedy, while, again, others tell us there is a fortune for anyone that can patent a process of solving the difficulty, and that the Hydro-Electric has been unable to meet the difficulty with any degree of success. You see, the local lights that shine so brilliantly in Peterborough, have lined up practically all in the same position, and would cause us some heart-sinkings if we depended on our own knowledge and experience alone, very limited as it is, of engineering problems.

However, let us look for a moment at the position taken by the gentlemen who have stated their opinions so dogmatically. They have said complacently there is really no remedy for this problem. What, let us ask, would have become of medical science had not investigators said that what was considered impossible was not so? Those who have read Moliere's inimitable comedies will recall how mercilessly he attacks the medical quacks of his own day for explaining sicknesses by phases of the moon, for their buffoonery about elixir of gold, and their principal reliance on senna or some other common physic. Yet, in spite of all this quackery, that endured until fairly recent times, hydrophobia has been scientifically and successfully treated; tuberculosis, while not yet fully understood, is being combatted, and the result is that the average length of life today is much longer than it was in the Middle Ages. The same progress may be said to pertain to all sciences. Again, there was for years the problem of safety in coal mines for the miner, who had to have lights with which to see. These lights caused explosions and loss of human life, until Sir Humphrey Davy invented a wire gauze lamp. Any high school student of physics knows the extreme simplicity of the principle involved in this lamp, that has meant a tremendous saving in human life to the thousands who work in the mines. There is no use throwing up one's hands and doing nothing just because someone guillotines a problem on the doctrine of a self-sufficient finality. If there is a problem in the power situation in Peterborough, there should be some attempt to solve it, and not to trust to luck on the ground that there is no remedy. Who knows but that the authorities in Peterborough may achieve fame and success if they buckle down to the problem before them?

As to past policy, we think it better to let bygones be bygones, and deal with the question as it affects the city now. The Review is not going to take the position that there is a remedy for needle or frazil and anchor ice. It will discuss the problem in the light of information received from various sources, whether that information is evidence that there is a remedy or not.

ICE FORMATIONS AFFECTING POWER PLANTS.

PROFESSOR H. T. BARNES, Director of Physics, McGill University, has, since 1895, been giving close attention to river ice, and has found it possible to distinguish three main types. These have long been known to river men, and possess different names in different places. The names are Surface or Sheet Ice, Frazil or Needle Ice, and Anchor or Ground or Bed Ice. We will describe these in the order adopted by Prof. Barnes, whose article is based on conditions in the St. Lawrence River, where there are many power-houses. As the power plants in Peterborough receive their power from a river, conditions on the St. Lawrence River should be of particular interest.

Surface ice forms over all the wider parts of the river and usually commences from the accumulation of surface-formed ice, blown by the wind, as scum is blown, into the bays or inlets or narrow parts. An artificial boom, or a ledge of rock, will often give strength enough for the surface ice to build back until the sheet extends many miles up the stream, covering a current of quickly flowing water.

Once started, this surface sheet grows rapidly in thickness at first, and then with increasing slowness, by the conduction of heat through the ice to the cold winter air. An average of 26 inches forms on the St. Lawrence. About the first of March the ice reaches its maximum thickness, and then steadily but slowly grows less, until, towards the middle of April, it is reduced to half its thickness. Dr. Barnes' observations have shown him that a small elevation in the temperature of the water above the freezing point has an important influence on the thickness attained by the ice sheet during the winter. A small temperature elevation above the freezing point, such as a hundredth of a degree Centigrade (32 plus .018 degrees Fahrenheit) will determine the limit to which ice will grow.

Open spaces are often found in the ice sheet in which the temperature has been as much as five one-hundredths of a degree above the freezing point, which is sufficient to prevent permanently any surface ice forming there. The higher temperature is due to a current of water deflected upwards from below.

Surface ice, while it protects the water from the direct action of the wind, also shuts out the warmth of the sun's rays. This is a feature noticed in a marked degree in the spring of the year, before the surface ice moves out. There are times when surface ice is of advantage, while circumstances may arise which may render an open channel preferable. If an open channel can be maintained, floating ice is carried away, and navigation would open earlier, as ice jams would be minimized. When ice packs or bridges form, serious conditions arise, which can be appreciated by a description of frazil ice. This we will publish tomorrow.

MAKING A WILL.

If anybody is going to make a will, it should be done properly. Discussing this subject, the Monetary Times says, very truly:

> "Making a will is a simple thing to do, but, like most simple things, it should be done properly to safeguard the important matters of the future. In Toronto recently the danger of using a printed form in making a will was illustrated in a case in which Mr. Justice Middleton declared an intestacy. He had been asked to interpret what purported to be the will of a deceased lady. The will was made on what apparently was an adaptation of a Scotch will form. 'In the case in hand it may be that the testatrix intended to give everything to her mother," remarked Mr. Justice Middleton, "but she has not said so.'
>
> 'In the blank where the name of the beneficiary and the property to be conveyed should be placed, all that was written was 'Everything I have, clothes, money, etc.' No beneficiary was named. The only name which appeared in the will, besides the signature of the testatrix, was the deceased woman's mother, who was named as executrix. Judge Middleton held that there was an intestacy as to the estate.
>
> "Everyone should make a will, but it is useless unless done correctly. There are reputable lawyers and companies who draw up wills in a proper way and who see to their administration. A great deal of annoyance and suffering is caused by carelessly-made wills."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SOME PEOPLE think a newspaper exists merely to say slushy or slobbery things about everybody and everything, whether good, bad, or indifferent. That isn't the way we look at things.

THE LOCAL municipal situation is developing. Coming events cast their shadows before.

WELL, old father Winter is bringing the right kind of Christmas weather.

CHRISTMAS is nearly here, yet the Kaiser hasn't dined in Paris.

Three Months of War.

(Stirling Leader.)

After three months of war conditions, Canadians are beginning to get a real view of the situation as it affects Canada and the Empire. Perhaps the greatest truth that has been revealed to us is the nobility of British compared with German ideals. Few of us had any more than a vague conception of the tremendous hold that materialistic conceptions had obtained among the German people. That they should seriously believe that they could intimidate the world by brutality, ruthlessness and military oppression has come as a shock to those of us who were unfamiliar with German philosophy.

The second truth which has been impressed upon us is the extent to which the Germans have gone in perfecting the machinery for a military triumph. The amount of study and thought which has been devoted to the study of a possible campaign against France and England must have been tremendous. The well-laid plans of both the naval and military arms of their service are so extensive that many men must have devoted years of their lives to the work. That a country skilled in music, art, science and literature, could deliberately plan such carnage is almost incredible, but the facts are clear.

A third truth which has come home to us is the hollowness of much that we have been living for. The pursuit of pleasure has led us to neglect much that this war has shown to be vital. Wealth is seen to be only a secondary consideration and is so unreal that it may vanish in a day. The rich man finds that his stocks and bonds and ships and railways are not real wealth when a war occurs. The dukes and earls, capitalists and mechanics are fighting side by side and living the same life of toil and suffering. The real thing is the vital, living man.

Nor Moltke, Either.

(Montreal Star.)

They have already erected a statue in Berlin to General Von Hindenburg as a great soldier; but we imagine that they will have few statues to erect to any of their diplomats. Diplomacy in Bismarck dominated the last war, throwing even the elder Moltke into the shade. But there is no Bismarck today.

Nearing the Finish.

(New York Evening Sun.)

We would like to recall our prophecy that the war will last two whole years. The Irish in France have taken to fighting with their fists.

Just to Make Sure.

(London Punch.)

Mistress—Why have you put two hot water bottles in my bed, Bridget?

Bridget—Sure, mum, wan of thim was leaking, and I don't know which, so I put both in to make sure.

Good for Party.

(The Civilian, Ottawa.)

In Canada the public service depends upon the purity of the instincts of the leaders of the party in power for administration of its personnel upon a good basis.

SOME OF THE [illegible] RUSES OF WAR

Arial Craft Make it More Than Ever Game of Wits

War sharpens a man's wits.

Under its stimulating influence even the not over-bright soldier soon learns to adopt or to invent various tricks and stratagems calculated to entrap or deceive the enemy. In doing so he is well within his rights, for the customs of war permit "every mode of deceiving the enemy by act or word which is not perfidious." Of course much depends on the interpretation of the term "perfidious."

To hoist a hospital flag on a building not appropriated by the wounded is clearly a gross breach of faith and an outrage against the customs of war.

A single soldier caught in disguise is liable to be treated as a spy; but large bodies of men appear to be entitled to disguise themselves in any uniform they like—that of non-combatants barred—while, to imitate an enemy's bugle-calls, signals, words of command, etc., can hardly be condemned as not "playing the game."

Another time-honored stratagem is to send out despatch riders with false despatches and orders to allow themselves to be captured. The enemy may suspect a trap, but he cannot be certain, and to keep your opponent "guessing" is almost the whole art of war.

Scouting by aeroplane and airship has greatly increased the difficulties of the general who desires to conceal his dispositions; but none the less masked or dummy batteries, feint attacks or retreats, the dissemination of false information, disguise in one form or another, individual tricks of craft and cunning, ruses big and little continue to play an important part in war and to make a battle not only a contest of shot and shell but a very real and very fascinating duel of wits.

VALET SERVICE IN C.P.R. CARS

The comfort and well being of the passengers who travel on the Canadian Pacific is always in the minds of the officials of the company, and further evidence of this is to be found in the official announcement made today that all the cars in the Montreal-Chicago service have been equipped with an up-to-date valet service, so that you can now have your clothes brushed and pressed while you sleep. Simultaneously with this announcement comes the decision of the Canadian Pacific to discontinue the use of toothpicks on the tables of the dining cars. This step has not been taken without serious consideration. Many letters of complaint have been received in this connection, and it is pretty well known that provision of toothpicks at first-class hotels and restaurants is now considered not quite the thing.

HOW NAMES ORIGINATE

It was James I., who had a pretty wit of his own that named the part of the beef "above the loin," sirloin. In his day that particular cut was called by its French name surlonge or "over the loin." But the English monarch was so pleased with a dish of meat served him one day after a hunt that placing his sword across the platter as if he were to dub a knight, he exclaimed not surlonge, but "Sir Loin" and from that day the juicy steak bears the noble name of knighthood conferred upon it by a king.

The strawberry plant never would stay at home 'round the parent stock, so like other wanderers it lost its good name.

Whatever name the little red berry had in the beginning no one seems to remember, but because the vine was always straying from the main plant it was called "stray-berry." After awhile even that name was lost by mispronunciation, and the luscious berry that bears no resemblance at all to straw is now called strawberry.

The "Tune the Old Cow Died On" was not ragtime. History throws very little light on the career of this unhappy bovine, but it does relate that when she had nothing to eat the farmer tried to make her forget her troubles by playing a tune on his fiddle. The tune was too much for her. She gave up the ghost and died.

It was a bishop of olden times who first "put his foot in it," and even since then the most ordinary layman who makes a blunder is said to "put his foot in it."

It wasn't the bishop's fault after all, but the housewives who ran to doors and windows every time the good bishop passed and asked for his blessing—and while getting it they let the porridge burn. Then they blamed the bishop for the trouble and said "the bishop put his foot in it."

WHY THE ARMIES ADVANCE SLOWLY

Units Which Gain Individual Advantages Must Wait For Others

The apparent inaction at some points on the great army lines in the European conflict, is apt to be confusing to the peaceful citizen, but to the student of the art of warfare the reason for this is frequently clear.

It may happen that when fighting extends along a front of many miles, some troops may be more successful than others, and thus gain ground much in advance of the general line. This, if permitted to proceed any great distance, would have the tendency to leave gaps in the line, or weak spots on the flanks of the successful troops which would prove most dangerous to the general line, as well as to the advanced troops themselves, if confronted by a tenacious and aggressive opponent. Furthermore, the success of the campaign does not depend on isolated advantages of individual units, but on the successful advance of the entire line, the several units (divisions, army corps, or field armies) supporting each other in the forward movement, all under the general supervision of the commander-in-chief. Therefore, it may be necessary to hold back the more advanced portion of the line until the other units are able to come up to it. To enable them to hold what they have won the advanced troops entrench.

LITTLE JIM

By M. QUAD.

There were five of us and a boy in the fan western stage coach as it rolled over the rough roads in Dakota. We had been together for four days. We called the boy Jim because his father did. We had twenty miles to go to reach the terminus, and the hour was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the coach came to a sudden halt as it toiled uphill. Next moment the driver called to us:

"All you folks what don't want your heads blown off had better git down and line up. We've been stopped by a road agent!"

It seems cowardly when you read it, but to get down and submit to be robbed was the wisest thing to do under the circumstances. Little Jim was not a bit frightened. The boy had lined up beside his father. As the road agent looked down into his face the lad cried out:

"Why, it's Mr. Pelton—Mr. Pelton! Say, Mr. Pelton, I'm awfully glad to see you! Where've you been this long time?"

"So it's you, Jimmy?" laughed the robber as he held out his hands for a shake. "Well, you've been growing since I saw you last. It's a wonder you knew me at first sight."

"Oh, I used to like you so well I couldn't forget your face," replied the boy. "Are there robbers around, Mr. Pelton?" With gentle hand the man pushed the boy into line and then stepped back a pace or two. As he did so his face grew very sober, and I saw a flash in his black eyes I did not like. His voice was low and steady as he finally said:

"I'm much obliged for your promptness in climbing down and lining up, and I think I'll let you off this time. The four of you may get back into the stage and go on."

The colonel took his son by the hand and attempted to enter the stage with us, but the robber motioned him back.

At our disappearance the man turned on Colonel Weston and pointed to the hillside on the right and said:

"Move on that way. Jimmy, give me your hand and I'll help you along."

The white faced colonel entered the pines and held a straight course up the hill. Behind him came the robber and his son. The boy had been full of curiosity at first, but presently he was awed and frightened by the look cast upon his father. Two or three years before he and Mr. Pelton had been great friends. Mr. Pelton had been manager for his father. One day there had been a bitter quarrel, pistols had been drawn, the sheriff had rushed in, and Mr. Pelton had fled to escape arrest. He remembered his father calling the fugitive a thief and of men being sent out to hunt him down. All this came back to him as they followed the father up the rough way, and, though he knew nothing of man's vengeance, there was a feeling of dread in his soul. Now and then the robber ordered the colonel to the right or left, but those were the only words spoken until they finally reached a rude camp high among the bowlders. Even then nothing was said for a long five minutes. Each sat down to rest. They did not look at each other. By and by the robber half turned to look the colonel in the face and said:

"I've waited for this for two years. I could neither die nor go away until I had killed you!"

"It will be murder—cold blooded murder!" replied the colonel as he folded his arms.

"If it was murder a hundred times over I'd do it. Do you suppose I can forget Rose Harper? Who separated us? Who maligned me? Who wrecked my life and sent her to a suicide's grave? Who drove me to be a fugitive from justice on a false charge? I'd kill you if a thousand men surrounded me!"

"Take the boy away first," said the colonel, with a touch of entreaty in his voice.

"Yes, that will be proper," answered Pelton. "Come, Jimmy, let's take a walk."

The boy crossed over to his father in a puzzled way, and the father lifted him up and kissed him. When he put him down he said to him:

"Run along, Jimmy. If you don't find me here when you come back Mr. Pelton will take care of you."

"Oh, yes! Mr. Pelton will take care of me and see that I get home," replied the lad. "I'm awfully glad to see him."

The lad started for his walk, whistling as he went, and his father stood erect with folded arms and faced the outlaw and death. He closed his eyes, and his lips moved. Presently he heard the click of a pistol and drew in his breath. Thus for a long minute, and then the man opened his eyes. Mr. Pelton sat with his hands over his face. When he dropped them there were tears in his eyes.

"I can't do it. Little Jim would know it some day. When he comes back take him and go down to the road. It's only three miles to Cedarville."

With that he walked off and was out of sight in a moment. When little Jim returned he found his father sitting as he had left him and gazing into the woods.

"What is it, father?" he asked. "What's the matter with you, and where is Mr. Pelton?"

The man rose up slowly, took the boy's hand in his, and without a word in answer he led the way down to the stage trail.

Medical Supplies May Be Stopped.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22. — Plans of the American committee to aid the Belgian profession, recently organized by American physicians and surgeons to relieve a reported shortage of medical supplies in Belgium, have received a setback because of the possibility that such supplies may be considered contraband of war by the belligerent nations, it was announced last night.

Kingston Had Snowstorm.

KINGSTON, Dec. 22. — Kingston was in the grip of a terrible snowstorm. Early in the morning a storm set in, and, with the heavy gale prevailing, was drifting snow and making traffic very heard. The street railway line was badly blocked, and the city had a large staff of unemployed shoveling snow off the walks, business in the stores was practically at a standstill.

Culinary Notes

Economizing on Meat.

Meat once a day is surely enough for health. Let us draw the line at twice and make our third meal without it. Tastes differ, and most men would rather have a meat breakfast and a bread and cheese lunch, while women would oftener be happy with a breakfast of rolls and coffee, if only they might have a good midday dinner and a solid tea. Numbers of women care nothing for late dinner and only pretend to eat it to keep their men folk company.

With one good meal of meat or fish or game and an abundance of bread, fruit and some sort of fat, there is no possible chance of starvation for anybody. The various savories that are invented to take the place of meat at the third meal really are meant to take its place in taste and, above all, in imagination, to smooth the temper and allay the fears of those who do not like anything to eat except meat and game and fish or things flavored to taste like them.

Prepared Cereals.

Autumn finds us with no lack of variety in the matter of cereals that can be eaten without further cooking after they leave the factory, but they are alike in one detail if in no other. The package once opened, they quickly grow flabby and tasteless and tough unless restored by careful drying in the oven for a few minutes. One way out there is. Keep your packages on the shelf above the kitchen range or on the radiator. The contents will remain crisp and delicious and be truly "ready to serve" without risk of that scorching in the oven which always happens when we forget for only a moment.

Olive Oil For Basting.

Olive oil may be used as a substitute for butter for basting purposes. A roast chicken which has been basted with olive oil and a little lemon juice mixed with the hot water will be found unusually delicious, and the same applies to the basting of a baked fish. Small fish rolled in flour and moistened with olive oil are easily cooked by placing in a baking tin in a quick oven. The exterior of the fish will be well browned and give the appearance of having been fried without any of the unpleasant odor usually noticeable when fish is cooked in an open pan on top of the range.

When Baking Sponge Cake.

There are numerous reasons why sponge cake will rise at the sides and fall at the center. Here are some of them: Too hot an oven will cause a very light cake to rise rapidly around the sides and fall in the middle. An excess of sugar will make the cake fall. A cake will drop if the cake mixture is too light with eggs or baking powder, when it needs more flour. The shock of slamming an oven door will ruin the baking process, and the cake must not be moved in the oven until the mixture has set. If the cake is removed from the oven before it is entirely done it will collapse.

Cleaning the Oven.

When the oven is used every day it should be cleaned out once a week. With a blunt knife scrape off any particles of burned pastry, sirup or gravy, then brush all out. Have ready a pail of hot water, with some common washing soda in it, and with a stiff brush scour the top, sides and bottom of the oven. Wring a cloth out of fresh hot water and wipe all the parts previously scoured. Leave the door open until the oven is quite dry.

When Peeling Onions.

There is a right way of peeling onions, says one housewife, and if you do them thus there will be no tears. Simply hold the onions in your left hand with the sprout end and root down. Cut off top with a few strokes and peel downward toward the root. When all of the peel is loosened cut off the root end, but never until last. If you turn it round and do part in the wrong direction you will be sure to cry.

Improvised Steamer.

When a pudding is to be steamed and a steamer to fit the saucepan is not available, after putting the pudding in a well greased mold place a piece of paper over the top and put it in a saucepan with enough boiling water to come about half way up to the mold, cover closely and keep the water simmering until the pudding is cooked.

Mixing Hot Breads.

In mixing muffins, waffles or any variety of quick breakfast breads which call for melted butter it will be found that olive oil may be substituted. For the reason that oil is a little richer than butter a slightly less quantity can be used. The result will be a batter of unusual smoothness, while the flavor of the oil is not perceptible.

Baking Patty Cases.

Patty cases will become small and contracted if they are placed in the oven too soon after being cut out. The cases should be allowed to lie on the baking tins in a cool place some twenty minutes before baking.

FORCED BACK FROM ALONG RIVER MEUSE

Notable Gains are Achieved by the Allies in Champagne and Around Varennes

LONDON, Dec. 22. — The most startling gains recorded in the French official reports of yesterday were made in the Champagne country and in the region of Varennes. Northeast of Beausejour, in the Champagne region, the French took 1,200 yards of the enemy's trenches and made appreciable gains in the region of Prosnes and Perthes. Four mined saps dug by the Germans were blown up in the forest of La Grurie, and the French advanced and occupied the positions the Germans were forced to quit.

An advance of 500 yards beyond the brook of Cheppes, in the district between Gercourt and Bethincourt, near Varennes, is reported from the right.

On the right bank of the Meuse some ground has been gained by the French at La Croupe, about a mile and a quarter northwest of Brabant.

A Times' despatch from West Flanders says: The fighting around Nieuport has diminished in intensity. At Lombaertzyde, St. Georges and Capelle the Belgians have made no attempt to more than hold their own against the German counter-attacks.

There is no foundation for the rumor that the allies are within a mile of Ostend. The rumor probably arose from statements made by French soldiers who did not know the country, and mistook the houses of Middelkerke for those of Ostend.

The object of last week's movement from Nieuport was doubtless to secure a footing farther from the bank of the Yser river in order to make it easier to take the offensive at that point later on.

The rainy spell of the last fortnight is at an end. The bright weather is welcomed by all the troops, particularly by the air service. The airmen have been carrying out regular reconnaissances in spite of the wind and the wet, but it has been bitter cold work.

The Belgian airmen who flew over Ostend two days ago tell me that Ostend appears to be quite dead. There is not a single vessel at the quays and hardly a sign of life in the streets. At the German aviating ground at Snaeskerke, near Ostend, the Germans had a cigar-shaped captive balloon in the air to watch the movements of the ships at sea.

A despatch from Amsterdam says: The British squadron off the Belgian coast again shelled Zeebrugge and Heyst yesterday, reports received here declare.

There was no response to the fire from the British ships, which is said to have been especially severe at Zeebrugge, where repeated attacks have been made against the Germans, who have been attempting to make repairs there for the establishment of a naval base.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:—

"The British troops have attacked and yesterday morning regained most of the trenches previously lost. Before Libons the enemy delivered four successive attacks for the purpose of recapturing the trenches which we had previously won in that region, but all of them were repulsed.

"In an attack to the northwest of Pulsalenne, south of the Noyon, we have gained a foothold in the enemy's trenches of the first line, and have made progress in the wood of Saint Mard.

"There has been no other report of any note on the operations of the day."

The French War Office gave out an official communication yesterday afternoon, which said, in part:—

"The day of Dec. 20 brought nothing of importance in Belgium, if exception is made of some progress in the region of Lombaertzyde and St. Georges, and at a point to the southeast of the Inn of Kortaker, which is southeast of Bixschoote, the occupation of some houses in Wartelem, south of Zillebeke, and the bombardment by the enemy of the Ypres hospital.

"Between the Lys and the Aisne we have occupied a forest near the route between Noulettes and Souchez, and we also took possession of all the first line of German trenches between this highway and the first houses of Notre Dame de Lorette, southwest of Loos.

"The enemy has bombarded Arras.

"Our heavy artillery silenced on repeated occasions the artillery of the enemy to the north of Carnoy, which is to the east of Albert. This artillery also demolished the German trenches, and sent head over heels two cannon of a battery established near Hom, which is to the southeast of Carnoy. The heavy artillery also secured distinct advantages on the Aisne and in the sector of Rheims.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse there has been progress along all the front, particularly in the region of Varennes, where the brook of Cheppes has been left 500 yards in our rear, and in the region of Gercourt-Bethincourt.

"On the right bank of the Meuse we have gained ground at La Croupe, at a point two kilometers northwest of Brabant, and in the forest of Consenvoys."

It is easy enough for some people to keep still when they have nothing to say, but there are others.

Most persons are honest as can be, which isn't necessarily speaking highly of their honesty.

Canadians not Likely to be Brigaded With British

OTTAWA, Dec. 22.—The first Canadian contingent is not likely to be sent to the front in separate battalions brigaded with British troops, said Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes yesterday. He also stated that he would not be surprised if the Princess Patricias had exchanged the Ross rifle for the British army rifle, but that was a thing that he had nothing to do with now. Gen. Hughes, who came back from the Maritime Provinces yesterday, said that the Nova Scotia regiment, the 25th, recruited for overseas service, had 85 per cent. of its establishment born in Nova Scotia, the 28th at St. John, N.B., also had a large percentage of Canadian-born. The Cape Breton Highlanders were a splendid body of men, and the artillery men mobilizing at Fredericton, N.B., were fine capable men. The engineers recruiting in the Maritime Provinces contained many civil engineers and university graduates.

Search of Ships To Continue.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—It can be stated positively that no definite agreement has been reached whereby England will refrain from searching ships which leave American ports with statements from British consuls that they are carrying no contraband. Britain is willing to accept such statements in cases where there is no reason to believe that the cargoes may have been augmented at sea. The long negotiations between the British Government and America, however, have resulted in no positive agreement or understanding between the two countries.

Mikado Gives To Salvationists.

TOKIO, Dec. 22. — The Emperor and Empress, according to an announcement made yesterday, have donated 3,000 yen (about $1,500) to the Salvation Army. This is the first time, it is stated, that imperial recognition has been given to that organization.

QUEBEC, Dec. 22.—Although he attended his functions at the Legislature almost every day last week, Sir Francois Langelier is seriously ill to-day at the vice-regal residence at Spencerwood.

VON HINDENBURG FORCED TO ALTER HIS WHOLE PLAN

Germans in Poland Must Extricate Left Wing From Disaster.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — The tide of battle in Poland has swerved from the region west of Warsaw, between the Pilitza and Vistula rivers, to the region north of the Vistula, where the Russian victories over the German columns advancing from Mlawa have threatened the left wing of Gen. von Hindenburg's main force.

Despatches from Petrograd, while they admit the advance of the Germans south of Warsaw, attribute to it none of the decisive character which is claimed from Berlin. The Russian armies in northern Poland and in the Mazurian Lakes region of East Prussia continue their operations with indomitable energy. A demonstration in the Mazurian Lakes region is expected as the logical move by Hindenburg to free his army in Poland from the peril which threatens its left.

The official communication issued by the Russian General Headquarters says:—

"In the region of Mlawa (northern Poland), the Germans have fallen back towards the line of Lautenburg-Neilenburg (across the frontier into East Prussia).

"On the left bank of the Vistula there is no incident of importance to report.

"In Galicia, the Austrian offensive is being greatly hindered by our troops, and the operations in this region have taken on appearances more favorable to us. One of the Austrian divisions which was operating in the vicinity of Dukla Pass was easily defeated by a bayonet charge made by our troops.

"The enemy left on the battlefield 500 killed and we captured 10 officers and more than 1,000 soldiers.

"The attempts of the Przemysl garrison to break through the Bloous line have been definitely repulsed. The garrison was forced back into the line of fortifications with heavy losses."

"The head of the General Staff says that owing to the malevolent reports widely printed in the newspapers during the past few days concerning the condition and strategic positions of our army he thinks it fit to warn the Russian public against the partiality and inaccuracy of these reports.

"The fact that our armies adopted a narrower front was the outcome of a decision arrived at after full and free consideration by the military authorities. The reason for this plan is obvious in view of the concentration in front of our army of considerable German forces.

"Moreover, this plan offers other advantages concerning which, unhappily, we cannot give details for the present for military reasons."

Two Years in Prison.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—George Dickson was committed to the penitentiary for two years in the police court yesterday by Col. Denison for an assault on Alex. Gamble Duncan, a storekeeper.

Dickson went into the store on the pretence of using the telephone and without provocation smashed Duncan twice on the head with a heavy club, inflicting a serious wound. He had a bad record.

Patricias Have Left.

SALISBURY PLAIN, Eng., Dec. 22.—Transportation Sunday afternoon carried the last of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry of the first Canadian contingent, to France. On Saturday they were preparing to leave Winchester. They left there Sunday morning. They were given a great farewell.

Anton Gans, a young German, has surrendered to the military authorities at Windsor. He confesses that he intended to join the third Canadian contingent and act as a German spy.

TURKS RETREAT

They Have Suffered Severe Defeat in Region of Van

PETROGRAD, Dec. 22.—The latest despatches from the Caucasus indicate that the Turks are suffering heavily in the fighting in that region. All the fighting is now on Turkish territory.

Especially severe conflicts have taken place in the last two days in the region of Van, from which the Turks are now retreating.

A number of newly-formed Arab regiments took part in these battles, of whom many were captured. The suffering from the cold is particularly great among the Arabs, who are unaccustomed to it. The winter is the most severe that has been experienced in the Vilayet of Erzerum in years. The temperance is at times as low as 35 degrees Fahrenheit. Many of the captured Arabs are found to be suffering with frosted hands and feet.

The condition of the Turkish transport service is lamentable. Men in the ranks are famishing in snowdrifts, which are six feet deep in places.

Presents for Children Shipped to Important Centres

ROTTERDAM, Holland, Dec. 22 (Via London).—The Belgians' allotment of the Christmas presents brought here by the United States naval collier Jason has been divided into three parts and forwarded to Antwerp, Brussels and Liege, whence the toys will be distributed throughout the country.

Unfortunately, owing to the frontier regulations, it was necessary to unpack all the packages and to remove letters and Christmas messages written for the most part by American children.

The Dutch Government has granted free railroad transportation of the American food supplied to Belgium.

EACH MADE A MISTAKE.

It Was, In Fact, a Case of "Turn About is Fair Play."

Sam Showalter was having a sale of his surplus stock. To start the sale he led out a milk cow, one of the best of his herd, and told the auctioneer she was four years old. John Dawson, a long, leathery, weather beaten fellow with a shrewd eye, bid in the cow. He gave Showalter a check for the amount and said he would come for the cow the next day.

"I tell you, John," said Showalter when Dawson rode up the next morning to lead home his purchase, "I made a mistake yesterday. I said that cow was only four years old, but when I talked it over with the old woman last night I remembered that she is eight years old. It was another cow altogether that I had in mind.

"I didn't want to let a mistake like that go with a neighbor," continued Showalter, whose word was not usually accepted as entirely dependable in the community, "so I thought the fair thing to do was to tell you and just let you take your check back and I'll keep the cow."

Dawson squinted his eye approvingly at the cow—she had every mark of a good milker—and then looked appraisingly at Showalter.

"Well, Sam," he said, "turn about is fair play. You made a mistake yesterday; I'll make one today and just keep the cow."—Youth's Companion.

CHILI PROTESTS

Germany Has Violated Her Neutrality

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—After a searching investigation of the activities of the German fleet in the Southern Pacific recently, the Government of Chile has made formal protest to Germany against alleged violations of neutrality by the German navy in Chilean waters.

The protest transmitted by the Chilean Minister at Berlin sets forth that the German ships, prior to their engagement with Read Admiral Cradock's British squadron, stayed as long as five days in one island owned by Chile and transferred supplies at another small island after a stay of seven days. The protest is understood to be couched in vigorous language, demanding reparation from Germany.

At the same time the Chilean Government has protested to Great Britain, charging that the British cruiser Glasgow recently took mail from vessels in Chilean waters.

Japan Has Internal Troubles.

TOKIO, Dec. 22.—The Merchants' Association and Baron Shibusawa, president of the American Japanese Association, and Buelnakano, president of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce, are urging the Diet and Cabinet to reach a compromise with a view to preventing dissolution of the House or the collapse of the Ministry. A crisis in time of war, they urge, would create an unfavorable impression abroad and hinder national progress.

Captive British Landed.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—A telegram received here from Buenos Ayres informs the Foreign Office that the crew of the British ship Drummuir, sunk at sea by the German cruiser Leipzig, has been landed at Port San Antonio, Argentine, by the German ship Seydlitz.

The Leipzig was one of the German cruisers destroyed by British ships in the naval engagement off the Falkland Islands, December 8.

MAYOR REPLIES TO CHURCHILL

Germans Have not Acquired Glorious Traditions of the Sea

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The Mayor of Scarborough, in a letter replying to the message of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, expressing the sympathy of himself and of the British navy at the losses sustained through the German bombardment of Scarborough, says in part: "We had been led to believe from the conduct of the plucky commander of the Emden that German sailors understood something about the glorious old traditions of the sea. It is evident from our experiences of Wednesday that this is not so.

"Some newcomers into honorable professions first learn the tricks and lastly the traditions. As their commanders get older in the service they will find that the iron crosses pinned on their breast will not shield them from the shafts of shame and dishonor."

Canadian Regiment For Egypt?

MONTREAL, Dec. 22. — That at least one Canadian regiment is in Egypt would appear to be proved by a letter received yesterday by Honore Betrand from his brother, Louis Bertrand, a private in the First Royal Montreals. In this letter Private Bertrand describes the life of the men in Egypt and says that they expect soon to be fighting.

AUSTRIA PREFERS PEACE

General Distaste For War Evident Since Defeat at Servians' Hands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — A despatch from a prominent diplomat in Vienna to his Government of which officials here learned yesterday, it is stated, insists that leading financial and business men of Austria desire peace.

The diplomat in a cipher telegram confirms recent press reports from Rome of the dissatisfaction which the Austrian populace feels at the lack of the success of its army and states moreover that indignation has been stirred up among all classes because of the recent reverses suffered at the hands of Servia.

The Austrian Government, he adds, through a strict censorship of the press, has withheld details of these defeats from an anxious public.

Another phase of the situation said to be disquieting to the Austrian Government is the report from the Czech part of Bohemia and Hungary to the effect that sympathy with the war is rapidly diminishing there.

The same diplomat's telegram states that reports are persistent in well informed circles in Austria that Italy will declare war against Austria about New Year's day. These reports emanate, the despatch says, from prominent Italians, but Austrian officials are still confident that Italy will remain neutral.

Greece and Roumanian Restless.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — Following categorical assurances of the Bulgarian Government of its intention to maintain strict neutrality in the war, the Entente powers, Great Britain, France and Russia, have given guarantees to both Athens and Bucharest that Bulgaria will not attack Greece in the event of the latter country assisting Servia, and will not attack Roumania should that state actively participate in the war.

This is taken to foreshadow the approaching participation of Roumania and Greece.

OWEN SOUND MAN KILLED

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Dec. 22.—Word was received that Sergt. Charles Townsend, of Owen Sound, was killed in battle on Nov. 15, serving with the British troops. Sergt. Townsend left Owen Sound with five other reservists on Aug. 19. On arriving in England he joined his regiment, the Northamptons, immediately.

GEORGES WEILL FOUND.

Long Lost Member of Reichstag Has Fought For France.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—Georges Weill, the long-lost deputy for Metz in the German Parliament, has been found or rather he has revealed himself. Nothing more dramatic or sensational has appeared in print than the first two sentences of his manifesto to his friends of Alsace-Lorraine.

"Since the outbreak of the war," he writes, "I have let the German press circulate all sorts of stories about me, and have neither protested nor denied that I owed complete silence to my aged parents, who were still in Strassburg, and I preferred to leave even them in ignorance as to what had happened to me rather than expose them to the anger of those who are still masters in that city. Now that they are in safety my liberty of speech is reconquered. On Aug. 5 I enlisted in the French army. In joining the army of the republic and thus continuing the struggle against militarized, Prussianized Germany, I am conscious of having well fulfilled my duty as a Socialist Deputy and representative for Alsace-Lorraine."

FURTHER ORGANIZATION FOR DISBURSING PATRIOTIC FUNDS

any regular or special meeting of the Branch by a resolution passed by the votes of two-thirds of the members present at such meeting, or by the votes of a majority of the members present of notice of said amendment, repeal or alteration has been previously given at the next preceding meeting or by three days' written notice to the members or by publication in the local newspapers at least three days previous to the meeting at which resolution may be voted upon.

Members.

All residents of the County of Peterboro of the age of 21 years may become members of the branch upon making written application to the secretary for that purpose and upon their applications being favorably passed upon by the Membership Committee and upon notice being given to the applicant to that effect, such application shall forthwith become a member of the branch.

Resolution No. 4.

That Messrs. T. F. Matthews and J. A. Aylmer be appointed Trustees of the funds contributed in the recent campaign for the Peterborough Patriotic Relief Fund, and be authorized to sign and endorse cheques, and that they deposit that portion of the fund which was raised for the care of soldiers' families and dependents in a chartered bank to the credit of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and the portion raised for local relief purposes in another bank to the credit of the Peterborough Relief Association, and that Mr. F. Adams, Treasurer, pay to these trustees the amount of the funds he has on hand to be disposed of as directed by this resolution.

$17,000 for Local Charities.

J. A. Aylmer, chairman of the finance committee in connection with the Peterboro Patriotic Fund Association reported that the amount subscribed was nearly $59,700. This included the city's donation of $10,000 and also the amount subscribed previous to the campaign. Twenty-five per cent. of this amount was for local charities and seventy-five per cent. for the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The money is at present deposited in the Bank of Commerce. The amount for local charity would be about $17,000.

D. O'Connell made a few commendatory remarks on the result achieved by the committees and briefly outlined the idea of calling the meeting to form the branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the Relief Association.

Not to Return $5,000.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin brought a suggestion before the meeting. It was to return $5,000 of the $10,000 granted by the city at the last council meeting. Mr. Dobbin stated that it was first agreed to divide $50,000 with the Canadian Patriotic Fund and now that there was over $5,000 above that mark he thought it should be given back to the city. He suggested that in the event of the fund for local charities going faster than anticipated the association might apply again for the $5,000.

Mr. O'Connell thought other than Mr. Dobbin. He claimed that having regard to the position Peterboro holds among the cities of Ontario, $10,000 was but a fit donation to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. In order that an amount might be raised that would do credit to Peterboro it was necessary for the body who represent the city as a whole to make such a grant and it greatly assisted in making the campaign such a success. Mr. O'Connell pointed out how $15,000 will remain in the city thus $5,000 is being given to the city more than the city donated.

F. D. Kerr endorsed Mr. O'Connell's idea and urged that the matter be left as it stands. Jas. Kendry also spoke along the lines of Messrs. O'Connell and Kerr stating that $10,000 was little enough. If fifty per cent. of the city's contribution was given back there was nothing to prevent the individual subscriber from dividing his contribution and only paying half of it.

Mayor Buller expressed himself as being strongly in favor of giving the $10,000. He thought the contribution was small enough and was sure the ratepayers would back the councillors who backed the motion. His words were followed by continued applause. Ald. Johnston also took the stand of the Mayor.

The proposition of Ald. Dobbin thus sunk into oblivion.

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

The senior Bible classes taught by Mr. Joseph Wearing and Secretary C. N. Meserve, united last evening to listen to an address by Mr. A. Kochaly, the subject being "Christmas in Persia." Mr. Kochaly described the customs of his country and said that Christmas was only observed by about one million people there, although the population was fifteen millions, the majority being Mohammedans. The Persian Christian prepares for Christmas by a two-weeks' fast, followed by two weeks of feasting. Christmas in Persia comes thirteen days later than in our country. The idea of Santa Claus has just reached Persia, having been brought in by natives from America. Mr. Kochaly's address interested the young men very much, and they gave him a warm vote of thanks.

Following Mr. Kochaly's address, an extemporaneous debate took place between Fred McNeely and Mr. Jones, subject, "Resolved, that we should not teach children that there is a Santa Claus." Mr. McNeely held the affirmative, and by the vote of the class was given the decision, although Mr. Jones made a strong point of the fact that the teaching of Santa Claus necessitated many untruths, shook the confidence of children in parents when they found out that there was not a Santa Claus, and was unfair because it means practising deceit.

The classes adjourned to meet again on the first Monday evening in January, in view of the holidays and the Boys' Conference, which will begin in Peterborough next Monday night.

POSTIES HAVE BEEN ON THE JOB IN RAIN AND SHINE

Don't forget the postman these days; the daily visitor who is perhaps more welcome than any other visitor the whole year round. He is working hard trying to keep even with the Christmas rush which, while not so heavy this year, is keeping him busy just the same.

As in other years at this time the postmen have been authorized to hire extra help in the shape of delivery carts or boys to haul around mail and parcels in handsleighs. The last two or three days before the holiday are strenuous ones for the postmen. The average postie is not immune to the influence of a recognition of his work or averse to accepting some little present from the people he has served all the year round. Don't forget him this Christmas.

STORY TELLER WAS HELD ON SUSPICION OF BEING A SPY

New York, Dec. 22. — George Rottweiler, the Chicago German, who arrived from England on the steamer St. Louis and gave out a story of how the British battleship Thunderer had been sunk in the North Sea on November 7th by the German submarine U-26, and how the eight survivors of her crew of 900 were rescued by the Norwegian schooner Scefjord—which craft is not listed in marine registers—underwent a number of adventures in the immediate past before he sprang his surprising tale and caused agitation in the minds of countless newspaper readers in Canada and the United States.

The New York Herald relates that Rottweiler recently was arrested in London and held for ten days under suspicion of being a spy. Rottweiler claims to have been in Germany since the war began, and displays a number of decorations, among them the Iron Cross, to prove his contention.

Rottweiler was just chuck full of love for the Fatherland and wrath against perfidious Albion when he boarded the St. Louis. On the ship he encountered Dr. Herbert Weaver, a Canadian dentist, and Major Louis L. Seaman, an American, who had been abroad as a war correspondent. These men quickly clashed with Rottweiler, with the result that the voyage to New York was marked by one long series of public wrangles over the war.

Such is the man whose word has been accepted by many newspapers for a story that demands the belief that the British Admiralty for six weeks has suppressed announcement of a naval disaster involving a casualty list of 892 names.

FULL HOUSE AT THE SHELTER

Sixteen Children Who Will Expect Visit From Santa Claus

If there is one place where philanthropic work can be done at Christmas this year it is at the Children's Aid Shelter. Superintendent William Henry has sixteen young lives there this Christmas that must be brightened in some way, and he is trusting earnestly that the many good friends of the Shelter will not overlook them in the rush of other things. The number of inmates this year is much larger in proportion to other years, and it is posible that it will be greater before the week is over. Mr. Henry wanted to have the annual Christmas tree at the institution, but recognizing the countless other demands upon citizens this year he was not going to ask for contributions. However, at the last moment he agreed to make the yearly appeal and any donations of food, clothing or other gifts may be left at the Review office, to be forwarded to the Shelter.

It is planned to hold the Christmas tree entertainment on Christmas afternoon.

ABOUT VON TREITSCHKE

His Work Is One of the Chief Causes of the Present War.

Von Treitschke is a name one often comes across these days, when so much is being written to interpret the German spirit to English readers. This German, Von Treitschke, is said to have been one of the creators of that spirit, or at any rate one who gave expression to it in a manner that appealed to the attention of the educated class. He was an historian—both a writer and a teacher of history—and in his lectures and writings he did much to foster the spirit that is the inspiration of the now world-hated Prussian militarism. In closing a sketch of this now well known German historian The Boston Herald writes:—

"Treitschke died in 1896, looking forward with confidence to the day when, as Geibel sang, the world would find healing at the touch of the German character. He looked forward to this day in a pious, prayerful mood, 'God will see to it that war always recurs as a drastic medicine for the human race.' That Treitschke was not spared to be the head of the German press bureau in 1914 is a severe loss to the cause of Pan-Germanism."

In a recent number of Harper's Weekly Mr. Norman Hapgood gives a vivacious characterization of the man who has been called Germany's stormy petrel:

"He was an odd little man, with a voice so bad it could hardly be understood in college lecture-rooms. As a youth he had a natural tendency towards learning, but an natural tendency also toward using his facts to prove what he liked to believe. After Bismarck's first great exhibition of masterly wickedness, when he tore Schleswig-Holstein away from Denmark, the youthful Von Treitschke lost whatever liberalism he had and became excited over the possibilities of war, compulsion, aristocracy. . . .

Von Treitschke first popularized the idea that British naval supremacy must be destroyed. In 1884 he said: 'We have reckoned with France, Austria and Russia: the reckoning with England has still to come; it will be the longest and the most difficult.' . . . .

Von Treitschke sat in the Reichstag and supported legislation to suppress the Socialists, Poles and Catholics. In every branch of politics he taught the gospel of crushing."

A Coming Capitalist.

"For whom do you work, my lad?"

"Me?"

"Yes."

"For myself."

"I thought I saw you in Mr. Brown's office."

"Sure you did. There's where I work."

"Where does he come in?"

"He pays me my wages."

and on a door leading through a wall of defence, are the words: No Germans admitted.

Another brother in Sittingbourne writes in part as follows: I am afraid it will a very long job and it looks as though, we shall all have to lend a hand, before we conquer the old Kaiser. We are expecting a call of conscription from a certain age, which means a great strain on all countries for some time, as there has already been a heavy call. A great proportion of the young men are serving. Our youngest boy enlisted two months ago. We were pleased to see the large number of Canadians. They are a very smart lot of men and we hope they will be spared to return home. The Germans have been preparing for this dreadful disaster for years but I believe they will find their masters before finishing up. It will be by a fearful cost of life but we must look at the brightest side, for the present.

The Exception.

Uncle Zack, the stable man, enjoyed local repute as a weather prophet. Miss Cassie, coming down early one morning, found Zack on the back porch.

"Is the rain going to last all day, Zack?" she asked.

"Yessum. Ah reckin' it is."

"Why, Zack," Miss Cassie said, "I have always heard you say, 'Rain before 7, clear before 11.' Isn't that true?"

"Yessum, it's strickly true," Uncle Zack maintained stoutly, "jes' 'cepting it doan't apply to an all day rain, ma'am."—New York Post.

Lance Corporal Stevens Says Canadians Want to Get to Fighting Line

Writing from Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plain, to Mr. H. J. McCannan, Lance Corporal F. Stevens says:

Dear Mr. McCannan:

Just a line to let you know I am still alive and going fine. We have been in England about seven weeks now and are fairly fit, but the weather is awful—always raining, and there is mud everywhere, but I guess we shall get lots of that before we are through. We are not sure yet when we are likely to be sent to the front, but I don't think it will be till about April. I must say we are all fed up here, and anxious to get a move on and plug some of those German sausage eaters, as that is what we left Peterborough for. I feel sure if we do get a chance with them, the Kaiser will find that the Canadian contingent is a hard nut to crack, especially the "boys of the 57th," and I know they will give a good account of themselves. I hope we shall all come back some day to see some more good times in the old town. Well, the time is rather short, so I guess I shall have to come to a close. I thought I would let you know that we are all in the pink of condition and hoping you are also in the best of health. I remain,

Yours,
FRED STEVENS.

SERMONS APPROPRIATE TO CHRISTMAS SEASON

Rev. Mr. Brown and Rev. Mr. Buchanan Preach at Millbrook Methodist Church

Milbrook, Dec. 22.—Bright Christmas services were held in the Methodist Church on Sunday, with Rev. Mr. Buchanan preaching at the morning service. A song service held in the evening was very much enjoyed, much credit being due the choir for their excellent singing. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Brown, delivered the sermon. Mr. Brown's text was Luke 2:14, glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace, goodwill toward men.

"Christmas is coming," said the preacher, "coming with all its gladness, coming to our homes to bring back loved ones, who have been away so long."

"Christmas time is a time of rejoicing. It is intended to bring happiness to the wide, wide world, for did not the disciples say "He brought glad tidings to all people"? Surely this advent of Jesus Christ must have some vital part in the world's happiness. What is the connection? How is the welfare of the world linked up with the coming of Christ? You have the answer in the one word, Saviour, Jesus Christ the Saviour. He comes to break every yoke of sin.

"Christ is in the world to help each of us to fight the good fight of faith. Is it any wonder the angels sang glory to God in the Highest?

"Do you remember when David said, 'O Lord show me Thy glory.' He answered, 'I will make my goodness pass before you.' God's goodness is his glory. God rejoices in being good to his creatures, for He loveth every creature He hath made.

Why the Ill-Will.

"Instead of good-will now there is ill-will. How is that? Because men will not heed the divine message. The Christian religion has not failed. This war has not come on account of this, but because men have refused to yield allegiance to Christ. Christianity should mean Christ-likeness. When at a workingmen's meeting one day, the name of Christ was cheered, but the name of Christianity was hissed, while these should be identified. We should bring our lives into harmony with the teachings of God's word.

Peace, a Legacy.

"If we are to have peace in our mind and heart and home, then we must let Christ live there. What is peace? It is something that comes as a direct legacy to us. If we would inherit this, then we must keep in the Divine family. If you and I are to get inside the Divine family, then we must be doers of the will of Jesus Christ. We must listen to His voice. If we listen for the Divine voice in all the relationship of life, we will hear it. Oh, let us listen when God speaks.

"Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace, goodwill toward men," this refers to God's goodwill to us, as shown by the gift of His son. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." The spirit of goodwill should manifest itself in love. What Christ it to us we should, in our little measure, be to others. If we have the Christmas spirit we will give to others. How many are carrying burdens, who need our help and sympathy. Tell me that a man loves humanity, and he will suffer and sacrifice for humanity.

"The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, therefore, we should minister unto the needy.

I pity the man or woman who does not get a Xmas gift, but I pity more the man who does not give one. Christ says "It is more blessed to give than to receive." This is Xmas time, you pity from your heart the man or woman who has not a home, but I pity more the man who has a home and yet with his means, does nothing to bring gladness to the man who has no home. Give Christmas gifts, it will be a blessing to you. You ought not to make them expensive if you have not the means, but if we have means, then let not our meanness cramp our givings. Give to the poor as well as to those who can pay you back.

"I heard a family say, we are going to give to the Patriotic Fund. I take the Patriotic Fund as taxes. Are we going to pay our taxes by robbing the poor and needy and those who have claims upon us?

Should Spend Money.

"There are times when men should spend money. What are you going to do with the men who have stocked a lot of toys or goods for Christmas, if you do not buy from them? You could not go in and hand them money, so I say buy.

Another way by which we can manifest our goodwill is by cultivating a cheerful spirit. Cultivate a cheerful disposition, and while we give gifts, let us not forget the appeal, "Son, daughter, give Me thine heart." Refuse not to give the gift of yourself.

Morning Sermon.

Text, 2nd chapter of St. Luke, 7, 8, 9 and 10 verses.

"We are standing on the crumbling edge of 1914. Was there ever such a Christmas chronicled through all these years? I haven't the cheek to assume a merry Christmas, because of this great war. About nineteen hundred years ago, Jesus Christ told His disciples to go and preach the gospel to every nation. The three great nations of today are in a great grapple, and the family circle so closely related. A Japanese once wrote an article on the downfall of Christianity. What is the reason? I might ask are the churches doing their part in keeping it up?

"If the anthem that was sung on Christmas Eve in Bethlehem has been taken up, all I can say is give Christ an opportunity, let Him speak and the hearers give attention.

"On that night the angels pushed back the windows of heaven and joined their voices in "Behold I bring good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. This brings forth the honor of motherhood. There is no other word like Mary. She gave birth to Jesus Christ. How motherhood is honored today.

"This is what I would call a birthday celegration. I have been at birthday parties where the mother was dressed in the orange blossoms and dress she wore at the wedding altar, and where the hug and kiss has been given to the mother. Let me ask you this morning, can every man here say, Jesus Christ, I am glad in my heart that You were born?

"I am glad today that Jesus Christ came to this earth in babyhood and grew up to manhood to die to make atonement for man.

When Christ was on the cross, Barrabas got his freedom and I can imagine Barrabas putting his hands on the bleeding feet of Christ and saying, "I do not know who you are, but I know you died for me. Can you personally say "He died for me?"

Crowded Out.

When Christ was born He was crowded into a cattle enclosure. Every apartment was pre-occupied, and Jesus Christ was crowded out, yes, and He is crowded out still. He is not taken into our hearts as he ought to be. Open your hearts and let Him in. Can we fathom the tidings of Christ's birthday?

"The tidings the slaves in the United tates got when they got their freedom were nothing to what the tidings were when Jesus was born.

"Look at Mary when Jesus was on the cross. You can tell she is His mother. She must suffer, she must bear all that motherhood can bear. I want you boys and girls to honor your mother. You will never pay back what she does for you.

"I remember when my mother used to read to us the story of Christ's birth. I used to go out in the evening to look for the star in the east.

"You remember the wise men that came from a great distance and brought the costliest treasures of earth. The lesson we have to learn from that is, that the gospel will never go to the ends of the earth unless there is gold, frankincense and myrrh, the very best we can give.

Let me ask you this, next Friday is Christmas Day. God gave His only son Jesus Christ, remember the announcements and give something that will help. Then again will you not take into account your indebtedness to Jesus Christ and take Him into the inner chamber of your mind.

"What do you think of Jesus Christ? I know what Judas thought of Him, when he sold Him for about fifteen dollars, but you remember what he said afterwards when he repented. He came back with the thirty pieces of silver, and said, "I have betrayed innocent blood." I might go on to tell you what his friends thought of him, but I ask you, what do you think of Him today? Let me ask you to let Christ's life be an inspiration to you today. Let us pray that Jesus Christ may have His place and that Christianity shall spread to the ends of the earth.

ENEMY GROWS MORE NERVOUS

More Sniping and Rocketing On Part of the Germans.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The French War Office last night made public a report of an eye-witness of events along the battle line from Dec. 4 to Dec. 15. It says:—

"During the period from the 7th to the 15th of December the ascendancy gained by our infantry has placed us in a position to make in various sections of the front progress which seems to have disturbed the enemy.

"The German infantry is more cautious, and continuous sniping by them denotes a certain amount of nervousness. The fact that they are using searchlights and lighting rockets more and more reveals also their fear of attacks.

"After the expensive and useless experiments of last month, our adversaries seem almost everywhere to be reduced to defensive measures, and it is we who on the whole of the front have assumed the offensive.

"Also, in the artillery duels our batteries are showing more and more their superiority."

According to a story published in The Paris Gaulois, travelers arriving at Warsaw from Berlin state that grave disorders broke out in Berlin after the publication of the last list of killed and wounded, accounting for 40,000 names. An enormous crowd gathered in the streets, and the mounted police charged with drawn swords.

The crowd refused to disperse, and cried out:

"Give us back our fathers and sons! Down with war! We want peace and bread."

One Landwehr regiment, ordered to charge the crowd, refused to obey. According to The Gaulois, the revolt was quelled only after great difficulty.

According to a letter from a German officer published in The Berlin Tageblatt, the German losses in Belgium and northern France have been appalling. Corpses are strewn so thickly over the ground, the officer says, that they cannot be buried for several days.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BRONTE, ONT., OCT. 31st. 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy.

My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 21.—Cables from Liverpool did not respond to the strength on this side on Saturday, causing a somewhat irregular opening. Wheat opened ⅛c lower to ⅜c higher, oats ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, and flax ⅛c to ⅝c higher. A decidedly sharp advance took place following the opening, influenced by Chicago December shorts becoming panicky. Winnipeg, before noon, had advanced ⅝c to ¾c. At noon there was a tendency to ease off. The export activity has not in any way abated. Cash wheat demand was fair, but few offerings were on the market. The enquiry for barley was active, but cash oats and flax were quiet. Cash wheat closed ⅞c to 1c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—There was considerable demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today. Cables were strong, and prices were 6d to 1s per quarter higher than Saturday, 50s to 50s 3d being bid from London for No. 1 northern, and sales of No. 2 northern to Liverpool at 47s 9d, which are the highest prices bid and made so far on this crop. The volume of business done was small, owing to the fact that exporters were not disposed to accept all the orders that came forward.

There was also a better demand from local buyers for corn, and sales of ten cars of American No. 3 yellow were made for shipment from Chicago at 75½c to 76¼c per bushel, ex-track.

The trade in oats was quiet. The demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour was better, and sales of export patent were made to London at 35s, which is the top figure paid so far.

A fair local trade was done in butter. Cheese is firm. Demand for eggs is good.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, notwithstanding the fact that the Christmas markets for cattle were held here last week, and butchers and packers laid in their supplies for that trade, there was a good supply of suitable stock on the market again this morning; but, as buyers generally were well supplied, the demand was limited and trade slow. Extra choice steers sold at $8.75 to $9 per cwt. There was a good demand from packers for canning stock, of which the supply was ample to fill requirements, and sales of cows were made at $4 to $4.25, and bulls at $4.75 to $5 per cwt.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the very strong feeling which developed for lambs, and prices scored a sharp advance of 75c to $1 per cwt., which was attributed to the small supplies coming forward, for which there is still a very good demand.

Hogs stronger, and outside prices were 15c per cwt. higher, but the indications are that values will be kept at their present level for some time, as supplies are coming forward more freely. Ontario stock sold at $7 to $7.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

TO HOLD OPEN BONSPIEL FIRST WEEK OF FEBRUARY

It has been decided to change the date set for holding the open bonspiel to February 3rd instead of January 12th as first arranged.

The committee that was appointed last week to arrange the date met last night in the curling club rooms and brought in a report to that effect, deeming the original date as being too early in the season. Following this meeting there was a meeting of skips held for the purpose of selecting skips for the district and tankard cup games.

TEAM COMMITTEE WAS APPOINTED

Three Men Will Select the Intermediate Team — Trainers Secured

The most important business executed by the meeting of the executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club, last evening, was the appointing of a team committee whose duties will be to select the team and co-operate with the captain in the care of the team. The men selected were President Nelson, Secretary Morgan and Ed. Dillon. Ed. Dillon will also divide the work of a trainer with "Gene" Hurtubise.

Perhaps the Germans are now feeling a little sorry that they didn't build the Kiel Canal about 400 miles further inland.

THE ADMISSION TO GAMES WILL BE THE SAME

The executive of the hockey club decided last evening that the prices of admission this winter will be the same as in former years. The east side will be 25 cents, the west side with the exception of a couple of hundred seats will be 35 cents for gents and 25 cents for ladies. The couple of hundred seats on the west side and the seats in the gallery will be reserved and sold for 50 cents. The sale of reserved seats will be held in one of the city stores, three days previous to a game.

THE TEAM COMMITTEE composed of President Nelson, Secretary Morgan and Ed. Dillon should be able to perform its duties to the satisfaction of all. We admit that President Nelson is only a beginner but Harry Morgan and "King" Dillon can surely spot a hockey player.

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE IDEA of reserving a couple of hundred seats and selling them via plan is to be commended. It eliminates the possibility of ladies remaining away from the game because of the crowd.

THE HOCKEY CLUB will have one friend on the police force. P. C. Kidd is again keeping the snow on George Street packed. The big "cop" always took interest in the hockey artists.

THE GAME the Peterboro team will have in Toronto on New Year's Day should help considerably. It's to be hoped that the septette make a better showing than the team wearing the blue and white which played on the big ice two years ago.

THE LOCAL HOCKEY CLUB received a communication from Ottawa College asking for a game in Peterboro during the first week of January. The College requested a guarantee but the Petes' management thought it would not be wise to offer a guarantee and offered a percentage of the gate. If Father Stanton accepts the conditions offered by the Peterboro Club the College team will in all probability play here during the week of January 4th. Where a date can be secured is hard to state as Port Hope Juniors play here Monday, January 4th, Peterboro Intermediates play in Picton the day after and Belleville Intermediates are here the following Friday. Ottawa College would be a big drawing card. They played here two years ago.

SKIPS FOR TANKARD AND DISTRICT CUP.

The following skips have been elected for the Tankard and District Cup competitions:

Tankard skips—W. H. Taylor and W. M. Laing.

District Cup—W. H. Denham and W. D. Campbell.

These four skips with the committee of management were empowered with authority to select rinks to play for the trophies.

There is splendid ice at the rink now and matches can be played any afternoon or evening.

BOWLING

In the Y. M. C. A. bowling league last night the scores were as follows:

GLADIATORS—
Everett	163	155	144	462
Borland	113	123	129	365
Morrow	158	134	120	412
	434	412	392	1239
UNKNOWNS—
Pidgeon	129	148	129	406
Carruthers	143	111	151	405
Nichols	126	108	168	402
	398	367	448	1213

The Gladiators defeated the Unknowns two out of three games last evening and won in pinnage by the small margin of 26 pins. The teams are well matched, so a very interesting contest was witnessed.

FORTY ENTRIES IN SIX-DAY BICYCLE RACE IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Dec. 22.—For the first time in almost twenty years Chicago is to have a six-day bicycle race. The event, with close to forty of the greatest long distance riders in the world competing, will be staged at International Amphetheatre, in the stock yards district, beginning the night of Thursday, January 28, and closing the evening of Thursday, February 3.

Already contracts have been signed for the building, and Floyd McFarland wired from Newark that he had definitely closed all necessary contracts for at least fifteen teams of riders. Newark is the headquarters of the professional riders of the world at the present time.

Plans for a ten-lap track have been drawn up and this size will permit of close to 10,000 viewing the race from different parts of the huge building. The track will be heavily banked to permit of the highest possible speed. The track will be almost a duplicate of the one in Madison Square Garden, where wonderful records are made annually.

INTERMEDIATES APPEAR STRONG

Hunter and Pethick Make Favorable Impression

The Peterboro Intermediates had their first real strenuous practice last evening at Brock Street Rink between seven and eight. The railbirds were on hand in numbers and sized up the new defence of Hunter and Pethick. Both men made a favorable impression particularly Pethick who cut loose occasionally with a burst of speed. Hunter appears to be a little overweight and until he gets down to normal will not be seen at his best. The Toronto product cannot be called a speed artist but makes up with his brilliant stick handling. Harold Morrow and Harold Long the defence of the Junior team were also out.

Of last season's forward line, Halpin and Kennealley were present. The latter is trying out for right wing. He is a left hand shot but covered the right boards for several seasons. Grover Halpin and Maurice Park are gradually getting down to real hockey and both contributed a little "grapevine." Giroux, Murray and Flemming were also on hand.

No Goaler as Yet.

As yet no goal custodian has donned the pads. Janes and Dwyer are expected out every night but neither have thus far appeared. It wouldn't be a foolish move on the part of the executive to get Cassidy and Flowers out. Practices have a far better effect when the nets are guarded.

The junior team will practice tonight between seven and eight.

VANCOUVER WITHOUT CURLING THIS WINTER

Vancouver, Dec. 22.—There will be no curling here this season. The Vancouver Curling Club, one of the largest and most influential in the west, has announced that the game will be abandoned this season, and the annual bonspiel, scheduled for March, called off.

The Greatest Happiness Comes to Ourselves
When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists not in costliness or variety, but in the feeling of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both the giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry, anxiety and doubt. When you give something TO WEAR, you exhibit good sense, good taste, and good judgment.

Let us suggest: UNDERWEAR, UMBRELLAS, NECK SCARFS, CRAVATS, PYJAMAS, JEWELRY, HOSIERY, SUSPENDERS, HANDKERCHIEFS, HOUSE COATS, GLOVES, MUFFLERS, SUITS, SWEATER COATS, SHIRTS, COLLARS, TIES, HATS, CAPS, OVERCOATS, Etc. In fact, everything carried by firstclass clothing and mens' furnishing stores.

The talk was instructive and interesting, especially when it was known that Mr. Worth has spent fifteen years of his life in Sweden. The speaker dealt with the different phases of his subject, including a reference to each of Sweden's most noted rulers, geographical conditions, and some of the quaint habits and customs of the people.

LADIES WILL ORGANIZE CLUB FOR CURLING

Although no meeting has been called to make arrangements, the Review was informed today that the ladies would organize a curling club this winter as in other years and take just as lively an interest in the game as the men. Miss Gladman, the secretary, stated that they expected to call a meeting within a week or two to make some arrangements but they wanted first to hear from the men's curling club to find out what provision had been made at the rink for their accommodation.

Asked if the ladies would put on a bonspiel this winter, Miss Gladman stated that she scarcely thought so, owing to the war and other activities. Miss Gladman however said there would be a meeting called very soon to consider the matter.

TOM MARKS AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Tom Marks is at the Grand this week and the laughing atmosphere looks exceedingly bright for Tom is always ready to make the public laugh. His engagement opened last night when he and his excellent supporting company presented "The Golden Rule." It was a pastoral comedy, handsomely costumed and splendidly staged. The cast was well balanced, each and everyone doing his or her part remarkably well. "Some vaudeville," was the expression heard from the departing audience and that does not cover it all either for last night four of the best vaudeville acts seen here for many a day were presented between the dramatic acts, and they were rich, clever and good to listen to.

NO OPPOSITION TO W. G. HOWDEN FROM MEETING

H. Forster is in Line for Deputy-reeveship in North Monaghan

RATEPAYERS MEET

H. Rye and Wm. Stevens to Contest Seats on the Council

A well-attended meeting of the ratepayers in North Monaghan was held last night in May's Schoolhouse. The chair was occupied by William Stevens, who, on behalf of the meeting, called upon Reeve Howden to give an account of his stewardship.

The Reeve willingly assented and his address seemed quite satisfactory. The same can be said of Mr. H. Forster, a member of the council, who was also asked to speak.

The meeting then selected candidates to contest the council seats. No opposition appeared against the Reeve, and Mr. Forster, who will run for the deputy reeveship. Messrs. H. Rye and Wm. Steven's were nominated as candidates to contest the remaining council seats. It appeared to be the feeling of the meeting that every effort should be made to elect these two mn, who it is felt would make a strong addition to the council.

The Review is informed from another source that a warm fight for the deputy reeveship promises to be the most exciting part of the Monaghan election on polling day. W. G. Howden, the present reeve, it is said is going to be opposed as far as known and the prospective candidate who it is said will strive to unseat him is Mr. Thomas Hunter, an ex-reeve who has not been in municipal harness for more than ten years.

The office of deputy reeve will be a new one created by the election and gossip has it that councillors H. J. Forster and Robert A. Dobbin have decided to stand for the position. Both are veteran councillors and share popularity and esteem about evenly in Monaghan.

The other councillors who are expected to stand for re-election are William Robertson and T. D. Young.

Nominations will be held on Monday at the Monaghan town hall commencing at one o'clock.

ALLIES MAKE CAPTURES

Village to the East of Bethune is Taken and at Other Points Trenches and Machine Guns Are Lost to Enemy

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 23. — The official afternoon statement says that fairly serious fighting is going on in the vicinity of Boureuilles, between the forest of La Grurie and the heights of the Meuse, and at this point the French have not been able to retain all the positions captured yesterday.

Between this point and the sea, except in the region of Arras, where a heavy fog made operations impossible, there has been either artillery attack or artillery engagements all along the line, with results generally favorable, particularly at the east of Bethune, where the Allies re-captured a village, in the forest of La Grurie, where some trenches were carried, and at Perthes-les-Hurlus, where the Allies captured some machine guns with their crews.

HAVE NOT SECURED AN ORDER AS YET

For some reason, the purchasing agent for the British Government, Frederick Stobart, of Montreal, has overlooked the Lundy Shovel & Tool company in placing the order for 120,000 shovels. This firm has received definite word that two other firms had the order divided between them, although samples of the shovels manufactured by the Lundy Shovel & Tool Co. were shown to Mr. Stobart by the company's representative. The sample came closer to filling the requirements called for in the specifications than any other bid made. The news, however, that the local firm was left in the cold was, therefore, not particularly cheering, and they are taking the matter up with Mr. Stobart, seeking an explanation.

The Lundy Shovel & Tool Co. claim a possible output of 720 shovels a day.

Rev. C. E. Riley, who has charge of the Anglican circuit of Homer, Virgil and McNab, has resigned on account of the difficulties of travel.

DETAILS OF VICTORY BY SERVIANS

Number of Prisoners is Said to be Forty-two Thousand

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says that rejoicing over the Servians' defeat of the Austrians increases as details of the victory become more complete. Prisoners are now said to number over forty-two thousand; guns captured, 226, and the booty included two thousand horses and enormous numbers of rifles and immense quantities of every kind of war material.

One result is that Austria cannot now realize one dollar on the loan of twenty-five million dollars negotiated in the United States two years ago but never successfully placed.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The Berlin Vorwarts, a socialist organ, says a larger proportion of unionist workers have gone to war from England than from Germany.

Principal and Mrs. Kirkconnell were presented with a silver service by the students of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute, the occasion being the 25th anniversary of their marriage.

CANADIAN NURSES ARE MILES AWAY FROM THE FIRING LINES

(Toronto Globe.)

"You need not worry about us at all, as we are absolutely safe," writes Miss Grace Hunter, who is now in Boulogne, France, nursing wounded soldiers from the front. This news will be reassuring to the many friends of the Canadian nurses who may have wondered if the nurses were in any danger. "We are miles away from the fighting," continues the letter, "and at present our work is much the same as the work done at home. We go on duty in the morning at eight o'clock, and get off every other day at five. When we are on night duty the night shift lasts only three weeks.

"We find it very cold here, as the French do not heat their buildings in the same way as we do. Miss Blewett and I room together, and we have bought a coal stove to warm the room. Most of the Toronto nurses are together. We do not live in the hospital, but in a hotel nearby. Most of the reports you hear are much exaggerated. We are having a good time, apart from our work, and the people are very kind to us. Of course it is lonely at times, but taking everything into consideration, I would not have missed the experience for the world. I hope you will make up your mind to come with the next contingent."

Most letters arriving here from the front are clipped and torn by the censor, but as this one contained no information about the war, it came through untouched.

BUSINESS BLOCK AT CALEDON IS SWEPT BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Hamilton, Dec. 23.—Fire at Caledon, Ont., this morning wiped out an entire business block and for a time threatened the whole town. Assistance was asked for from Hamilton but just as the firemen were about to leave on a special train word was received that the fire was under control.

The fire was in the Thompson block, corner of Argyle and Caitnes Sts. This block was occupied by Wm. Leitch, grocer; Ross Howard, gents' furnishings; Jos. Stubb, barber; A. Gilles, butcher; J. Martindale, stoves; David Boyd, restaurant; Gordon Paterson, barber. The block was completely gutted. The fire is thought to have been caused by defective gas stoves, in the store of Ross Howard.

The loss on buildings is estimated at sixteen thousand with insurance of twelve thousand. Most of the contents were removed.

NOMINATIONS AT TORONTO

Controllers Church and McCarthy for the Mayor's Chair

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Dec. 23.—Controllers L. L. Church, J. O. McCarthy were nominated this morning for the office of mayor. Mayor Hocken was also nominated but declined.

Seven candidates for the Board of Control, four to be elected are controllers Simpson, Messrs. Jos. Thompson, F. S. Spence, Ald. Wanless, F. G. McBrine and Thos. Foster.

WAR RISKS BY LLOYDS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 23. — Lloyd's is charging thirty guineas per cent. to insure against war between Italy and Germany, and Austria and Turkey with one month and fifty guineas per cent. that war between those countries will not be declared within six months. Five guineas per cent. is asked to insure against war breaking out between Britain and Norway within twelve months.

MAY BE LULL IN FIGHTING

Christmas Sentiment is Deep in Men's Hearts, Though They Seek to Kill One Another

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 23. — It is believed, notwithstanding the failure of the plan for an armistice over Christmas, that some sort of lull will set in on Christmas Day itself. At the front, the Christmas sentiment is deep in the men's hearts, and their positions on the line of battle facing each other in bitter antagonism will not eradicate it.

All London newspapers will observe the holiday on Christmas Day.

Berlin newspapers profess to deplore the failure to arrange an armistice, but ask what guarantee there was that the enemies of Germany, while promising faithfully to observe the conditions of the Christmas truce, would not be guilty of some base treachery. The Madgeburg Zeitung says: "Imagine a Russian's word of honor; imagine British faithfulness to treaties."

BAVARIANS ARE DISSATISFIED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23. — A special cable to the Herald from Amsterdam says "No Christmas cake for the Germans" is the tenor of the melancholy message which Germany received this morning, when all general commanders acting under special orders from Berlin issued proclamations ordering that flour, especially for Christmas cakes, be used with utmost economy. It is clear, from the proclamations which were issued, that the question of food is greatly worrying the German authorities, who clearly perceive that the empire is steering toward starvation. From Munich it is learned that increasing dissatisfaction exists among the Bavarian troops, who contend that they are not getting proper recognition for sacrifices they have made during the present war. Feeling is spreading quickly through Bavaria that King Ludwig has been deceived by the Kaiser, and that Bavaria is now engaged in a war that will bring no profit to the kingdom, whatever may be the outcome, while in the case of Germany's victory the Prussians will reap all the profit and honor, notwithstanding the fact that Bavarians have sacrificed proportionately three times more men and money than the Prussians. Bavarians now, also, are beginning to inquire what the war is about, and are angry at the Kaiser's ambition, which is ruining Bavarian finances and crippling the army. The feeling, if not speedily counteracted, may possibly lead to the formation of a union of South German States as counterpoise to all Prussian tendencies prevalent at Berlin.

LINDSAY FIRE THROWS NEARLY TWO HUNDRED EMPLOYES OUT OF WORK

Large Woollen Mills of Horn Bros. is Completely Destroyed by Fire of Unknown Origin

Lindsay, Dec. 23.—The extensive mills of the Horn Bros.' Woollen Co. were totally destroyed by fire which broke out between 6 and 7 o'clock last evening, and owing to the inflammable nature of the contents the flames were soon beyond control. The mills have been working night and day filling orders for blankets for the Canadian overseas army, and upwards of 175 people were employed at good wages. The loss to the town and to the wage-earners employed in the mills will be almost irreparable. The sympathy of the entire town goes out to the Horn Bros. in their great loss.

The cause of the fire is as yet unknown.

Heavy Loss in Furs.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 23. — J. W. Davy's frame block on King Street east was damaged to the extent of $1,000 by a fire at an early hour yesterday morning. A portion of the block was occupied by W. Feldman, furrier, who suffered the loss of his complete stock of furs, valued at $10,000. Ed. Kuehnle's barber shop was also badly damaged. The firemen succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames to nearby buildings. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

INVESTIGATING OFFICER IS MR. MILLER'S JOB

Will Supply List of Soldiers' Wives, Families and Dependants

GRANT OF $50

Made by Patriotic Relief Committee for Lodging House

Fifty dolars was the sum granted to the Salvation Army lodging house by the Patriotic Relief Committee, who held their first meeting since organization yesterday afternoon. The committee met to discuss how they would proceed, and it was agreed that in giving relief to families and dependents of sildiers, the scale provided by the Canadian Fund should be followed.

F. W. Miller was appointed investigating officer for this committee in connection with the Patriotic Fund, with instructions to report to the relief committee the list of soldiers' wives, families, dependents or relatives resident in Peterborough and vicinity and keep the committee advised constantly of any change in them. Mr. Miller was appointed relief officer for the committee. The members of the relief committee are D. O'Connell, James Lynch, H. Rush, Adjt. McElhiney, Walter Stocker and R. Harstone.

The matter of who shall be assisted by the association was settled by the passing of the following resolution: "That the Relief Association's funds be used to relieve persons in need in Peterborough and such persons in the immediate vicinity as this committee may, in its discretion, decide to aid."

The committee will recommend to the association that the membership of the committee be increased to nine, and the two additional members shall be gentlemen connectedw ith the militia.

The relief officer will report to the committee all cases where cash is requested, and the committee shall decide what aid shall be given. In cases of emergency, the chairman and relief officer are authorised to give relief. All such cases and relief given will be reported to the next meeting.

MILITIA ORDERS

In the militia orders published December 14th, notice is given that provisional lieutenant G. K. Rackham, 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons is detailed for duty temporarily, as instructor in signalling to the Field Engineer Units, Canadian Expeditionary Force under organization at Ottawa, Ont., from the 7th of December, 1914.

The following deaths were also reported, Private Charles Matthews, No. 2 Canadian Field Ambulance, who died Dec. 11th.

Sergeant Major James W. Guerin, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry who died December 12th.

Regarding the despatch of mail matter for the Canadian Expeditionary force it should be addressed as follows:

Regimental number, ranks and name. Number and name of the unit now serving in Salisbury Plain, England.

The inclusion of the name of any particular camp or the name of the unit in Canada to which the addressee formerly belonged should be avoided.

BURNED TO DEATH.

KINGSTON, Dec. 23. — One man burned to death, giving up his life to save another, and a woman so badly burned that she will not recover, is the sad tale of a fire which occurred in the village of Sydenham, 18 miles from Kingston, yesterday morning. Alfred Deyo, 27 years of age, lost his life and the life of his sister-in-law, Mrs. William Deyo, hangs in the balance.

Mrs. Deyo's husband met a sudden death a few weeks ago, when he fell into an open shaft at Sydenham.

THAT SETTLED HIM.

Mr. Lloyd George, although he is one of the most ardent pacifists in England, stated the other day that he was proud of the fact that his sons had joined the army to fight for their country.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer is noted for his clever way of dealing with "hecklers," and he has to be a very clever man who can thwart him when he is making one of his political speeches.

On one occasion Mr. Lloyd George was addressing a somewhat mixed audience and began his oration with the words: "I am here —"

"And so am I," interrupted a would-be wit, from the end of the hall.

"Yes," answered the Chancellor quickly, "but you are not 'all there.'"

After that, the "heckler" was silent.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 23, 1914

ICE FORMATIONS CAUSING THIS CITY TROUBLE—FRAZIL.

WE ARE BASING the following description of frazil and anchor ice on that of Dr. Howard T. Barnes, of McGill University, as it appeared in a book published by the Commission of Conservation, entitled: "Long Sault Rapids, St. Lawrence River—An Enquiry Into the Constitutional and Other Aspects of the Project to Develop Power Therefrom."

Frazil ice is a French-Canadian term for fine spicular ice, from the French for forge-cinders, which it is supposed to resemble. It is always formed in an open channel, where the current is flowing too swiftly for the broken ice to meet over the surface, and is often called "slush ice." It is partly a surface-formed ice which cannot remain attached and freeze into a surface sheet, and partly a product of the interior freezing of the mass of the water. It occurs in varying degrees of fineness, from plate ice, which forms on a smooth, gliding surface, to the finest needle crystals, which are hardly discernible to the eye. Frazil crystals grow in bulk, when carried far in open water.

Artificial frazil ice may be formed by subjecting water to rapid agitation in a cold atmosphere. A tub of water placed out of doors in winter and rapidly stirred, soon turns to slush by the copious growth of these fine crystals. It is safe to say that a long stretch of open water becomes loaded to the bottom with frazil during a period of intense cold and great wind agitation. During such time the water appears dull in colour, presenting an appearance of being mixed with fine sand. At any time during cold weather, the water may be seen to be carrying numerous fine crystals by withdrawing a sample in a clear glass for inspection. The amount it may contain will depend entirely upon weather conditions. A dull, stormy day, with a wind that blows against the current is productive of the greatest amount. This is the result of the surface agitation, together with the rapid extraction of heat. A bright, sunny day, although very cold, does not show much frazil formation, on account of the absorption of the sun's rays near the surface offsetting the cooling effect of the air. At night, under a clear sky, with wind agitation, a large amount will be formed, depending on the temperature of the air. Professor Barnes states he has found in the water on an average cold day in winter very fine needle crystals to the extent of about a quarter of a million per cubic foot. During severe weather he has found this number to rise to several millions.

It is the frazil ice which causes an open channel to be of so much trouble to engineering operations whenever frost occurs, for, although a surface sheet may be formed lower down, the fine ice is carried far under the surface ice by the currents. Serious changes of level often occur in a river by the damming up, or complete stoppage, of a channel by frazil carried under the surface ice, and building down both sides of the channel. Great masses of frazil accumulate in the quiet bays by the drifting in of the fine crystals, and their subsequent settling upwards to the under side of the surface sheet. The crystals soon become attached to the surface ice, and attain depths reaching to the bottom of the river; in some cases, a depth of eighty feet has been observed.

In taking soundings through the ice, the lead may usually be sunk through the masses of frazil, but often these become frozen together so hard as to resist all efforts at penetration. The distance to which frazil ice will be carried depends on the swiftness of the currents, and the amount of open channel above. In the St. Lawrence River, at Montreal, the frazil generated for the most part in the open water of Lachine Rapids and above, is found attached as far as Varennes, twelve miles below. In this case, the river is open above the rapids as far as Lake St. Louis, a distance of seven miles.

The greatest packing of the ice occurs at Cornwall, where the swift current all the way from Prescott, a distance of over forty miles, aided by the agitation of the Long Sault rapids, generates tons upon tons of frazil ice. This ice is carried into the wide expanse of Lake St. Francis, where it meets the quieter waters, and, rising to the surface, produces rapid freezing. December and January are the greatest ice-producing months.

THE THIRD FORMATION—ANCHOR ICE.

THE FORM of ice which has attracted most attention is called anchor ice, and, as its name implies, is attached or anchored to the bed or bottom of a river or stream. As early as 1810, writers drew attention to three kinds of ice: 1, surface ice; 2, that formed in the middle of the water, resembling neuclei or hail (frazil); 3, ground ice, which is produced at the bottom, especially where there is any fibrous substance to which it may adhere. It is described by early writers as "full of cells, like a wasp's nest, but less regular, and performs many strange effects in bringing up very heavy bodies by means of its own inferiority in specific gravity to the water in which it is formed."

The worst effects which are met with in engineering works are from frazil crystals formed during extreme weather, when anchor ice is frozen down and rapidly growing, and not, as is sometimes supposed, when moderate weather occurs, when these huge lumps become loose and rise to the surface. The conditions under which anchor ice will form are not the same as for frazil, and vice versa. Methods of construction to obviate the one will not meet the exigencies of the other. As long as the ice problem lasts we shall find circumstances conducive to the formation of one or the other, or both. In a shallow, smooth-flowing river, we are more likely to have anchor ice formed in excess, whereas in a deep and turbulent stream we are likely to have more frazil. Everything seems to point to radiation as the cause of anchor ice. The water flowing over the rocks at the bottom is always very close to the freezing point. The deviations from the freezing point during the winter are seldom greater than one one-hundredth of a degree. The utmost frost Dr. Barnes has observed in water is only .006 of a degree below freezing.

It is to radiation of heat from a river, which goes on all the time, to the colder air above, that we must look for the cause of anchor ice. During the daytime the sun's heat offsets the cooling effect produced by space radiation. Anchor ice rarely forms under a layer of surface ice. It never forms under a cloudy sky by day or night, no matter how severe the weather, but it forms very rapidly under a clear sky at night. It is readily melted off under a bright sun. It is built up rapidly during very cold weather by entangled masses of frazil crystals carried in the flowing water. Anchor ice is very beautiful, resembling arborescent forms and the weeds of summer.

We have deemed it advisable to follow the text of Professor Barnes' article fairly closely. The facts are important, as they will likely be referred to in other articles. He shows an illustration of a penstock, which is a large conduit for conveying water to turbine wheels, that was filled with frazil ice in a few hours. "Methods of artificial heat," Dr. Barnes says, "entirely overcome this."

THE NEW CABINET.

THE CABINET CHANGES APPEAR to have been wisely made. While the retirement of the Hon. J. J. Foy has lately been recognised as necessary, owing to age and failing health, recognized by none more fully than the minister himself, the people of this Province are fully aware of the splendid service he has performed. Time plays strange pranks with the favoured. Some die in office, old and full of honours; some die in the prime of life; others outlive their capacity for hard work, but not their reputation for good services rendered. Mr. Foy belongs to the latter, and, while he has withdrawn from active politics, his services will still be available when it will be necessary to consult one of his long experience.

Mr. Lucas has age in his favour, and will be able, no doubt, to bring the required vigor into the discharge of the office the Hon. J. J. Foy has just relinquished. Mr. Ferguson should also be a good minister, as his reputation as a lawyer, public speaker, and vigorous man of affairs is well and favourably known. True, Liberals will not be overjoyed at his appointment, because of his exposure of Trent Valley Canal affairs, but then, the Conservative party is not taking the pleasure of the Liberals into consideration when making new appointments. Mr. McGarry is also a new man, but the forthcoming session will tell in a fuller measure the real efficiency of the new cabinet.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE REGULATION preventing civil servants from acting in an elective municipal office will not come into force until a year from the next municipal elections. Thus, there is no regulation preventing Mayor Buller from filling his present office for a second term.

IF WE GET a few people talking about frazil ice and anchor ice, local power problems may become popular.

The Man Who Knows How.

(Montreal News.)

Many people seem to think that the success of others is not for themselves, that what others have done is too good for themselves, that they are not expected to be as fortunate as those who are "more favoured." They have grown up under this conviction of their own inferiority. A great many who are really capable of doing big things are doing little things and leading mediocre lives, simply because they do not expect and demand enough of themselves. "If we choose to be no more than clods of clay," says Marie Corelli, "then we shall be used as clods of clay for braver feet to tread on." Conscious power exists within the mind of every sentient being. Its existence may be unrealised, but it is there. It is there to be developed and brought forth by training, like the culture of that obstinate but beautiful flower, the orchid. To allow it to remain dormant is to hold oneself in obscurity, to be blind to one's opportunities, to another one's faculties.

Down with fear! Let the conscious power within the soul stand forth boldly and lead to usefulness, success and happiness. It is a matter entirely of right study, of right effort, of right self-development. Employers everywhere are seeking for the man who knows how and when and why, for the man who will go directly and thoroughly without having to be told every fifteen minutes how to proceed. The way to get ahead and stay ahead is to use the head.

But the head must be trained. One must know. No matter how willing he may be, or how greatly he may desire to do the thing at hand, he cannot do it and do it right unless he knows how. Knowing how comes from training. The main thing is to fit into one's place, whatever the place may be; and when one does that, other things take care of themselves. There is no superiority but in superiority of service. The only thing any man has to sell to this world, and the only thing the world will buy, is service.

Many think that opportunity must be something great and unusual; but the fact is that the stepping-stone for any man to the place above him lies in doing better the very thing he is doing.

A CASE OF DISTRESS.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—A case of peculiar hardship is reported from North Monaghan, where a poor invalid woman with seven small children was neglected because of the idle gossip of a few neighbors, who had said that the beer wagon was seen going to the house several times with beer, which proved to be incorrect. That rich township should not have relied upon such a flimsy pretext for not acting promptly. Even if true, it did not exculpate the council. Our civilization demands that no one should suffer from cold or hunger, to say nothing of our professed Christianity; nor should it be deemed a charity, but a responsibility that no self-respecting community can afford to shirk, but should willingly assume. It is hard enough to be poor without giving publicity to it through the press. People whose only crime is poverty should not be subjected to publicity. On the contrary, their names should be religiously held from the public.

"To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is Godlike."

A SHEEP BULLETIN.

Pamphlet No. 8 of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch is entitled "Care of the Ram and Ewes during the Breeding Season." It has been prepared by T. Reg. Arkell, B.S.A., Chief of the Division, and Norman Stansfield. This is an illustrated pamphlet of 16 pages and deals with the subject under discussion in a comprehensive and logical manner. It embodies the instructions of a practical shepherd to those who would improve and increase their flocks. The concluding page is devoted to a number of "Dont's," outlining a number of practices to be avoided in sheep raising. Copies of this pamphlet may be obtained by making application to The Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Bullet-headed Germans

The Germans are a bullet-headed race. Proof of this has been found when the trophies of war have been tried on English heads. In a case mentioned by the "Manchester Guardian" not one was big enough for any one present.

Though made apparently of steel, the helmets were as light almost as a cloth cap or a straw hat, and more comfortable than a Derby. Round the inside, where it touches, was a ring of metal "leaf springs" bound with leather, which lightly gripped the head to keep the helmet on without heavy pressure.

The brass spike or knob was made useful as well as ornamental. There were large holes in it, which gave very good ventilation—much better than the pin-holes that are supposed to ventilate a Derby hat.

Something About Bullets

The modern bullet is usually of lead covered with nickel and of a shape resembling an elongated half of an egg. The nickel casing is employed to prevent the lead from adhering to the rifling of the barrel and clogging it, thus rendering the shooting bad. The rifling, which consists of either grooves or ridges in the barrel of the rifle, imparts a spin to the bullet which keeps it straight and increases enormously the range and accuracy of the weapon. In most modern rifles a "Spitze" or sharp-pointed bullet is used, which is lighter than the blunt-nosed, old-fashioned bullet, of longer range, and capable of greater penetration.

Graves Full of War Supplies

In scores of cities along the French frontier where Germans "died" by hundreds in the eighteen months before the war, and which were taken by the French, the graves were opened and big supplies of rifles and ammunition produced from the coffins.

Folded paper drinking cups, bound together like a check book, are a novelty for travelers.

Pointers For Housekeepers

Water Grasses For Decorations.

A charming arrangement for a center piece is a large, clear glass circular dish, hardly high enough to be called a bowl. The rim is slightly rounded outward. There is a bed of green water grasses directly in the middle from which rise growing flowers, their roots planted in shells.

Water grasses grow directly around the blossoms. There are pebbles to be seen on the bottom of the dish, showing clearly through the water, and two or three tiny goldfish darting about in their aquatic home. More pebbles rise in small hillocks here and there, and the whole is very attractive as a centerpiece where cut flowers are not easy to procure.

Useful For Hostesses.

A lovely and, what is more to the point, exceedingly useful gift to the hostess who has many notes of acceptance, regret, condolence, congratulations, etc., to write, is a desk set of Fayence or royal Copenhagen china in the prettiest possible shapes. There are the hand painted ink well, stamp box and penholder in the one stand, with antique candlesticks to match, one for each side. The decorations are very striking, being large, many petaled blossoms and conventional arabesques between. Such a set costs in the neighborhood of $15, but is so attractive and quaint the cost seems well worth while.

Children's Gift Bush.

A pretty way of distributing gifts was devised by the organizer of a children's party. It called for a rosebush in full bloom. The favors were small and all tied in green tissue paper. The green waxed paper of the sort florists use might be the nearest to the color of the foliage. The gifts thus wrapped were hidden in the foliage of the bush and were tied by means of green cord or ribbon to the roses. When favor time came the roses were cut, and one was given to each child. As they took the rose the little green package came with it from the depths of the foliage, and of course their surprise added to the charm of the party.

At this time of year the same idea could be carried out, but it would be rather difficult to find a rosebud in full bloom. But asters or chrysanthemums would do. Several stocky plants would have to serve instead of one big bush, or some other flower with bushy foliage would take the place of a flowering bush or shrub.

A Proposal Under Difficulties

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Dick Thurston and Emily Swift became engaged one night during a thunderstorm. Emily was nearly frightened to death and didn't know what Dick, who wasn't afraid of thunder, was talking about. When the storm had passed Dick said to her or, rather, began to say to her:

"Sweetheart"—

"By what right do you call me sweetheart?"

"By the right of possession. Have you not promised to marry me?"

"I promise to marry you! When did I do that?"

"Not ten minutes ago."

"You don't mean to say that you were so crazy as to talk of love with those frightful bolts striking all about us?"

"Why not? We were in no more danger than we are at all times. How do we know when we cross a street but that an automobile may knock us into eternity? At any minute one's heart may stop beating, one's"—

"Stop!"

Dick stopped and remained quiet for some time.

"Have you lost your tongue?" Emily said at last.

"You shut me up."

"I did that because you were talking so horridly."

"May I go on?"

"Of course, if you wish to."

"What was I talking about?"

She turned toward him with a glance that was intended to wither him, but said nothing.

"Oh, I remember; we were talking about the storm. It was a hummer, wasn't it?"

There was no rejoinder.

"That bolt when the flash and the thunder came together must have struck something."

The young lady pouted, but said nothing. She was fingering an ornament suspended from a gold chain about her neck.

"I wonder if it killed any one," pursued Dick.

"Perhaps it was the fool killer hunting for a victim. Maybe that's what brought it so near."

This shut the young man off again. He looked out through the window.

"See the moon shining now!" he exclaimed. "That's the finest one I ever saw. The light is brilliant."

The moonshine did not interest her. She scorned even to look at it.

"Darling," said Dick, "what makes you so cross?"

"Don't you dare call me darling!"

"Got it again right between the eyes. Do you know, Em, that I believe that our engagement, having taken place in a thunderstorm, will be brimful of sulphur."

"Will you be good enough to explain to me what you mean by our engagement?"

"Well, I like that! I propose to a young lady. The proposition, I admit, is made under tempestuous circumstances. Nevertheless she nestles"—

"That was from fright."

"Nestling is pretty, nice anyway."

"Will you go on?"

"Vergil tells us that Dido and Aeneas became engaged during a thunderstorm."

"I am not interested in Dido and Aeneas."

This was said so snappishly that it sent Dick back within himself again. He took refuge in silence.

"If you have nothing more to say to me," Emily finally broke the silence, "I see no reason for our remaining together any longer. I have things to do."

"You wouldn't leave me, would you, just after our becoming engaged? That would be like a groom spending the honeymoon in North America and the bride in China."

She rose and was sweeping out of the room when he called to her:

"What do you wish me to do?"

"I wish you to"— she balked.

"Say it all over again?"

"If you had a spark of sentiment you would know what to do."

"Well, while you were sitting close to me—frightened at the storm, you know—and I had my arm around your waist"—

"I don't remember that at all."

"Certainly not. You were too frightened to remember it. When my arm was around your waist and my ear close against your lips—I mean my lips were"—

"Never mind all that. Go on."

"I said: 'Don't be frightened, dear. Remember that you are in the arms of one who'"—

Another belated clap broke in to spoil again a tender scene. He had placed his arm about her waist and held her hand. She closed her fingers about his, as if fearing he would get away.

"I thought the storm was over," he remarked.

"I think it is. That was merely an after clap. Go on."

"I'm afraid if I do and another storm comes on I'll have to do it again. That'll make three times. You might say it between two bolts."

A dazzling flash, with simultaneous thunder. He held her tightly in his arms and cried above the reverberations:

"Emmy, dearest, I love you. Will you marry me?"

Her reply was toned to rise above the thunder, which ceased suddenly:

"Yes!"

"I heard you," he said, laughing, and, notwithstanding the solemnity of the occasion, she laughed too.

Lesson XIII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 27, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Cor. v, 14-21, Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Gal. vi, 14—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I. — Christ Anointed For Burial, Mark xiv, 1-11. Golden Text, Mark xiv, 8, "She hath done what she could." This is not the anointing of Luke vii by an unnamed woman, but that by Mary of Bethany shortly before the Passover. It was the heartfelt devotion of a humble, believing heart, and He accepted it and approved of it and reproved those who found fault.

LESSON II.—The Last Supper, Mark xiv, 12-25. Golden Text, I Cor. xi, 26, "As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show the Lord's death till He come." Note the Passover greatly desired and its future fulfillment in the kingdom. The thought of that glory should keep us very humble now and deliver us from all strife and ambition as we think of what it cost Him to obtain it for us. The bread and wine should always say to us, "Till He come."

LESSON III.—In the Garden of Gethsemane, Mark xiv, 32-42. Golden Text, Matt. xxvi, 41, "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." Our utter inability to appreciate either His sufferings or His glory is seen in the sleeping of these three men in the garden and on the Mount of Transfiguration. His longing for some human sympathy may be seen in His "Couldest thou not watch one hour?"

LESSON IV.—Jesus and Judas, Matt. xxvi, 47-50; xxvii, 3-10. Golden Text, Matt. xxvi, 24, "Woe unto that man through whom the Son of Man is betrayed." The last lesson seemed to be Christ and the devil face to face, as in the wilderness. This is Christ, and the devil is a professed believer, who dares to profess friendship by a kiss, and Jesus tolerates it. The betrayer's testimony to the innocence of Christ is very strong.

LESSON V.—The Arrest and Trial of Jesus, Matt. xxvi, 57-68. Golden Text, Isa. liii, 7, "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and, as a sheep before her shearers, is dumb, so He openeth not His mouth." This lesson is an awful illustration of the enmity of the human heart to God, who is only Love. Their ill treatment of Him as they hound Him to death is almost unbelievable. He submits to all without a murmur or reply.

LESSON VI. — Sowing and Reaping, Gal. vi, 1-10. Golden Text, Gal. vi, 7: "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." We are seeing the meekness of Jesus as He suffered in our stead, and nothing is more becoming in us than lowliness and meekness and long suffering (Eph. iv, 2). If we are crucified with Christ we must ever reckon ourselves dead unto self and sin and alive unto God.

LESSON VII.—Jesus and Peter, Mark xiv, 53, 54, 66-72. Golden Text, I Cor. x, 12, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." When a true disciple allows the devil to work in him and speak through him it is a great victory for the adversary and dishonor to Christ, but the unfailing and unchanging love of such a Saviour, who loves His own to the end in spite of all their failures, is an exceeding great comfort.

LESSON VIII.—Jesus and Pilate, Matt. xxvii, 11-26. Golden Text, Matt. xxvii, 22, "Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do, then, with Jesus, who is called Christ?" Betrayed by one who professed to be His, denied by one who was really and truly His, condemned to death by the religious rulers, who thought that they were God's chosen ones, and now handed over for execution by the state which testified to His innocence.

LESSON IX.—Christ Crucified, Mark xv, 22-37. Golden Text, Isa. liii, 4, "Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows. Yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted." Numbered with transgressors, put to death as the vilest criminal, jeered and mocked as He hung upon the cross, forsaken by His Father, the agony of it all we cannot begin to imagine, but we can hold fast the words "His own self bare my sins."

LESSON X. — Christ Risen From the Dead, Mark xvi, 1-8; Matt. xxviii, 11-15. Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 5, 6: "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen." Alive forevermore and having all power, seated at the right hand of God, our Great High Priest, waiting for the time to restore all things of which the prophets have spoken.

LESSON XI.—The Great Commission, Matt. xxviii, 16-20; Luke xxiv, 44-49. Golden Text, Matt. xxviii, 20, "Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world." As Adam was not complete without Eve, so the last Adam waits for His Eve, the church, now being gathered from all nations by the preaching of the gospel in the power of the Holy Spirit, which was never intended to win the world to Christ in this age, but, like Eliezar, obtain a bride for the only Son.

LESSON XII. — The Ascension, Luke xxiv, 50-53; Acts i, 1-11. Golden Text, Acts i, 9, "He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight." He will come again, this same Jesus, and His body, the church, will ascend to meet Him in the air and be forever with Him (I Thess. iv, 16-18).

VEGETABLE DOLLS

They Make Jolly Favors For Halloween Dinners or Parties.

Vegetable dolls are very funny and not hard to make. They may be used as favors for choosing partners at a dance or supper. Make two of a kind for this reason.

Choose small apples, turnips, potatoes, carrots, beets, parsnips and radishes. Dress them with bright bits of ribbon and colored or white paper napkins. Apples with clove eyes make bright looking, rosy cheeked lassies peeping out from sunbonnets or broad brimmed hats trimmed with chicken feathers.

Carrots and parsnips make fine dunces and clowns if tall fools' caps and stiff collars are supplied. Beets and radishes may be made very amusing, as a bow of ribbon may be tied to the long, hairy root, making it look like a pigtail.

Various expressions may be obtained by inking and using cloves for eyes. It is not necessary to make bodies, and if a long cape effect of paper is left the dolls will sit up well.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES FORCE VON HINDENBURG TO COVER

Northern Poland is Now Free From Invaders and Slav Armies Are Pressing so Hard on Lon Hindenburg's Left Flank as to Ruin His Operations to the South---Attempt to Cut Line Fails.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The end of Gen. von Hindenburg's third invasion of Poland is in sight. A Russian force advanced on Sunday against the right wing of the Germans before Warsaw and attacked south of Rawa, pushing the enemy back upon Tomaschow and relieving the threatened danger to the lines of communication south of Warsaw.

The report of the successes of the Russians north of the Vistula continue to grow in detail and magnitude. With the exception of Nieuschwawa, on the border southeast of Thorn, all of northern Poland on the right bank of the Vistula is virtually free from invaders.

The strength of the Russians in this field threatens the army of Von Hindenburg to the south, and a retrograde movement may be forced soon there. The attempt of the Austrians to relieve Przemysl and central Galicia has failed.

A Petrograd despatch says that the German force which had been driven across the East Prussian frontier from Mlawa, Russian Poland, by the Russians is spreading out to the east and west, the object being to reinforce the troops in the vicinity of Thorn for protection against the Russian advance on the Thorn-Allenstein-Inslerburg Railroad, the main strategic line paralleling to the North Poland frontier.

Fighting also continues in Galicia, but here, as along the east Prussian frontier, the Russians seem to have been successful in holding back the Austro-German forces. The Germans, who are extremely strong along the whole eastern frontier, already are reported to be moving troops back to the west to meet the allies' offensive, but it is not considered likely that this movement will reach large proportions until some decisive result has been attained in the contest against the Russians.

The following statement from the General Staff of the Russian commander-in-chief was issued last night:—

"On Dec. 21, on the left bank of the Vistula river, between its lower course and the Pilica river, a number of fierce encounters took place. Among these the fighting on the left bank of the Pilica developed particularly.

"In general we repulsed all these attacks, inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy."

"We only evacuated some small positions and fell back toward the east in order to occupy more advantageous positions.

"Our counter-attacks resulted in the throwing into the river of the German troops who had crossed the Bzura near Sachaczew. These troops suffered heavy losses in killed. Also we captured nine quick-firing guns.

"The situation between the Pilica river and the upper Vistula river is without important change, except in the region of Skrzynno, where the Austrians, after having crossed the Nida river, were pushed back upon that stream by the bayonet attacks of our troops. Eighteen of their officers and about one thousand soldiers surrendered.

"It has been established that in the region of Przemysl on the 19th instant we took 17 officers and about 1,000 men.

"In Galicia our operations on the 21st instant continued to develop successfully. Near Ryglice an Austrian division made a sudden attack upon our troops, but eventually was thrown back in disorder, leaving behind 1,500 dead.

"Another Austrian division which attacked us with the bayonet at Godlowo also fled, leaving on the battlefield the bodies of 500 of their men. In this same region the Austrians, under pressure of our offensive, lost many prisoners, three guns and four mitrailleuses.

"The sorties attempted by the garrison of Przemysl, all were repulsed. The Austrians were thrown back toward their fortifications and suffered heavy losses."

OUR GREAT PROTECTION.

If any Canadian is disposed to think that the British fleet is not doing much let him think what would happen in all probability to Canadian seaports if the German fleet were not bottled up in the North Sea. How long would it be before Canadian seaports were shelled by German warships?

Think of the damage to transatlantic or transpacific shipping if a score or more German warships were running amuck, sinking British ships, killing British subjects, and shelling British towns.

In bottling the German navy in the North Sea the British navy has performed a remarkable feat. It has protected the whole Empire at the expense of Scarborough and other towns on the East Coast of Britain.

RUSSIA IS REINFORCED

She Will Have the Services of Half Million Calmucks

PETROGRAD, Dec. 23. — Half a million Calmucks, members of a nomadic, pastoral race, which has always been free from obligation to furnish any soldiers for the Russian army, have just been added to the Russian forces.

A deputation from the Calmucks recently arrived in Petrograd with a request that they be allowed to serve in the ranks during the present war, and offering to supply 500,000 mounted troops, if necessary. "Our tribes have volunteered practically en masse," declared the leader of the deputation.

The Emperor's reply grants them a military organization and privileges similar to those enjoyed by the Cossacks.

Senator Kirchhoffer Dead.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—The death occurred suddenly last night of Hon. Senator John Nesbitt Kirchhoffer at his residence, Somerset street. He had been ailing for several years, but was up and around in his usual health until a few days ago, when he took a turn for the worse. He was appointed to the Senate in 1891. He was chairman of the divorce committee.

PLOT WAS FRUSTRATED

Germans Sought to Blow up French Liner at Sea

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 23.—The arrest here last night of four Germans is believed by the police to have frustrated a plot to blow up the French steamship Rochambeau, due to leave New York next Sunday. The police confiscated a box containing seventy-five pounds of dynamite set by clockwork to explode six and one-half days from last night. Two of those arrested confessed, according to police officials, and said they understood the Rochambeau was to sail from New York Saturday. Shipping records, however, show that she left New York Dec. 13, and the police say the alleged conspirators miscalculated the date of her departure.

FRENCH PREMIER LAYS DOWN FRANCE'S POLICY IN WAR

WILL FIGHT TO THE FINISH

There Will be no Cessation of the Struggle Says Viviani Until Outraged Right Has Been Avenged, Her Own Provinces Regained, Belgium Restored to Health, and Independence and Europe Set Free.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Premier Vivian in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, aroused great enthusiasm by his reading of the Government's formal declarations that France would continue to fight until the lost Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine were restored and Belgium freed through the complete destruction of Prussian militarism.

There was a remarkable demonstration when the Premier declared that France and her allies were determined to carry on the war to the finish, whatever its length and severity.

"There is at this time but one single policy; a combat without mercy until such time as we accomplish the definite liberation of Europe, won by a victory ensuring peace," said the Premier.

After the reading of the declaration, bills were introduced by various Ministers. Then the sitting was concluded, having lasted scarcely more than hour.

Touching on the recent statement of the Minister of War, Premier Viviani said:—

"In spite of a war which is shaking and impoverishing the world, the French bank note is accepted at a premium; the discounting of commercial paper grows daily, and the totals obtained from indirect taxation increase. All this is a manifestation of the economic strength of a country which has adapted itself with facility to the difficulties arising from a deep-seated trouble and which declared before the entire world that the condition of its finances will permit it to contintue the war until that day when the necessary compensation shall be obtained."

"Against barbarity and despotism," he said in conclusion, "against the system of provocations and methodical menaces which Germany called peace; against the system of murder and pillage which Germany called war; against the insolent hegemony of a military caste which loosed the scourge, France the emancipator, France the venegewul, at the side of her allies, arose and advanced to the fray.

"That is the stake. It is greater than our lives. Let us continue, then, to have but one united soul, and tomorrow, in the peace of victory, we shall recall with pride these days of tragedy, for they will have made of us more valerous and better men."

BLOODTHIRSTY THREAT MADE

German Minister of Marine Would Torpedo Merchant Ships

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—A United Press correspondent sends by mail an interview with Admiral von Tirpitz, German Minister of Marine, under date of Dec. 2, in which he quotes Von Tirpitz as saying:—

"America has not raised her voice in protest, and has taken little or no action against Britain's closing of the North Sea to neutral shipping. What will America say if Germany declares submarine war on all enemy merchant ships?

GRAND ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ.

"Britain wants to starve us. . . We can play the same game. We can bottle her up and torpedo every British or allied ship which nears any harbor in Great Britain, thereby cutting off large food supplies.

"What would America say? Would not such action be only meting out to Britain what she is doing to us? Yes."

"You cannot expect that our fleet, which numbers one-third of the English fleet will come out and allow the English fleet to deliver its blow," be said.

ENVER PASHA MISSING.

Absence of War Minister Causes Talk in Constantinople.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 23. — A despatch to The Bourse Gazette from Bucharest declares that Enver Pasha, the Turkish Minister of War, has mystericusly disappeared.

He has not, according to the despatch, been seen in Constantinople for several days, and his absence at such a moment has caused contradictory reports. According to one, he has gone to the Caucasus to take command of the Turkish army there. Another is that he fears that he will be assassinated and that he has fled with his adjutant to a German warship.

There is no doubt that Enver Pasha has been subjected to constant pressure by the Germans, in pursuance of their plans in the war.

REVOLUTION IS COMING

Turkish Soldiers and Sailors Hate Their German Officers

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The Daily News has an interview with Sir Edwin Pears, a leader of the British Bar in Constantinople, who has just reached London after an imprisonment in Turkey. He said: "The Turkish situation is changing from week to week, but the principal fact is that those of us who know Turkey best are anticipating a revolution. According to general rumor, which I believe to be well founded, the Turkish soldiers and sailors do not get on well with the German officers.

"I have a strong conviction that the army is much more efficient than it was when the Bulgarians gained their great victories at Lulu, Burgas and elsewhere. What I can testify of my own knowledge is that all about Constantinople and in the interior drilling has been going on incessantly. At the same time it is beyond doubt that of the large army, which is usually said to consist of about 750,000 men, a considerable proportion is of very little value.

"Without venturing to predict what is likely to happen. I should not be going too far in saying that upon any serious defeat by the Russians in Asia Minor there would be a revolt in the Turkish army, which would be directed against the Germans themselves."

CHRISTMAS AT SALISBURY.

About Eight Thousand Obtain Leave —Good Program For Rest.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — Preparations for celebrating Christmas are in full swing among the Canadians at Salisbury. A good many will celebrate it by putting many miles between themselves and the camp, about eight thousand having obtained leave, varying from three to seven days, according to the distance they intend traveling. Several thousand more will get a day of leave.

A bright day with plenty of agreeable incidents is promised for those who remain. Church parade will be held; also celebration of Holy Communion. Evening smoking concerts have been arranged by the men themselves. Each battalion has been given carte blanche to provide a dinner according to its own taste and fancy. The second battalion has secured several barrels of Canadian apples.

Col. Williams has returned from the front, where he spent three weeks studying conditions. He was three days and nights in the trenches. On returning to Salisbury he delivered several lectures to officers at Bustard.

Austrians Killed In Wreck.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Nearly 1,000 Austrian soldiers are reported to have been killed or injured in a collision of two troop trains near Kalisz, Russian Poland, according to The Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent. The trains are reported to have met while going at full speed, owing to the accidental opening of a switch. Many of the cars were reduced to matchwood by the impact and their passengers crushed into a shapeless mass.

MAKE MANY ADVANCES

Gains Made in the Section Formerly Held by Crown Prince

LONDON, Dec. 23. — By vigorous artillery fire, supporting valorous infantry action in which the bayonet was used with deadly effect in a number of man-to-man encounters, the allies yesterday made appreciable gains in localities of great strategic importance wherever they were on the offensive, and in those positions where their troops were called upon to resist the German counter-attacks the Teuton hordes were rolled back, and the allies' line maintained intact.

A lull induced by exhaustion has come on the battlefield in Flanders, and in the extreme northeasterly corners of France, where the energy spent by the combatants during the past week was prodigal and not highly profitable, although the allies have advanced their lines at several points to positions better suited to offensive operations.

On the French right, however, important gains were made against the forces formerly commanded by the German Crown Prince.

The invaders were driven back from the right bank of the Meuse in the first important attack made by French forces on that side of the river.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:—

"To the northwest of Puisaleine, south of Noyon, the enemy executed last evening violent counter-attacks, which have all been repulsed.

"To the south of Varennes we gained a foothold last evening in Boureuilles, where our attacks continued to-day. These attacks appear to be making progress in Boureuilles and to the west of Vauquois.

"There is nothing else to report from the rest of the front."

The following official statement was given out in the afternoon:—

"Between the sea and the Lys during the day of Dec. 21 there was nothing other than artillery engagements. Between the Lys and the Aisne we repulsed a German attacking column which was endeavoring to come out from Carency, and we took several houses at Blangy.

"An attack of the enemy on Mometz and the nearby trenches made it impossible for our troops to make material progress in this direction. In the region of Lihons three attacks of the enemy were repulsed.

"We made slight gains to the east and to the west of Tracy-le-Val, and our artillery delivered an efficacious fire on the plateau of Nouvron.

"In the sectors of the Aisne and of Rheims there were artillery engagements.

"In Champagne and in the Argonne, in the vicinity of Souain, there have been violent bayonet engagements. We have not made perceptible progress in this region. We have occupied in the suburbs of Perthes-les-Hurlus three German positions, representing a front of entrenchments 1,500 yards long. To the northeast of Beausejour we have consolidated the positions occupied by us Dec. 20, and we have occupied all the trenches in the immediate vicinity of Mount Calvaire.

"In the forest of La Grurie our progress continues. At St. Hubert we repulsed an attack in the forest of Bolants. Here certain ground had been lost, but we recaptured two-thirds of it.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse there has been slight progress. In the suburbs of Vauquois, to the north of the forest of Malancourt, our troops were successful in making their way through a barbed-wire entanglement and in taking possession of certain trenches of the enemy, where they maintained themselves.

"On the right bank of the Meuse, in the forest of Consenvoye, we first lost and then reconquered after a lively fight the territory gained by us Dec. 20.

"From the heights of the Meuse to the Vosges there is nothing to report."

APPOINTMENT DENOUNCED.

English Protestant Alliance Opposes Envoy To Vatican.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — The appointment of Sir Henry Howard as a special Minister to the Vatican has called forth a protest from the Protestant Alliance, which denounces the appointment as illegal.

The Northern Church Council of the Church Association, at its December meeting in Manchester, has framed an appeal to the King's Ministers, in which it is stated that diplomatic relations between England and the Vatican have been discontinued for 400 years, and asking for the withdrawal of the present mission, which it says, "cannot but give grave offence to a vast majority of Englishmen."

The protest continues: "This council regrets that any action taken by his Majesty's Government at this time of crisis in the nation's history should place upon the country a controversy which will strain to the uttermost the endeavors of all loyal Englishmen to sink all differences and work together for the defence of the Empire."

MAYOR BULLER WILL STAND AGAIN

With regard to the interview of The Review reporter with Mr. Burnham in yesterday's issue respecting the present mayor and a second term The Review wishes to say that Mr. Burnham in no way intended to convey the idea that the government was opposed to Mr. Buller's filling the mayor's chair again. The idea which the Review intended to give the public was that if the government's officers were not needed in municipal service it would not be right for them to enter a contest merely for the fun of it. The terms and conditions now existing are however of an entirely different kind and it is just as desirable that councils and other public bodies should not be changed as it is that a general election for Ottawa should not take place. The times are exceptional and must be dealt with accordingly. Mayor Buller will stand again for his second term.

"CANADA'S RALLY TO THE EMPIRE"

The Greatest Event in Canada's History—the Talk of the Whole World

When the great Armada of thirty-one big ships, carrying thirty-two thousand of Canada's sons, and escorted by nineteen great British battleships, weighed anchor and sailed down the St. Lawrence, carrying our men to aid in fighting the Empire's battles, few people realized all it meant to Canada. It has been the talk of the whole world. Statesmen and newspapers the world over commented on it and cried "Bravo, Canada." The Illustrated London News said the arrival was "an event unparalleled since William the Conqueror." It was truly a magnificent spectacle to see this great fleet setting sail, a sight never before seen on Canadian shores. News of the departure was censored and kept so secret that few indeed were on the scene to see the big ships weigh anchor on the Gaspe coast. This spectacle would have been lost to the people of Canada had not The Family Herald and Star of Montreal had their staff of photographers there to reproduce it. Their photos of the great flotilla are the best piece of photographic work in the history of the art. They secured a panoramic view showing miles and miles of the great troopships and battleships as they swung into line on the way to the Atlantic. In this picture The Family Herald and Weekly Star certainly possess a treasure. It will be the greatest Canadian Souvenir of the War. It is 13½ inches deep by 46 inches in length. It is reserved exclusively for Family Herald and Star subscribers, and all who become subscribers for 1915. The picture will be sent free to anyone sending one dollar and eighty-five cents for a year's subscription to The Family Herald and Weekly Star and Peterborough Review. The demand is already enormous, and every home in Canada will want it. It will be Canada's great memento, and years hence, when neighbors are gathered discussing the great war, this picture will point the story. It will have a priceless value. It is truly magnificent, and full of patriotic inspiration. Those desiring a copy, should order The Family Herald and Weekly Star and Peterborough Weekly Review at $1.85 for one year. LIFE ON BOARD THF BRITISH SUBMARINE

A Leatherhead schoolboy, A. R. Tucker, writing to his former schoolmaster, tells of life on a British destroyer in an interesting fashion:

Our duties since the war broke out have been to screen the grand fleet against submarine attacks. It really does apeal to anyone's sense of humor to think that those massive grey walls of England are dependent on those little black destroyers for protection. This morning, my boat, accompanied by two others, escorted the —— into harbor, where she will coal and complete with necessary stores, and once again put to sea. We look some weird creatures when we are at sea, as we wear big sea boots up to the knee, a long, thick coat with a hood to it that comes over the head, which is made out of a sort of material like blanket, only much thicker, woollen helmet scarves and mittens, and you need them all when you are steaming against the wind so often experienced in the North Sea, at a speed of 20 knots and often more, for these boats are built for 31 and all can do more.

All the time we are at sea, day and night, there is always one of the guns ready for action, with one of the crew closed up around her, and one torpedo tubes, too. It would be only a matter of a few seconds for the whole lot to be fully manned in case of sighting the enemy, as we are trained up to the scratch. The most astonishing thing in the navy is the discipline. You have all clases and creeds, and yet they blend together like a beautifully controlled machine.

The destroyer I am on is 263 feet long, 27 feet beam, has a speed of 31 knots, and is fitted with three of the latest patern 4-inch guns and two 21-in. torpedo tubes. The weight of a 4-in. projectile is 31 lbs., and of a 21-in. torpedo about a ton, and the head of it has 360 lbs. of wet guncotton in it, which is detonated to explode on anything that gives a resistance of 400 lbs. to the square inch. One of these torpedoes travels at a speed of 45 knots. Our boat has a crew of seven officers and seventy men, and burns oil entirely.

Coroner W. H. Woods, of Mount Brydges, has ordered an investigation into the death of Mrs James Kishako, an Indian woman who was found dead on the reserve near London.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Christmas time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB!

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself an Xmas present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

LAST XMAS MARKET SAW LITTLE CHANGE IN PRICES

Although of good proportions, today's market was not nearly so big as that of last Saturday. It was the last chance for market buyers to buy cheaply, and a large number who held back on Saturday were on hand today in anticipation of still lower prices. But there was little difference noticeable, and the majority of the offerings sold at about the same price. Fowl was the chief offering, and was in brisk demand. By eleven o'clock the buyers had begun to thin out, and not much stuff had to be carried away by those who brought it on.

Turkeys went at $2.00 and upward, that is any turkey that was of respectable dimensions and weight. Ducks went at 75c apiece, geese at $1.25, and chickens at $1.00 and $1.25 a pair.

No apples of any account were offered, while potatoes were conspicuous by their absence. Farmers seemed to have concentrated upon fowl, recognizing the Christmas demand.

Outside on the market square there was some lamb, beef and pork offered but not a great deal. Beef was 10 to 12 cents, pork 12 to 13 cents, and lamb 13 to 14 cents.

Buyers Sought Redress.

Sanitary Inspector Spence made the rounds of the market in company with a reporter. He took occasion to point out several turkeys that did not look particularly healthy. Last Saturday two buyers came to him with diseased turkeys and wanted to know how they could secure redress. Mr. Spence extracted the liver of one of the birds, and found it was of a tubercular character. The inspector claims that it would be a wise proceeding, and an aid to spotting diseased birds, if a bylaw were brought in making it compulsory for the livers of all birds offered for sale to be exposed. In that way a diseased bird could be immediately detected.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 22.—Trading on the wheat market today was much quieter than for some days recently and prices were easier. Cash demand was fair, but offerings are very light. A good demand for No. 2 C.W. oats and No. 3 barley was apparent, but offerings of these grades were also light. Export business was not quite so active in the early hours, but heavy sales were made later. Inspections, 342 cars, against 709 cars last year, and in sight today 200 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat continues good, there being orders in the market today for 500,000 bushels, but owing to the strength at American and Canadian centres exporters were not free sellers even at a further advance in bids of 9d per quarter, and in consequence only 200,000 bushels were sold.

There was more enquiry for Manitoba barley for export account than for some time past, and as prices are getting into line some business is expected in the near future.

The local market for coarse grains was quiet, but the feeling in oats is stronger and prices for Canadian western were ½c per bushel higher. In flour the feeling is very firm on account of the steady upward tendency of prices for the raw material.

There was more enquiry from foreign buyers for low grades, 30 shillings being bid for second clears. The local trade is quiet. Demand for millfeed continues quiet. In butter there is a better feeling with a little more activity in the market, but cheese is quiet and the demand for eggs is good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 22.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.26⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.22⅝ to $1.25⅝; No. 2 do., $1.19⅝ to $1.23⅝; December, $1.20⅛.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 61½c to 62c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 46½c to 47c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $6.20, first clears, $5.10; second clears, $4.20.

Bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Dec. 22.—Close—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.25⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.24⅛; No. 2 do., $1.21⅛; December, $1.23⅛.

HIS LIFE WAS CRUSHED OUT BY LOADED WAGON

Further Particulars of Fatality Near Hastings, in Which Philip Convey Met Death

Hastings, Dec. 23.—A deep gloom was cast over our village and surrounding district on Saturday last, when the sad news came over the wires that Mr. Philip Convey, a highly respected resident of Percy, had been accidentally killed on his way home from Hastings on Friday night, some four miles from town and within one mile of his home, where a loving wife and five children were awaiting his return. Mr. Convey had come in for a load of chop, and upon purchasing it, as well as other articles for his home, started on his return trip, quite early in the evening, although dark. For some reason, yet unknown, the horses which were a spirited team) took fright and started to run away. Mr. Convey was thrown out and the loaded wagon passed over his body, killing him almost instantly. A neighbor, Mr. Patrick Doherty, who was also returning to his home, soon came upon the scene, and was shocked to find the unfortunate man apparently dead. A phone message was hastily despatched to the village for medical assistance, but upon arrival, the doctor pronounced life extinct. Others soon gathered and a message was sent to his home to acquaint the family of the sad accident. Upon the arrival of the neighbors, bearing the lifeless form of the husband and father, just absent a few short hours, the scene was heart-rending beyond description. The funeral was held on Sunday morning to the R. C. Church at Warkworth where service was held after which the body was interred in the church cemetery.

Deceased was in his 65th year, and his family are comparatively young, the eldest being about seventeen years of age. The heartfelt sympathy of the whole community is extended to the bereaved ones.

News has been received from Mr. Bagnall who is now on active service in France, that he has been wounded, but is recovering, and hopes soon to be able to leave the hospital. Word like this, no doubt, causes the family a good deal of worry.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peters attended the funeral of Mrs. Peter's mother, in Peterboro, last week.

A number from here went to Peterboro on Saturday for Xmas purchasing.

The "Adjuster's Sale" is still in progress at Mr. McCarthy's store and delighted customers are everywhere to be seen.

British Reply To Attache.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — The British embassy yesterday issued the following statement:—

"The military attache of the German embassy has justified the killing of women and children by the imperial German navy at Scarborough and Whitby on the ground that these places were defended within the meaning of The Hague convention (1907).

"Even were they defended the convention prescribes 'a reasonable time for waiting' and due regard for sacred edifices and historic monuments.

"As a matter of fact Scarborough is a seaside resort and Whitby a fishing village. Both are absolutely undefended. Their bombardment took place without the slightest notice, and churches seem to have been specially singled out for attack."

Picton, Dec. 23.—The Picton O. H. A. intermediate team has elected the following officers: Hon. President, J. Redmond, Winnipeg; Hon. Vice-President, B. R. Hepburn, M.P.; Patrons, H. B. Bristol, T. Frith Fraser, W. J. Carter, G. M. Harrington, T. B. Allison, M. E. Knox, J. H. Porte, H. M. Moxon, H. U. Tobey, N. D. Gilbert, E. M. Young, Dr. Caine; President, T. O. Crandell; Vice-President, W. H. Nettleton; Secretary-Treasurer, A. M. Smith; Manager, C. B. Morgan. As there is plenty of material here for a fine team, the boys expect to make hockey boom this winter.

Atavism in Dogs.

Dogs, probably the earliest of domesticated animals, when transferred to a tropical country, such as central Africa, lose in a few generations most of the characteristics they have acquired in Europe, and revert more and more to the type of the jackal and the wolf. Then their ears, whatever their breed, tend to become pointed, their coats turn sandy or rufous and their bark becomes a howl. Some attempt has been made to show that this is the result of disease and resembles the effect of malaria on the human constitution. Yet the Egyptian dog of pharaonic times possessed, as is seen by the monuments, these very characteristics, and as he was certainly domesticated before the European animal it is probable that these are original features of the race.—New York Sun.

O'NEIL MAY SPLIT YANKS AND PLAY IN TWO LEAGUES

Owner of Canuck League Franchise in Pennsylvania City Has Problem on His Hands — Would Place Central League Team in Erie

ERIE, Dec. 23.—If baseball events in this neck of the woods assume the final shape they now indicate, George O'Neil, last year owner of the Erie baseball club, will be some magnate. He stands to own, in part at least, two ball clubs, Erie and Guelph.

Just how the situation will unravel remain to be seen. The prospects of Erie getting into the Central League seem bright, and the Canadian League announces that it will start the 1915 season, war or no war. In the same breath the Canadians give out that they have had all they want of Erie, that the franchise is to be transferred to Guelph.

Therein lies a particular problem for George O'Neil, for the Canadian League, and for Erie. It is the intention of the Candianas to play the games which would have been assigned to Erie next season, in Guelph and Berlin. That means it will be up to O'Neil to provide a club and run it, either alone or with assistance from those towns, until he can dispose of his holdings.

On the other hand, O'Neil is just as much tied up here. He has abundant faith in Erie as a baseball town and is willing to go the limit in protecting his holdings here, and to turn out a good team. In case Erie gets into the Central, O'Neil may be whole or part owner of the local club. Certain it is that the Erie exhibition company, owners of two years ago, are willing to meet O'Neil half way and help in every respect.

In appreciation of O'Neil's gameness in sticking to a bad thing here last season, it is understood the Canadian League likewise is endeavoring to make things easy for the Erie owner. So far as plans can now be made, with the situation in a rather unsettled state, it is intended to split last year's Erie team into two clubs, or parts of two clubs. Some of the men will go to the Canadian League team and some to the Erie Central team. In both instances, there will be players enough to form the basis of two good clubs.

So far as players are concerned, there apparently will be a good harvest. With the Federal League laying off the smal fry and attacking the majors, that much of a menace is disposed of. In adition, the larger minors and the majors are cutting their limit of players, and consequently will throw that many more back to the bushes. Such a condition ought to give smaller class leagues pretty good picking, and should Erie reach the Central League, no doubt a first-class club could be built around the players who are to be reserved.

President O'Connor received a letter from George O'Neil, in which the Erie owner made inquiries concerning the situation here, insofar as the Central League proposition is concerned. President O'Connor already has submitted his reply, with a request to O'Neil that he outline his plans, that local enthusiasts might assist in whatever way they can. While O'Neil has made no statement recently, it is believed that in the event of Erie obtaining a Central League franchise, he would hold his Canadian League obligations only long enough to sel out, and devote his entire attention to Erie and the Central League.

"James the First claimed the throne of England through his grandmother because he had no father."

"Monarchy is the state in which a man has but one wife."

"Joan of Arc was the wife of Noah."

"Julius Caesar had a cadaverous appetite, and before he died he ate two brutes."

"In the London parks the law of gravity is twelve miles an hour."

GOALER LEGROS FOR THE JUNIORS

Last Season's City League Netman out Last Night—Rose in Line

The Juniors held a lively workout last evening, and, contrary to other practices, two goal-custodians were out. They were Legros and McQuaid. The work of the former was very promising, and it appears as though he will do the guarding of the nets for the team this season. He won a little prominence when out with the Alerts in the City League last year, and if he goes as well this winter the fans will have no kick coming.

Rose Was Out.

"Lornie" Rose also put in an appearance for the first time, but the little forward player took things rather easy. He should prove a sensation this year, as he has speed to burn and can handle a stick well. Richardson, O'Connell, Smith, Jackson, Morrow, and Long were likewise on deck. Knapman was the only regular missing.

Old Boys Out.

Matthews, Stratton and Cavanah, three old boys, who are home for Christmas, were out with the boys, and right here it must be stated that "Gamey" Stratton is all the Toronto papers say he is. He carries a deadly right wing shot, and it is dubious if there is a right wing man in senior company who has anything on him. "Ormie" Cavanah is also improving.

The 800 residents of Pelee Island will probably be isolated from the mainland all winter, as the telephone and telegraph cables have broken, and cannot be repaired until the spring.

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE GAME TONIGHT between the Intermediates and Juniors will reveal the weak spots.

LINDSAY held their first workout last evening. The Scugog seven are looked upon as the crew to beat.

"SKID" JANES drifted into the city yesterday afternoon and will stay over for the Intermediate practice tonight.

GAOLER JUBB, who performed between the posts last season for Whitby is in Toronto and is to turn out with the Victorias.

"GAMEY" STRATTON made a few of the on-lookers sit up and take notice last night. The Varsity boy is a real hockey player.

JOE DWYER has said he will not turn out this season. The "brick top" idol of the fans all over the district should be urged to put in his appearance. Competition is the life of trade.

THE OPENING encounter between Bowmanville and Peterboro which was set for Tuesday, December 29, will be played on Monday, Dec. 28th. Picton performs at Belleville the same evening.

EDDIE LIVINGSTONE isn't long in the professional ranks but already he is causing trouble. He has Jack Brown, Alf Skinner and Wilbur Beatty into a little mix-up. The Toronto Star says:

Eddie Livingstone has about spilled the fat into the fire, for Jack Brown and Alf. Skinner, the local amateurs, and Wilbur Beatty, the Midland boy, by registering them with the N.H.A. Brown and Skinner both say that they are not going to turn professional. Brown wants to play with Toroto Rowing Club, and Skinner with the Riversides. The O.H.A. has threatened to expel any man who tries out with the professionals. Will Brown and Skinner get the axe? Both say that they were merely out with the professionals trying to get into shape.

Frank Gotch May Return to Game

Fans Believe His Trainer Has Offer up his Sleeve

Humboldt, Ia., Dec. 23. — Emil Klank, for several years Frank Gotch's trainer and chief adviser, is spending some time in this city visiting the champion wrestler. He declares that it is merely a visit, but those who know the habits of Klank believe that he has some choice offer up his sleeve to present to Gotch in hopes of coaxing him back for some more big money.

Gotch has done no real active wrestling for some time, though constantly keeping himself in physical shape.

Should Eat War Bread.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 23.—An official edict being distributed throughout Germany urges the necessity for economy in food, and gives the following instructions to housewives:

"Cook potatoes in their skins.

"Give animals no bread or corn, but save them the scraps.

"Respect your daily bread, then you will always have it no matter how long the war lasts.

"Eat war bread, known by the letter 'K.' It is as satisfactory and nourishing as other kinds."

The Greatest Happiness Comes to Ourselves

When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists not in costliness or variety, but in the feeling of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both the giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry, anxiety and doubt. When you give something TO WEAR, you exhibit good sense, good taste, and good judgment.

Let us suggest: UNDERWEAR, UMBRELLAS, NECK SCARFS, CRAVATS, PYJAMAS, JEWELRY, HOSIERY, SUSPENDERS, HANDKERCHIEFS, HOUSE COATS, GLOVES, MUFFLERS, SUITS, SWEATER COATS, SHIRTS, COLLARS, TIES, HATS, CAPS, OVERCOATS, Etc. In fact, everything carried by firstclass clothing and mens' furnishing stores.

Mr. Harry Smith who is with the second contingent at Ottawa is with his aunt the Misses Denne, for Christmas. Mr. Harold Smith of the R.M.C. is also in town.

Mr. Wesley Elliott, who has been in Alberta for several years engaged in agriculture, is spending Christmas the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Elliott, Aylmer street.

The Christmas season as usual, means a very great deal of work as well as pleasure to those who are trying to help others who may not be quite so fortunate. The King's Daughters prepared for ther annual distribution of good things on Tuesday afternoon when about 150 baskets were made ready.

One of the busiest spots in town during this week has been the store on George Street which was kindly loaned by Mr. George Morrow to the Business Girls' Club. This has been used as headquarters for collecting and arranging the toys, candies and oranges which have been distributed by the members to some of the little ones in town who might otherwise have been unavoidably passed over by Santa Claus. About 500 children were provided for and it is hoped that five hundred children will be happier on Christmas morning than they would have been without the efforts of the club. The members of the club would wish to take the opportunity of thanking all those who have been so kind and generous in their donations and also the local merchants who have so liberally assisted by putting their toys and good things within the means of the club.

J. P. Davis, aged 70, a resident of Bobcaygeon, was struck by a street car at Toronto and was removed to Grace Hospital. His injuries are not thought to be serious.

Reeve Dr. W. A. Sangster of Stouffville has announced that he will not be in the field for re-election next year.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY IS OBSERVED BY KEENE COUPLE

Keene, Dec. 23.—The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards was celebrated at their home last Friday evening. About 60 guests were with them to celebrate the event. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards received from six to eight o'clock after which supper was served, to which all did ample justice. The house was beautifully decorated with evergreens, white bells, cut flowers and white satin ribbon. Many beautiful and costly gifts were received by the bride and groom, the children presenting their mother with a watch and chain, and their father, a black watch guard mounted with gold, and a handsome chair. Mr. David Edwards read a very appropriate address to which his father feelingly responded. The bridesmaid (who is still living, Mrs. George Brown), was on her way to attend the event, when she received word of a brother's death, and was unable to attend. The evening was pleasantly spent in games ad music until the wee small hours when the guests repaired to their various homes wishing the happy couple many returns of the day.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — The statement made this afternoon by the official press bureau says: "An aeroplane of the enemy dropped a bomb while passing over Dover this morning. The missile fell in a garden and exploded, but no damage was done. The aeroplane was seen for only a few seconds. It left immediately, passing out over the sea. British aircraft went up, but did not see the enemy again. The weather was cloudy and foggy."

BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS OVERDRAFT OF $18,000

Itemized Account is Being Prepared for Submission to City Council

A BILL OF $4000

The Finance Committee met in a special session yesterday afternoon with the Board of Education, Utilities Commission and Bank of Montreal represented. The men present were Chairman Ald. Johnston, Mayor Buller, Aldermen Duncan, Green, Stratton, Langford, Dr. Morrison, V. Eastwood, W. Thompson, T. F. Matthews, W. H. Moore, R. W. Travers, E. H. D. Hall and City Treasurer Frank Adams.

The matter of the Utilities Commission having an overdraft of some $32,500, and the Board of Education having an overdraft of some $18,000, was given attention. The Utilities Commission have no power under existing legislation to raise money on improvements. The commission explained that they will be able to overcome the deficit immediately after the opening of the New Year. It is also understood that steps will be taken to have the legislation so amended as to permit of the issuing of debentures on improvements made by a utilities commission.

The board of education stated that they were preparing an itemized account to be submitted to the council and also that they would request the council to sell debentures covering the liability.

Chairman T. F. Matthews of the Utilities Commission, brought to the attention of the finance committee the fact that the commission had been billed for the $4000, interest and sinking fund, on the debentures amounting to $120,000 issued for the purpose of expropriating the Peterboro Light and Power Company. The commission claimed the city used the money till October 1st, and the city therefore should pay its share of the sinking fund and interest. The matter will be gone into thoroughly by the council.

Several accounts due the city, which City Treasurer F. Adams has not been able to collect, were referred to the city solicitor. Accounts of the Peterboro Light and Power Company were left in abeyance.

Chairman Ald. Johnston reported that an agreement between the city and the Home Guard had been drawn up in connection with the $300 grant. This agreement had been properly signed.

NEGLIGENCE BY POLICE?

In the Matter of the Payment of Fees for Pool Tables

NO COMMISSION ON SHORT TERM BONDS

Some pointed criticism of the police department was uttered last night at the council meeting by Alderman Duffus, arising out of the report of the Finance Committee which recommended that action be taken against Mike Pappas unless he takes out licenses immediately for thirteen billiard tables.

Alderman Duffus declared that there was negligence on the part of the department somewhere when Pappas was permitted to operate thirteen pool tables for two months without paying his license. It appears that there has been dickering over the matter of taking out these licenses for some time and that it has hung fire for two months. The report however was adopted.

Short Term Debentures.

Another matter that created a slight stir for a moment was brought up by Alderman McIntyre who wanted to know if the city treasurer received any commission for arranging the sale of the short term debentures. Why he asked was that he had seen a statement in the City Treasurer's office showing the debenture sales with a notation made of $800 commission upon it. He asked Alderman Johnston to explain. The latter said that there was nothing to explain as far as he was aware and that no commission was levied in any form for the sale of short term debentures. He was unable to say what the $800 commission was intended for. The remainder of the council agreed that there was none charged and the question dropped.

A motion was passed by the council that Mr. William Langford, Sr., be paid his fee of $12.50 for his services on the court of revision and that Mr. Finnie be paid for the year commencing March 1st. It appears that this money was not paid promptly when it should have been and has been due for some time. Confusion in the wording of the by-law governing the matter was thought to be partly responsible.

Bobs and Horseshoes

Unlike many soldiers, Lord Roberts was singularly unsuperstitious. He was always willing to sit down thirteen to table; he preferred travelling on a Friday; he married in May, and once, when setting out on a campaign, he deliberately broke a hand mirror in two in order that it might take up less room in his kit.

On the other hand, he had a decided weakness for horseshoes, and when a friend at Portrush sent him on St. Patrick's Day a horseshoe, together with a piece of shamrock, he wrote back: "The horseshoe will be kept by me as a souvenir, together with one I picked up the day I entered the Orange Free State and another I found at Paardeburg the evening before General Cronje and his force surrendered."

NOT SINCE A HUNDRED YEARS

NOT SINCE A HUNDRED YEARS has the world experienced a Christmas like the one of 1914. Review the past hundred years, and they are well stocked with wars, but not since the days of the great Napoleon has there been so much war, so many nations in the grip of a titanic struggle, so bound and chained to all that is generally held to be a contradiction of Christian principles and hostile to the spirit of Christmas. The various wars in which Britain was engaged, like the Crimean war, the Indian Mutiny, the expeditions in Egypt, China and Afghanistan, and the Boer wars, the wars of other natiosn, like the American Civil War, the Franco-Prussian war, the Chinese-Japanese war, the Russo-Japanese war, the Balkan wars, were each more or less great wars in themselves, but not to be compared to the present struggle, in cost, losses, or size and power of the armies and navies engaged. During the last Boer war, Canada had many soldiers who spent Christmas on the South African veldt, but the number of these was small to the men she has now under arms either in Canada or in Europe. In the great European struggle with Napoleon, Canada was a participant to the extent of beating back the much superior armies of the United States. During the years 1812-14 most of the breadwinners of what was then Canada had to fight for their homes. Christmas then was a time of anxiety, like the one tomrrow. There were bereaved families then who mourned at Christmastide, and, after the passage of a hundred years, this country, now so important as the granary of the empire, faces much the sam kind of a Christmas. Reviewing all these wars, is it at all remarkable that the world had an armed peace? New wars have brought out new nations and new wants, much progress has taken place under the aegis of armed peace, but war still survives as it has always been. While we all hope that Canada will come through this great dislocation triumphantly, as she did a hundred years ago, and, while we know that the anxiety throughout the land will dampen the merry greeting, at the same time, let us repeat what Socrates said long ago, that "He who has the fewest wants is nearest to the gods." While the wants of many must be unsatisfied this year, we wish all our readers as merry a Christmas as is consistent with a time when half the world is at war. This year it is more a time of self-denial and sacrifice than of merry-making and glad tidings.

PROMINENT RESIDENT OF EAST PETERBORO ANSWERS FINAL CALL

Francis Birdsall, one of the most widely known and prominent residents of East Peterborough, passed away early this morning after twelve o'clock at his home at Birdsall, on the shores of Rice Lake. He was in his seventy-sixth year and had been a resident of East Peterborough all his life. He died from the effects of a series of paralytic seizures, the last of which occurred on Monday.

The late Mr. Birdsall enjoyed a life of prominence and activity, and no more respected resident of the community lived. He was president of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society in 1866, and of the East Peterborough Farmers' Institute 25 years ago. He was reeve of Asphodel for a term, and a school board trustee for forty years. In politics he was a strong supporter of the Conservative party, being president of the East Peterborough Conservative Association and latterly one of its honorary presidents. The deceased was born in the township of Asphodel in 1838, and lived on the family homestead all his life.

Surviving him are his wife, one son, Colonel R. E. Birdsall, at home, and two grandchildren, Captain Everett Birdsall, now at Salisbury Plain, and Miss Ruth Birdsall, at home. One sister, Mrs. Huycke, resides in Cobourg.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon to Westwood cemetery.

LET NONE BE MISSED.

The officers in charge of the Salvation Army are desirous that no one be missed on Christmas Day. Dinner or toys can be supplied by telephoning 440 or leaving word at 515 King street.

BELGIANS HAVE FIRM HOLD AT YSER CANAL

Germans Are Much Depressed by Their Surroundings and Numbers Surrender

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 24.—Belgian troops yesterday succeeded in crossing the Yser canal near St. George's and established themselves firmly. This is considered a noteworthy advance. A Times' despatch from Belgium says German troops along the Yser are much depressed by their surroundings and numbers are surrendering. The Daily Express says, Germans have established an airship base near Zeebrugge for raids on the English coast.

THEATRE IS DAMAGED

Blaze Broke Out in Basement of Princess Moving Picture House

Less than one hour after the Princess motion picture theatre had been emptied last night, fire started in the basement, causing a great deal of damage by smoke and about $50 damage to the flooring and front part of the building inside. Hot ashes igniting a pile of firewood near the furnace, presumably, was the cause. The fire was discovered a few minutes after eleven o'clock and was extinguished by midnight. It was of a particularly stubborn character but was well handled by the fire department.

The stores of Wm. Lech and Sons and Trebilcocks adjoining the Princess theatre, north and north were threatened but no damage was caused by fire.

A telephone message was sent in to the fire hall by Mr. C. M Moncur, druggist, who first noticed smoke coming from Lech's store. An alarm was shortly after rung in. Immediately on receiving the telephone message however watchman Tennyson at the hall despatched the whole department to the scene. Two lines of hose were laid one in front and one at the rear of the building. It was not discovered immediately where the fire actually was located as the smoke was curling from the basement in Mr. Lech's establishment. However it was soon ascertained that the basement of the Princess theatre was really the place and the efforts of the firemen were concentrated there.

It was necessary to chop out parts of the flooring in order to get at the blaze which had crept in between the double flooring. There is only a small trap door leading down to the basement of the theatre. A pile of fire wood beside the furnace looked to have caught fire from hot ashes as the proprietor, it is said, before closing up for the night, was the last man to fix the furnace and empty the ashes. As far as could be ascertained actual damage by fire will be slight. Some of the joists and flooring suffered as several holes had to be chopped in. The furnace is located in the front portion of the basement. Great volumes of smoke filled the building however and entered Mr. Lech's store. Mr. Keith Lech informed the Review that they were affected by the smoke to an extent but they were unable to say anything definite until the arrival of the fire adjuster this evening.

Machine was Saved.

Luckily the moving picture machine in the theatre was saved and a quantity of films. When seen this morning by a reporter Mr. Clayton felt very keenly the blow to his business as the result of the fire especially at a time when they were anticipating a good patronage. The Princess theatre is owned by Stenson Brothers and is insured in the West-

57th BAND TO MEET SOLDIERS

Thirty-five Peterboro Soldiers Coming Home

The band of the 57th regiment was asked by Mayor Buller today to meet the G.T.R. 5.30 train this afternoon which is expected to bring up thirty-five Peterborough soldiers stationed at Kingston who are on active service. Mayor Buller received intimation that the boys would be in on that train and considered that a band escort would be most appropriate for such an occasion.

QUARTER SOLDIERS IN FAMOUS CRYSTAL PALACE

The Big Hall Will be Closed on New Year's Day Until After the War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 24.—After New Year's Day, the famous Crystal Palace will be closed to the public until the end of the war and the association football cup final next to the derby, as the most popular sporting event in England must next year, at least, be played elsewhere.

The glass exhibition hall will provide sleeping quarters for ten thousand soldiers, who will be in training for active service.

ALLIES CONTINUE TO TAKE TRENCHES

All Counter Attacks by the Enemy Around Pertsa Are Successfully Repulsed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 24. — The afternoon official communication says: "Along the front to the sea we are making progress by sapping operations in the dunes, and we have repulsed an attack in front of Lombaertzyde. At Seawartant to the southeast of the Yser, we occupied a group of houses and drove to the southern part of this village a counter-attack by the enemy. This was done in spite of a very spirited fire from German artillery.

"To the east and the south of Amiens there have been artillery exchanges. In the vicinity of Pertsa all counter-attacks of the enemy on the positions conquered by us on December 22nd were successfully repulsed. To the northwest of Mesnil-les-Hurlus we occupied German trenches for a distance of 400 yards and drove back counter-attacks.

"In the Argonne we took possession of a piece of ground in the forest of Lagrare, and in the vicinity of Bagattelle we repulsed a German attack."

SOME ALDERMEN HOSTILE TOWARDS GRANT FOR RINK

The Alderman Speaks

You see the pavements smooth and white,
All finished with a concrete kerb;
The pleasant lights on every street,
Which makes them now superb;
You see yon road so well it's grav-
evelled,
With scarce a rut to mar it,
I hate to praise myself, but still
—I done it.

East City Representatives Move Amendment That No Action be Taken

$100 IS GIVEN

Just to show that amicable feelings prevailed all round, a feed of oysters at Mayor Buller's expense, wound up the concluding council meeting of 1914 that was held last night. As is customary the mayor prior to adjournment extended his hearty thanks to all the aldermen for the invaluable assistance they had lent him during the year and wished them one and all a merry Christmas and a prosperous new year. He also hoped to see their faces back next year which in view of the fact that the mayor will be called upon to contest his seat pretty soon may be regarded as somewhat significant of his feelings about the coming elections.

Several matters were disposed of last evening, principal of which was the free skating rink proposition upon which some three-quarters of an hour was spent. Strange to say the feelings of some of the aldermen in the matter had changed respecting the wisdom or advisability of the proposal. Alderman Weir and McIntyre fought the idea tooth and nail metaphorically speaking and thought no action should be taken, bringing in an amendment to that effect to a motion moved by Alderman Green and Duffus that the sum of money to be expended upon a municipal rink be limited to $100. The motion itself was brought in after considerable haranguing and discussion as to whether the city should undertake the matter at all. The expense side of the issue was the greatest objection raised. Most of the aldermen felt that it would mean an outlay of $200 at the least before the winter was over. The original idea was not to have it cost more than $75 or $100.

Alderman Weir declared that every dollar spent upon such a rink would be spent foolishly. Alderman Johnston however was strong for the rink. He felt that children wanted some place where they could skate without a charge and if they went on the canal there was scarcely a year passed without a drowning fatality being recorded.

A Substantial Rink.

His Worship agreed with this stand. Alderman Weir protested however. He thought that the mayor apparently was not a good judge of child nature when he said that children would come to a ten by ten rink when they had the canal. This brought the mayor's retort that it wouldn't be a tPJfikf?v a$howMH would be no ten by ten rink.

"This is not going to be no pane of glass rink," replied the mayor.

One alderman proffered the suggestion that the expense of operating a municipal rink could be reduced by having one of the street commissioners look after it. It had been pointed out that the Fire, Water and Light Committee would supply water for flooding. To this Alderman McIntyre said that our city commissioners were all high salaried men and if they had not enough to do but look after a rink is was time they were discharged. He intended to oppose the rink anyway. The city was begging now, without additional expense being incurred, the way things had been run. He moved in amendment to the motion that no action be taken, but he and his seconder, Alderman Weir, were swamped, everyone else voting for the rink at an expense to be limited to $100. That ended the question temporarily.

INTERFERENCE COST HIM $2

Spectator at Blaze Refused to Move out of Fire Line

It doesn't pay to interfere with the firemen in the course of their duty when a fire is in progress. A young man found this out to his sorrow in police court this morning, when he was fined $2 and costs for refusing to get outside the fire lines when the Princess Theatre was burning last night. Sergt. Kidd ordered him to stand back a couple of times, but he refused, telling the officer he was a ratepayer and couldn't be touched. However, he made some insulting remarks to the officer which related to his nationality, besides calling him a very unenviable name.

Before Magistrate Dumble today he said that all he wanted was to help the firemen. If he said anything to them, it was because he lost his head in the excitement.

Under the circumstances, his Worship was inclined to be lenient, changing his decision of a $5 fine to $2, a thing which very rarely happens in police court when Magistrate Dumble presides.

Another man was acting in a disorderly manner on Simcoe street yesterday. In assessing him $2 and costs today, his Worship inquired today if he had that much money to deprive his wife and children of using. "Lots of children go without boots and shoes because their fathers gizzle whisky," remarked his Worship.

A gray-bearded old man was arraigned for assault upon a shoemaker, who has been kind to the old man, giving him free lodge and board. He was intoxicated at the time. He got one month in jail with hard labor.

"Put him breaking stones or bucking wood," said the magistrate.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1914

THE PROBLEM FACING PETERBOROUGH'S POWER PLANTS.

WE HAVE DESCRIBED in some detail the three principal formations of ice—surface, frazil and anchor brands. Of these, frazil and anchor ice are the two kinds that cause trouble to Peterborough's power plants. Difficulty in operating a power plant may be caused by either kind or both. The trouble with frazil ice is that a very slight difference or lowering of temperature causes it to stick to the bars These bars are long, heavy rods, usually of iron, placed two or three inches apart, between which the water flows to the water wheels that operate the generators. If the frazil ice comes down the fore bay (the name of channel leading to the bars) in any quantity, and sticks or freezes to the bars, the water passage will become completely clogged, so that no water will go to the wheels. Or, if there is a layer of surface ice over the intake, the frazil may stick to it and completely clog the channel, although this condition hardly ever occurs, except where there is a very fast current and a long stretch of rapids or open water above the power house.

A slight rise in the temperature, that may be caused by the sun, or a falling or change in the wind, will prevent the frazil from sticking, in which case it will pass through the power house without any difficulty. Anchor ice acts in much the same way. It cuts off the flow of water in the stream bed. It becomes loosened either by its specific gravity or by the sun's rays, is carried down stream, and clogs the bars or the wheels or the channel in some way. However, when it is floating, conditions are improving.

This ice that clogs the intake for power houses is just as bad for many intakes of water plants.

The problem, therefore, is to prevent the clogging of the intake, whether it be in channel, forebay, wheels, or at bars, by frazil or by anchor ice. That is the problem with which Peterborough has to deal. It is the problem the ratepayers have to consider when the question of building an auxiliary steam plant is placed before them.

In answer to this problem, the "Canadian Engineer" for November has a valuable article, partly based on Professor Barnes' treatise and part of which follows. We will follow this up by articles giving the testimony of other authorities.

One of the best methods, however, of avoiding frazil and anchor ice troubles, is by obtaining a pond of sufficient size and depth in the immediate vicinity and above the intake of the plant, which will readily freeze over. The ice sheet obtained will, to a great extent, eliminate any troubles with frazil or anchor ice.

If the entrance to the power plant is a channel restricted in size, the ice sheet will be a hindrance, rather than a benefit, if there is open water above. In such a case, it is much better to be without a sheet of ice, and instead make provision for handling the accumulation of frazil and anchor ice in the head works. There have been many attemps made to deal with this problem, but it generally degenerates into a brute force combat. In many plants, provision is made for passing masses of frazil ice through the wheels by raising the racks in sections; currents are then induced to pass across the face of the racks, so that the floating ice, etc., may be carried off.

The great trouble with frazil ice is due to its freezing on the racks and the wheels, finally stopping the supply of water. With regard to the racks, this has been usually due, in a large measure, to the fact that the upper ends of the bars composing them have been left protruding above the water for two or three feet, exposed to the very cold air. In such a position these bars become chilled to the bottom, and even when only cooled to two or three one-thousandths of a degree below freezing point, it is sufficient to cause the frazil ice to adhere to the bars and commence the clogging process. This trouble may be eliminated to a great extent by making the upper part of the rack of wood, and keeping the metal bars entirely submerged, thus preventing the conduction of heat from bars to the atmosphere, and the consequent cooling below freezing point. Besides this method of submerging the metal of the racks, schemes have been brought forward for heating them, such as using hollow bars through which steam may be driven. In many plants, instead of this, the head works are housed and heated, not only to provide a good working room for the men fighting the ice, but also to prevent the subcooling of the racks. One of the most successful schemes has been that employed by one of the plants in Ottawa. There, the tops of the bars are encased with sheeting, steam pipes being also enclosed. By this means, ice troubles have been prevented to a great extent. The use of a live steam jet in the wheel case and guide vanes to prevent the freezing or clogging of the wheel entrance has been quite successful in several plants.

BOURASSA'S LOCAL APOLOGIST.

OUR EVENING contemporary has made a weak-kneed attempt to defend Henri Bourassa, the one French-Canadian who has taken a leading part in advocating a disloyal policy. At the very time when French-Canadian regiments are being recruited in the Province of Quebec, he says Canada should take no part in the war, should aid neither Britain nor France, let the Empire go to smash, or to anything else that the Germans and Bourassa may consign it. The Examiner commends Bourassa for the courage of his convictions, and says it was not British fair play to refuse him a hearing in Ottawa recently. As well commend a criminal for the courage of his conviction that he is entitled to a share of any one's property when he has the boldness to take it. As well commend the anarchist for the courage of his convictions when he assassinates a king or a president; as well commend an enemy for his courage in defeating and killing the protectors of our homes and liberties. There is very slight difference between any and all of these gradations and Henri Bourassa. While he is not an active enemy, he comes as near being so as it is possible. He has not taken up arms against us, but he wages war by using his influence against the policy of Canada and against the cause of the Allies in this war. While he may favour France, he refuses assistance, a position that might mean all the difference between victory and ruin. That is what the Examiner holds up to the people of this locality as deserving of praise!

A MATTER OF LAW.

THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH from an exchange is of interest to all municipalities interested in public utilities:

> "In order to make clear the meaning of the Public Utilities Act, it is stated that the city of Berlin will present a memorial to the Legislature, asking for an amendment in regard to the disposition of the surplus revenue derived by the operation of public utilities This action is the culmination of a long-standing controversy between the commissioners and the city council, the latter contending that the Act does not provide for the expenditure of the commission's surplus in making extensions to plant, but rather, any surplus should be applied to a reduction of civic taxation. In a court action, Mr. Justice Middleton recently handed down a decision favouring the commission. When the city appealed the case, the Appellate Court's decision was withheld, but Chief Justice Sir William Meredith intimated that the Public Utilities Act was vague and indefinable, and recommended application to the Legislature to define the act more clearly. The principle involved is of interest to all municipalities that have adopted public ownership of utilities."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IN REGARD to a recent editorial in the Review commenting on the judgment given in England, which referred to Canadian Capital Investments, Limited, we are informed that Toronto Saturday Night did, a short time ago, devote attention to this company and its land holdings near Regina. The Toronto newspaper characterized the subdivisions Belgravia and Mayfair as swindles, and was threatened with a $50,000 libel suit, which was never pressed.

WHEN anyone talks about bean diseases, it is not clear whether the reference is to garden plants or human heads—very probably a hair tonic.

An Upward Turn.

(Current Opinion.)

Indications are abundant that war has done its worst, so far as the business conditions of the United States are concerned, and that business is now entering a period of increased prosperity. The present improvement is principally in those lines of goods which are remanded by the warring nations as supplies. During the past two months the United States has made record-breaking shipments of wheat to England and France, and the United States manufacturers have received large orders, not only for arms and munitions of war, but for clothing, boots and shoes, underwear, canned meat, other canned foods, motor trucks and horses. Activity in these lines is, of course, bound to be followed by improvement in other lines. For example, certain manufacturers of boots and shoes are considering large increases in their plants and machinery to take advantage of this tremendous demand for army shoes. Such increases in equipment indicate orders for the iron and steel and machinery industries.

The Second French Regiment.

(Montreal La Presse.)

The decision taken by the Federal Government to authorize the organization of a new French regiment to form part of the Third Contingent is a double compliment to the organizers of the first movement, and to the volunteers who are now actually undergoing training in the barracks at St. Johns. The rural districts will now have an opportunity to represent by their patriotism their desire to be amongst the men of our race who will go to the old world to defend the Union Jack and the Tri-Color on the field of battle. Amongst the volunteers of the British Empire none are more ready to enroll themselves than the proud descendants of Dollard, of Frontenac, of Montcalm, and of all the other heroes of New France, ardent to enlist under the standards of liberty, justice and civilization to combat the atrocities of Teuton militarism which menaces the humanity of the whole world.

Not Deserving of Sympathy.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

It is not surprising that Germans should be disappointed at the attitude of the people of the United States towards the war. Germany has found little sympathy in the American republic. But they should not blame the American people, but Berlin officialdom instead. It is one of the many diplomatic blunders of Germany that the sympathy of the United States has been so irretrievably lost to her.

The Newsboy's Calling.

(Toronto Globe.)

Humor has come to the newsboys' brigade. The story of how George Wilson, a former Edinburgh news agent, won the Victoria Cross, should be an incentive to the lads who have to fight their way up through their own exertions. The newsboy's calling teaches patience, pluck, and pertinacity.

Representative Government.

(Edmonton Journal.)

It is not enough to turn rascals out every now and then. What is wanted is that they should be kept from getting in.

A SUGGESTION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Would it not be a graceful act for the mayor on behalf of the citizens to send a nicely worded cablegram of Christmas greetings to the officers and men from Peterboro at Salisbury Plain and Kingston.

Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

CURING ROUND SHOULDERS

The Best Plan, Naturally, is to Guard Against Getting Them.

Round shoulders mean a narrow, contracted chest—faulty breathing, poor circulation, and frequent coughs and colds.

Not only are they foes to beauty, but to the health as well. What is more, if you make a habit of stooping you will get old before your time.

Perhaps you did not know that the unsightly double chin is often the result of the stooping habit, but it is. For if you constantly lean forward when reading and writing at table or desk the chin naturally is allowed to rest on the chest, the muscles of the neck become weakened, and a mass of flabby superfluous flesh under the chin is the result.

You must constantly watch yourself if you don't want to contract the round shoulder habit. Round shoulders are often seen on those women workers who follow sedentary occupations. The business girl should beware of stooping over her typewriter, her writing, or her account books when at work; the dressmaker and milliner should be careful not to bend too much over her sewing. Sitting, standing, walking, always remember to keep your shoulders well braced back.

Go in for deep breathing exercises, take long walks, go in for games too; all healthy exercise tends to broaden the chest and help you to an erect carriage.

It is good practice, too, to walk up and down the room for a few minutes every morning with shoulders well braced back and a book balanced on the top of your head.

In the days of our grandmothers girls were made to recline on a backboard for half an hour every day. People were sticklers for deportment in the old days—it's a pity that more vigilance is not exerted in this respect to-day. We would have fewer delicate and awkward, ungainly-looking girls and women if it were.

You will seldom see a singer with round shoulders. This is because vocal exercise tends to broaden the chest and keep the shoulders back. The singer is first taught to breathe correctly and deeply. You simply can't breathe properly when your shoulders are bent, so if you learn singing in the right way and practise it well you will keep your shoulders erect as a matter of course.

Don't form the habit of lolling about in easy chairs and sitting over the fire in the evenings when you come home from your work at the office, or when you have finished any work you may have to do about the house. You can sit in a comfortable chair without crumpling yourself up all in a bunch as so many girls do.

Remember that gracefulness counts for a good deal in the achievement of good looks, and the round shouldered girl can never be graceful.

A NESTOR OF CRITICISM

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

The woman's club of Medbury was divided into departments of art, science, music and other subjects, and for each department a night was set apart. One evening when the department of literature met for chat on literary subjects it was announced beforehand that Miss Emma Alden Hinckley, a celebrated litterateur, would be present. Miss Hinckley had not written very much herself, but her opinion on books was looked upon as final.

During the evening a girl of nineteen, sitting in a corner where she would run no risk of being run down by the intellectual autos that were flashing their lights hither and thither, seemed to take a juvenile pleasure in observing them.

"Nellie," said a lady, stepping up to her, "what are you doing in this corner? You should be making hay while the sun shines. I know you are scribbling, and there are persons here who can give you points that will doubtless help you. Come; I wish to introduce you to Miss Hinckley."

The girl looked as though she would rather miss the opportunity than leave her corner, but was, nevertheless, dragged out of it and presented to the lioness of the evening.

"This is Miss Ellen Acton," said the introducer. "She is beginning to scribble a little, and I am quite sure you can give her a few valuable points on how to proceed."

Miss Hinckley looked a bit frightened. She could be very decided with young authors in her office as editor in chief of the —— Magazine, but she didn't like to tackle one of them in a social way. However, she resigned herself to an ordeal.

"I should like to ask you one or two questions, Miss Hinckley," said Miss Acton, "after which I will not trespass on your good nature further. Do you think I'm old enough to write a novel? I'm nineteen."

"No, you are not. There has been but one successful novel ever written by a young girl."

"Have you read a novel recently published called 'An Unfortunate Blunder?'"

"I have skimmed it in order to make mention of it in our book notices."

"What do you think of it?"

"It is worthless."

"Thank you. I'll not trouble you any further."

Miss Acton slunk back to her corner giving place to several ladies who advanced to do honor to the literary light.

* * * * * * *

A reception is in progress at the Women's club of Medbury. It is given for the authoress of a novel which appeared a year ago and has slowly been making its way into public favor. It was published under an assumed name. There were many faults in its construction, but there was something in it that held the reader's attention and produced a peculiar effect. It was not written for any particular class. Persons of acknowledged literary taste approved and condemned it. It was read by both the old and the young. Those who liked it could not see why others did not like it. Those who condemned it said that those who approved it were devoid of literary taste.

When Miss Hinckley received an invitation to be present to do honor to the new literary light she threw the invitation into the wastebasket. Then she fished it out and noted the date. She was curious to see the authoress who had fooled persons of good literary taste with a worthless book. She would attend the reception.

When Miss Hinckley entered the club she saw a promiscuous gathering of men and women. She looked about for a group within which would be the lioness of the evening. Not seeing her, she applied to a member of the club to learn where she was.

"Oh, we can't do anything with her. It was intended that she should receive the guests with the reception committee, but she's gone into obscurity, and we can't get her out. I will be pleased to take you to her."

Miss Hinckley was led to the very corner from which a year before little Miss Acton had been dragged to be introduced to her, and there sat Miss Acton between two large women, whom she was using for screen purposes.

"Great heavens!" exclaimed Miss Hinckley.

At the same moment an old gentleman with fine white hair advanced to greet the young authoress.

"Mr. Barrows," said Miss Hinckley, "a year ago I told this young lady that she was too young to write a novel. She had already written one. I had criticised it unfavorably. I supposed I knew something about literary work."

"So did I, madam, twenty years ago, and I do know something about it for myself, but for no one else. This young lady in writing her story wrote to me, but not to you. At another time she may write to you and not to me. I used to criticise books on what I supposed was their merit. In my old age I realize that a book is like a bell. There can be no sound on an uninhabited island, for there is no ear there to hear. So with a book. Each intellect receives it for itself and not another."

"Oh, Mr. Barrows! You to say that, who in your day was considered a prince among critics!" exclaimed Miss Hinckley.

Miss Acton looked up at the old man like a child who had found a father.

No Tip For Him.

Tipping is at least an ancient custom. In the eighteenth century an Italian visitor to England remarked that "it is polite to dine with the nobility, where you pay the servants for ten times as much as you eat." And an Irish peer replied to the Duke of Ormonde's invitation to dine: "If your grace will give me a guinea to pay your servants, I will. I am too poor, else!" An American actor who once took an English house for the summer had a schedule of the tips his servants expected printed for the guidance of his American friends and put them on the bedroom mantelpieces. He had taken a particular dislike to a very British side whiskered butler he had taken over with the house, and the list, after enumerating the sums to be paid to the chauffeur, the housemaid, and so on, finished with, "The guy with the black whiskers you will meet in the front hall—not a cent."—Argonaut.

POKE FUN AT VON TIRPITZ.

"Battle of Bath Houses" Hasn't Raised German Spirits.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — Referring to the recent bombardment of Scarborough, The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the reported interview with Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, sarcastically declares that "the battle of the bath houses evidently failed to raise the spirit of Von Tirpitz, who now pins his faith on submarine attacks against British commerce. This is a form of warfare of which we are singularly not afraid. Zeppelin might well exclaim like the old lady, when told to place her trust in Providence, 'Has it come to that?'"

The Evening Standard, commenting on the interview, says: "It is a very pretty plan, to attack merchant ships approaching England with supplies by submarines. How it will work remains to be seen."

Germans Again Attack Naulila.

LISBON, Dec. 24. — The Germans have again invaded Angola, Portuguese West Africa. The fact was announced by the Minister of Colonies, who said that the Germans had made a fresh attack on the military post at Naulila in the Province of Angola.

The commander of the post, Col. Rocadas, the Minister stated, had only a small force at his disposal and retreated in order to obtain reinforcements with which to drive out the Germans.

Further details of the affair, the Minister said, were lacking.

To Indemnify for Loss.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — The British Government has decided to indemnify from the imperial funds those who suffer bodily or property losses as a result of the recent German naval raid on the coast towns of Scarborough, Whitby, Hartlepool and West Hartlepool.

The Cupboard Was Bare.

The late Dr. Masters, who was formerly a missionary in Canton, China, afterward lived in Berkeley, Cal. His friend and fellow missionary, Dr. Boone, returning on furlough, was expected to arrive in San Francisco on a certain day. Dr. Masters crossed the bay to the city; he meant to meet Dr. Boone and his party, and, after spending the day in sightseeing, to take them to dinner at a well known restaurant.

The steamer, however, had reached port earlier than had been expected, and when Dr. Masters got to the dock, his friends had left. He made inquiries at the principal hotels, but could not find them. In order to notify his family in Berkeley of the necessary change in plans, Dr. Masters sent them a telegram. Here is the somewhat damaged message that Mrs. Masters finally read:

"Can't find the bones. Will come home to dinner."—Youth's Companion.

Turkish Reservists Called.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24. — A call for Turkish reservists now living here was issued yesterday by Theodore Proulx, acting Turkish consul-general.

"Owing to the general mobilization in the Ottoman Empire," he said, "calling to the colors Turkish subjects who belong to the 1890, 1891, 1892 and 1893 classes of the active army and those of the reserve and territorial army—classes of 1889-1890—must communicate with this office, so it may be learned upon what condition they may obtain an exoneration from the call to colors and secure their certificate of nationality."

Embargo on Rubber Hits U. S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—The rubber industry of the United States faces a grave situation as the result of the embargo placed by the British Government upon the exportation of crude rubber from Great Britain and her colonies, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Rubber Club of America, which includes the leading manufacturers and importers of rubber in the country. An advance in prices is imminent, unless the embargo is soon removed, the statement says, and idleness faces many of the 125,000 persons employed in the rubber industry.

Stouffville Winter Fair proved a big success, over 1,000 persons attending.

Worry.

Any worry you may foster
Shortens up your span of days,
Adds gray hairs to your collection,
Knocks you out in forty ways.
Worry, though a Trojan worker,
Never smooths out any kinks,
Never fixes up a matter,
Never any trouble sinks.

Worry is a poor companion
As you jog along the road,
Never does a bit of lifting,
Simply higher piles the load.
Never brings a ray of sunshine,
Never pauses for a smile
As it plods along in silence,
Making longer seem each mile.

Worry will not earn you money;
Worry will not bring you fame.
As a helper in your labors
It is blind and halt and lame.
It will never solve a problem;
It will never turn a trick;
It will only shove you downward
To the time of double quick.

Take the hint and cut out worry—
Can it—throw it in the lake.
Let it sink beneath the waters,
Where it never can awake.
You will live the longer for it,
And contentment you will find
If you do not have old worry
Always tagging on behind.

Queerest Street In the World.

Canton, in China, possesses the queerest street in the world in spite of the fact that in nearly all the big towns in this country there are some remarkable streets. The chief thing of interest attaching to this eccentric thoroughfare is the fact that it is roofed in with glazed paper fastened on bamboo and contains more signboards to the square foot than any other street in any other country. The next interesting fact about this Canton byway is that, though a business street, it contains no other shops than those of apothecaries and dentists' parlors, no professional men but doctors. It is a sick man's paradise and a physicians' Klondike. They call it Physic street.

EXPERIENCES IN DRESDEN RELATED BY MR. STAPLES

Nephew of His Tutor Was Shot When he Said he Would not go to War

(Special Correspondence.)

Millbrook, Dec. 23.—The Ladies' Aid of the Millbrook Presbyterian Church held a meeting, which Mr. Melville Staples addressed very eloquently. Reeve Doak took the chair and gave a short address, in which he introduced Mr. Staples to the audience. Mr. Staples sang "The Deathless Army" in an excellent voice. The audience was very pleased to hear Mr. and Mrs. Harry Johnston, former residents of Millbrook, in a duet, "I heard the voice of Jesus say." The choir sang "King and Country," which was much enjoyed. A vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston and Mr. Staples was moved by Mr. Given, and seconded by ex-Warden McNeill.

"I ned hardly say that I am very glad to be back in Millbrook again. It is good to be home again," said Mr. Staples. "Mr. Doak has taken me to Dresden and left me there. I want to say something of my going and coming. On the 16th of April I found myself on the quay at Ostend. The Belgians were standing on the dock, eager to help, that is if you had some gold to offer in return. I cannot describe to you what a beautiful and orderly country it was that day. I went on to Brussels and Cologne. The streets in Germany are clean and tidy.

"Finally I arrived in Dresden, and had quite a time to find a boarding-house, as I could not speak German and could not find anyone who spoke English. However, I found a place to lodge in for the night. The next day I found a permanent boarding-house, and then was hurried off to the police to report. They took my name, height, why I was there, how long I expected to stay, and what I was going to do when I left. All this was put down carefully in a book by the police.

"I liked the German people very much. I found them very kind and friendly. To understand the German people you must make a distinction into two classes, the military and civilian class. I do not like the military class, they are very stiff and seem to glory in their fine linen. When you see a regiment of soldiers coming, you would have to go the way they were, or be swept off your feet by the crowd folowing them. These people will come day after day to see the soldiers. They seem to worship their soldiers. Anyone who went along with the military outfit on was looked up to by the civilian class. If a soldier meets a soldier, even if he is across the street, he must salute.

"Now, then, to come down to the war itself. I happened to be down in the middle of Austria at the time of the murder of the Austrian duke. I saw the two sons of the murdered duke, and felt very sorry for the little chaps. Then there was a great deal of talking. At last came the ultimatum. The first serious indication of the war was on the 29th of July. The best way I can introduce you to how this trouble got to be known is to tell you about the cafes. There are some places where you can get a room, but not board, and you have to go to a cafe for your meals. On every hand there are cafes that are frequented at night. I have often been greatly puzzled as to how these young men live, as they stay at the cafe till three and four in the morning and then go to work at seven. For myself, I like more sleep. I will describe the night in one of these cafes—Friday night, July 31st. I went to the cafe about nine o'clock. There was an excellent orchestra in this cafe, and that evening the people were of a very different type to what usually came. They were business men. The orchestra played a march. After this was played these men created a row and demanded patriotic music. The manager came along and said he had been forbidden to play it, but in a little while they started to play patriotic songs. Then there came a reader, and he gave us a splendid patriotic reading, the last line of each verse being 'Young men, do not forget your fatherland.'

Precaution Against Spies.

"I must mention the precautions that were taken against spies. They had every large water supply guarded, every important street corner, every station was guarded as perfectly as possible. There were a great many men shot in the beginning of the trouble. I might mention one man I saw arrested. I was in the station about the fifth day of the war. There was a Frenchman came in carrying a stock, these seem very common in Germany. This man was caught and arrested. Everybody who came along had a whack at him, and the por man was pretty well pounded before he got into the police ambulance.

Cursed the English.

Now, Britain declared war. This came on Tuesday night from Berlin. They then gathered on the market and had a great demonstration. They cursed England for siding with the barbarians and French. Everybody that was there must cheer for the Kaiser, so I had to throw off my hat and cheer and sing patriotic songs with them. If I had not I might not have been here tonight. They then went down to the Embassy and knocked the door down and broke several of the English signs.

"Now, lest you think they were terribly one-sided I must say they were just as hard on their own men as on the English. The nephew of my tutor said he was not going into the war, and was shot right there. The soldiers had to fall right into line.

As for the development of the war, just a word about the news we got. We got no news until we heard of the fall of Namur. Then one fort after another was reported to have fallen. The people were coming up to a high state of excitement all the time. They got out a war map, and had pins with flags on them and kept moving these up until they had Paris nearly covered with flags, then it began to leak out that their troops had not gotten into Paris, and then they did not know what to do with the flags.

Now about our private life in the place. Everyone had to take out a passport. We were all ordered to go to the police on a certain day, also to have our photographs taken. They took our passport and gave us a paper, saying this is as good as a passport, but you are forbidden to go outside the city or near any important building. In other towns they were not so fortunate as we were in Dresden. I had no money, as I had put all I had in my ticket for home, but the boarding house woman trusted me until I got some. I had made a great many German friends and the war made no difference in them. This state of affairs went on until the first week in November. You will be interested in how I got away. I did not go near any of the officials, because I knew it was no use. I wanted to find out the man who could say whether I had to go or stay. Through a friend I had an intriduction to Dr. Hindell. I got on friendly terms with him, and he interceded for me and I got my pass, after some difficulty. I started out and got as far as Leipzig. When I got there a policeman jerked me off the train and accused me of being an English spy. They took me to police headquarters, where I was taken up to the criminal department. They took my pass and had an interview with the chief of police. They told me I had better go back to Dresden or I would be arrested further on, and gave me back my pass. I thought, as I had passed them alright I would go on further, so I went to Magdobors and Hanover. A man there looked at me with a smile and said, "Oh you are going away, why are you going?" He read my pass, and asked me if I had any baggage. I said yes, and he ordered me to bring it back. In one of my suitcases he came across a pair of boots I had put a lot of paper in the heel of one of them to keep a nail from hurting my heel. He took this out and examined it. I thought I was going to have to remain there, but after awhile I found myself on the train and soon I was in Holaind.

Hollanders are Kind.

"It was in Holland I got acquainted with the Belgians. You people here have very little conception how kind these Hollanders have been to the Belgians.

"From what I read in the papers I am convinced that they never thought England dare make war against them. They now blame the British for all. They used to say to me, "Why is it that Canada wanted to come into this?" You pay taxes to England. England makes all your laws. I told them we do not pay any tribute to England outside of international affairs. England does not make our laws. They cannot understand our freedom. They have a law for everything. These laws are made by the Kaiser.

"I believe the ordinary class do not want this to go on. They are not to blame, but the military class. We are contending against militarism. The man who gave me my pass said "I had the power to keep you here or let you go. I do not expect you to stand for Germany. You are patriotic as well as I am. When you do get out do something for humanity." It takes a big man to say that. Everyone of us can keep our minds open and be ready to put down these things.

RUSSIANS HOLD ADVANCE OF GERMANS STERNLY IN CHECK

Grand Duke Nicholas Throws Full Weight on Austrians Moving North In Galicia—Latter Movement Is Twofold, One Army Advancing on Cracow and Another Forcing Road Into Hungary

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Despatches today show that Russia has strengthened her centre before Warsaw and occupies strong positions along the Bzura that effectively bar the German advance on Warsaw. Meanwhile the Grand Duke has flung all his available forces like a thunderbolt at the advancing Austrians in Galicia, one army operating immediately northeast of Cracow and another crossing the Carpathians and pushing on by forced marches toward Budapest, the capital of Hungary. The Berlin and Vienna despatches confirm the report from Petrograd of the failure of the Germans to break through to Warsaw, and of the failure of the Austrians to raise the sieges of Cracow and Przemysl.

"So far as can be determined from the reports available, the situation has not altered materially on either front in the last twenty-four hours," says an announcement made last night by the official press bureau.

"Unquestionably," the announcement continues, "heavy fighting is proceeding along the Bzura, where one may fairly assume the Russian position to be extremely strong. Their front apparently rests on the Vistula, affording them protection from flank attacks, and in the rear are the fortresses of Novo Georgievsk and Warsaw.

"The fact that the Germans have succeeded in crossing the Baura and Rawka rivers at certain places should render their task easier.

"The official report from Vienna shows that comparative quiet prevails in middle and southern Poland. The Russians have assumed the aggressive in Galicia, although at the cost of heavy losses along the lower Dunajec.

"The Russians are still battling also in the region to the northward and eastward of Unghvar in the Carpathians. (Unghvar is on a branch of the River Latorcza, mentioned in Vienna despatches. It is about thirty-five miles southwest of the boundary line between Galicia and Hungary proper, which indicates that the Russians have succeeded in crossing the Carpathians in considerable force.)

A despatch from Petrograd says: "We are invading East Prussia from the east and from the south; we have driven the Germans back across the Bzura river; on the Pilica river we are repulsing the Germans attempting to advance from Lodz; Warsaw is safe; in Eastern Galicia and Southern Poland we have broken the Austro-German offensive."

Minister of War Soukhomlinoff summed up the military situation in these words yesterday. The man who has done more than any other two men in Russia to make the army an effective organization, made no flamboyant predictions that the German armies would be crushed immediately.

The Minister of War had just returned from the front and was in conference with Emperor Nicholas at Moscow. He declared that the stories of great victories given out in Berlin were "lies designed to counteract the discontent caused by the failure of the German war machine to accomplish any of the magnificent deeds expected of it."

"We have given ground at some points on the great battlefront," he said, "but we have gained more ground at other points which are of great importance. The German gains have been made at the expense of terrible loss of life on their part.

"The German commanders have sacrificed tens of thousands of men to gain only a temporary advantage. It is possible to foresee the result of their strategy and ours. We attack as soon as we find the enemy weakening. We sacrifice no soldiers needlessly. Our gains are permanent.

"It is the wish of the Emperor that the Russian soldiers shall not be used to feed the German cannon. His wish is echoed by our commanders, and as a result the Russian army has a strength unequalled in the world's history."

RELIEF FOR JERUSALEM

Btitain and Turkey Consent to United States Taking Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — Great Britain has consented to the proposal of Americans to send relief to Jerusalem. Turkey has approved it and word now is being awaited from France.

The armored cruiser Tennessee reported her arrival yesterday at Jaffa, but made no mention of rioting or ill-treatment of Jews by Turks.

The overflow of the Djile in Arabia has made 12,000 persons homeless and without food, according to a message to the State Department yesterday from Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople, who asked that the information be communicated to the Red Cross and the Jewish committee in New York. Mr. Morgenthau said local assistance in Bagdad was entirely insufficient to meet the demand which a starving, shelterless populace faces.

Sounded Like It.

"What is the matter with your husband, Mrs. Brown?"

"Him? He's got the plumbago just awful," replied Mrs. Brown.

"Ma?" said Johnnie, who heard the conversation.

"Yes, son?"

"Was it plum jam what ails Mr. Brown?"

THE ROYAL CHRISTMAS

The King and Queen Will Celebrate at Sandringham

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Six royal prize bullocks were slaughtered yesterday at the order of King George that his Majesty may be able to make his annual gift of beef to the tenants and employes of the Royal Sandringham estate.

The war has resulted in no change of the usual Christmas plans of the royal household. King and Queen with other members of the royal family left London for Sandringham yesterday afternoon, where Christmas will be celebrated in the usual way.

In addition to the gift of beef to the employes and tenants of the royal estate, there will be presents from Queen Mary and the Queen-mother Alexandra. For the aged men there will be woollen jackets and scarfs from Queen Alexandra, and for the women warm shawls and flannel petticoats from Queen Mary.

CITIZENS OF THE EMPIRE.

Hon. George E. Perley, Sir William Van Horne and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy will start next year by becoming citizens of the British Empire.

On January first there comes into effect in every part of the Empire a law providing for Empire-wide naturalization. Under its provisions an alien who becomes a British subject in one part of the Empire becomes a British subject in every part of the Empire.

The three distinguished Canadians of American birth are taking advantage of the new law. Their applications are in, and they are first on the list.

TWO MORE V. C'S

LONDON, Dec. 24. — Victoria Crosses have been awarded to Second Lieut. James Leach and Sergt. John Hogan of the Second Battalion of the Manchester Regiment for "conspicuous bravery near Festubert on October 29, when, after their trench had been taken by Germans, and after two attempts to recapture it had failed, they voluntarily decided on the afternoon of the same day to recover the trench themselves, and working from traverse to traverse at close quarters, with great bravery, gradually succeeded in regaining possession of the trench. They killed eight of the enemy, wounded two and made sixteen prisoners."

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

The following is a copy of the Christmas letter, which is being sent out by the Salvation Army:—

Dear Friend,—

Again the season is at hand when it will be our pleasure to serenade you.

The past year has been a memorable one in the history of our Band it having visited the Great International Congress of the Salvation Army in London, England, together with a number of other cities in the Old Land, representing Canada in general and Peterborough in particular.

We distributed thousands of Souvenirs of the Electric City, which were arranged by Adjutant McElhiney and Band Secretary Hensley especially for this occasion, a copy of which we are sending you today with greetings.

The wreck of the Empress of Ireland and the loss of many of our bravest and best comrades, threw a very heavy burden upon us which we endeavored to rise to, though it interfered materially with our financial arrangements. This interference together with the general upkeep of the Band makes us to face a very heavy year financially, and having endeavoured to serve the city at every time as best we could, we come asking for your best financial aid. As you know the Bandsmen all give their services free and hope for your continued patronage this year.

With very many thanks for all past favours and wishing you God's choicest blessing for city and soul this Festive Season, we are,

Yours to serve,

J. W. McELHINEY,
Officer.

FRED W. BEER,
Band Master.

E. HENSLEY,
Band Secretary.

Should Eat Rye Bread.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 24. — (Via London.)—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin prints an appeal signed by leading German professors of political economy which urges Germans to live on vegetables and rye bread, leaving meat, white bread and delicacies for the sick and wounded.

"England wants to starve us, and we must therefore do everything possible to economize in the use of our food," the appeal says.

SUBMARINE FEAT UPSET THE TURKS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Delayed advices to the United States Government from Constantinople say that Turkish officials regarded the loss of the battleship Messudieh, which was blown up by a British submarine recently, as a severe loss. The feat caused consternation in the Turkish capital, because of the fear that more submarines would penetrate the Dardanelles in the future.

The Turkish officials, according to the same advices, have been much perturbed about spies. They claim that every time the Turkish fleet enters the Black Sea the Russians immediately are aware of the movement and send a stronger force to drive the Turkish ships back into port.

While driving home from market, James Elford, a market-gardener living near Mimico, was thrown from his sleigh and seriously injured. His horse took fright and upset the sleigh.

CAROLS AT THE FRONT

LONDON, Dec. 24.—A Times' correspondent in northern France wires: Let those who wish to form a true picture of the British soldiers' Christmas Day think of them as sitting in their trenches at the evening meal and shouting across to the Germans in their trenches: "Say, waiter, you've forgotten the soda."

There will be plum puddings in the trenches. If report speaks truly it is probable that the puddings will be eaten under fire—perhaps in intervals of fierce action.

In the hospitals, too, the same spirit prevails. I heard a number of wounded Belgian soldiers singing Christmas carols last night. Their voices were gay.

Indian Woman Was Murdered.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 24.—A post-mortem shows that foul play figured in the death of Mrs. James Kiseko, an Indian woman, whose body was found on the Muncey Reserve, west of here, early Monday morning. According to the autopsy the woman had been beaten severely about the head and body.

Coroner Dr. Woods of Mt. Brydges has arranged an inquest for Tuesday next, and High Constable Watterworth and Crown Attorney McKillop are working on the case.

Mouth of a Whale.

The whale rarely, if ever, swallows anything larger than a herring. Although the head is of enormous size, from one-quarter to one-third the length of the body, and the mouth fifteen to twenty feet long and six to eight feet wide, the opening of the gullet is not larger than a man's fist.

Sweet Oil.

"Gertie," said a mother to her five-year-old daughter, "here's a dime. Run down to the drug store and get me a bottle of sweet oil."

Gertie started down the street, but soon came running back to ask, "About how sweet do you want it, mamma?"—Chicago News.

COL. WILLIAMS IS WOUNDED

Had His Arm Broken by Splinter of Shrapnel

SALISBURY PLAIN, Dec. 24.—Lt.-Col. Victor Williams of Ottawa is back from the front, where he spent three weeks with the British and French armies, making a complete tour of the battle line. He is now lecturing to the Canadian officers by request of Gen. French. He was in the trenches three days, shot three Germans, and himself sustained a broken arm from a shrapnel splinter.

The Canadians are going across to France late in January.

Col. R. E. W. Turner, V.C., D.S.O., the officer commanding the Highland Brigade, was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Salisbury yesterday. His collarbone and some ribs were fractured. Colonels Jack Currie of Toronto and Burland of Montreal were riding with him. Currie was uninjured, but Burland was slightly hurt. The car turned turtle going forty miles an hour. The officers were returning to camp after taking a training course on the Isle of Wight.

Col. Mercer of Toronto, commanding the Ontario brigade, received the following from Admiral Jellicoe: "The officers and men of the grand British fleet wish our gallant comrades of the Canadian contingent every success. We know the magnificent spirit which brought them to England will lead them to victory."

TRIED TO TAKE PASTOR'S LIFE

Crank Assails Toronto Minister on Way to Meeting

SIX SHOTS FIRED

TORONTO, Dec. 24. — Riverdale was horrified last night when one of the most eminent and highly-respected ministers in the east end, Rev. J. McPherson Scott, of St. John's Presbyterian Church, was shot but not dangerously wounded, by Harry Asher, a converted Jew, and former member of the church.

Mr. Scott was descending the steps of his house at corner of Sparkhall and Broadview avenues, when he was suddenly confronted by Asher, who, pointing a revolver at the minister's breast, fired point blank without warning. The bullet struck a spectacle case in Mr. Scott's vest pocket over his heart, and as it was thus deflected Mr. Scott probably owes his life to this fortunate circumstance.

Seeing that he had not been successful, Asher continued to fire at the retreating figure of the minister until he emptied the contents of the revolver. Of the remaining shots, four went through his clothes and one lodged in his hip, bringing him down. The weakened minister succeeded in reaching his door and calling for assistance. Dr. Smith was called in, and spent some hours last night with the patient. While Mr. Scott was seriously wounded and lost much blood, it was a flesh wound, and was not regarded as dangerous. He will be taken to the General Hospital today and a search made for the bullet by means of the X-ray.

Meantime the would-be assassin took his position most coolly, and evidently with an eye to the inevitable. Asher quietly left the doorsteps of the minister's house and walked to the street, where he met two boys, Charles Davids and Leon Taylor. Handing the revolver over to the lads, he explained what had happened, and asked them to take him to a police station. The boys accompanied him as far as Gerrard street and Broadview avenue, where they met Constable Hough, who took charge of the one-time missionary and sent him to the Pape avenue police station, where he was charged with attempted murder.

The murderous attack by Asher goes back to an old relation between the two men in Jewish missionary work in the city. Asher, who was formerly a Jew, was for a time a member of Mr. Scott's church. He sought an opportunity to do home mission work in the city among the Jews. Mr. Scott being in charge of that work for the Presbyterian Church, and finding Asher's work unsatisfactory, had him quietly removed.

From Toronto, Asher went to Montreal, where he opened a mission in the foreign quarter of that city. After some time in Montreal he was forced to close the mission owing to his inability to obtain financial assistance. Asher claims that Mr. Scott wrote to Montreal making certain statements with which Asher was confronted when he sought money to carry on his work. Brooding over this, he returned to Toronto several days ago, evidently to take the life of Mr. Scott.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE LITTLE MAN WHO RINGS THE PEOPLE'S CHIMES

Johnny Butcher Has Held the Position of Bell-ringer at St. John's Church for Over Thirty Years and Has Rarely Been Absent From His Post

If our memory serves us right it was Sir Henry Irving who immortalized himself in "The Bells." But right here in Peterborough we have another man who bids fair to lift the crown of immortality from the late illustrious actor's head, and, though his fame is subject to limitations, it is solely due to an innate sense of modesty that he wears it with such becoming grace.

The object of this somewhat roundabout eulogy is no other than Mr. Johnny Butcher, sexton, skilled bell-ringer and chimer at St. John's Anglican Church. We venture to say right here that the average citizen is unaware that "Johnny," as he likes to be called, has been ringing bells for thirty-two years, and every one of the said years in Peterborough at St. John's Church.

Half a Century Here.

Half a century has passed since Mr. Butcher decided to sample Canadian life, and if you ask him if he is sorry for the decision he will answer "no," emphatically. The American civil war was being fought when he came to this country, a mere stripling of fourteen. He went to work on a farm with his brother near Lakefield, who now lives in Beaverton. The war was ended the same year that Mr. Butcher settled in Canada, but he easily remembers reading the glaring headlines in the newspapers. In the year 1883 he was engaged by the rector of St. John's Church to manipulate the solitary bell that hung in the belfry up till the installation of the splendid set of chimes, which occurred in June, 1911. From the day he took hold of the rope and commenced his work, Mr. Butcher has rarely been absent. Faithfulness seems to have been his watchword, and if the regular attendants of St. John's Church missed seeing their sexton and bell-ringer, the fact, to say the least, would not pass unnoticed or unremarked.

Is An Expert Chimer.

Mr. Butcher was easily master of the situation when he had but one bell to sound. But with the advent of the thirteen, that took place when the beautiful set of chimes was installed, "Johnny" first felt some apprehension regarding his ability to cope with the situation. But recognizing his worth and ability, Rev. Canon Davidson authorized him to repair to the town of Cobourg and study the chimes on a church in the lakeside town, and this he did. From the knowledge he gained, he was able upon his return to start in a modest manner upon bringing harmony from the local chimes. He contented himself first with chiming only, then gradually he mustered courage enough to attempt a simple hymn, and thus progressed, until he manipulates the full set now from Sunday to Sunday with a skill and dexterity that wins the admiration of all. No hymn that can be played upon the chimes is too difficult for him to try.

Not All Fun, Either.

As a muscle and strength developer Mr. Butcher finds that Sandow's physical culture course has nothing on his system. On Sunday his average time of exercise with the chimes is about one hour, and he finds that sufficient to keep him in good physical condition. On Sunday morning he is on the job at seven-thirty and eight-thirty, then at ten o'clock and then at eleven. The chimes are played again at three in the afternoon, and at six and six-forty-five in the evenings. Besides this, they are sounded when weddings are being solemnized and whenever any occasion of national, Dominion or local importance is going on.

Mr. Butcher is sixty-four years of age, but he is as spry and alert as a man ten years younger. He hails from Warminster, Wiltshire, only ten miles from where the Canadian soldiers are stationed in England right now.

London Council Ask Militia to Investigate the Case.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 24. — London City Council in special session last night, unanimously adopted a resolution submitted by a special committee which has been investigating the matter, finding General Manager H. J. Glaubitz of the Public Utilities Commission, "guilty of aiding Carl Becker, an alleged German reservist and an employe of the commission, to leave the city for Germany following the outbreak of hostilities."

The council further decided to ask the Militia Department to investigate the matter, and to ask the Public Utilities Commission to suspend or dismiss Glaubitz at once.

Glaubitz is of German birth, though now a naturalised Canadian. Becker is understood to be now fighting in the German army.

GERMAN APPETITES.

What They Demand of Starving Antwerp in the Way of Food.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph wires as follows from northern France:—

A detailed account of the exactions by the German authorities in Antwerp shows that the daily fine demanded is 14 tons of bread, 28 tons of potatoes, eight tons of fresh meat, three and one-half tons of preserved meat, the same quantity of smoked meat, two tons of cheese, 8,500 bottles of wine, 255,000 cigarettes, 85,000 cigars, 1,700 packets of tobacco and twenty tons of oats.

The forage shops have been forced to provide field glasses for the German officers gratis. Dentists are obliged to give their services and to supply artificial teeth and gold fillings without payment.

On Wednesday and Thursday last German and Austrian troops, composed of infantry, cavalry and artillery, which had been entrained at Schaerbeck in a lementable condition, passed through Brussels on their way back from the Yser. They had anything but the air of conquerors. They were sorely in need of everything. They looked harassed and worn out and went about their duties in absolute silence. In their tattered, mud-stained uniforms the troops give the impression of being absolutely demoralized. Only the officers retain their arrogantly disdainful manner.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

BOTH PETERBORO TEAMS SHOULD BE CONTENDERS

Intermediates Opposed the Juniors Last Evening and Fans Are Satisfied — Dwyer, Janes and Spratt Among the Candidates

Judging by the class the two Peterboro teams showed last night it is safe to bet that they will not be satisfied with merely district honors. Anxious fans were present to the extent of some four hundred and all agreed that the two local septettes will go the limit when the curtain is lifted. The Intermediates opposed the Juniors and the way those Juniors battled against the greater weight was wonderful. No exact score was kept but a score in such an encounter would hardly reveal the story of the play.

Legros stood between the irons for the Juniors and the style in which the boy kicked 'em out had the fans on their toes. Several times when the Intermediate forward line had broken through the defence Legros sailed out and blocked. If the former Alert player keeps up his work he'll prove a big sensation in the Junior series.

Long and Morrow had their first real opportunity to show their defensive ability and they did. Time after time the big fellows broke up combinations and Long further distinguished himself by rushing well. Morrow did not hit the gait he has shown on other occasions but they all have an off night. On the forward line the most prominent were Jackson and Knapman. Those boys did some grand backchecking all evening and "back-checking is half the battle." Smith the only other Junior out also went well. Richardson, O'Connell nor Rose were not present.

Two Netmen.

Joe Dwyer and Bert Janes were both out much to the delight of the railbirds as all are desirous of seeing both men appear and fight it out for the place. It was the first time out for both the men and it is hard to state who had the faster class.

Jack Pethick and Hunter formed the defence of the Intermediates. The former is suffering from an injured foot and did not go as well as expected. When the bad member is alright again the big brick top westerner should win favor with the fans for he has had abundance of hockey experience. Hunter contributed a few nice rushes and likewise checked well.

"Pete" Spratt was roving for the Intermediates and easily claimed distinction. The Lindsay boy is there with the same old speed and if he plays this winter he will be a big help to the Nelsonites. Park and Grover Halpin were the other two forward men on deck and of the two, Halpin was more in the limelight. Park was shoved over to a wing and could not be expected to go very well. Fred Kelly is ill and did not line-up.

ST. JOHN'S PRACTICE.

St. John's senior and junior hockey teams are requested to turn out at Parker's rink, Charlotte street, on Christmas morning at nine o'clock. Every member must be on hand, as the two teams will be selected after this practice.

CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE.

There will be a meeting of the Senior Church Hockey League tonight at 7.15 in the Y. M. C. A. parlors.

BOWMANVILLE HERE MONDAY

Intermediate Series Will be Opened by a Visit From the Lakeshore Team

Bowmanville will be here on Monday evening to open the intermediate series. How strong the lakeshore aggregation will be cannot be stated, but in former years they always presented strong opposition, so a good game is expected. With the prospects for a good year ahead of the teams, the fans are out ready to follow them, hence the belief that a big crowd will see the opener. There have been several aspirants for places on the team, and the line-up will not be known until after the practice Saturday night.

THE TRIGGER

An open shoot will be held on the Peteroro Gun Club grounds at the end of the C. G. E. car line tomorrow (Friday) morning at 9.30. Turkeys will be shot for. The club house will be comfortably heated. All shooters are invited to bring their shot guns and enjoy the sport. Ammunition will be sold on the grounds. C. Wood, Secretary.

Insects and Flowers.

Experiments on showy flowers like the poppy tend to show that insects are not always attracted to flowers by the brightly colored petals, but rather by the perception doubless by means of smell—that there is honey or pollen. In these experiments the unopened flower bud is inclosed in a gauze net so as to protect it from insects, and when it expands the petals are carefully removed without touching the remaining parts with the fingers (for bees avoid a flower if the smell of human fingers is left on it), and the petalless flowers receive practically as many insect visits as untouched flowers do.

Black-Headed Grosbeak.

The black-headed grosbeak of the west takes the place of the rosebreast in the east and, like it, is a fine songster. It feeds on cherries, apricots and other fruits and does some damage to green peas and beans, but it is so active a foe of certain horticultural pests that we can afford to overlook its faults. For each quart of fruit consumed it destroys in actual bulk more than one and a half quarts of black olive scales and one quart of flower beetles, besides a generous quantity of codling moth pupae and cankerworms.

LAJOIE GIVES COMPARISON OF BASEBALL AND BOXING

Nap. Lajoie recently attended a boxing match at Cleveland.

"Great stuff," said Larry. "Do you know the difference between baseball and boxing?"

"Never tried to figure it out," replied his companion.

"Well," said Larry, "in baseball we hit them with the bat, while in boxing they hit them with the glove. Then, when you get hit in baseball you're safe, while when you get hit in boxing, you're out."

Just For Fun.

"When are you going to be married, Ethel?"

"Haven't the least notion."

"Why, I heard you were engaged."

"Well, what of it?"

"Don't you expect to marry?"

"The idea!"

BOTH TEAMS WILL PRACTICE TONIGHT

The Juniors and Intermediates will be out for a short workout tonight, but tomorrow will be observed as a day of rest. On Saturday evening between 5.30 and 6.30 the Intermediates will have their final practice previous to the game on Monday night with Bowmanville.

"VICS" DEFEATED MIDLAND IN EXHIBITION BATTLE

Drury the Seventeen Year Old Boy From Northern Town Makes a Big Hit

Toronto, Dec. 24.—Although last night's game at the Arena between Victorias and Midland was only an exhibition affair, there was some rough work indulged in by a number of the players. However, nothing of a serious nature took place, and the "battles" only helped to enliven the game. Victorias won 17 to 8.

A seventeen-year-old youngster was the star of the evening. Drury, last season a member of the Midland O.H.A. junior team, displayed more speed than has been seen around here for some time. Of course he lacked condition, but the way he outskated the locals stamps him as a coming star. He does not possess much weight but is elusive and a hard man to stop. Time after time he took the puck from behind his own goal, evaded four or five of the locals, and then passed to his team mate in the centre. In Drury, the Midland team has a youngster who, with coaching will undoubtedly be a star in senior hockey.

Victorias made a runaway of the game in the first period, and it looked as if Midland would be overwhelmed. However, unlike most pre-season exhibition games, the second and third periods were productive of the best hockey. It was thought that Midland would tire badly on account of lack of practice, but the reverse was the case. They had as much of the play as the locals, but fell down badly in front of the goal.

Undoubtedly Victorias did not exert themselves after the first period. There is still a weak spot to fill, however, and that is goal. Scott and Primeau were both given a trial and the former showed the better form. Midland has the material for a good team, but there are several places which are not any too strong. The teams:—

Midland—Goal, Scott; right defence, Nichols; left defence, Armstrong; rover, Simpell (Drury); centre, Chase; right wing, Grant; left wing, McDonald.

Referee—J. B. McArthur.

FEDERATION LEASES COMMODIOUS HALL

The Protestant Benevolent Federation has leased from the Bradburn Estate the commodious hall and anterooms on George street, known as the old Assembly Hall, and which has a seating capacity of over one thousand. The building is now being renovated and will be ready for occupation at the beginning of the New Year.

WHITEHEAD TO COACH BELLEVILLE JUNIORS

Lawson Whitehead has been engaged to coach the Juniors and Intermediates this season. This announcement looks good. Whitehead, was one of the best referees in the O.H.A. last year, and is a great authority on hockey. He should no doubt get the best that is possible out of the material that is on hand.—Belleville Intelligencer.

The Greatest Happiness Comes to Ourselves
When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists not in costliness or variety, but in the feeling of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both the giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of Christmas is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry, anxiety and doubt. When you give something TO WEAR, you exhibit good sense, good taste, and good judgment.

Let us suggest: UNDERWEAR, UMBRELLAS, NECK SCARFS, CRAVATS, PYJAMAS, JEWELRY, HOSIERY, SUSPENDERS, HANDKERCHIEFS, HOUSE COATS, GLOVES, MUFFLERS, SUITS, SWEATER COATS, SHIRTS, COLLARS, TIES, HATS, CAPS, OVERCOATS, Etc. In fact, everything carried by firstclass clothing and mens' furnishing stores.

McCONNEL—SEABROOK.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. McConnell, Belmont, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, December 26th, when their eldest daughter, Olive, was united in marriage to Mr. Simon Seabrook, also of Belmont. The marriage took place at eleven o'clock a.m., the Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D., pastor of the Norwood Methodist Church, officiating.

At the appointed hour, to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal march, played by Miss Ila McConnell, sister of the bride, the groom entered the parlor and took his place under an arch of evergreens and white bells, and soon thereafter the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, proceeded to her position beside him, looking very pretty in her gown of cream satin trimmed with silk lace and pearls, and well arranged in cap effect with smilax and lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony and usual congratulations, the guests, about forty in number, sat down to a delightful repast.

The esteem in which the young couple are held was shown by the many beautiful and useful gifts which they received. The groom's favour to the bride was a gold watch and fob, and to the organist a gold bracelet.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on the afternoon train for Peterboro, Fraserville and Port Hope, followed by the good wishes of their friends. On their return they will reside in Belmont.

Looks to City For Damages

While returning from church Sunday night Mrs. Robert Graham of East City slipped upon the icy pavement at Brock and George Streets breaking her arm. Her husband was a deputation of one to wait on the council last night and ask that the city stand for damages to some extent. He was informed that it was probable something would be done for him in the matter, which was referred to the legal committee.

TEA AND PRESENTS AT ST. ALBAN'S MISSION

There was no happier spot in North Monaghan last night than St. Alban's mission room, where over thirty juvenile members of the Sunday school assembled to partake of a generous tea provided by the ladies of the mission, and to receive presents from a beautifully decorated Christmas tree at the hands of Santa Claus, efficiently personated by Mr. Arthur Jubb. The thanks of the missionary are tendered to Mrs. Klugan, Mrs. Birdsall, Miss Peck and the Primary Class of St. John's Sunday school for their kind donations.

GAINS ARE MAINTAINED

French Right Wing Still Advances in Southern Section

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The action between the armies in the west have been transferred to the end of the line away from Flanders. In the latter locality there is every indication that both troops are profiting from heavy fogs and other unfavorable meteorological conditions to obtain a much-needed rest after fighting themselves almost into a state of exhaustion.

Between the Meuse and the Argonne forest, however, the French have had almost universal success, meeting with only one check to their onward progress. The district where the Germans appear to have checked the French, if not to have won a victory over them, is in the vicinity of Boureuilles, where on Monday the French infantry and marine fusiliers attacked and gained a foothold in the first line of German trenches, following this up yesterday with further appreciable progress. To-day the War Office admits that the Germans have rallied here, and that the outcome seems to be "fairly serious."

In the fighting around the woods of Forgeu the French have used their bayonets with great success. By a series of dashing and impetuous charges they succeeded in penetrating the Germans at the salient east of Cuisy, and last night rested on their arms before these defences.

The greatest progress made by the French has been in the vicinity of Perthes-les-Hurlus, on the western edge of the Argonne forest, where violent fighting enabled them to gain 800 yards. The French infantry emerged from this conflict with fresh laurels for courage and resourcefulness, while the Germans, although beaten back, stood their ground until there was no hope of success, and gave back only a few yards at a time.

The following official communication was issued last evening:—

"The progress made through our attacks between the Meuse and the Forest of the Argonne have been almost entirely maintained. According to the latest news, our front in this region has reached the barbed wire entanglements of the enemy at the salient angle southwest of the wood of Forgeu (east of Cuisy), and lined the road leading to the forest of Boureuilles.

"There is no other notable incident to report."

The afternoon statement said:—

"Yesterday in Belgium we made slight progress between the sea and the highway from Nieuport to Westende as well as in the region between Steenstrawe and Bixschoote, where we occupied a forest, some houses and a redoubt. To the east of Bethune, working in conjunction with the British army, we re-captured the village of Givenchy-les La Bassee, which had been lost to us.

"In the region of Arras a heavy fog made it necessary for both the enemy and ourselves to lessen our activities.

"To the east of Amiens, on the Aisne, and in Champagne, there have been artillery engagements.

"In the region of Perthes-les-Hurlus, we carried, after a spirited cannonade and two assaults, the last section of the line which we occupied in part on Dec. 21.

"We made an average gain of 300 yards. In the last trench which came into our possession, we captured a section of machine guns, including the gun crews. A violent counter-attack was repulsed.

"We also made progress to the northeast of Beausejour, which further counter-attacks on the part of the enemy were without success.

"There has been a perceptible advance on the part of our troops in the forest of La Grurie against a front of trenches 400 yards wide and running not less than 250 yards deep. We blew up with mines two of these German lines of works and occupied the excavations.

"The fighting is going on in the vicinity of Boureuilles, with the outcome fairly serious. It would appear not to have been possible to retain entirely the positions acquired yesterday morning.

"There has been no incident from the heights of the Meuse to upper Alsace."

PUT OUT THE FLAG ON ALL HOLIDAYS

Also on Third of January, Set Apart for Intercession

By a decree shortly to be made public by His Worship Buller, sanctioned by the city council, citizens will be requested to demonstrate their loyalty and patriotism by flying the Union Jack on all statutory holidays during the war and also on January 3rd, 1915, which date has been set apart for divine intercession for the success of the British soldiers.

This means, that Canon Davidson who fathered the idea for promoting a wider use of the flag, will see something of his plans materialize. A communication from the flag committee presented to the council last evening resulted in the council deciding to make the request.

Offered Supply of Skates.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., generously offered to donate fifty pairs of skates for the use of the children attending the municipal rink provided the city contributes another fifty pair. THEATRICAL

Tom Marks is pleasing his patrons at the Grand in his own inimitable way and with his strong supporting company is presenting many excellent plays. His offering last night was "Molly Me Darlint," an Irish comedy in three acts, as fresh and sweet as the morning dew. Miss Arlie Marks appeared in the title role her winsome and lovable disposition at once attracted the attention of the audience and held them interestingly throughout the three acts. Mr. W. L. Phillips, as the English fop is a comedian of no mean repute and proved his ability by handling the part assigned to him with cleverness and ease.

The vaudeville between the acts pleases greatly and are among the best ever seen here. Byron and Nelson in their refined singing and dancing was a riot. Miss Nelson has a wonderful voice and was the recipient of many curtain calls. Miss Madeline Bean, the child wonder, in national dances, including the Highland fling, the sword dance, sailor's hornpipe, Spanish dance, etc., stands alone in her dancing specialty. W. L. Phillips in his English songs was exceptionally good and Miss Arlie Marks in her Irish songs received enthusiastic approval.

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

The annual Christmas tree of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department was held last evening, about one hundred and forty boys being present. A number of parents and friends were also in attendance.

The boys' department was beautifully decorated with evergreens, wreaths, bells and so forth, and the tree was crowded with colored lights kindly loaned by Grant & Thorpe. Boys' Secretary Galley presided, and the boys joined lustily and heartily in singing "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," after which Santa Claus, in the person of a well-known local dentist, distributed presents and oranges to all who were present. Many of the presents were contributed by friends of the Association, to whom the thanks of the Association are extended.

Quite a number of parents are placing Y. M. C. A. membership tickets in the stockings of their boys. This is one of the best presents for the boy, as it will last the year round and is good for over three hundred days of fun.

The Association would greatly appreciate the favor if all subscribers to the current expenses would remit during the coming week. Extraordinary circumstances will make it nesary to carry a considerable deficit into 1915. Any financial aid that can be rendered it by the friends of the Association will be greatly appreciated.

TRAGEDY ENACTED CHRISTMAS EVE

William O'Brien is Dead Following Scuffle With Edgar Grose Who is Charged With Murder

ACCUSED SURRENDERED TO POLICE

A brawl in a hotel, which occurred Christmas eve, resulted in the death of William O'Brien, 496 Park street, and Edgar Grose is locked up on a charge of murder, laid by the police. Grose fled after the fracas, and was brought back to the city by his brother, and surrendered last night at seven o'clock to the police. An inquest was held on the body of O'Brien at ten o'clock Christmas morning by Coroner Greer. The jury simply viewed the body and adjourned till eight o'clock Monday night. No marks of violence were discovered on the body sufficient to cause death.

Grose is the son of the late John Grose, 148 Rubidge street, and has been employed with Jones' livery for some time.

Between ten-thirty and eleven o'clock Thursday night the news circulated that a man had been killed in the White House. Grose was alleged to have been responsible, and rumor was rife the remainder of the evening that O'Brien had been killed by Grose. It appears that Grose entered the bar and there encountered O'Brien. As far as can be ascertained, there was considerable ill-feeling existing between the two young men of long standing, the two having had a fight several weeks ago. Grose's story is that he walked into the bar and O'Brien made a remark to him which he resented. A fight started. They clinched, but were soon separated. O'Brien was led into a room near the bar, where he collapsed almost immediately.

It was seen that he was very sick, and Dr. Galvin was 'phoned. O'Brien was dead, however, before the physician arrived. Dr. Galvin immediately notified Coroner Dr. Greer. The body was ordered to be taken to McFadden's undertaking rooms by the coroner.

Christmas morning the jury was empanelled, and viewed the body, but found nothing to indicate the cause of death. They were then dismissed to meet again Monday night, when evidence will be taken.

Told of O'Brien's Death.

Grose says that he was in a barber shop after the fracas, and was unaware that anything was wrong with O'Brien. He claims that a farmer whom he did not know dropped in a few minutes later and told him he had better get out, as he bad killed O'Brien.

He left the city, getting as far as Millbrook, on the G. T. R. The police had been notified however, and were keeping a sharp lookout around the city for him, watching the railway stations, as they expected that he would try and leave the city. His brother, however, found that he had left, and where he was, and went down as far as Millbrook and prevailed upon him to return and surrender himself. This the young man did, walking into the police station last evening at seven o'clock. He was extremely nervous, and seemed to feel the situation very keenly.

Bail Refused.

At ten o'clock this morning he was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble, where a charge of murder was read to him. He was not called upon to either plead or elect, as Prosecutor Hatton asked for one week's remand. It was granted. Mr. J. A. New, law clerk, representing Gordon and Widdifield, who will defend the prisoner, asked his Worship to fix bail. This was emphatically refused, although the fact that Grose had voluntarily surrendered himself was advanced by Mr. New as sufficient grounds for his request being granted. Mr. New stated that he would apply to the Judge for bail. His Worship stated, however, that he would not consider bail for a moment in a case of murder.

An Unfortunate Family.

The O'Brien family, of which the victim was a member, have had more than their share of misfortune and hard luck. This makes the third member who has met a tragic death. One little boy about two years old was killed by a railway train when the family lived in the south end of the city. Another son, Frank O'Brien, was killed in a railway accident in Hamilton several years ago.

The father and mother of the deceased are greatly distressed by the sudden blow.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Walked from Millbrook.

Detectives Meagher and Newhall drove to Millbrook yesterday, having received word that Grose had gone in that direction. The detectives, however, missed their man, as he had already started home, after deciding to give himself up. It is believed that Grose was driven to Millbrook by a man whom he overtook on the way. On his arrival at Millbrook station he told the operator that he had got into a scrap at Peterboro and that the other fellow had been taken to the hospital. The operator then informed him that the man was dead.

The detectives learned of his movements upon their arrival at Millbrook, and this morning left for Peterborough. Grose claimed that he walked all the way back from Millbrook, that he left there at ten o'clock and reached here at four.

Lowest temperature Christmas Day 18 degrees below zero; highest, 1 degree above zero; average for the day, about 10 degrees below zero. Lowest today (Saturday), 29 degrees below zero at 7 a.m.; at noon, 1 degree below. These are especially low temperature figures for so early in the winter, and yesterday was about as bitterly a cold Christmas Day as we have ever had.—W. P.

Toronto, Dec. 26.—Canada east of the Great Lakes was in the grip of a cold snap yesterday and last night. White River reports twenty-four below; Ottawa and Parry Sound, twenty-four; Quebec, twenty-two; Montreal and Kingston, sixteen; Toronto, eight; Halifax, twelve.

Still in the Fight

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Brantford, Dec. 26. — Word has been received here that Constable Blanchard, a reservist, now with the Coldstream Guards in France, reported killed during a bayonet attack on Germans has not even been wounded but is still fighting with his regiment.

HELD UP AT OVAL

While passing through Nicholls Oval en route from East City to his home on Water street late Wednesday night, Howard Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hall, Water street, was pounced upon by three men, and robbed of ten dollars. Young Hall made an effort to stay his three assailants off, and in the mix-up received a nasty gash in the left hand. There is no clue as to who the hold-up men were.

Firemen Caned Ald. G. W. Green

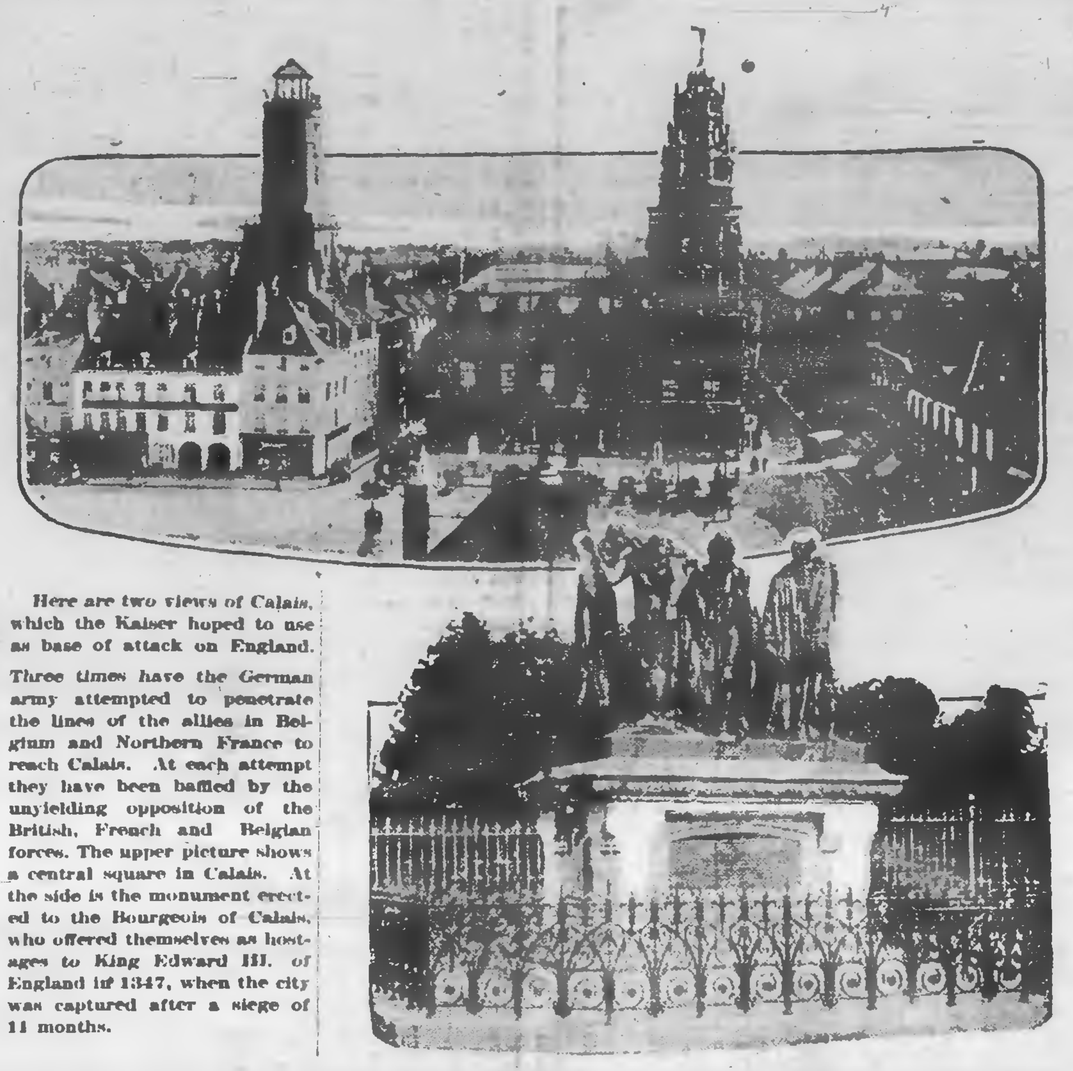
Ald. G. Walter Green was the victim yesterday morning of a cleverly-laid plot, the schemers being the members of the fire department. Mr. Green thought the call to the station to be a matter of business, and he was hardly prepared for the surprise which awaited him.

He was called to the Chief's office, where the men presented a silver-headed walking-stick, accompanied by an address.

Ald. Green has been a personal friend of the men at the hall, and has shown his friendship in a number of practical ways.

WORLD PEACE.

Sunday evening, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., will take for his subject World Peace, and its only Foundation.



Here are two views of Calais, which the Kaiser hoped to use as base of attack on England.

Three times have the German army attempted to penetrate the lines of the allies in Belgium and Northern France to reach Calais. At each attempt they have been baffled by the unyielding opposition of the British, French and Belgian forces. The upper picture shows a central square in Calais. At the side is the monument erected to the Bourgeois of Calais, who offered themselves as hostages to King Edward III. of England in 1347, when the city was captured after a siege of 11 months.

GOOD WORK IS ACCOMPLISHED BY PULMOTOR

Herbert Delahaye is Revived After Being Unconscious for Three Hours

INHALED GAS FUMES

Was Found in Precarious Condition in Gas Company's Store House

The pulmotor did good work yesterday afternoon, when Herbert Delehaye, an employe of the local gas company was brought back to consciousness after he had been prostrated for nearly three hours, in the storehouse of the company, which is located one door south of the Carey shoe store. He is now at his home and is progressing nicely.

Delehaye was called out to make repairs at a Water Street residence. While at work he inhaled gas fumes from the effects of which he collapsed on his return to the storehouse with his tools. This was about eleven o'clock.

The family became alarmed when he failed to return for the midday meal and after some waiting, the father set out to find him. He was unable to gain entrance to the storehouse. At the corner of Hunter and George Street, the father found Constable Lawrence and when the two returned to the storehouse, they broke in the door and found the young man on the floor. He was unconscious.

Dr. Carmichael was summoned and he sent for the pulmotor, which soon arrived. After about three quarters of an hour, Delehaye was revived and the fire chief bad him taken to his home, where further treatment was given.

The young man was in a very serious condition, due to the effects of the gas fumes and the bitter cold.

W. C. REAN, WRITES TO MAYOR BULLER

His Worship Mayor Buller received the following letter this morning from W. C. Rean, the representative of the Canadian Patriotic Fund who assisted at the local campaign:

Mayor W. Buller,
Peterboro, Ont.:

My Dear Sir—,

Just a line to thank you personally for the many kindnesses shown me while in your city recently. Our campaign was a success, and I believe it was largely due to your enthusiastic support given the request for the $10.000 from the city, which secured the grant, and consequently made the campaign a success.

I wish you a very merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Yours sincerely.
(Signed) W. C. REAN.

TRAVELLERS TO TAKE UP RATES AND SERVICE

Local Association to Hold Meeting Next Saturday Night

At a general meeting of the Peterboro Commercial Travellers' Association on Saturday last several of the members made complaints of the alleged unfair treatment being received by Peterboro from the railways and express companies, both in regard to rates and train service.

A resolution was adopted recommending the executive to co-operate with the board of trade and different manufacturers and shippers in an effort to get redress in these grievances.

This is a matter of great interest to the wholesale and manufacturing interests of the city, vitally affecting Peterboro's position as a distributing centre.

In persuance of the resolution, it has been decided to ask representatives of the different interests to meet in the rooms of the Travellers' Association on Saturday, January 23rd, at 8 o'clock p.m., to discuss ways and means of improving the conditions to the best interests of the city of Peterboro.

AIR RAID IS FRUSTRATED

British Aeroplane Engages and Routs Hostile Craft

LONDON, Dec. 26—The War Office issued the following last night:—

"A hostile aeroplane was sighted yesterday at 12.55. It was flying very high, from east to west, over Sheerness. British air craft went up in pursuit and engaged the enemy, who, after being hit three or four times, was driven off seaward."

The machine sighted over Sheerness was traveling at high speed from the east directly toward London. At the rate it was traveling it must have reached London in less than half an hour more.

Naval lookouts at Sheerness sighted the hostile flyer at a great height, and a British machine was sent up to intercept it.

A battle in the air followed, in which the British aviator hit the enemy's machine three or four times. After a sharp engagement the raider was driven eastward over the sea, with the British flyer in pursuit.

The British machine was not prepared for a long flight, and after making sure that the German was retreating and that there was no further danger of his completing his plans for a raid on the capital, the English aviator returned to Sheerness.

At first it was thought the German was intent upon dropping bombs on the naval arsenal at Sheerness or on some of the British warships anchored there. But the height at which he was flying and the speed he was making to the westward soon made it clear that he was making for an inland objective.

The Central News received a despatch from Southend-on-Sea shortly after the official announcement was made, stating that two foreign aeroplanes were sighted off Southend flying at a height of 6,000 feet, and at great speed. They were fired upon, the despatch states, but made off.

This unofficial report is believed to concern the German raider and his British pursuer, as Southend-on-Sea is just across the Thames from Sheerness.

ENTERTAINMENT AND XMAS TREE

The Temple was crowded to overflowing last night at the annual entertainment and Christmas tree. A delightful program was rendered by the children, after which Santa Claus arrived in an aeroplane, which caused much excitement among the young people. With the aid of a number of willing workers Santa distributed 450 presents.

GAVE FIFTY MEAL TICKETS.

Mr. R. J. Munro, proprietor of the Munro House, donated fifty meal tickets to Adjutant McElhiney for the distribution on Christmas Day.

FOE'S OFFENSIVE IS HURLED BACK

Counter Attack of Particular Severity Was Completely Checked Christmas Day

BATTERIES OF ENEMY, SILENCED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 26. — The afternoon official announcement says:

"There have been moderate artillery exchanges on the front from the sea to the Lys. Between the Lys and the Oise we have repulsed several counter-attacks of the enmy. Between the Oise and the Aisne during December 24th a very strong German attack was repulsed at Chivy, northeast of Soupier. In the region of Perthes our artillery silenced batteries of the enemy which were bombarding trenches recently occupied by our troops.

"Two strong German counter-attacks were repulsed during the night of December 24-25. Yesterday, December 25th, a further counter-attack of particular severity delivered on a front of 1,500 yards, with important bodies of troops, was completely checked. In upper Alsace, December 25th was marked by perceptible progress."

CRUSHING GERMAN VICTORY FAILED TO MATERIALIZE

NEW YOK, Dec. 26. — A cable to the Herald says German officers say, if compelled to evacuate Flanders they will concentrate a large army at Antwerp, allowing Ghent to go, and make a desperate defence of the Belgian seaport.

A Herald cable from Amsterdam says Berlin and every other town in Germany is plunged in gloom, which is a striking contrast to the hope freely circulated by the general staff that the nation would receive a Christmas gift in the shape of a crushing German victory in Flanders. People of Berlin are beginning to grow weary of the war and are eager for peace.

"The saddest Christmas for centuries," is the tenor of messages coming from the German capital.

VETERAN OF BOER WAR IS DEAD.

LONDON, Dec. 26. — General Sir Thomas Kelly-Kenny, who commanded the sixth division in the South African war of fifteen years ago, is dead.

FLEET TOOK PART IN BOMBARDMENT.

LONDON, Dec. 26. — The Daily Mail says Christmas was celebrated around Ypres and Nieuport by a lively bombardment in which the allied fleet participated and which had solid results.

RUSSIAN POSITION IS NOW SAFE.

LONDON, Dec. 26. — The Chronicle's Petrograd correspondent says the Russian position on the Bzura River is now safe, in consequence of the serious break made in the enemy's forces gathered on the banks of th Pilica and by the advance of the Russians on other fronts. Success of the Russians in East Prussia is confirmed by the flight of the inhabitants into the interior.

PLAINTIFF GETS AWARD OF $12

Trouble oven non-payment of wages resulted in a poilce court case today, when Willian Jhikas sought to recover $13 from Peter Manjorus, proprietor of the White House dairy lunch. Jhikas got judgment for $12 and costs. He claimed that he had been induced to come from Montreal to Peterboro on promise of employment in the defendant's dairy lunch, at a stipulated salary. However, he had been idle a week before the lunch room opened, and while he received his wages for the period he was employed, Manjorus, he claimed, refused to pay him for the week he was idle.

His Worship ruled that he was entitled to the money and awarded judgment in his favor.

SANTA CLAUS AT THE AUBURN MILLS

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. T. M. McFADDEN

A wide circle of friends will regret exceedingly, the death of Mrs. T. M. McFadden, which came with painful suddenness at eight o'clock this morning, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. George E. Hunter, of North Monaghan, where Mr. and Mrs. McFadden were spending the Christmas holiday.

The deceased was a daughter of the late F. H. Armstrong of Peterboro, and leaves to mourn her loss, her sorrowing husband, one son, Percy, of Hamilton, and one daughter, Mrs. Geo. E. Hunter. Three sisters are Mrs. R. W. McFadden, Milly, Sask., Mrs. Montgomery, Neithercut, and Mrs. Wm. Deyell, of Lindsay.

The late Mrs. McFadden was a member of George Street Methodist Church.

The funeral will be held from the family residence, 199 Rubidge St., Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

Cotton For Germany.

GALVESTON, Texas, Dec. 26.—The first cargo of cotton to Germany from the port of Galveston since the European war began, departed yesterday, valued by the shippers at $455,000, and the freight rate, the largest ever paid, being $2 per 100 pounds.

BAND SERENADING.

The Temple Band started to serenade, as usual, in four different brigades, yesterday, but the instruments froze so badly that it was impossible for them to cover all the ground. An attempt will be made before the New Year, however, to finish, but the boys are expecting their friends to respond to their appeal, which is a very worthy one.

ONTARIO NICKEL WENT TO GERMANY.

THE QUESTION regarding Ontario nickel is not yet settled to the satisfaction of the people of this country. The names and nationality of all the stockholders of the Canadian Copper Company and of the International Nickel Company should not be withheld from the public. It seems certain that Ontario nickel went to Germany, was moulded into German battleships and German guns that are now making every possible effort to destroy our trade, kill the defenders of the British Empire, sink the British fleet, and bring ruin and desolation not only to this fair land, but to most of the world. Ontario and France, it is now known, control the nickel of the world, and, if Germany had not been able to secure large supplies it is probable she would not have been able to build a powerful fleet, nor to plunge the world into war. The people of this Province should give the Ontario Government no rest until a clear statement is made public, showing that the nickel industry is under control. It is a terrible thing to think of—that laxity in control of our own nickel mines may mean the death of thousands of our strongest and best citizens who have gone to the war. Is Ontario to send its strong sons to graves in European battlefields just to permit a few rich men to pocket huge profits from the sale of Ontario nickel to the Germans? The Toronto World says on this subject:

> "The public would also like to have a look at an order-in-council passed by the Ontario Government on December 28th, 1906. We are told, on what seems to be good authority, that the Imperial Government, in 1905, upon the advice of the Admiralty, requested the Provincial Government to conserve the nickel deposits of Ontario, to keep them under government control, and to regulate the export of nickel so as effectively to contribute to national and imperial defence. The Whitney Government had just then come into power and the recommendation of the Admiralty was referred to Hon. Frank Cochrane, the newly appointed minister of lands, forests and mines. Hon. Mr. Cochrane, it is said, reported against any action being taken upon the ground that the Dominion Government was the one to deal with the matter. Upon his report, the order-in-council above referred to was passed, and, although we understand it is marked 'privileged,' we believe that Hon. Mr. Hearst would do well to make it public.
>
> After all, if Hon. Mr. Cochrane was right in his contention—and we do not say he was not—it is most fortunate that he is now in the Dominion Government. No doubt he will urge Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues to suspend any further export of nickel until the close of the war, but, in the meantime, the Government in Queen's Park should enforce the law, do whatever is required in the public interest, and, above all things, take the public into their confidence."

LOCAL HOCKEY.

THERE ARE good prospects for hockey in Peterborough this year. With league teams, city teams, church teams, school teams, Y.M.C.A. teams, there should be plenty of good competition in all classes. Hockey is a thorough Canadian game, is excellent exercise, and should be encouraged. There should be more facilities for practising it, such as free skating rinks for the boys and girls. A good deal of sickness is caused from the lack of exercise, often due to the lack of facilities for exercise. If this city is to develop good players and strong, healthy citizens, it should make every possible effort to provide means for the boys and girls to play hockey and to skate. Hockey, be it remembered, is not a man's or a boy's game alone. It is a game suitable to girls and women, and we have not doubt that a few teams of lady players of hockey would be a great stimulus to both players and spectators. If champion teams are to be had in Peterborough, it must be by utilizing the younger generation growing up.

GERMANY'S FINANCIAL EXIGENCY.

TO THE BRITISH RULE of "Business as usual," the London Stock Exchange is almost the sole important exception, the Toronto Mail and Empire says, editorially. There, when in ordinary times men "do congregate" and transact business of enormous daily magnitude, the doors remain closed. Very possibly the governors would be favourable to the reopening of them to a trade limited by emergency regulations like those to which business on the New York Stock Exchange is now subjected. But the Treasury Department considers it still inadvisable to give permission for the holding of daily sessions. It is not denied that the steadiness and confidence shown by British commercial interests generally might be found to be equally unyielding in financial circles were the Stock Exchange allowed to carry on a restricted business. With their customary self-control, the British people have settled down to the conditions of the war. Five months' experience has but adapted them to it, and certainly has not produced any feeling of discouragement among them. They are carrying on business in much the same stout-hearted and cheerful way the British soldiers are carrying on the war. There probably would be no giving way to panic were guarded trading allowed on the Exchange.

What makes the British Government slow to consent to the reopening of the Exchange, even in the most cautious way, is the apprehension that advantage would be taken to unload on the market securities in the hands of anxious German investors. No matter how carefully the Exchange authorities might investigate the sources from which selling orders came, it would be next to impossible to fortify the market against German dumping. Wits as sharp as those that are now being successfully employed in Germany's spy service would be enlisted in the business of transferring bonds and shares from German hands to those of British and American investors. The deluge of selling orders that came from Germany at the beginning of the war and caused the closing of the London and New York Stock Exchanges, by no means exhausted the German holdings of what are called "inter-nation" securities. However the prices might be bolstered by Exchange rules, the selling after regular hours and the curb selling could be carried on with very depressing effects upon prices. It is advisable to give no license for any other trading in securities at the present time. The opening of the New York Stock Exchange for a strictly controlled trade has been followed by a rise in the New York price of the German mark. This indicates that German investors have found means of getting bonds and shares placed with United States buyers, thereby affecting exchange on New York as if they had exported merchandise of equal value.

German investors have more need than ever to convert bonds and shares into cash. Their government is being rapidly driven to the necessity of consuming the capital of the country for the purpose of continuing the war. German productive operations are no longer a rich source of public revenue. Britain's command of the sea has sealed up German ports, has put the German merchant marine out of business, and has silenced the vast majority of German industrial establishments. Custom taxes, inland revenue imposts, income taxation can now yield little to the German treasury, which never before yawned for revenue as it yawns now. The huge loans the government has to raise for financing the war have been little better than forced loans. How are German investors to find the money wherewith to buy the bonds their government is pressing upon them if they can neither make their home properties yield nor turn their international securities into cash?

As to the urgency of the Berlin Government's financial needs, much is to be inferred from its putting of Belgium into the vise and forcing out of the representatives of nine Belgian provinces a vote for a war levy of $96,000,000. This act calls forth general indignation against German brutality and rapacity. It should excite no less comment because of its indication of the German Government's financial exigency. Britain must do nothing to help the enemy. The London Stock Exchange ought to remain closed for some time longer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

ONE THING remarkable that we noticed this year was the very few times we heard the greeting, Merry Christmas. A few days ago a farmer nearly stunned us when he thus greeted one of his friends within our hearing.

IN SPITE OF THE WAR, the trains were very late the day before Christmas, due to heavy trains from the number of people visiting over the holiday.

LEST anybody should get a wrong idea on the matter, it was generally understood during the Patriotic campaign that the money would not be distributed by the city relief officer.

WHEN A MAN has eaten the biggest and best Christmas dinner he can, he doesn't give a hang about Christmas.

NOW, THEN, those who have any money left after buying their presents, had better save it.

AFTER ALL, it is a good thing Christmas comes only once a year.

NOW, we know that the Germans didn't shoot Santa Claus.

Newspaper Cost.

(Vancouver Province.)

People who think newspapers coin money out of a war should read the recent annual statement of the London Times, admittedly one of the greatest newspapers in the English-speaking world. Last year the Times made a net profit of $95,000. This year, with three months of the war included, the profits have dropped to $30,000. The fact of the matter is that this war is costing the newspapers of Britain, Canada and the United States enormous sums. They are spending more money to obtain war news, and they are losing advertising. Next year most of them will show losses instead of profits.

Care in Christmas Decorations.

(St. Catharines Standard.)

In business houses electric wiring and gas lighting for special displays should be carefully inspected. Do not use paper or muslin shades close to the lamps, as they may take fire from the heat. Someone in authority should be given the responsibility that the fire hazard is not excessive and that every precaution is taken to protect life and property. Insurance may replace the property, but no insurance can replace loss of life.

Church Taxation.

(Calgary Herald.)

Tax exemption for the churches savors altogether too much of special privilege, which is something distasteful to a democratic people. While the churches may save something in cash by their continued freedom from taxation — taxation which practically all other institutions, philanthropic and otherwise, have to meet — it will be losing far more in influence.

Get the Right Kind of Men.

(Windsor Record.)

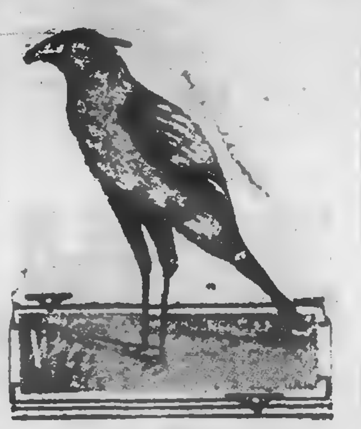
The success of any form of municipal government, whether it be by commission or something else, depends upon getting the right kind of men — honest men, efficient men, and trained men — to manage the affairs of the corporation.

PRESERVATION OF THE BIRDS

Canadian Expert's Views on What Has Been Done and Should be Done

Dr. C. W. Hewitt, Dominion Entomologist, of Ottawa, the man who did so much a few years ago in encouraging the "swat-the-fly" habit throughout Canada, delivered a very interesting lecture at Toronto, in which he urged the preservation of Canadian birds. From a humane as well as an economic point of view Dr. Hewitt directed strong words of criticism against a popular fashion in millinery, which is seriously ravaging the bird-life of this and other countries. The passing of legislation in Canada and in the United States against plumage sales has done much towards the preservation of bird life in America, but in England much was still to be desired in this work.

Dr. Hewitt quoted the following figures from sales on the London market, the great plumage centre of the world: December, 1912—plumage of 75,000 herons; February, 1913—5,142 crowned pigeons. 6,321 white terns; June, 1913—77,000 herons, 23,000 crowned pigeons, 25,000 humming-birds, 162,000 king-fishers; June, 1914—100,000 herons, 8,500 birds of paradise, 4,200 crested pigeons, 11,600 Japanese jays.



THE SECRETARY BIRD of South Africa which is so valuable as a destroyer of snakes that an exceptionally heavy fine attaches to the killing of one.

The lecturer had lantern slides to show the cruelty of the business of securing the plumage from such birds as the heron. The heron aigrettes were plucked often only after the mother bird had been killed, and the young brood was left unprotected and helpless.

Farmers were urged to cultivate birds, even to the extent of building nests for them and providing food and water to keep them in Canada during the winter time. The Dominion Government, through Dr. Hewitt, has made Rockcliffe Park and the Experimental Farm at Ottawa bird sanctuaries, and over five hundred nests have been placed there to attract different kinds of birds.

"All Canadian birds should be preserved," said Dr. Hewitt. "For instance, the crow is invaluable for the destruction of the armyworm. Insects and weeds also are destroyed by all the common Canadian birds, the twenty species of native sparrows, swifts and swallows."

WANT IRRIGATION

Alberta Farmers See That it Pays and Want More of It

Farmers in Southern Alberta circulated a petition to the Dominion Government asking that irrigation, which was such a success as carried out by the Canadian Pacific, be extended to their lands. Past seasons have demonstrated the advantages of irrigation, as irrigated farms have fine crops, whereas in districts where irrigation was not available the results have been sometimes disappointing. In their petition to the Minister of the Interior, the petitioners stated that to meet the construction they would bond their land and were willing to pay the capital cost of installing this system, with interest of four per cent., extending the time of repayment of the cost of construction over a period of forty years—the first payment of such a sum of indebtedness to become due four years after the completion of the canal, thus affording farmers an opportunity to be in a position to make the payments promptly by getting their farms in a proper condition for irrigating growing crops in a profitable manner.

Collapsible Window Guard

Numerous are the uses of a newly invented door and window guard that consists of upright pickets, connected by short parallel bars that permit it to be extended to various widths.

BIG DEMAND FOR HIDES BY AUTOMOBILE MAKERS

As an indication of the tremendous size of the automobile industry, it is interesting to note that in one year approximately 1,000,000 hides are used for upholstery purposes.

The ordinary roadster body requires little more than two complete hides, and the touring body about three hides. The average per car, therefore, is 2½ hides. The average area per hide is about 50 square feet, so that 50,000,000 square feet of leather is used.

From the time the hide is stripped from the animal, it requires from ten weeks to six months completely to prepare it for use, the time varying with the quality of the leather.

Each hide is split into four grades, which are known as hand buffs, machine buffs, deep buffs and splits. The hand buffs are the best, and are the part nearest the hair. This is the quality that is most used in the best motor car factories.

Kaiser Admired Boxing Parson

In "Memoirs of the Kaiser's Court," Miss Anne Topham provides some interesting sidelights on the life of the German Emperor. She relates how some years ago the Kaiser occupied Highcliffe Castle, near Bournemouth, and seemed to be charmed with the contrast which it presented to the Court where ceremony is carried to its utmost limit.

"The Emperor in his letters described in minutest detail everything that happened there—his delight in the pretty English children he met, his pleasure in the tea he gave to the boys and girls on the estate, at the clergyman who controlled the proceedings and knew how to box and play cricket. It is quite impossible to imagine a German pastor who can play cricket, and as for boxing——!"

Do Bees Hear?

The question of whether bees hear or whether they receive impressions in some other way, is a mooted one among scientists. Nothing has been found that corresponds to the ears in ordinary animals, although it has been supposed that the antennæ may serve the purpose in some way. We know this: Bees are very sensitive to a jar or any vibration; that loud shouting in a bee-cellar will bring back a response from the bees; but as sound always produces sound-waves in the air, the bees may get the effect of the sound by a concussion on their bodies or their antennæ.

The worse a funny man feels the funnier he is.

GEORGE CARUTHERS' LUCK

By EUNICE BLAKE

George Caruthers was one of those young men whose lives begin at the wrong end. George was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and it remained there till he was twenty-five years old. Then it gave place to a pewter one. What I mean by this is that he lived a life of luxury until he was a man, then was turned out to scratch for himself. To be still more explicit, he was the son of a rich man who died insolvent.

George tried every way he could think of to make a living and failed in all. One day while hunting for a job he stumbled into a detective office. When told what kind of place he had struck he turned to depart. A man sitting at a desk called to him.

"Young man, you are a gentleman down on your luck. I've got a job for such a person, and I'll pay you well while you're on it whether you succeed or not. A client of mine, Abner Kirke, is missing jewelry, or, rather, his wife and daughters are. I need some one to go into his family as a friend or, at any rate, an equal in refinement, who will keep his eyes and ears open with a view to spotting the thief. How would you like that job?"

George being college bred and there being no good schools in the vicinity of Mr. Kirke's place, it was decided that he should enter the family as tutor. Within a few days he was duly installed and was teaching the girls, especially the eldest one, Luella, to conjugate the Latin verb amo (I love).

This story being a detective and a love tale combined and there not being room for both, one will need to give way to the other. The love story being of the ordinary kind, I will give the principal part to the other. And yet but for sheer luck there would have been no detective story, for George fell so desperately in love with Luella and Luella fell so desperately in love with George that there was no place whatever in his mind for the work in hand.

It happened that repairs were in progress in the Kirke homestead, and, several of the bedrooms being torn up, George was put into a room adjoining the servants' quarters and on this account seldom used. On the very first night that he slept in this room just as he laid his head on the pillow he heard faintly a distant chime. He had been in the house long enough to know that there was no church with chime bells in the vicinity. He naturally, therefore, wondered. Not being especially sleepy, he lay awake trying to assign a cause for the sounds he had heard.

While thus engaged he heard the chimes again. This time he noted that there were eleven strokes, then an interval, followed by three. An idea occurred to him. Turning on an electric light near his bed, he looked at his watch. The time was 11 o'clock and forty-five minutes. Then he knew that he had heard a watch give eleven strokes for the hour and a stroke for each of the quarter hours.

Remaining awake, he waited for the next strokes, which would indicate midnight. He was sitting up in bed when his watch indicated 12, but heard nothing. It occurred to him that when he had heard the strokes the sounds had been led to his ear through substances. His bed was a divan with no headboard, and his pillow rested against the wall. When a quarter past 12 came round he had his ear pressed against the wall. He then heard the strokes far more distinctly than before. He was now satisfied that what he heard was a striking watch in the next room, and, his curiosity being allayed, he turned over and went to sleep.

The next day he received a check from the detective agency for services with a note asking what success he was having. In the afternoon he called at the office and reported that he had found no clew. While chatting with the chief he incidentally mentioned the striking watch. The listener looked at him curiously for a moment, then burst into a laugh.

"My dear boy," he said, "you'll never make a detective. You say your room is next the servants' quarters. Do servants have striking watches? I must send a man at once to follow up"—

George interrupted him to beg for a chance to finish the job, and the chief, being convinced that introducing any one else into the Kirke family would put the thief on his guard, consented that he should do so.

George went back to the house and at once entered the room next the one in which he had slept. A bureau stood against the wall, and the divan in which George had slept stood against that part of the wall that the bureau covered. In a bag suspended to the back of the bureau was a lot of jewelry, including a valuable striking watch. The butler was the thief.

Mr. Kirke was the only one in the family in the detective's secret. He knew very well from the first that George was not a regular member of the profession, and when the denouement came was much amused at the way the stolen property had been located. He had also observed what was going on between George and his daughter and, though he did not approve of the match, finally consented to it on condition that George take a subordinate position in his business and prove his metal.

George is now managing the concern.

Liszt's Rude Host.

High society has its crude personalities, if a story in one of the magazines is true. At a dinner given to the famous pianist, Liszt, his host, Count Ladolf, right in the middle of Liszt's most exquisite playing, said in a loud voice, "If any one wishes to have a game of whist there are tables in the other room." Liszt, says the narrator, stopped short, but as no one moved he consented amiably to remain at the piano. The amount of wine that had been consumed by Liszt's host on this occasion is not stated.

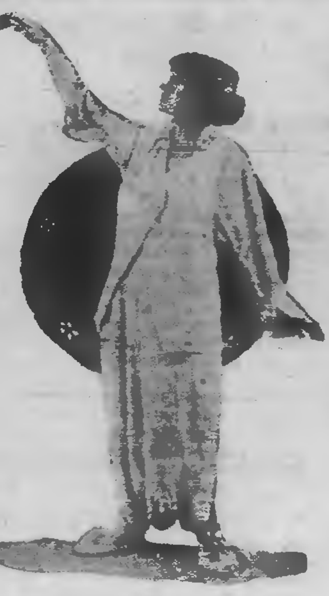
DARING NEW NEGLIGEE.

Boudoir Costume Whose Lines Suggest the Orient.



TURKISH BOUDOIR DRESS.

The boudoir costume shown here is one of the most comfortable of the daring new models. The extremely comfortable skirt suggests trousers. It is worn with a little Turkish jacket. The costume is of white ratine and crepe de chine over peachblow silk. The collar of white satin is decorated with appliqued roses in pink.

Cubist gown is the name given to a new negligee that is a sort of glorified kimono. It is in white crepe de chine, with a wide band of antique lace insertion at the hem and tassels from the points of the drapery. Fascinating caps to match come with the gown.

FUR TRIMMED SUITS.

Some Sort or Pelt Adorns Most Fashionable Street Costumes.

Evening, afternoon and street costumes, coats for motoring and outing, evening wraps and hats—all are rich with some sort of animal skin—kolinsky, a deep lustrous brown; sables, the beaver, lately resuscitated to great popularity; seal, skunk and monkey fur, which has failed to be called by its French name despite numerous endeavors to soften the appalling candor of the name.

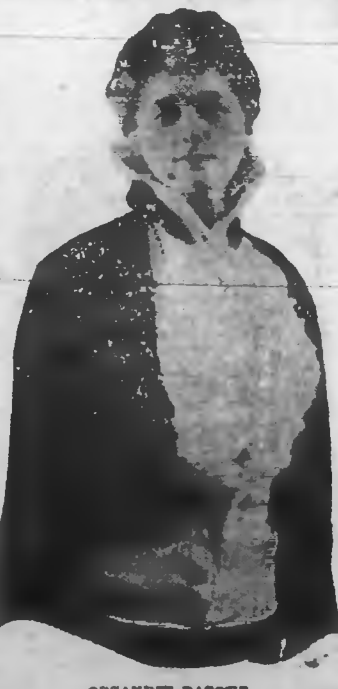
One finds the four outlining net overskirts in thin bands. It is seen in four inch wide strips about suit skirts and the bottom of coats.

Collars and cuffs are almost invariably furred in wraps and suits, and the fur on hats is thought out carefully. It must match that used on the rest of the apparel, thus giving a definite harmony to suit, fur set proper, and hat.

WITH SEPARATE SKIRTS.

Basques For General Utility Wear Exploited This Season.

Basques are made to wear with separate skirts. One of them is illustrated here. It is of white organdie, plain about the hips and gathered above the waist line. The flaring collar of plaited organdie is finished with a band of moire ribbon.



ORGANDIE BASQUE.

Skirts seem to grow shorter. Many of the new tailored frocks reveal the buttoned boot above the ankle, and dancing skirts are even shorter.

The buttoned street boot now has a light welted sole and a curved heel, but this heel is broad enough at the base for comfortable walking.

Dancing boots are exceedingly dainty, with thin turned soles and high curved heels. Both street and dancing boots show the top of contrasting material.

The best laid plans often hatch out bungling failures.

A SYMPHONY OF COLOR.

Panama Exposition to Be a Scene of Transcendent Beauty.

There have already been exposition cities, or parts of them, whose streets, buildings, parks, statues and landscape effects, each more or less good in itself, were all planned as contributing parts of a homogeneous whole in design, though indeed, as a matter of fact and history, even this idea has never yet been carried out with unified completeness except in exposition cities, memorably the White City at Chicago in 1893.

But for the greatest of expositions there has been conceived and worked out for the first time a city where not only form, but color will be called up to create symphonic loveliness.

At the Panama exposition every square yard of the stately composition, a mile or more in extent, from the red roofs overhead to the tan shale underfoot and including the rich masses of California flowers and shrubs between, together with the blues of the Golden Gate and the soft browns of the adjacent hills, are all picked up and combined, blended and contrasted, in one dominant key of color to produce not only harmony like an orchestra, but transcendent beauty like a great orchestra.

What the actual effect will be when it is finished and visitors look down upon it as they approach from the heights above or gaze at it from the hills across the bay is quite impossible to describe for the very reason that nothing of the sort was ever done before. The nearest one can come to suggesting its ethereal loveliness is to say that the whole color scheme has been devised and carried out under the direction of Jules Guerin.—Scribner's.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Irregular Heartbeats.

A writer on medical subjects says that an irregular beating heart should not cause any anxiety. Give it no thought—especially fear thought. The mental attitude regarding it may make or mar your life. Forget it. The heart is a wonderful little organ and, as a rule, will adjust itself to varying conditions when not interfered with mentally or physically. Therefore, mentally, forget it; physically, watch your diet as regards overeating or the eating of such foods and in such a manner (insufficient mastication) as to cause gases, the action of which is to distend the stomach and crowd the heart. It won't go back on you if you treat it halfway right.

Asbestos Doors.

Asbestos doors, which look like ordinary doors of oak or mahogany, are a new kind of fire protection. They are made with a center core of wood or metal, covered thickly with asbestos. An oak or other wood veneer gives a surface finish so that they seem to be solid wood, but in case of fire the small amount of wood in the veneer would not affect their fire resisting ability much more than would a heavy coat of paint on an all metal door.

Whale Beef.

Enter the whale as an element in the "beef" supply. In Alaska the canneries have begun to pack whale beef, heretofore regarded as waste. An average whale yields twenty tons of beef.

Milady's Mirror

How to Look Young.

"The body ordinarily looks as old as the mind thinks and feels," says Ralph Waldo Trine in the Woman's Home Companion.

"Shakespeare anticipated by many years the psychology of the times when he said, 'It is the mind that makes the body rich.' An eminent modern writer has given utterance to the same truth more fully and more helpfully, perhaps, in the following: 'The prevailing state of mind or character of thought shapes the body and features. It makes us ugly or pleasing, attractive or repulsive, to others. Our thought shapes our gestures, our mannerism, our walk.

" 'The least movement of muscle has a mood of mind, a thought behind it. A mind always determined has always a determined walk. A mind always weak, shifting, vacillating and uncertain makes a shuffling, shambling, uncertain gait. The spirit of determination braces every muscle. It is the thought element of determination filling every muscle. * * * If you send from you in thought the elements of worry, fret, hatred or grief you are putting in action forces injurious to your mind and body. * * * Look at the dicontented, gloomy, melancholy and ill tempered men or women and you will see on their faces proofs of the action of the silent force of their unpleasant thought cutting, carving and shaping them into their present expression. Such people are never in good health, for the force acts on them as a poison and creates some form of disease.' "

To Have Pink Cheeks.

Pink cheeks are the result of good circulation, no more or no less. Good circulation means an active condition of all bodily functions. Where there is great fatigue, nervousness, or, on the other hand, languid, sluggish bodily activities, whether from a too lazy life or weakness, then the circulation is not all that it should be. We see then pallor or a pasty look, or displeasing and positive sallowness or a settled bluish look which speaks of actual ill health. None of these things can by any means give the cheeks the becoming hue of rosy pinkness.

Each woman is a law unto herself, and general directions cannot be laid down for all. The weak, pale and nervous woman sometimes thinks she "cannot stand" the daily cool shower, the brisk walk, which shall put her into a glow. Sometimes she really "cannot stand it," yet sometimes that very weakness must be faced and overcome. At first such methods may seem to leave her more weak and almost trembling, but if she will persist she will note that these unpleasant symptoms are disappearing and that her strength as well as her color is improving every day. Such a woman has become weak and pale just because she has succumbed to the thought that that was her part and lot in life. But, resisting it, she rises into better health and more vigorous energy day by day.

The Business Woman's Looks.

Under the stress and strain of a business or professional life a woman's beauty soon fades. While interest in her work may keep her mind alert, the sedentary life, the confinement in office or shop, the lack of exercise, all conspire to chase the roses from her cheeks, the brightness from her eye and elasticity from her movements. The appearance of youth and health is a desirable quality. It is of first requisite in business. The woman who looks well, who demands respect by her personality, has the battle half won. We are inclined to listen to what she says with interest and to accept what she has to offer with confidence. Indeed, any woman who does not guard her appearance will fail to make a success of business.

THE NEED OF FAT AS FOOD

The trees in a Syrian garden are an important and practically necessary part of the nutrition of the people. Combined with grain in the form of coarse bread, the tree products make a balanced and wholesome ration. For large elements of the population, at least one meal a day is commonly composed of bread and walnuts. The walnut is rich in both protein and fat, so that this combination virtually duplicates in nutrition our occidental sandwich of bread, butter and meat.

The oil to which the scriptural writers so lovingly referred is still important in that land, and the olive tree that produces it is almost as useful to the Syrian as the cow is to the American. The cow gives butter and drink, and the olive tree gives butter and food. When the workman on the Mediterranean goes from home for a day's labor, he often takes a pocketful of olives and a piece of bread for his lunch. Remove butter, breakfast bacon and fat meat from our vocabulary, put olive oil in their place and we shall begin to think the thoughts of Mediterranean cooks.

Once cooks and palates are educated, the blood does not know the difference between the rich globules of fat that come to it. It is fat that the human system wants, and it makes no final difference whether it comes from butter, bacon, lard, olive, cocoanut, goose or bear. Fat is fat, once it is in our blood. The source from which we shall get this fundamental of nutrition depends in part upon our bringing up, but eventually our getting it depends upon the ease of winning it from our environment.—Atlantic Monthly.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

owe their singular effectiveness in curing Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica to their power of stimulating and strengthening the kidneys. They enable these organs to thoroughly filter from the blood the uric acid (the product of waste matter) which gets into the joints and muscles and causes these painful diseases. Over half a century of constant use has proved conclusively that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills strengthen weak kidneys and 41

TOOK PARIS GREEN TO END HIS LIFE

Thomas Priddle, an old and respected citizen of Orillia, died at his home, Poughkeepsie Street, on Monday, as the result of taking a dose of Paris Green, while in a fit of despondency.

A hour or so before dinner Mr. Priddle went out in the back shed and took the poison, although no reason is known for the rash act. When his son, Will, called him in to dinner he said, "I won't need any dinner, I'll be dead soon." He was brought into the house and questioned and Dr. Harvie was summoned. His stomach was pumped out, but too late to prevent the poison getting into the system. He was 76 years of age.

The late Thomas Priddle was born in England and went to Orillia when a young man, over 55 years ago. He drove a stage coach in the early days before the railway reached the town.

METZ BOMBARDED

French are Conducting Siege of German Stronghold

LONDON, Dec. 26. — The Times publishes the following from Paris:—

"I have it on good authority that the French have carried the Bois-lep-Tetre, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, and have begun to bombard the forts of Metz.

"'Bois-lep-Tetre, which covers the heights just north of the road leading to Pont-a-Mousoon at St. Mihiel has been held in great part by the Germans for many weeks, but several recent communiques have mentioned that the French were making progress there.

"The capture of this wood brings the French up to the Norrey Ridge, which is within range of the nearest of the Metz forts, particularly that of St. Blaise, which is almost on the frontier and dominates the village of Pagny-sur-Moselle.

"Several weeks ago the French pushed forward and endeavored to cut the communications of the German army at St. Mihiel by blowing to pieces the station at Arnaville, where the branch line to Thiancourt begins."

Churches Urged To Help.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 26.—Premier Murray has issued an appeal addressed to the heads of the churches in Canada, suggesting that collections be taken up in all churches on Jan. 17 in aid of the Belgian Fund. In the town of New Glasgow over $61,000 was realised in this way last Sunday.

Lumber Yard Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 26.—A $50,000 fire yesterday at Glenside, Pa., destroyed the lumber and coal yards of Frank Justice, and damaged a number of surrounding properties it was necessary to call aid from this city to help put out the flames.

You Owe Your Face a Good, Clear Skin

And Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a Very Short Time Will Clear Up Your Complexion Naturally.

Just in a few days one may clear the skin of all manner of blemishes such as pimples, blotches, liver spots, etc., if one will use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Don't use pasty lotions and creams to fill up the pores when they are working constantly with the blood to throw off the impurities of your system.

"Before I rid my face of pimples I was not thought to be pretty. But all the change I made was to clean my blood and skin."

Many a face is made with beautiful contour and artistically lined, but when the skin is discolored one cannot see the beauty of the face lines. One notices only the skin blemishes.

It's because pimples and eruptions come from the inside—from impure blood—and you can't cure them by rubbing stuff on the outside of the face. Purify the blood and the blemishes will disappear.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often clear the complexion in a few days' time. That's the wonderful part of it—they act right off—in a hurry. That's because they're made of just the ingredients needed to drive all poisons and impurities from the blood. That's why doctors prescribe them so constantly.

You will speedily enjoy a beautiful complexion if you use these wonderful little Wafers. Your face will become as clear and pure as a rose. Nobody likes to have pimply-faced people around. With Stuart's Calcium Wafers you don't have to wait for months before getting results. Even boils have been cured in a few days' time with these remarkably effective blood cleansers. Your whole system will feel better in a marvelously short time, and my, what a difference in your looks!

You can get Stuart's Calcium Wafers of any druggist at 50 cents a box. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

CANADIANS CONSPICOUS

Britain's Christmas Was a Military One

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Christmas of 1914 will long be remembered in Great Britain as a military Christmas. Everywhere throughout the islands men in khaki and in blue were the object of attention and admiration. There was a great decrease in the customary railway crowds of civilians visiting their homes for family reunions, but almost the usual number of trains was running. The cars were filled with soldiers and sailors taking a brief leave to visit their families and all were traveling on free passes. Many thousands of volunteers from the training camps and a considerable contingent from the continent and the fleet had two or three days for a holiday at their homes, and the whole country seemed to swarm with uniforms.

London particularly was full of soldiers, Conspicuous among them were several thousand Canadians from Salisbury Plain. Christmas in London is Sabbath-like because all the theatres are closed and the hotels and public houses keep Sunday hours.

TO MOVE CAPITAL

The Turks are Now Taking Archives From Constantinople

LONDON, Dec. 26. — A despatch from Athens says: "Travelers reaching here from Constantinople report that Turkish recruits are removing the state archives to an inland place of safety."

This despatch is significant, following, as it does, reports of uneasiness in official circles in Constantinople regarding bombardment of the Dardanelles forts and the sinking of the battleship Messudieh by a British submarine. Twenty Turks and ten Germans were tried by court-martial in connection with the loss of the battleship, three being sentenced to death.

Two Canadian Soldiers Dead.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—The following deaths in the Canadian expeditionary force at Salisbury Plain are reported to the Militia Department Thursday:

Dec. 24, No. 7,145, Pte. Hubert French, First Battalion, of abscess of the groin; next of kin, Mrs. A. French, 24 Miswell Lane, Tring, Herts, Eng.

Dec. 22, No. 41,612, Gunner Gordon Wilson, Second Artillery Brigade, of cerebro-spinal meningitis; next of kin, Mrs. Eben Wilson, Hildegrade, Moncton, N.B.

Reported seriously ill: No. 47,152, Corpl. S. Johnstone, 17th Battalion, at Bulford Manor Hospital, of cerebro-spinal meningitis; next of kin, Mrs. Kate Johnstone, 711 Indian road, Toronto.

No Grain For Animals.

BERLIN, Dec. 26. — (Via London.)—The Norddeutsche Zeitung issued a warning against using grain to feed animals, especially rye, which is needed for breadstuffs. It says the empire's food supply must be carefully husbanded to guard against a possible shortage which would force upon the people a difficult problem.

Deputies Return To Front.

PARIS, Dec. 26. — A number of the members of the Chamber of Deputies serving in the army have decided not to take advantage of the extended leave granted them by Gen. Joffre, and have returned to the front. They had come to Paris to attend the session of the Chamber.

Fire Ruins Western Fair Building.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 26.—Fire originating from an overheated roast yesterday morning completely gutted the main grand stand at the Western Fair grounds, where the 18th Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, is being train for active service. The blaze started in a military cookhouse, and the dining halls beneath the stand, which has a sitting capacity of 5,000 were rendered untenable. The loss is $7,000, fully covered by insurance. The stand will be rebuilt at once and temporary quarters will be provided in the meantime.

Value Received.

People are willing to pay for good news in war time.

On the day that the news of the Emden's capture reached Toronto, the evening papers got out special editions featuring the glad tidings.

It was a harvest for the newsboys. One little Hebrew lad at a downtown corner was heard to exclaim:

"Gee, dat's a good paper. A man just slipped me a dime for it, and said he'd hand me a quarter if I had another paper like it to-morrow."

THE CITIZENS MAY STARVE

German Commander Refuses to Provide Food for Lille

PARIS, Dec. 26. — To the many other horrors which the German invasion has brought to the inhabitants of Lille is now to be added that of famine. Citizens of the northern fortress town, which has been in the possession of the Germans for some months and is now destitute of food, have already paid an enormous war tax to the invader. Its textile industries have been ruined and 1,200 of its houses destroyed. M. Charles de la Salle, the heroic Mayor of Lille, who has remained at his post throughout, in an eloquent letter recently addressed to Gen. von Hindrich, German commander, pleaded for relief for his starving fellow-citizens.

In his reply, which was characteristically Prussian and worthy of the Imperial Chancellor himself, Von Hindrich set out to show that if Lille women and children lacked bread, Britain, and not Germany, was to blame. Germany herself, added the commander of Lille, possessed sufficient resources for her army and her civilian population. Britain, in attempting to prevent the arrival of overseas produce with the view of starving out Germany, was but inflicting suffering upon the inhabitants of the occupied towns of France and Belgium. The starving population would have to put up with the consequences, for the German Government would not undertake the feeding of French and Belgian civilians under its jurisdiction so long as Britain closed the seas to the importation of foodstuffs.

Having delivered himself thus, Gen. von Hindrich told the Mayor of Lille that he had better apply for assistance to the Swiss Government, promising that the German Government would support the request to the utmost of its power. If the Mayor refused to seek help from the Swiss Government, then, as far as the German commandant of Lille was concerned, the people of that city were free to starve.

Carlyle Blackwell in "The Spitfire"

The four reel film version of Edward Peple's celebrated comedy drama, "The Spitfire," presents Carlyle Blackwell in the role of Bruce Mason, the young American traveller who suddenly becomes involved in the plot of the story, and who before its termination will earns the title of hero.

The play entertained thousands for many years. Its humorous situations, together with its absorbing dramatic element, makes the subject certain to please both lovers of light drama and those who prefer the big heart-throb of tense, overpowering incident and episode. In the film productions, the laughs and thrills are carefully balanced, so that at times it is difficult to determine whether the subject is comedy or serious drama; until at the very last flash the culmination of the fascinating plot brings the conviction that it is only real life after all.

Carlyle Blackwell is an ideal type for the role of Morson, about whom most of the action revolves. In both the lighter moments and the big dramatic situations, he portrays a perfect characterization. "The Spitfire" tells the following story:

Bruce Morson, a young American, returning from travels in Egypt, is robbed of some valuable jewels in a Bondon hotel, and chases the thieves to the yacht "Spitfire," at Calais, which the crooks have boarded and taken command of under forged orders from its owner, Marcus Girard, who is in London. The yacht is just about to sail out of port, but, by a ruse, Morson manages to get aboard and promptly falls in love with Valda, Girard's pretty daughter, who is also a "spitfire." The crooks tell Valda her father is a smuggler, show her the jewels they have stolen, and convince her they are guarding them for her father, and that Morson is a customs officer, spying upon her in order to trap Girard. Valda indignantly turns upon the helpless Morson, orders him into seaman's costume, and compels him to work his passage to New York. On the homeward voyage, Morson undergoes many ordeals, both humorous and dramatic, and is even finally accused of the theft of his own property, before the final denouement, which shows the burning of the yacht and the heroic rescue of Valda by Morson, who is at last able to right himself, baffle the thieves, and win the woman he loves.

This production will be shown at the Empire Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 28, 29 and 30.

AUSTRIAN ATTEMPT TO BREAK RUSSIAN LINE HAS BEEN REPULSED

Imitation of German "Smash Through" Tactics Proves Futile in Desperate Engagement Forty Miles Northeast of Cracow—Russians in North Holding Their Own

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Russian successes are reported officially at Petrograd from the battle front before Warsaw, and from that around Cracow, but without materially changing the general situation in these regions. Especially vicious attacks have been made by the Germans between Pinczow, forty miles northeast of Cracow, and Nowemiasto Korczyn, at the junction of the Nida and Vistula Rivers.

In this place the Austrians imitated the tactics of the Germans and tried to force a passage by sheer weight of numbers. Time after time they advanced in solid formation against the Russian front in the face of heavy artillery fire. The net result after two days fighting—Dec. 22 and 23—was the capture by the Russians of nearly five thousand prisoners, including half a hundred officers, and the retention by the Russians of the left bank of the Nida, where they are strongly entrenched.

The combatants here are old enemies. Three months ago the same Austrian troops opposed the first Russian advance on Cracow.

To the north the Russians are holding their own and are inflicting severe punishment on the Germans. A series of energetic attacks at Bolimow, just south of Sochaczew (30 miles from Warsaw), are reported to have been repulsed on the night of the 23rd by vigorous Russian counter attacks, while forty miles further south, at Anovolonz, a successful German crossing of the Pilica River was turned into a German reverse through savage attacks by Siberian troops, who forced the invaders back again.

The Russo-Turkish operations have been brought to a standstill by climatic conditions in Asia Minor. Here the Russian troops have spread out, covering all the roads and quartering in the villages in an immense triangle, whose sides converge for 70 miles, with the base on the Russo-Turkish frontier and the apex pointing towards Erzerum.

Clad in every variety of garment to keep warm, including Turkish robes and wide flowing Kurdish coats, the Russians are huddling in every shelter but and farm house of the Armenians and packing cow sheds, stables and storehouses. Wherever possible the roofs have been cut out, so that bonfires may be safely built within. The sound of battle is rarely heard by the main body of troops, who are wintering on the way to Erzerum. Virtually the only activity is on the part of restless Cossacks, who are forever on the move, engaging in brushes with the opposing cavalry.

Little Business At the Market

It was scarcely to be expected there would be a market of any dimensions today, and one could have counted those who were on hand. There were no purchasers and those who did bring in a little fowl retired early. People did their marketing last Saturday and Wednesday. The extreme cold also prevented farmers and consumers from coming together. Prices were high.

NO USE, MY FRIEND, THE CURRENT'S TOO STRONG FOR YOU.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

Old Books.

It fell to my lot lately to consign many volumes to the flames whose usefulness was apparently ended. They were soiled and torn and many of them in the last stages of decrepitude and decay, but as they were cast one by one into the furnace to receive their final purification I could not help musing on the taste of some of our present-day readers who abhor a soiled book, and comparing it with that of Charles Lamb, who loved them. This is what one of the gentlest and most lovable characters in English literature had to say on the subject: "How beautiful to a genuine lover of reading are the sullied leaves and the worn-out appearance, nay, the very odour (beyond Russia) if we would not forget kind feelings in fastidiousness, of an old 'Circulating Library' Tom Jones or Vicar of Wakefield. How they speak of the thousand thumbs that have turned over their pages with delight—of the lone sempstress, whom they have cheer—after her long day's needle-toil, running far into midnight, when she has snatched an hour, ill-spared from sleep, to sleep her cares, as in some Lethean cup, in spelling out their enchanting content. Who would have them a whit less soiled? What better condition could we desire to see them in?" Ah, those words voice the actual value of a book in abounding clarity as cheerers of the comfortless, a solace for the aged, the recreation of the toiler, the delight unspeakable of the student.

It may call up a smile on the faces of many who may happen to read these lines when the assertion is made that it would be a good step forward if more people could be induced to think like Charles Lamb. It is nice to handle a new book; fresh from the mint as it were; a book on which no desecrating thumb has left its ineffaceable mark, and upon whose title page no friendly critic has penned his opinion of its merit. But mere externals give no clue to the intrinsic value of anythig and the fear is forced upon one that many readers acting upon impulse choose their books as some choose their wives, not so much on account of the intelligence and common sense they may display as of the fine figures they are enabled to cut by the help of their milliners and dressmakers.

It is not to be assumed that every book, no matter how soiled, is to be read till almost the print is indistinguishable because of the dirt. Charles Lamb certainly did not have this in his mind when he penned the words above quoted. But what he assuredly did have in his mind was that a work of genius even if dog's eared and dirty was a treasure to be guarded and that any book that was worth reading was worth keeping to its greatest limit of usefulness. Not may readers, I think, look at the matter in this light. To most, a book is merely a book, whether it is written by the author of Crooked Cale: The Caliban of Celestial City" or by Cervantes or Victor Hugo or Thackeray. With them there is no other line of demarcation than the broad and very apparent one dividing dirt from cleanliness. They are really and truly afraid of handling a soiled volume under the belief that all sorts of danger from disease is to be apprehended from contact with them. If this were true, however, many librarians would be in the hospitals, for they handle hundreds of such volumes every day. If more people recognized this fact I am sure there would be far less discontent over the shabbiness of library books and a wonderful accession of literary knowledge and humanitarian ideas through their agency. There is something about a book that should appeal more strongly to the affections than almost anything else in the category of one's personal belongings. We may fill our halls with costly tapestries; hang pictures of surpassing excellence on our walls; be fortunate enough to be possessed of curios from all parts of the world; —daggers from Damascus, assegais from South Africa, boomerangs from the vast wilds of Australia. We mnay decorate our dens wtih them or hang them in conspicuous places in our houses. May of them may be of very great interest, recalling days perhaps, when we went a-shopping in Easter bazaara, or as trophies of events in our own lives or in those of our forefathers. But they do not speak to us as a book speaks; they do not draw us ay nearer to humanity. They are of themselves, things apart, tangible but cold; we see them, we touch them, but there is a lifelessness about them, that chills us, they are mementos—nothing more. How different it is with a book. Its cost is a mere song compared with the gewgags and works of art that adorn the homes of the rich and yet what a treasure it may contain. Why, the most worthless book that was ever penned has a certain value, infinitesimal it may be, but greater than many a so-called chef d'oeuvre of the artist or the sculptor. And if this can be said of the worst book that was ever written, what can be said of the best or of the multitude that lie between these two extremes?

JUST ONE CONDITION.

Here's another little story of the "scrap of paper" variety. And it contains a profound principle.

Not many days ago the presses of a large printing firm in Toronto were ready to start running on a big order of booklets. It was a good hopeful job indicating that the firm whose name was on the front page—for the story's sake, we'll call it Hobbs and Johnson—expected to adhere to the motto "Business as Usual." An increase on the last order; some cheerful announcement of what was doing—and what was just as important, the very best kind of paper to be used in the printing.

"Nothing cheap about that firm, Bill," said the pressman to the foreman.

"Stock's real nifty, Tom, hope you got a good make-ready on the press?"

"Oh, sure. She's all right. Let her go—"

Telephone buzzed in the booth Foreman went.

"Hello—this is Hobbs and Johnson."

"Yes sir, —about that booklet run? It's on the press now."

"What kind of paper are you using?"

"Why, the best of ——" mentioning a name familiar to users of high grade paper.

"Hmh—hmh! I see. Well I guess that's all right. But I don't care what fancy name you give the stuff. All I wanted to make sure about was——" (Here the speaker biffed his speech right into the mouthpiece). "Was that paper made in Canada? If not — take it off the press. If so, go ahead. If you haven't made-in-Canada paper, phone me and I'll give you the address of a Canadian firm that makes the kind of paper I want. I want that job to be made-in-Canada clean through."

Ad sure enough the job had to be taken off the press.

ORILLIA GETS LOWER POWER AND LIGHT RATES

Orillia, Dec. 26.—Orillia Water, Light and Power Commission has announced a reduction in electric lighting and power rates amounting to about 10 per cent. on the present schedule, which has always been considered low. The new rates became effective from Dec. 22, and, therefore came as a Christmas gift to electric current consumers. As there are 18,861 electric lamps installed in the town, and 1,655 electric horsepower is sold to the factories, almost every citizen will feel the benefit of the reduction.

The commission has made an excellent showing since its inception two years ago. There has been a constant increase in revenue month by month, and light, power and water receipts totalled this year over $85,000. After paying operating expenses, depreciation, debentures falling due, and interest, there was a balance this year of more than $21,000, which was applied mainly to cleaning up some long standing idebtedness, so that the commissioners will start the New Year with a clean sheet and a working balance on hand.

Orillia power is generated on the Severn River, nineteen miles from town.

FRANCO-BELGIAN ARMY ADVANCES

Conflict on Extreme Left of the Allied Line is the Most Significant of Present Movements and Success of Big Drive Rests Upon It---British Long Range Naval Artillery Makes Trenches Untenable.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—The Franco-Belgian advance along the sand dunes of the Belgian littoral is developing remarkable strength.

Though the official communique issued from the War Office last night confines itself to the bare statement that "some progress has been made before Nieuport," it is permissible to add that this movement is the most significant of the operations on the left wing of the allies.

Upon the ability of the allies to maintain the commanding position along this stretch of the coast depends the success of the turning movement against the right flank of the "Wurttemburgers" under Grand Duke Albrecht when the allies' numerical strength shall warrant their assumption of the violent offensive designed to clear Belgium of the invaders.

While the British ships are maintaining a vigorous cannonading of the coastal positions of the Germans, upon the French and Belgian infantry devolves the task of burrowing among the dunes and keeping the Germans stirred up by close contact to such an extent that they will find it difficult to establish themselves firmly in adequate defensive positions. This they are doing with remarkable success.

The German resistance has been stubborn but ineffective, mainly because of the flanking fire of the British long-range naval guns, which tear into every line of works they erect and scatter their forces, while keeping the German guns on the move.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:—

"Slight progress has been made in front of Nieuport. Towards Notre Dame De Lorette, north of Lens, an attack by the enemy has been repulsed.

"This morning we captured another trench near Puisalenne, and we have been able to hold it, notwithstanding several counter-attacks.

"Last night the enemy made a vigorous attack on La Tete De Faux, in the Vosges, but without success.

"In Belgium there have been intermittent artillery battles.

"From the Lys to the Oise on the evening of Dec. 23 we gained the fork of the roads from Loos to Rutoire and from Loos to Vermelles.

"To the northeast of Albert we took possession of a portion of the village of La Boisselle, situated to the southwest of the church, and of an advanced trench to the south of that village.

"To the north from Roye to Lihu, near Lihons, we also have made some progress. These various attacks, undertaken with great spirit, have everywhere conserved the ground already gained.

"To the south of the Oise our artillery has demolished the defence works of the enemy in the region of Bailly and on the plateau of Gouvron.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne there have been artillery battles and several German attacks have been repulsed. To the north of Supignul (near Berry-Au-Bac) a slight advance of our troops has been followed, and there has been a strong counter-attack which has completely failed.

"In the region of Perthes and Mesnil-Le-Hurlus our progress of previous days has been followed up and strengthened. To the north of Mesnil we took possession of a forest strongly prepared by the enemy, and to the east of trenches captured by us on Dec. 23. To the northwest of Mesnil and to the east of Perthes we have driven the enemy from the fragments of trenches which he re-occupied, and we are now masters of all his first line of defence.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Grurie, at Bagatelle, Fountain Madame and Saint Hubert we repulsed five attacks and strengthened our front. Between the Argonne and the Meuse, in spite of the snow and the fog, we have made progress on the Boureuills-Vauquois front.

"In the region of Cuisy and the forest of Forges our heavy artillery, by subduing the batteries and machine guns of the enemy, has enabled our infantry to make a leap in advance.

"On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans have bombarded the south corner of the forest of Consenvoye, where we are established. In the forest of Ailly and Apremont our artillery has forced the enemy to evacuate several trenches.

"In the lower Vosges we have advanced to within 1,500 metres of Cirey on the Vesouze river."

PIPE GIVEN TO EACH MAN

Crown Prince Also Sends Them His Own Portrait

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—(Via London.) —The Crown Prince has issed the following address to his troops in the field:

I wish for all members of my brave army the blessing of God until we have with the good luck of a dutiful soldier established a peace which we and our beloved fatherland may be proud.

"My grandfather, Crown Prince Frederick William, on Christmas, 1870, sent to every man of his brave army, your fathers and grandfathers, a pipe with his picture. I do the same. May this humble token to my loyal companions in arms be a souvenir of our common Christmas celebration in Germany's greatest days."

ARMY MEASURE IS REJECTED

Japanese Emperor Dissolves the National Diet

TOKIO, Dec. 26.—The Imperial Diet was dissolved yesterday. The House of Representatives rejected the army expansion measures proposed by the Government. This led to the dissolution of the House. The closing session was dramatic in the extreme. The debate extended all through the day and on into the night. The House was unable to compose its differences and there was no sign that the debate was approaching its end, when shortly before 10 o'clock it was announced that Emperor Yoshihiti had exercised his royal prerogative dissolving the Diet.

Considerable opposition developed in the House of Representatives to the budget for 1915, which showed an estimated expenditure of 565,000,000 yen ($278,000,000); and a decrease of the revenues of $40,500,000.

Liebneickt Forced Into Army.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Dr. Karl Liebneickt, the German Socialist leader, who was the only member to vote against the war credit at the recent session of the Reichstag, has been enrolled in the German army, according to a despatch to Humanarian on the Swiss frontier. This movement was decided upon, says the despatch, after his protest against war in the Reichstag as the best means to stop his opposition, a trial on a charge of high treason being considered too dangerous an expedient.

He spent two years at Oxford University and afterwards traveled extensively with an English political officer. At the opening of the present war he expressed a desire to be of any service possible to the British Government.

AVLONA OCCUPIED

Company of Sailors Have Occupied Albanian Seaport.

ROME, Dec. 26.—A company of Italian sailors occupied Avlona, a seaport of Albania, on the Adriatic Sea.

Recent despatches from Athens by way of Paris said that anarchy reigned at Avlona and that the region around the Albania seaport was a prey to civil war. Partisans of Kemal Bey last month forced the Government to haul down the Turkish flag and hoist the Albanian colors. Essad Pasha, the commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces in Albania, then sent 500 soldiers to Avlona and they disarmed the inhabitants and restored the Turkish flag.

Italian naval forces occupied Avlona on Oct. 26, but the expedition was in the nature of a relief and sanitary organization which purposed to aid the large population which had taken refuge in the city to escape the persecutions of the insurgents. Everything was done by the Italian Government to remove from the expedition anything savoring of political or territorial occupation.

BRITISH CRUISER IN BATTLE?

Cannonading Is Heard From the Newcastle Off Valparaiso, Chile.

VALPARAISO, Dec. 26.—A wireless message from the Chilean torpedo gunboat Tome reports the British cruiser Newcastle cannonading fifteen miles from Valparaiso. It is supposed that she has engaged the German cruiser Dresden and converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

A British squadron and Japanese warships are known to be cruising not far from this port.

The Dresden, the only survivor of the German squadron, of five warships defeated off the Falkland Islands, by Sir Frederick Sturdee's squadron, was reported several days ago to have left Punta Arenas with the British cruiser Bristol in pursuit. Other British warships that took part in the battle stopped at Valparaiso a few days ago.

TO LIMIT SUFFERING.

Pope Benedict Says He Will Continue Efforts In War Zone.

ROME, Dec. [illegible] — Pope Benedict received the members of the Sacred College in solemn audience for the exchange of Christmas greetings on Thursday, the ceremony taking on the pomp of Pope Leo.

Addressing the cardinals, the pontiff expressed his regret at the absence of some of the prelates owing to illness, referring especially to Cardinals Agliardi and Martinelli. He added that the last news regarding the health of Cardinal Agliardi made it apparent that his recovery would be speedy.

The Pope then enumerated the efforts he had made to render the war less terrible, and said that he would continue to devote all his energies to the suppression or limitation of the inhuman sacrifices of life.

CANADIAN CONTINGENT WOULD MAKE UP A COMPLETE CITY

Interesting Calculations Made by Writer in Montreal Standard Show That Every Class of Expert Required for a Self-Supporting Community May be Found Among Troops at Salisbury.

It has often been said that if the celebrated Foreign Legion of France were transplanted into some unknown country, the various social elements, which go to make up the Legion would be capable of organizing and carrying on an almost model commonwealth, providing these different elements could control themselves.

The same may be said about a Canadian regiment, an army, or a legion, for that matter, and it would be unnecessary to add the last proviso.

Perhaps Australia may have something like it, but even in England there is not enlisted such a wonderful variety of capable men in other walks of life outside of army circles as the troops which Canada is so willingly sending across the sea to the firing line, can produce. The Montreal Standard in a recent issue analyzes a Montreal regiment with interesting results.

If the first Canadian contingent were set to create a city the result out of 32,000 men would be something like this:

As a start there would be 100 railroad employes to look after the terminus of the railroad that would bring the supplies for the new city, and one thousand teamsters to do the hauling after the railroad had brought in the supplies.

Two hundred civil engineers would be on hand to direct the building operations of the various mechanical plants, and three hundred architects to draw up the plans for the residential and official buildings, while not less than four hundred real estate men would be available to pick out the proper sites for each resident and create interest in the buying and selling of property.

Two hundred land surveyors would be ready to assist in the laying out of properties, and a hundred steelworkers would be prepared to get up the steel frames of the bigger structures.

Twelve hundred carpenters ought to go fairly far towards putting up the necessary woodwork for the buildings, while five hundred steamfitters and three hundred plumbers should be able to manage to secure the more material comforts for the various homes.

One hundred ironworkers and a hundred forgemen ought to give them considerable assistance in this, as well as in keeping things in repair, ably seconded no doubt by two hundred blacksmiths and a hundred rivetters.

Eighteen hundred machinists would come in very handy, particularly if the new town should make any pretence to being a manufacturing centre, and a hundred tilelayers and an equal number of paperhangers would aid greatly in giving the homes that aesthetic appearance which up-to-date people value so highly.

Twenty-five hundred laborers of all sorts would help to rush things along, and with eleven hundred bricklayers, a hundred mechanical engineers and nine hundred common ones, two hundred joiners and thirteen hundred painters, the town should be run up and put in ship-shape in no time.

Seventeen hundred electricians would be available to look properly after the lighting of it, and four hundred policemen would see that there was as little lawbreaking and general trouble as possible.

One hundred customs agents would prevent any delays in building materials and general merchandise coming in, and three hundred telegraph operators and a hundred wireless men would see that the connections with the outside world of science and commerce were not neglected.

To aid in maintaining the rolling stock at the railroad station, there would be a hundred locomotive fitters and three hundred locomotive firemen, who might also be turned to other uses when necessary, together with four hundred other firemen. An opportunity for someone to start a tool factory would be offered by the presence of one hundred tool designers and twelve hundred toolmakers.

There are a hundred ships' foremen and a hundred sailmakers, and three hundred men, who are sailors pure and simple.

There are a hundred marine superintendents, who probably would not mind making themselves generally useful in connection with harbor matters, and a hundred customs officers and another hundred customs agents to look after the merchandise coming in.

The various necessary occupations that ought to be found in a thriving community are well looked after.

There are no less than two hundred brassfinishers, and a hundred laundrymen, to look after the clothes of the people, while four chemists will be able to provide the necessary remedies in case of illness. If there is no doctor, that is because the doctors are all with the medical corps, but it would be easy to borrow one or more from those.

There will be a hundred manufacturers' agents, and two hundred accountants.

The presence of a hundred bedstead workers, is very assuring, and these very necessary pieces of furniture will, therefore, not have to be imported.

Fifteen hundred salesmen will keep trade moving, and thirty-four hundred clerks will do their share to see that business does not stagnate.

Six hundred bookkeepers and two hundred stenographers will help to fill the offices, and a hundred mattress makers will be a great aid to the bedstead manufacturers above mentioned.

For the purpose of aiding the circulation of money, a hundred bank clerks are provided, and as they usually dress very well two hundred tailors will be on hand to supply their clothes and those of the other citizens.

There will be a hundred draughtsmen distributed among various concerns and a hundred students will make the nucleus of a fine college crowd.

There are a hundred advertising managers to boom various kinds of business, a hundred general storekeepers and a hundred jewelers.

A hundred broommakers and four hundred tinsmiths will come in very handy, and four hundred shipping clerks will find lots of work.

The auto will not be neglected, for there are two hundred chauffeurs and a hundred auto-mechanics. A hundred office managers won't be in the way, and a hundred saddlers, a hundred stencilmakers and two hundred packers will easily find jobs.

Two hundred brass moulders and a hundred asbestos workers will give a chance for still other industries, and two hundred porters and a hundred doorkeepers will easily find billets. Six hundred storemen will find lots to do, for they are usually handy at different things, and two hundred insurance men will aid the people to look out for their future.

Two hundred caretakers will find occupations in various ways, and a gun factory and boot and shoe establishments will add to the industrial prosperity of the city with a hundred gunsmiths and seven hundred shoemakers.

There are a hundred couriers, who may not find work at their own business, but who are usually adaptable enough to get something else to do.

A hundred timekeepers will come in very useful and a hundred elevator men will not be too many.

The stretchers will be looked after by a hundred repairers, and there will be a hundred of those necessary evils, collectors.

The interior man will be well looked after also, with a hundred grocers and a hundred butchers, and at least three hundred first-class cooks. Four hundred waiters, and a hundred milkmen will be very useful also, and with three hundred bakers in addition there ought to be no scarcity of food. Besides there are a hundred farmers and a hundred chocolate manufacturers to fall back upon.

For the amusement of the townspeople there are a hundred moving picture operators and a hundred musicians, and even those who like a little quiet refreshment are not neglected.

There are a hundred beer-bottlers, a hundred malsters and a hundred brewery workers, with a hundred bartenders to complement the outfit. A hundred hotel clerks will also cater to the public, and a hundred gardeners will make the town beautiful. a hundred bandsmen will play in the parks, while a hundred coachmen will drive the equipages of the well-to-do. Three hundred grooms will look after horses and carriages.

The intellectual part of the community will not be forgotten, for there are four hundred artists, a hundred compositors, two hundred journalists, a hundred type repairers, a hundred pressfeeders and a hundred proofreaders, besides five hundred printers.

And of these, together with a hundred Y.M.C.A. workers, a Canadian contingent to help the Empire in its wars is made.

New Job for Mayors

A new vocation has sprung up for Mayors of Canadian cities. They are being called into service as matrimonial agents. Every now and again the chief executive of an eastern city gets a letter from a bachelor somewhere, usually in the west asking him to pick out a bride from the city's attractive damsels. One of the civic fathers with such a job on hnad is Montreal famous mayor, Mederic Martin, M.P. Last spring he announced that he had work for everybody that wanted it. There were five thousand men at the City Hall the next day looking for the job. They followed him to his home on Logan avenue and pestered him so much that he had to have police protection. Being mayor he found was a strenuous occupation.

Now, however, he has a worse task than ever before him — one that strikes terror even to his brave heart. He has to find a wife for a burly western farmer. That might not be so difficult in a city of 700,000 people if the would-be benedict were not so particular. She must be a Catholic; he prefers Canadian-born, although he would have no serious objections to English-bred. She must be good to look upon and be somewhere between the ages of 24 and 33 years.

The lady is going to get a model man, for he says of himself that he does not smoke, drink or swear, and that he has property worth $9,000 any day. Moreover, he says he is good-looking.

This is what gets the mayor's "goat": "I want a wife with dreamy eyes, one to attract the attention of a bachelor who has knowledge of the world, and I know you can help me get her." Mayor Mederic has the order of his life now. It's a sticker of a job, but Mederic will do his best.

In addition to his other duties, Mayor Hocken of Toronto may also be involved in the multitudinous worries of a matrimonial agency. Until the first business arrived recently, His Worship did not even know that he had anything to do with the connubial inclinations of bachelors and maids. But this is the letter that came to him the other morning:—

"I saw in a paper that any bachelors in need of a wife to apply to either Hamilton or Toronto. I am an engineer and mechanic; don't drink or use tobacco, 36 years of age. Now I don't like boarding out and I will take a good wife as soon as I find what I want. If you will give me the address of a good person, I will write and see about them. I will not have anything to do with English people as I am Scotch."

The mayor is waiting to hear from applicants.

ARE RELYING ON BOMBS

Germans Use Every Device to Support Their Infantry

LONDON, Dec. 26. — Col. E. D. Swinton, attached to Field Marshal Sir John French's staff as official "eye-witness" of the British expeditionary force in France and Belgium, sends the following narrative of events supplementing and continuing that furnished to include the activities of Dec. 13. The narrative, which is dated Dec. 21, is in part:

"The Germans are making determined efforts to regain the ground they have lost, and by sheer weight of numbers they have partially succeeded.

"After one of our attacks on the 18th, made in the centre of the line, there occurred an innovation in our relations with the enemy. A kind of armistice was concluded in order to permit the burying of the dead on both sides.

"The employment of bombs has undoubtedly been the chief feature of the recent action. The throwing of large bombs from trench mortars and similar smaller missiles from rifles or by hand has now become general all along the line.

"When the fighting reaches the stage of trench warfare at short range weapons, which cannot be used with safety owing to the propinquity to each other of the front lines of either side.

"The great use made by the Germans of these engines of destruction is only one sign of the reliance they place upon every possible means of helping their infantry and artillery in the bombardment of their enemy's positions.

HOW TURNER FIRED A GUN.

An Impromptu Effect That Startled His Fellow Artists.

Turner's impromptu effects were at times consternating to his fellow painters. Mr. Randall Davies, quoting from Leslie, gives in "Six Centuries of Painting," Constable's experience in 1830, when he exhibited his "Opening of Waterloo Bridge." It was placed beside a gray sea piece, by Turner, which lacked all positive color.

"Constable's picture seemed as if painted with liquid gold and silver, and Turner came several times while he was heightening with vermilion and lake the decorations and flags of the city barges. Turner stood behind him looking from the 'Waterloo Bridge' to his own picture, and at last brought his palette from the great room where he was touching another picture, and, putting a round daub of red lead, somewhat bigger than a shilling, on his gray sea, went away without saying a word. The intensity of his red lead, made more vivid by the coolness of his picture, caused even the vermilion and lake of Constable to look weak. 'He has been here,' said Constable, 'and fired a gun.' On the opposite wall was a picture by Jones of 'Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego in the Furnace.' 'A coal,' said Cooper, 'has bounced across the room from Jones' picture and set fire to Turner's sea.'"

Next time Turner came in he glazed the scarlet seal and shaped it into a buoy.

Credit To His Family.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Among officers mentioned in despatches from the front is Major Haldal De Lys, a descendant of the family in which Joan of Arc belonged, who commanded a battalion of 162,000 infantry regiment with the greatest bravery and utter disdain of danger from Oct. 10 to Nov. 9. He is recorded in the official journal as an officer of the greatest value.

GERMANS STOP BELGIAN NOTES

BRUSSELS, Dec. 26. — (Via London.)—The military government of Brussels has cancelled the right of the Belgian National Bank to issue notes and conferred this right upon the Societe Generale de Belgique.

The National Bank carried its gold stock to London, as well as the plates for printing notes and "took various illegal measures to assist the Belgian Government."

The Canadian Year Book.

The Canadian Year Book, recently issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, is better than ever. It contains more information, is better arranged than any of its predecessors, and it is issued in more substantial form, being well bound in solid covers, well printed on good paper, with one section illustrated in a most instructive and interesting way, this section comprising a few more than thirty pages devoted to a sketch of the history of Canada and a chronologicaal table. Among the illustrations are the portraits of many men who had to do with the making of Canada—such men, for instance, as Champlain, Frontenac, Montcalm, Wolfe, Carleton; Durham, Elgin. This sketch enables the reader at one sitting to obtain a bird's-eye view of the history of our Dominion.

The Year Book devotes separate chapters to our great extractive industries, to our commerce, finance, and manufactures—information that at some time or another every Canadian stands in need of. With the Year Book at hand it can readily be obtained. In compiling this book the Department of Trade and Commerce has done a good work.

New C.P.R. Vice-President.

Vice-President and General Counsel Beatty of the C.P.R., who has just been promoted to that post is one of the strong men at the head of the world's greatest company. He was born at Thorold, Ont., in 1877, and educated at Upper Canada College; Model School, Toronto; Harbord Collegiate Institute, Toronto; Toronto University, and Osgoode Hall Law School. He was associated with the law firm of McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin and Creelman, Toronto, and called to the Ontario bar in 1901. In the same year he was appointed as assistant in the law department of the C.P.R., becoming assistant solicitor in 1905, general solicitor in 1910 and general counsel 1913.

Fruit Tree Pest Spreading.

The San Jose scale, which a short time ago attacked fruit trees of Lambton county along the southern boundary, is spreading very fast, according to a report made by Government Agriculturist G. G. Bramhill of Petrolea to the County Council of Lambton recently. He states that the pest has spread as far north as Petrolea, Courtright and Oil Springs, with a few orchards in the north townships affected. Many orchards in Dawn, Euphemia and Sombra are killed outright. He asked that measures be taken to have tree inspectors appointed to see that affected trees were sprayed or cut down by owners.

ATHLETICS

INTERMEDIATE SERIES OPEN WITH BOWMANVILLE HERE ON MONDAY NIGHT

Although Visitors are Reported Strong the Petes are Confident of Winning—Large Crowd Should be on Hand for First Engagement

The double-turretted battleship "Bowmanville" will drop anchor in Peterboro harbor on Monday evening and give the Lift Lock fortress till 8.30 to surrender unconditionally or take the consequences of a spirited attack on the ramparts of the local defence. There is not the slightest chance of a capitulation by the home squadron, for Admiral Bill Nelson commanding the naval artillery has stated his intentionof resisting the invaders to the last ditch and has further stated that his gunners will dismantle the hostile man-of-war and send it back in disgrace.

This attack has been threatening for a long time and the diplomats of the six forces engaged recently met and set a date for the initial battle. The date selected was Tuesday, December 29th but both powers have grown tired of the long wait and the skirmish between the two belligerents will occur Monday, a day sooner, instead.

Peterboro Out to Win.

Beyond question the Bowmanville team will be a hard proposition to overcome but to win the Petes are determined. To lose the opener would mean a black eye in the first round and the local Intermediates have no desire for such a fate. They are going in the game to go right to the championship and expect to go through the district without a defeat. That may be a broad assertion but it is not an empty boast. The goods are behind it.

The line-up of the team will be made known after the Intermediates workout this evening. Messrs. Nelson, Morgan and Dillon are the gents who are expected to use good selective judgment and they undoubtedly will. As there are quite a few aspirants to the positions the task promises to be no light one. James or Dwyer will be in goal for the locals and as a fan remarked the other night "in either the Peterboro team has a star." Pethick will make his debut as a defence man and probably "Ack" Hunter will be with him on the rear guard. Peter Spratt will be on the team but just where is hard to state. He may be on the defence for Hunter, who is a right hand shot, may play right wing as all the other members of the squad are southpaws. There is a possibility that either Morrow or Long of the Juniors may be used as both are "rights."

Trio in Line.

The old trio, Maurice Park, Fred Kelly and Grover Halpin will be on the forward line. Kelly was suffering from a slight attack of tonsilitis but has fully recovered and appears to be in good condition. Park always breaks into the game with a vim and can be depended upon to go strong. Little Grover has shown a big improvement since last season and fans miss their guess if he doesn't prove a big sensation in the Intermediate class. He played lacrosse last summer and naturally his stick handling was greatly benefitted.

Many old boys are home, including former wearers of the blue and white, and all will be on hand to see what is reported as being the "best Peterboro team in years" in action. The management of the hockey club expect a big crowd to be out and it is very unlikely that a disappointment will be registered so early in the season.

"NO SMOKING" THIS WINTER

Rink Management Will not Permit use of Weed at Hockey Matches

In view of catering to the fair sex, the management of Brock Street Rink has decided to request the fans not to smoke at the hockey matches this winter. It is readily understood that many ardent followers of the hockey teams are also adorers of Her Majesty Lady Nicotine but considering the popularity the game has in towns where the "No Smoking" sign is hung at hockey games, the rink management has come to the conclusion tha it would be in the interest of the game to have smoking discontinued. There are waiting rooms in Brock Street Rink in which smoking will be allowed but it will not be permitted in the main auditorium.

Radium Finds Reported.

Three samples of radium-bearing ore from British Columbia have been received at the Mines Department at Ottawa, but the quantity of radium in them has not yet been determined.

The value of minerals produced in Canada this year will be considerably less than last year, because of the scarcity of capital for mining development and also the low prices for silver and other minerals.

MARMORA AGAIN ON HOCKEY MAP

Former Local Man Has Organized a Hockey League

"Tommy" Moffat, the same "Tommy" who has always mixed up in amateur sports while in Peterboro, is in Marmora, and he's into the work of organizing a hockey league among the little villages to the east. The Marmora Herald notes as follows:

"A meeting was held in Stirling last evening for the purpose of organizing a hockey league comprising Stirling, Madoc, Tweed and Marmora. The following officers were elected:

Hon. Presidents—Sandy Grant, M. P. P., Tweed; R. J. Cooke, M. P. P., Stirling.

Past President—George West, Madoc.

President—W. J. Whitty, Stirling.

1st Vice-Pres.—G. C. Moon, Madoc.

2nd Vice-Pres.—William Turcott, Tweed.

Secretary-Treasurer—T. Moffat, Marmora.

Executive—The managers of each team."

Don't be afraid of doing more than your share of the work; people take that sort of greediness with the greatest complacency.

WELL KNOWN CURLER DIES VERY SUDDENLY

While curling Wednesday night at Cannington, C. C. McFadden, of that place, suddenly toppled over dead from heart failure. Mr. McFadden was enjoying one of the first games of the season, and was taking part heartily in the game, and apparently in the best of health when, it may have been from too much strain suddenly before he was not in condition, heart failure took him off.

He is well known to many Peterboro people. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, Mrs. Ross McKenzie, of New Ontario, Miss Katharine McFadden, at home, Thomas McFadden in Toronto and Charles at home in Cannington.

The late Mr. McFadden was a man of about fifty years of age.

COMMENT

As You Like it

THE ACTION on the part of the rink management to stop smoking at the hockey games will in all probability meet with considerable opposition. The waiting before a game and at the intermissions is mighty hard to endure unless one is creating a little fog, but if the fans would stop to consider the great effect a smoky atmosphere has on the players, and members of the female section of the populace, they can surely see that it is but right to "cut out the smokes." Followers of the game are anxious to see the game at its best and to have the players going at the best the air they inhale should at least be free from tobacco smoke.

THE SPORTING COMMUNITY is pleased to see Dwyer and James both out trying for the place between the posts on the intermediate squad. Both men are fully capable of performing the duties, and to us it looks like a flip of a coin.

THE PETES WILL be called upon to pass the board of censors at their practice tonight between 5.30 and 6.30. Peterboro old boys are in the city in abundance and will be on hand to express their opinions.

"JERRY" COUGHLIN, who was down in New York, has passed up the white lights and is back in this city for the holidays. He expects to play "back north" this season. "Jerry" figured in the northern clime last season and made a big hit.

THE FORWARD LINE of the Juniors will likely be composed of Knapmen, Jackson, Richardson and Rose. The four boys have been going well thus far.

THE CLEVELAND Hockey Club has advised the local club that they cannot give the Petes a game in Cleveland till February. The American team would even prefer to wait till March so in all probability the Intermediates will wind up the season there.

THE JUNIORS will practice on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. The Intermediates will work out with them on Wednesday.

CURLERS BUSY WITH THE STANES

Great Activity at Curling Rink on the Holiday

Good ice made curling extremely popular yesterday at the curling rink and it was liberally patronized. Two rinks were in use all morning and three in the afternoon. No schedule games were played at all, those turning out simply endeavoring to get in a little practice. No record was kept of the games. The bonspiels will not be started until early in February.

In the evening very few curlers were out owing to the extremely cold weather. No visiting curlers were on hand.

FINAL WORKOUT THIS EVENING

The Intermediates will hold their final workout previous to Monday night's game, this evening between 5.30 and 6.30. Many visitors in the city, who are anxious to get a line on the 1915 Peterboro team, will be on hand to look 'em over. The way the fans have been talking about the two Peterboro teams has caused many old boys to become interested. The line-up for the fray with Bowmanville will be made known after tonight's practice.

THE TRIGGER

A turkey shoot was held on the grounds of the Peterboro Gun Club yesterday morning. Some disappointment and delay was caused at the start on account of a break in the trap, made by the cold weather. However, after temporary repairs, two 10-bird events were run off, three turkeys to each event.

PROGRESS.

EACH day we ought to try to make
Advance, however small.
Then very surely we will know
Considerable by fall,
And in a year or two or more
Perhaps we'll know it all.

Pick up a trifle here and there,
And if we can't surprise
Ourselves the natives we will fool.
They'll think we are so wise,
And those who knew us years ago
Will open up their eyes.

Its just the little new and then,
The picking up a crumb
Of knowledge as it drifts along,
Of new facts as they come,
And holding to them firm and fast
That makes the tidy sum.

Rome wasn't builded in a day,
Of that you may be sure;
An education all at once
No student can secure.
He tries it, and he has to take
The nervous breakdown cure.

So get your knowledge on the old
Time tried installment plan.
Each day some new and useful fact
Secure to bridge the span.
And very shortly you will know
As much as any man.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Christmas time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB?

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT, every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special clamp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself a Xmas present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

BATTLEFIELD HOSPITALS.

Rules That Govern the Treatment of the Wounded.

The care of the wounded is necessarily an important duty imposed on every nation in case of war.

The general system adopted for providing a medical service is practically identical in the armies of all the great powers. It contemplates a division of the service into three sections—that which belongs to and accompanies the fighting troops, that which pertains to the base (of supplies) and the line of communications and that which pertains to the home territory, or "the zone of the interior."

The principle governing these services is that nothing but first aid and emergency treatment, should be attempted in the immediate zone of combat and that, having received this treatment, the disabled should be quickly transported to the "base," where abundant facilities for their care can be provided without encumbering the fighting forces.

Here at the base they are carefully classified, and those who are so seriously disabled as to be unfit for further service at the front are sent back to hospitals at home, while those who are less seriously disabled are retained until they are well enough to leave the hospital, when they are transferred to the convalescent camp. Here they remain until they have fully regained their strength, when they rejoin their regiments at the front.—Scientific American.

When you insist on having your own way and eventually get it, it often happens that you don't in the least know what to do with it.

Children Had Fine Time at the Shelter

Christmas this year at the Children's Shelter was enjoyed more thoroughly than any visit of Santa Claus in years. A joyous afternoon was spent by the fourteen children of the institution around a Christmas tree which was stripped of its burden by Santa Claus and the presents placed in the outstretched hands of the children. Superintendent Henry remarked this morning that in his opinion there never was a Christmas in the history of Peterboro at which the poor were better cared for than this Christmas.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

The festival of Christmas was observed in All Saints' Church yesterday by the celebration of holy communion at 8.30 a.m., followed by morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock, and communion. Both services were well attended and were conducted by the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A. The choir, although the ranks were depleted somewhat owing to the holidays, numbered over thirty. The Te Deum set to music by Jackson was sung, also the anthem "We have Seen His Star in the East," by Simper.

The Christmas services will be extended over tomorrow. A list of the services will be found elsewhere.

FRANCIS JAMES CAVANAGH.

Peterboro lost a lifelong and very widely known resident last night in the person of Francis James Cavanagh, who died at the residence of his father, Mr. Timothy Cavanagh, 389 Queen street. Deceased was 42 years of age, and was born in this city in 1872. For the past seven months he had suffered from Bright's disease.

The late Mr. Cavanagh was identified with the hotel business in Peterboro, and there were few men better known or more popular in the business than he.

Mr. Cavanagh was a staunch supporter of the Conservative party all his life.

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

The Y. M. C. A. building was open all day Christmas except from 12 to 2 and 5 to 7 p.m. The bowling alleys and the social rooms were well filled and the new skating rink was occupied all day.

Each member of the employed staff served three hours, and had the balance of the holiday to himself, and thus by following the system of three-hour relays the building was kept under the right supervision.

Next week will be an unusually busy period for the Association, being the second holiday week for the school boys. Every member of the staff has his hands full to keep the boys and young men occupied. Many special plans must be kept in operation all the time.

The Life Problem Club, on Sunday afternoon at 4.15, will be addressed by Mr. J. M. Lang, of Toronto, a former well-known Peterboro boy. Every young man is invited to hear Mr. Lang.

The senior Bible classes will be omitted Monday evening next, but will resume studies on the first Monday in January.

Not Asked for Army.

TOKIO, Dec. 26. — During the course of an interpellation, the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, Takaaka Kato, declared that no country had asked Japan to send an army to Europe.

The War Minister, Lt.-Gen. Oka, said that the Japanese had sent arms to Europe to the value of 10,000,000 yen ($5,000,000).

Our idea of retributive justice would be to turn the insurance agents loose on the book agents.

BELGIUM WAR PICTURES AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Commencing at the Grand Opera House next Friday and Saturday, Jan. 1st and 2nd, with a matinee each day, the people of Peterboro will have the opportunity to see the first and only authentic motion pictures of the European war. These pictures were taken less than eight weeks ago and have been in this country less than a month. They were taken by that daring photographer, Edwin F. Weigle, who gained fame by taking the great pictures of the American occupation of Vera Cruz. He was able to get these pictures only after he had reached an agreement with the Belgian war office, by the terms of which 60 per cent. of the profits go to the Belgian Red Cross. Mr. Weigle endured great hardships and was several times severely wounded. These wonderful pictures, taken within fifty feet of the actual fighting, were first shown on this continent about three weeks ago in Chicago. Over 45,000 people in Chicago paid to see them the first four days and they are still running there to record houses. In Cleveland over 6,000 people saw them the opening day.

On Wednesday, December 3, the pictures were shown at a private view to H. R. H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia, in Ottawa. His royal highness expressed the keenest pleasure and complimented the producers on the wonderful results obtained.

On December 9 Lieut.-Governor Hendrie viewed the pictures in Toronto.

These great pictures show the firing line as it is. It is the only chance the people here will have to learn the truth about actual conditions. The actors play their parts in grim earnest, without rehearsal, and the scenario was not arranged by a moving picture director but by the greatest military tacticians of our day. One sees the real fighting as clearly as if one were on the ground. And remember, in seeing these wonderful pictures that mirror the battle fields of Belgium in action before your very eyes."

THE EMPIRE THEATRE

Wish to announce that they have just secured for the benefit of the public of Peterborough and vicinity the highest standard of pictures that are being produced. They are not sparing expense in bringing these wonderful plays to this city, the first of which will be shown on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

The greatest theatrical stars of the day, such as Lillian Russell, Mary Pickford, William Farnum, Carlyle Blackwell and many others of equal merit, are now appearing in these big features only. Mr. Carlyle Blackwell will take the leading part in "The Spitfire," shown here for the first time Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The admission for these plays has always been 25c and up to $1.25. Our prices will be: 5c and 10c, afternoons, and 10c and 15c, evenings, for the first three days of next week.

With this program there will be shown a war topic and a thrilling comedy.

GERMANY AMAZED AT SUDDEN AND DARING BLOW BY BRITISH

BRITISH BOMBS WERE MOST DESTRUCTIVE

A Forerunner of the Coming Inevitable Destruction of the German Fleet in Home Waters --- Von Tirpitz's Scheme Shattered.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — A Herald cable from Amsterdam says that newspaper despatches from Germany give few details of the British aerial raid upon Cuxhaven, but all describe the amazement and confusion produced by this sudden and unexpected blow. Although the German official report says the British attempt was absolutely futile, it is easy to read between the lines that British bombs were most destructive.

What surprises Germany is the daring of the British cruiser force which succeeded in coming through a mine field to the mouth of the Elbe. The general feeling is that England has decided to wait no longer for the German fleet to come out, but intends attacking decisively. There is foreboding that Von Tirpitz's scheme for forcing England to make peace without having risked Germany's best ships is already shattered and in pieces.

The Cuxhaven demonstration has been useful as a forerunner of the coming inevitable destruction of the German fleet in German waters.

WHAT THE CHIEF ENGINEER OF THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC SAYS.

ARE THE CITIZENS of Peterborough going to sanction an expenditure of ten, twenty or forty thousand dollars for an auxiliary steam plant for their power and waterworks systems? Is this city going to be tied up, as it was recently, for lack of water and lack of electric power? What manufacturers are looking for is a constant power. When the local power plants fail to deliver power, thousands of dollars in wages and delayed business are lost. Some say the trouble arising from frazil and anchor ice is a condition of nature, and cannot be overcome. On page 2, column 1, we give today the testimony of the chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission as to the methods employed by that body.

BANK CLERKS NOT LIABLE

Not in Class Affected by Lord's Day Act

In a judgment handed down by Police Magistrate Dumble today, his Worship ruled that bank clerks are not of the class of persons made liable under the law regarding profanation of the Lord's Day, and dismissed the charges against the Bank of Commerce bank clerks who were charged with violating the Act ten days ago.

The evidence in this case was that the defendants exercised the business of their ordinary calling on the Lord's Day, and that they were engaged in balancing their bank books; that having special work to do at the end of the banking year, they had gotten behind in their ordinary work, and on the Sunday evening in question were trying to make a little time to get their books up to date.

His Worship stated that many charges had been laid under the Act, but few, if any, convictions made. In the present day the judges seemed inclined to leave such question to be dealt with in "foro conscientiae," rather than in courts of law.

If the Act applied to these young men, it would be under the words "or other persons whatsoever who do or exercise any worldly labor, business or work of his ordinary calling." The Act, however, says nothing to that effect.

E. A. Peck acted for the defendants.

THREE YEARS

Assailants of N. Minicola are Sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary

The assailants of Nicholas Minicola, were sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary, at the conclusion of their trial this morning in police court.

How he was attacked and under what circumstances was told in police court today by Nicholas Minicola, during the trial of Frank Carnival and Nicholas Lattanzo who were charged with assaulting him with a hammer with intent to committ robbery on December 12th. Minicola asserted that Carnivale grabbed him from behind and held him while Lattanzo struck him ten or fifteen times with the hammer, on different parts of the head and shoulders. Two cracks he received on the head drew blood.

Had $250 in Pockets.

Mr. Minicola said he was on his way home with $250 in his trousers pocket. At the corner of Rubidge and Brock his pipe went out and in knocking the ashes out he turned half way round and noticed the two men behind him. He recognized Carnivale immediately and also Lattanjo. He thought he was to have company so put his hands in his pockets and moved to one side of the walk to make room for them. Carnivale however pinioned his arms to his sides from the rear while Lattanjo sprang in front and commenced to ply the hammer. Mr. Minicola cried out for help whereupon Carnival tried to cover his mouth with his hands. Mr. Minicola then grappled with him and the three men fell in a heap, and seeing they were bested took to their heels. Minicola then phoned to the police which led to their arrest that was enabled by means of their footprints being traced in the snow to their hiding places.

The two prisoners elected summary trial through their counsel, Mr. Widdifield, who entered pleas of not guilty.

HUNTER KILLED

Declined to Stop Shooting Ducks, When Ordered by the Police

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Buffalo, Dec. 28. — One American was killed and another wounded by soldiers patrolling the Canadian border at Fort Erie, opposite this city today. The men were shooting ducks out of season at Niagara river, and in Canadian waters. Provincial Police Officer Delany of Fort Erie ordered the men to stop shooting. They declined, and Delany called upon a corporal and two privates of the 44th Battalion of the Canadian militia for assistance. The corporal ordered the men to come ashore. Instead, they headed their boat for the American shore, and were beating a hasty retreat when, at the order of Delany, the soldiers fired. One of the men, Walter Smith, was shot through the head, and his companion, Charles Dorsch, suffered a serious wound in the shoulder. When the hunters toppled over in their boat the soldiers put out in their boat and towed the hunters' craft to shore. Both men resided in Buffalo.

Captain Norman Fite, in charge of the border patrol at Fort Erie, declined to discuss the matter further than to say that he had reported the shooting to the commanding officer at Toronto.

WAS PIONEER OF MONAGHAN

The Late John A. Fowler Spent all His Life in the Township

North Monaghan's oldest resident and pioneer in the person of John A. Fowler passed away at three-thirty this morning at the grand old age of eighty-eight. Few residents of the township enjoyed such a wide circle of warm friends to whom his death will cause a sharp feeling of regret. His advanced age militated against recovery from a sudden illness which developed yesterday morning and it was quickly seen that the end was near.

Mr. Fowler was credited with being the oldest resident of North Monaghan. He was born on the Fowler homestead in the year 1827, almost adjoining his present farm, and he had lived there continuously.

The deceased is survived by five sons and three daughters. His sons are William of North Dakota; Robert, James, George and E. B. Fowler residing in or around Peterboro. Three daughters are Miss Kate, and Mrs. G. H. Webber of Peterborough, and Mrs. Thomson of Brandon, Man. A niece, Miss Helen White, also resides on the homestead.

The funeral will take place from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 to Little Lake cemetery. Service at house at 2 o'clock. Friends are asked to omit flowers.

CHATEAU BURNED WHEN NO MORE CHAMPAGNE REMAINED

Mr. Boks, who recently arrived in Canada from Ghent, Belgium, brought with him the above photograph of a chateau at Melle, near Ghent, which was burned by the Germans after they had rifled the wine cellar, drunk themselves into a state of intoxication, and smashed the bottles of what wine they could not drink. These were piled in great heaps in the courtyard outside.

ADVANCING IN BELGIUM

Eight Hundred Yards of First Line Trenches Yielded up by the Germans Near Carency

RUSSIANS RETIRE FROM CRACOW

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 28. — The official statement this afternoon says:

"In Belgium we have continued to advance. To the west of Lombaertzyde we are actually at the foot of the sand dunes on which the enemy has established his line of resistance, at a point south of Ypres. We have lost a section of trenches near Hollebeke. In the region of Lens, near Carency, the enemy yielded under our attack 800 yards of first line trenches.

"In the valley of the River Aisne and in Champagne there has been intermittent artillery firing, which was particularly severe in the vicinity of Rheims and around Perthes. The enemy directed their artillery fire especially against our positions to the west of Perthes, conquered and occupied by us.

"On the heights of the Meuse there has been slight progress by our troops along the entire front.

"In the Vosges, the enemy bombarded the railroad station at St. Die, but the railroad service has not ben interrupted.

"In Upper Alsace, to the northeast of Steinbach, a counter-attack of the Germans was repulsed."

PETROGRAD, Dec. 28. --- The investment by the Russians of the Austrian fortress of Cracow has again been raised. Following the discovery of an attempt made by the Austrians to divide the Russian forces in Galicia, the Russians retired eastward for a distance of fifty miles.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 28. — Russian forces, according to advices received today from Galicia, have succeeded in taking possession of a twenty-mile strip of territory south of Tuchow, thereby separating the two Austrian armies.

The forces of General Boehm Erolli, the Austrian commander, are claimed by the Russians to be retreating precipitately, and the western Austrian army is said to be badly crippled.

The Mayor's Adress.

Mayor Buller, in his opening remarks, referred to the custom of mayors serving for a term of two years, and thought he was entitled to another year. As to the rumor that his position would bar him, there is absolutely nothing in it. The authorities had given him permission. The district inland revenue inspector of Eastern Ontario, he said, is the mayor of Kingston.

His Worship spoke of the progress the city has made during this year when the business outlook was by no means promising. The cause, as is well known, could not be regulated by any mayor or council. The council of this city went at the task and succeeded in alleviating the trouble to a great extent. They were much assisted in this by the fact that Peterboro is one of the best debentured cities in Ontario, and in fact in the Dominion.

As to the $10,000 for the Patriotic Fund, Mayor Buller said he supported it when it came before the council, and he would support it again. The wives and dependents of the men who are fighting our battles at the front must be looked after. As to the troubles he and his assistants had to face in the form of financial difficulties, Mayor Buller stated that $150,000 worth of short-term debentures have been sold right in this city and vicinity.

There has been a lot of work performed during the past year, and if the spring finds men still out of work, more work will be gone on with. In his Worship's opinion, there was a possibility of things being a little better, but if they are not, he will support any move to provide work. The Mayor did not neglect to touch upon the high assessment. He explained that this was the result of so much work being done in the past few years, but he assured the ratepayers that there will be a decrease in a short time. He also pointed out how the giving of $10,000 to the Patriotic Fund was not a loss to the city, for $18,000 was given back for local charities.

The work of constructing a surface drainage system will have to be taken care of next year, and it was his intention to see that the work was performed in a maner that it will remain for all time. At present the engineer is working on the plans. This work will help the workingman, and Mayor Buller made it known to his listeners that he was for the workingman first, last and all the time, particularly now when they are in need of assistance.

His Worship's closing remarks were to the effect that he and Ald. Duncan were the best of friends and would remain friends, no matter who was elected.

Ald. Duncan's Address.

Ald. Duncan's address to the meeting was as follows:—

I desire to respectfully solicit votes and your influence that I may be elected Mayor of the City of Peterborough for the year 1915. I was born in this city and have lived here all my life, and feel and have always felt a deep interest in the city.

I have served you in the City Council for eight years, having been elected several times by the whole city under the general vote system and also since then have represented the South Ward. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works two years and Chairman of the Property Committee four years, and served as a member on all the other Committees, and the experience I have had and the knowledge of the affairs and needs of the city I have obtained during these years will be

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC HAS SOLVED THE DIFFICULTY.

WHEN IT WAS STATED in the Review that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission had overcome the difficulty arising from frazil and anchor ice, some not only refused to accept the statement, but substantially denied it. Rather than rely on our own experience of the system which dates from the inception of that great enterprise, we have written to the chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Mr. F. F. Gaby, requesting a statement of the manner in which the Hydro-Electric has met the problem of frazil and anchor ice. Mr. Gaby explained this in a letter we received a short time ago.

Mr. Gaby says that the two fundamental conditions governing the proper handling of frazil and anchor ice are: (1) The generating of diverting currents in the forebay, and (2) The protection of the forebay racks from the outside air.

The first condition is met by placing ice sluiceways in the forebay and drawing water through these sluice-ways, in such a way as to cause a current of water across the forebay, in a direction transverse to the direction of flow, from the forebay through the wheels. In many cases, this diverting current is not strong enough to act independently, and the frazil and anchor ice must be assisted through the sluice-ways by mechanical means.

The second condition is obtained by completely housing-in the forebay racks in such a way as to shelter them from the wind, and to take advantage of such heat as may be radiated from the rest of the power-house building. In many cases, also, provision is made for the direct heating of the building in which the racks are housed. Trouble from frazil ice is caused by the adhering of frazil to the rack bars in sufficient quantity to obstruct the flow of water. In a general case, if the frazil passes through the rack bars without adhering to them, no trouble arises. If the temperature of the rack bars is the smallest fraction of a degree higher than the temperature of the water passing through them, the frazil will not stick, hence the expedient of housing-in, and in some cases, heating the rack enclosure.

The only means taken to protect the Niagara plants from ice trouble are those mentioned above. The plant of the Ontario Power Company, from which the Hydro-Electric Power Commission obtains power, is not subject to ice trouble of this kind, as the forebay of the plant is located above the upper rapids, where the ice forms. The total shut-down of the Ontario Power Company's plant, which occurred some years ago, was not caused by frazil and anchor ice, but by a western gale, which broke up the ice in Lake Erie and drove it into the river in such immense quantities that it jammed the channel.

By housing-in is meant that a shed or roofed structure is built over the racks and forebay so that the water for some distance above the bars or racks is completely protected from the wind and outside air. It is well known that a liquid like water is very susceptible to changes in temperature, and the moment a fraction of heat or cold, greater or less than that at which it is, is applied to it, the water immediately starts to equalize the difference in temperature. Thus, a way of rapid cooling or heating is by passing water through a cold or hot tube. Hence, if the water of a stream that is used to operate a power-house passes through a tube in the shape of an enclosed forebay, its temperature will be slightly changed, and, as it requires only "the smallest fraction of a degree" to prevent trouble from frazil ice, the housing-in appears to be a fairly cheap, efficient and reasonable method of dealing with just such a problem that arose in Peterborough a short time ago, a problem with a seriousness that was very great, but which, fortunately, passed without resulting in dire consequences.

It should be added, however, that the main object of an enclosure is not to change the temperature of the water, which varies very little in winter weather, but to keep the temperature of the bars slighly above the freezing point, as that prevents the frazil from sticking to the rack bars.

Mr. Gaby says he is not quite sure whether the Ontario Power Company finds it necessary to heat its gate-house, but adds that heat would no doubt be provided if required. Surely, the methods employed by such a large power distributor as the Hydro-Electric Commission ought to be of some service in solving practically the same identical problem in the city of Peterborough.

A LITTLE TOWN'S BIG STORY.

SOME LITTLE TOWNS tell big stories about industry. There is one down in Quebec; about thirty miles from Montreal. It's as pretty as a picture and as lively as a Maypole dance, and besides the half-dozen hit-or-miss factories that help keep it booming, it has two enormous concerns, each of which spells a story for the average Canadian. One of these marvellous modern factories turns out sewing machines. The patents are held in the United States, but the wages and the profits and the cost of raw materials are paid in Canada. The same machine used to come in over a tariff wall. Now everything about that machine helps that little town to maintain its hundreds of workers. The wage bill of that factory runs into thousands upon thousands a week. When buying a sewing machine it might be easy to get one made abroad. It might be almost as good a machine as that made in the little town on the Quebec river. But the only good such a purchase would do this country is the thirty per cent. duty that it pays the Government. The reason that great factory was built at a cost of nearly a quarter of a million dollars was to make goods for Canadian homes by paying the wages of labour and the profits of industry to Canadians. It is magnificently doing its work. It is a monument to the economic good sense of Canadians as expressed in the Made-in-Canada idea.

WILL ITALY BE ABLE TO STAY NEUTRAL?

EVERY LITTLE WHILE news comes out of what Italy is doing as a neutral power, and her actions lead always to the question, "Will she remain neutral?" Italy is doing things that the United States of America refused to do, and is assuming a position that looks more and more like a preparation for conflict. The Toronto Mail and Empire said recently, regarding Italy's position:

> "The soul of Mazzini would surely have been stirred had he heard Premier Salandra declare in the Italian Senate that 'Italy's destinies will surely be accomplished owing to the unity of the people and the strength of the army. Hence, when the time is ripe, with the power of right, and the force of arms, the country will be enlarged.' The patriots of the great struggle for Italian unity, among them Cavour and Garibaldi, would see in the present situation a magnificent opening for Italy to complete her work of unification. The ousting of the Austrian from control of the last inch of Italian territory would fittingly crown the labours of the liberators and consolidators of Italy.
>
> The carefully weighed words of Premier Salandra, coming soon after his public references to Italian aspirations, and the demonstration of the deputies in favour of France and Britain, are significant. So are the preparations Italy is making steadily for war. She is purchasing in the United States horses, food supplies, and army equipment. A war loan of a billion lire, or $200,000,000, is being floated. The army is being mobilized and trained on a scale far larger than would be necessary for purposes of merely maintaining neutrality. Premier Salandra's prediction that Italy will be enlarged by force of arms is surely next door to a proclamation of coming hostilities by Italy against her ancient enemy, Austria. If toward Spring Italy takes the plunge, the hope of the German diplomats that the Triple Alliance would be strong enough to keep Austria and Italy on peaceful terms with each other will be smashed. The entrance of Italy into the war in the Spring, when Austria is thoroughly beaten and demoralized, and Germany seeking vainly to get out of the meshes of the Allies, would mean the speedier ushering in of peace."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HAVE YOU gathered up last year's resolutions you stored away in the attic? Bring them out again on New Year's. They'll look almost as good as new.

WE PRESUME that most of the Christmas turkey has by now disappeared. No doubt the loss will result in a healthier feeling in the vicinity of the stomach.

MAKE WAY now for the New Year's goose.

TO THE ENEMY, ON HIS ACHIEVEMENT.

Now wanes the third moon since your conquering host
Was to have laid our weakling army low,
And walked through France at will. For that loud boast
What have you got to show?

A bomb that chipped a tower of Notre Dame,
Leaving its mark like trippers' knives that scar
The haunts of beauty—that's the best reclame
You have achieved so far.

Paris, that through her humble triumph-arch
Was doomed to see you tread your father's tracks—
Paris, your goal, now lies a six days' march
Behind your homing backs.

Pressed to the borders where you lastly passed
Bulging with insolence and fat with pride,
You stake your all upon a desperate cast
To stem the gathering tide.

Eastward the Russian draws you to his fold,
Content, on his own ground, to bide his day,
Out of whose toils not many feet of old
Found the returning way.

And still along the seas our watchers keep
Their grip upon your throat with bands of steel,
While that Armada, which should rake the deep,
Skulks in its hole at Kiel.

So stands your record—stay, I cry you grace—
I wronged you. There is Belgium, where your sword
Has bled to death a free and gallant race
Whose life you held in ward.

Where on your trail the smoking land lies bare
Of hearth and homestead, and the dead babe clings
About its murdered mother's breast—ah, there,
Yes, you have done great things!

—Sir Owen Seaman, in Punch.

Kind Words for Our City of 22,000.

(Orillia Packet.)

We are not sure of the exact population of Peterborough, but assuming it to be 20,000, which must be near the mark, the $60,000 subscribed to the Patriotic Fund in a campaign of only three days, means $3 each for every man, woman and child in the town. This is a splendid showing, of which Peterborough may well be proud. Excepting only Berlin and Waterloo, this we believe to be the best record in Canada.

HOW TO GROW VEGETABLE SEEDS

Dominion Horticulturist Gives Practical Methods for Market Gardeners

It is a simple matter to save seed of vegetables which have only an annual growth, such as beans, corn, peas, peppers, tomatoes, cucumbers, melons, squash pumpkins, radish, lettuce, etc., writes Mr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist in an article urging upon Canadian farmers the advisability of growing and using their own seeds. All that is necessary is to clean the seed as soon as possible after the vegetables are ripe, dry it rapidly and then keep it dry until it is needed for sowing. Raising seed of biennials such as beets, carrots, parsnips, onions, cabbage, cauliflower and celery is a little more difficult.

To raise seed of beets, carrots and parsnips, good medium-sized, shapely specimens are selected at digging time, the tops are cut off to within about two inches of the end of the specimen thus leaving the centre shoot. Cutting back close to the root will remove this centre shoot, which is not desirable. Store the roots in a cool, fairly dry cellar, or they may be pitted outside, but if this is done care should be taken not to cover them with much soil until really cool weather sets in, so as to avoid danger of heating.

Careful Planting

Early in the spring plant the roots out in good, well-drained soil, planting the roots about two feet apart in rows three feet apart. When planting it is desirable to have the top of the beets, carrots or parsnips slightly below the surface of the ground. Cultivate the ground regularly and the reward is likely to be a fine crop of seed. The stalks are cut when the seed is beginning to ripen and allowed to dry thoroughly, after which the seed may be thrashed out and put away in a dry place until it is needed in spring.

To grow cabbage seed, plants having the best heads should be selected and the whole plant dug. Half-formed heads or even the stumps after the head has been removed will produce seed, but it is recommended to use plants with good heads.

During the winter the plants should be kept in as cool a place as possible without freezing, and if freezing cannot be prevented they should be kept where they will thaw out gradually. The best plan is to store them outside. A trench is opened where water will not lie, wide enough for three or four cabbages side by side. They are set in this in a slightly sloping position with the roots down. The tops are then covered with straw at first or a light covering of earth to keep out light frosts, and later covered with sufficient soil to prevent freezing. It is important not to put the soil on until it is necessary to prevent frost, as there is danger of the cabbage heating.

Cabbage can be successfully stored in any cool cellar if it is not very dry or very wet. In the spring the cabbages are taken out and planted where severe frosts are over, about three feet apart each way, putting all the root and stalks below ground and leaving the head above. When solid heads are used slits should be made crosswise on the top of the head when planting, which will make it easier for the seed stalk to force its way out. Seed stalks will soon be thrown up and each plant will produce a large quantity of seed.

Banking the earth against the stalks will help to support them. When part of the seed pods have become brown the stalks should be cut and hung up and thrashed when dry and the seed kept dry until seeded. Cauliflowers are treated much the same as cabbage, but are much more difficult to to bring through the winter.

In growing onion seed the first step is to select medium-sized, well-shaped and well-ripened bulbs and then store them in a cool, dry place. Early in the spring they should be planted out about six inches apart in rows three feet apart. If the onions have sprouted the sprout should be cut off when being planted, as they will then throw up straighter stalks. The upper side of the bulbs should be an inch or two below the surface of the ground after being planted.

When the plants have grown sufficiently they should be banked up about six inches to help support the plants when the tops become heavy with flowers and seed. When the seed stalks show yellow near the ground the seed balls are cut off, with about two inches of the stalk attached, it being necessary to go over the plantation several times, as they do not all ripen at once. They are then spread out to dry, and when dried are thrashed and the seed is cleaned and put in a dry place until needed. It is important to dry the seed as rapidly as possible.

FEDERATION WITHIN THE BRITISH ISLES.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—At this juncture in the world's history, when all are doing their "bit" to bring about a successful issue, some by enlisting and sacrificing their lives that others may live in peace and quietude, others by less dangerous but perhaps not less useful ways, lending a helping hand, and all, from the youngest to the oldest, striving to secure an honorable and lasting peace, not merely a breathing-space as a prelude to a more strenuous contest, it may not be unprofitable to consider very briefly how we can best profit by such a consummation.

First, then, we want federation within the British Isles, such as prevails in Canada and elsewhere—every nation, English, Scottish, Irish, and Welsh, managing its own affairs, in its own homeland, and each, of course, sending its representatives to the Imperial Parliament to legislate upon Imperial matters. Each nation should not only have the right to govern its own country, but it should be free to govern it in its own way. At present the lesser nations are governed according to English ideas, because English representatives predominate, and endless litigation is the result. Not only should the cabinets in the national legislatures be responsible to the people through their representatives, but the Imperial Parliament should also be responsible to the Imperial representatives of the people. The foreign policy of the Empire should not be a "one man" affair; it, too, must be under proper control, and no treaties should be concluded without the consent of parliament, the consent to be secured before, not after, completion of the treaty. We have long been told that to secure peace we must be prepared for war, but the newer and better policy is, to secure peace prepare for peace and work for peace. Armaments should be under national, not private, control. And where it may be necessary to rearrange boundaries, the consent of the affected inhabitants should be first secured.

Things can never be quite as they were before the war; old standards will be revised, and new standards erected, broader, nobler, and higher. It would be well if individual standards were also revised, and improved. The most valuable lesson the war has to teach will be lost if it does not bring nearer to each of us the day

"When man to man, th' world o'er,
"Shall brithers be an' a' that."

Yours faithfully,

N. J. H. MOFFAT.

Prevention of Sore Feet

Be sure that boots are well-fitting, with broad soles, the uppers made of soft leather. Wear soft socks.

Wash feet with very soapy water, and dry carefully without rinsing. If the skin is unbroken, rub well with methylated spirit. Powder thickly with starch and borax, or boracic powder.

Keeping a Stove Bright

A method by which you can keep the stove ever shining is to first blacklead and polish in the ordinary way, then rub with turpentine and polish with a piece of velvet. Then all that is required each week is to rub the stove over with turpentine and polish with velvet.

Washing Silk Handkerchiefs

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed in a warm lather made with pure soap. This should be blued, as should the rinsing water. Roll up tightly in a cloth and iron the handkerchief between linen or they will turn yellow.

Christmas time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB!

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself an Xmas present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

Daffodils in Town

They Brought Back Memories of True Love

By HENRIETTA CRAWFORD

Everybody was sipping tea and nibbling cakes save Mildred. For her tea and cakes had no charm, perhaps because she had poured the one and dispensed the other steadily for the past hour.

She leaned back in her chair behind the tea table absently watching the little crowd of fashionably dressed men and women that were moving about the parlors, yet conscious nevertheless that the man beside her was observing her and enjoying her experience from his own standpoint, which was so different from her own that she often wondered how he could find anything in her to interest him.

In a low voice he was telling her about the people before her eyes—how the woman in gray velvet had recently come into a fortune and how the girl in blue was sadly puzzled as to whether she would be happier with an American because she loved him or with an English eldest son because he was heir to a title.

She listened carelessly, scarcely replying. In reality her mind was busy with its own affairs. She was merely their hostess' country cousin who poured tea and to whom Hillis Hubbard was somewhat attentive.

"You must be very nice to him," Cousin Nell had advised the first day Mildred was in the house.

"And why?" the girl had inquired.

"Because he is a good match, as good as there is to be had. That counts very much in my world, Mildred. It may be that you will charm him, being a type that he is unacquainted with."

Certainly it seemed that she had charmed him. Since the first day she met him he had been attentive to her, sending her flowers, taking her to ride in his motor and to lunch at the best places.

She had been quite frank with him from the first in spite of Cousin Nell, telling him that her father was only a poor country doctor and this was the first time she had been asked to visit her cousin.

As she leaned back in her chair she was wondering how it would seem to always have plenty of money, to buy one's frocks at the best shops, to live in a house where the work was done as by magic, to go about in a blue and gold motor and be able to hear all the best music.

Just that afternoon Cousin Nell had said when she came in to inspect her toilet:

"You understand, Mildred, that Mr. Hubbard will have something to say to you before you go home. There is but one answer for you to make, and I am sure he expects that one."

"But—but I'm not certain I care for him enough," Mildred had stammered. Nell had stared at her.

"My dear child! Do you think that any one in these days marries for love alone?"

"I didn't know," the girl said humbly. Then she thought of her cousin's elderly husband, who was seldom visible save at breakfast time, and the hitherto concealed reason for Nell's strange marriage was suddenly revealed to her.

Mildred had indeed experienced much since coming into her cousin's house. None of the golden rules which her parents had taught her were applicable here. Other ideals were cherished, other aims kept in sight.

Her father and mother had married for love. Money they knew to be a great good without which one could yet be happy. The poorest person was as good as the wealthiest, provided he was of moral character. Yet, after all, when one was constantly meeting strangers how could one know more about them than their appearance revealed? Who cared whether Mrs. Poynter's first husband was living?

She was the wife of a notable rich man and very agreeable. In Berlin she would have been looked upon with suspicion, but here she was courted. Yes, money was a wonderful thing. It brought one so much. Even if she did not love Mr. Hubbard she could no doubt be very happy with him. To be able to wear a dress like that gray velvet and black furs with long silver hairs in them, each one of which represented a purseful of money, and rubies like Mrs. Ogden's!

The girl drew a long breath and stirred uneasily. What would her father and mother say? What would Tom think? She bit her lip as the memory of his brave yet tender face possessed her. She could almost hear him saying:

"Now, look here, Daffy-Down-Dilly, you are going up to town to visit your fine cousin, and she'll have some fellow picked out for you, I know. He'll be rich and—and different, and that will end my chance, which always was mighty poor, wasn't it, dear? If it wasn't you'd say one word, and then I wouldn't feel so entirely down as I will be if you go without saying it."

She had not said the word, and so she was quite free as far as Tom was concerned to marry Hillis Hubbard if she chose. With a start she came back to reality and the sound of his voice.

"You can understand that everybody is watching Miss Steuben with a great deal of interest. But there is no doubt in my mind that the Englishman will win out."

"What makes you think so?" Mildred asked.

"Because. That's a woman's reason, I know; but, as I say, it involves a good deal. The American, you see, has only his business prospects and for the present an average living. The Englishman has a fine old home, ancestry of the best, acres and tenants and a coronet about to descend upon his aristocratic head."

Mildred sighed and looked again at the girl in blue. She was very pretty as she stood with her back to a great mass of daffodils particularly, but now something about them set her heart to beating quickly with memories of home. A month later there would be a great showing of them in the little garden she and her mother tended. The dear, dear things! Nell had ordered them simply because they looked well against the wall paper of her drawing room, but to Mildred's girlish fancy they were vital, appealing. They meant home, the country, springtime—yes, and Tom, walking toward her, his face full of joy at sight of her.

Oh, they had no business to be here in this hot, crowded room, jostled by furs and velvets, simple, open air blossoms that they were! No one apparently was aware of them save herself and the girl in blue, who had drawn one from the jar and was pulling it to pieces.

A woman came across the room, set her cup down upon the table, smiled at Mildred and leaned toward Hillis Hubbard.

"I have something to tell you which I just now heard on the best authority," she said. "You have lost your wager, my dear boy. Love wins. Miss Bertha Steuben marries the American after all."

"Is that possible?" he exclaimed. "I would not have believed it of her."

"Nor I. Thank you, no more tea, my dear Miss Verrel. I am just leaving." She made her adieus and passed on gayly. Mildred's eyes, with a new expression in them, were again on the girl in blue.

He turned sharply.

"You would do it yourself?"

"Yes," Mildred said.

He studied her a moment.

"Yes, I believe you would," he said, "but in your case there are no parallel circumstances. May I come tomorrow when you are alone, dear, and explain to you what I mean?"

Mildred turned white, but she faced him bravely.

"No," she gasped. "No. It would be of no use. You see, I have just made up my mind to go home tomorrow. It's the best place for me. I think, and they want me, father and my mother and"— She stopped abruptly, with a vivid blush.

"Ah, I see!" Hillis Hubbard said. He looked very straight before him for an instant.

In Mildred's ears was ringing the absurd old nursery rhyme with which Tom had teased her before she set forth to visit her Cousin Nell:

Daffy-Down-Dilly has gone up to town
In her yellow petticoat and her green gown.

But Daffy-Down-Dilly was going home from town to be happy with her own.

Feeding an Atlantic Walrus.

The most expensive animal at the New York zoological park is the Atlantic walrus. On his arrival four years ago the animal weighed 140 pounds. He has now attained the weight of over 500 pounds. He requires forty pounds of clam meat daily. The labor of preparing his meals, cleaning his tank and the cost of the sea salt that must be added to the water make the expense of keeping him equal to that of feeding two large elephants.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Rigg's Disease.

The mouth disease that is most often responsible for general ill health is Rigg's disease (Pyorrhea alveolaris), but other forms of inflammation, such as an abscess at the root of the tooth, can also do mischief. The abscess may cause no pain or apparent inflammation, yet it may do a good deal of harm if the pus it forms passes into the blood stream. Among the many diseases which in certain cases can be traced to inflammation of the gums or tooth sockets are dyspepsia, rheumatism, anaemia, high blood pressure with resulting headache or even heart and kidney disease, constipation and asthma. Possibly we may include ulcer of the stomach or intestines, gallstones and appendicitis. Of course, all these conditions are more frequently owing to other causes, but it is well to remember that they can originate in an ill kept mouth. Too often, unfortunately, we see broken and decayed teeth, loose and covered with tartar, in the mouths of persons who are in other respects careful in regard to personal hygiene. When the physician examines such a mouth he usually finds the gums swollen with a blue line along the edge of the teeth, and a very slight pressure will force out pus from between the teeth. As long as such a condition is present it is not much use to treat obscure general symptoms of ill health. Thorough treatment by a competent dentist is the first thing to insist on.

Woman's World

Pre-eminent In Golf Is Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Boston.

MRS. H. ARNOLD JACKSON

Every one has heard that Boston leads in intellect, but that a Boston woman should carry away the laurels from the sportswomen of the entire country is worth noting. The lady who achieved this feat is Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson, a member of the exclusive Oakley Country club near the Hub. Recently she defeated all contestants for the women's national golf championship at the contest held at the Nassau Country club, New York.

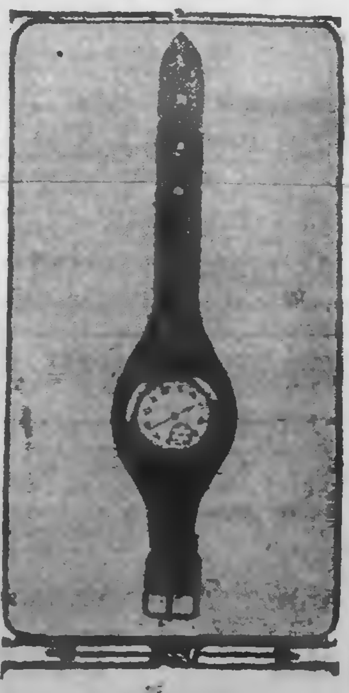
This is the second time Mrs. Jackson has been a national champion. In 1908, as Miss Kate C. Harley of Fall River, Mass., she won the title. Five times she has been a near winner. In the national tournament at Wheaton in 1903 she was beaten in the semifinal round by Mrs. J. A. Carpenter; in 1904, at Merion, Miss Georgianna M. Bishop eliminated her in the semifinal round, and in 1911, at Baltusrol, Miss Lillian B. Hyde was successful against her, so that altogether Mrs. Jackson's record is considered very good.

WRIST DECORATION.

Bands of Velvet and Lace and Watches Mounted In Leather as Bracelets.

When a bracelet of diamonds, in itself worth a beleaguered city's war tax, would call attention only to its own brilliancy—and would therefore be discarded by the fashionable woman of today—the bracelet of black velvet ribbon, with its quaint jet slides and buckles, gives point and character to the frock with which it is worn.

One of the very newest things is the bracelet of Chantilly lace. It is a narrow band, about half an inch wide, of black Chantilly, mounted over white or black tulle and clasped with a little buckle of rhinestones or jet snugly about the wrist.



TANGO BRACELET.

Chantilly bands are also worn about the throat. They are fitted with slides of jet or rhinestones, and some of them have long jet pendants to hang in front. Another touch of black is the little wristband of moire ribbon with a silver buckle, silver rimmed.

The tango watch illustrated here is so convenient that women shoppers, teachers or business women in general will appreciate its usefulness. The tiny gun metal watch is set in a bracelet of leather, that may be strapped snugly about the wrist.

HOW TO TELL LACES

Fine Points Which Will Enable You to Distinguish Varieties.

Irish crochet, guipure and point venise are interchangeable terms in some stores. They all have an open, irregular mesh and give the effect of a floral pattern joined by cords. They are offered in all-over, in flounces, bands of insertions, and in a bewildering variety of berthas, stoles and collars.

Cluny is a moderately heavy lace in cobweb patterns. The mesh, when closely examined, shows a combination of squares and circles.

Spanish lace is seen but little, and of all the silk laces Chantilly seems to be enjoying the largest vogue. It comes in both cream and black, and in exaggerated fruit and flower patterns. The mesh of Chantilly shows tiny, fine circles overlaid with the design.

Incidentally, medallions and motifs are interchangeable terms, meaning detached, complete lace patterns usually small in size and conventional in treatment. Galoon is an irregular insertion so finished at both edges that it can be set on the material and not into it.

Teneriffe lace, which is really Mexican drawn work, or its imitation in machine-made goods, can be recognised by its ever-present wheel pattern. The French Valenciennes, which for many centuries appeared in the form of insertion and edging only, is enjoying a decided revival because it is now offered in double width allover, which makes up admirably into gowns.

There are two grades of Valenciennes, the German and the Platte. The German shows a large mesh, the Platte a fine, diamond-shaped mesh. The latter is the more expensive lace. Mechlin lace has many of the characteristics of Valenciennes, but is more silky in texture. Point de Paris is an imitation of Duchess lace. Lierre lace gives the effect of a very fine thread lace embroidered on a fine net in floral design. The pattern is straight and stiff, generally running perpendicular on the flounce and giving the effect of long stems on the flowers. It comes in all-over, in insertion and in edging.

Valenciennes and Teneriffe lace are sometimes combined in the form of a square, with a Teneriffe wheel in the centre, and the Valenciennes pattern filling out the edges of the square.

The two nets used most generally for the foundation of evening gowns are Brussels and filet. Brussels net is rather heavy with a round or oval mesh. It can carry a heavy weight in applique lace.

Scarfs, fans, etc., are offered in Venetian lace, Honiton, Brussels, Duchesse, rose point, Brudges, Maltese, and Irish point. It does not pay to buy an article like this in imitation lace. Those of real lace will last not only a lifetime, but they can be handed down through many generations.

Real Scotch Porridge

Thrift, resourcefulness, and tasty dishes are marked characteristics of Scottish cooks, and their stalwart men do ample credit to the catering of their womenfolk.

Now that housewives have to be very careful, both of their money and their food, they cannot do better than try the simple, nourishing, and inexpensive recipes of their Scottish sisters. Porridge is the basis and a splendid one, too.

Take quite the coarsest Scotch oatmeal, and steep overnight in cold water. Next morning pour into a saucepan, add a little milk, and keep stirring until the right consistency, neither too thick nor too thin. Twenty minutes' boiling is usually enough, and stir all the time or you will have a lumpy mixture instead of a smooth, creamy porridge. Salt according to taste. That's real Scotch porridge.

Keep Needlework Clean

When engaged on delicate needlework a good idea is to have a little flour in a saucer by you and to dip your fingers in it from time to time. This will not only keep the hands dry, but the work beautifully clean.

To Teach War History.

The Ontario Education Department, believing that the present European war, its causes and the reasons for Britain's share in it, should be fully grasped by the school children of the province, has decided to incorporate the study of it in the curriculum of the present school year. It will appear as part of the history course in the grades where it will be understood easily, and questions on it will be given in the promotion examinations. In this connection the Government is sending to each school a copy of the British diplomatic despatches issued at Ottawa.

The circular issued suggests that generously disposed citizens as well as school boards shall under suitable conditions offer prizes for essays on one or more of the phases of the present struggle.

RAID IS MADE ON FOE AT CUXHAVEN

Assisted by Flotilla of Light Cruisers, Destroyers and Submarines, Seven British Airmen Tried to "Dig Out" German Fleet, But the Effect of Attack is Not Known---One Aviator Lost---German Craft Replied.

LONDON, Dec. 28. — Assisted by light cruisers, destroyers and submarines, seven British naval airmen piloting seaplanes, made a daring attack Christmas Day on the German naval base at Cuxhaven, at the mouth of the Elbe. Six of the airmen returned safely, but the seventh, Commander Hewlett, it is feared, has been lost, as his machine was found off Heligoland wrecked.

What damage was done by the bombs thrown by the attacking party could not be ascertained, but the German report of the affair says that the raid was fruitless.

The enterprise of the British navy in thus attempting to "dig out" the German fleet brought about a battle between the most modern of war machines. The British squadron, including the light cruisers Arethusia and Undaunted, which have been engaged in previous exploits on the German coast, was attacked by Zeppelins, seaplanes and submarines. By rapid manoeuvring, the ships were able to avoid the submarines, while the Zeppelins found the fire of the cruisers too dangerous for them to keep up the fight.

The German seaplanes dropped bombs, which, according to the British account, fell harmlessly into the sea. The Germans, however, claim to have hit two destroyers and their convoy, the latter being set afire.

The British ships remained in the vicinity for three hours without being attacked by any surface warships, and picked up three of the seven pilots and their planes. Three others were picked up by submarines, but their machines were sunk. Commander Hewlett, it is thought, was drowned.

Another naval airman on Christmas Eve dropped twelve bombs on an airship shed at Brussels, but it was impossible definitely to ascertain the amount of damage done.

It was learned yesterday that the German airman who visited England on Christmas Day dropped a bomb near Rochester, which is only 28 miles east south east of St. Paul's, London, and seven miles from Gravesend. The bomb did no damage, as it fell in the roadway.

The Official Report.

LONDON, Dec. 28. — The official press bureau gave out the following statement last night regarding the British raid on the German coast:

"On Friday, Dec. 25, the German warships lying off Schilling Roads, off Cuxhaven, were attacked by seven naval seaplanes piloted by Flight Commanders Oliver, Hewlett, Ross and Kilner; Flight Lieutenants Miley and Edwards, and sub-Lieut. Blackburn.

The attack was delivered in daylight, starting from a point in the vicinity of Heligoland. The seaplanes were escorted by a light cruiser and destroyer force, together with submarines. As these ships were seen by the Germans from Heligoland, two Zeppelins and three or four hostile seaplanes and several hostile submarines attacked them.

It was necessary for the British ships to remain in the neighborhood to pick up the returning airmen, and a novel combat ensued between the most modern cruisers and the enemy's aircraft and submarines. By swift manoeuvering the enemy's submarines were avoided, and the two Zeppelins were easily put to flight by the guns of the Undaunted and Arethusia.

"The enemy's seaplanes succeeded in dropping their bombs near our ships, but without hitting any of them. The British ships remained for three hours off the enemy's coast without being molested by any surface vessel, and safely re-embarked three out of the seven airmen with their machines. Three other pilots returned later and were picked up by British submarins which were standing by. Their machines were then sunk.

"Six out of the seven pilots returned safely. Flight Commander Hewlett is missing. His machine was seen in a wrecked condition about eight miles from Heligoland, and the fate of the daring and skilful pilot is at present unknown.

"The extent of the damage by the British airmen's bombs cannot be estimated, but all were discharged at points of military significance.

"On Thursday last Squadron Commander Richard B. Davies of the naval air service, visited Brussels in a Farman biplane for the purpose of dropping 12 bombs at an airship shed reported to contain a German Parseval. Eight of these bombs, of which six are said to have hit, were discharged at the first attack; the remaining four on the return flight. Owing to the clouds of smoke which arose from the shed the effect could not be distinguished."

Two Killed By Bombs.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—A despatch received here from Nancy says that a Zeppelin airship flew over that city early yesterday morning and dropped a total of 14 bombs. Two persons were killed and two others wounded.

The Berlin official announcement of yesterday said that German airmen threw medium-sized bombs into the outskirts of Nancy in retaliation for the throwing of bombs by a French airman into an unnamed German village.

Back To Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—The French War Department, which is still in Bordeaux, will return to Paris Jan. 7.

GUNNER AMONG THE WOUNDED

Gen. Hughes Does not Think it Means Battery is at Front

~~OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—A laconic an~~nouncement issued by the Militia Department raises the question as to whether the Canadian heavy battery and ammunition column is at the front. The announcement states that on Dec. 26 Gunner Bissonnette of the heavy battery and ammunition column of the Canadian Expeditionary Force was seriously ill. The cause of the illness is a gunshot wound in the chest. Whether the wound is accidental or was received in action is not stated.

The heavy battery is from Montreal, and consists of three sixty-pounders. It is considered possible that the need of the allies for heavy guns has induced the War Office to despatch the battery to the front.

Questioned regarding the wounding of Gunner Bissonette, Maj.-Gen. Hughes last night stated that it was probably an accident. Asked whether it were possible that the heavy battery was at the front, he stated that he did not consider it likely. No other information is available here in connection with the matter.

Lieut.-Col. Stewart Gets Command.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28. — Lieut.-Col. R. Gordon Stewart of the 43rd Rifles, Ottawa, has received news of his appointment to command of the infantry regiment to mobilize here for the third contingent. Maj. J. R. Munroe of Ottawa, of the Fifth Princess Dragoon Guards, and secretary to the Canadian Cavalry Association, has been appointed to command the regiment of mounted rifles, of which one squadron will mobilize in Toronto and the other two squadrons in Ottawa. This is the only mounted regiment which will go with the third contingent. Lieut.-Col. Stewart is a South African veteran.

DESTROYER LOST.

British War Vessel Goes Ashore, But Crew Are Saved.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Dec. 28. —(Via London.)—A British torpedo boat destroyer went ashore early yesterday morning on the coast of Kingsbarns, six miles southeast of St. Andrew's. Her crew was saved by lifeboats.

The destroyer was steaming south from Aberdeen to the Firth of Forth, and in the darkness and without ~~shore lights lost her bearings.~~ After the rescue of a portion of her crew, one of the lifeboats was stove in by the heavy sea, and the remainder of the crew were saved only after considerable difficulty by a second lifeboat.

Mine Sinks Steamer.

SCARBORO, Eng., Dec. 28.—(Via London.)—The Dutch steamer Leersum, from Amsterdam, and the British steamer Gallier, from London, struck mines in the North Sea yesterday. The Leersum foundered and two members of her crew were drowned. The Gallier succeeded in reaching port.

Lieut.-Col. Aikin Promoted.

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 28.—Word was received yesterday by Lt.-Col. Aikin, who has been in command of C. Squadron of the First Canadian Mounted Rifles stationed here, that he has been promoted to be second in command of the regiment. The headquarters of the regiment is at Brandon.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 28. — Nicholas Bawlf, vice-president of the Fort William Elevator Co., and a prominent member of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, died Saturday night rather suddenly.

Patrolling Cruiser Damaged.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The steamship Manitou, of the Atlantic Transport Co., is undergoing repairs in Plymouth Sound, as the result of a collision with a warship in the Downs. One of the patrolling cruisers desiring to examine the liner more closely approaching so near in the darkness that a collision occurred. Only good seamanship, apparently, averted a serious accident. Several plates on the Manitou were started by the force of the collision.

of advantage to me in the position of Mayor if you elect me to that office.

I offer myself as a candidate at this time because I have been requested to do so by a large number of electors. One year ago a number of my friends urged me then to be a candidate, but I stood aside upon the statement to me by the present Mayor that he wished the office for support me upon my record as an alderman. During the coming year I believe the Council should have two principal aims, namely, to conduct the business of the city with the strictest economy, so as to make the tax rate as low as possible, and to expend the revenue upon necessary works in such a manner as to give as large an amount of employment as possible for the money expended and to produce the best results. If you elect me I will keep these aims in view, that the burden of taxation may be as light as possible and that work may be given to those who need it upon works for the benefit of the city so far as the revenue will permit.

At the close of Ald. Duncan's remarks Mayor Buller took the stand again to explain that he never gave any direct promise to Ald. Duncan that he would drop out after one year. The conversation in question took place in ex-Mayor Bradburn's office, and Mayor Buller then remarked that Ald. Duncan could have a chance some other time. Along the same line, Mayor Buller made it known that only six weeks ago Ald. Duncan remarked to Ald. Johnston that he (Ald. Duncan) would not oppose the present Mayor. Mayor Buller remarked how it was not his duty or anyone else's duty to say who would be Mayor of Peterboro for the coming year. That question would be settled only by the ratepayers.

Ald. Duncan also came back and said the converration he had reference to did take place in W. H. Bradburn's office; the Mayor was in error when he said he was there first. Ald. Duncan claimed that he was in the office when Mayor Buller came in. A voice in the gallery asked: "What was in the office?" but an explanation was not forthcoming. Ald. Duncan remarked that he has led up to coming out for the mayor's chair, ~~and does not feel inclined to step~~ aside now. When he remarked to Ald. Johnston that he would not oppose Mayor Buller, he meant if the elections were to go by acclamation he would not cause an election.

T. F. Matthews' Remarks.

T. F. Matthews, who was elected Utilities Commissioner by acclamation expressed himself as being appreciative of the honor conferred upon him. He had hoped that his term would expire this year but as the commission is right in the heart of a great work he felt it his duty to one year only and would not run for a second term, and that my two-year term as Alderman would then have expired and it would be a more convenient time for me to be a candidate for the office, consequently, I am not violating any custom in being a candidate this year.

My course in the Council is known to you, and, while I do not claim to have not made a mistake in the eight years, I feel that I can ask you to remain till the Hydro-Electric system was on a sound business basis.

The chairman of the commission briefly outlined the great increase in the waterworks department remarking how the revenue of 1902 (when the city assumed control) was $23,800 and for 1914 the revenue was $53,500. This increase could not be realized without expenditure on improving the system and this expenditure is being paid out of the revenue. The rates for water in Peterboro is as low as any city in Ontario.

As to the Hydro-Electric Mr. Matthews remarked that the Commission took it over on October 1st and a great deal of delay has been experienced in getting the system in a condition to apply the new rates. The Peterboro Light and Power Co.'s books with the rates to the various customers were not given over to the city and it was necessary to make a house to house canvas to ascertain these facts. It will also be necessary to measure the floor space of each house and install meters. Mr. Matthews however stated that he is expectant of having the new rates in force not later than February 1st. Half of the houses will be metered by that time and the remainder will be fitted before August 1st.

As to the numerous complaints, the city took over the power company in that section of the year when the business was heaviest. The company always had trouble in the fall of former years. Mr. Matthews pointed out the two changes that have been made, R. L. Dobbin succeeding A. G. Fawcett as superintendent of the waterworks department and H. O. Fisk succeeding C. L. Howse as superintendent of the hydro-electric department. In his closing remarks ~~he stated that the hydro-electric~~ problem was very dear to him and he assured his listeners that he would do his best to perform suitably his duties as Utilities Commissioner during the coming year.

"Where's that ruddy orderly?" yelled an English officer, recently in headquarters. The orderly appeared.

"Say, you, why don't you clean up this place occasionally?" asked the officer.

The orderly got busy. Who was he? Why, he is the son of a Canadian millionaire, who enlisted as a private for "the fun of the thing."

When the officer was told the name of the private that he was ordering about he replied, "Ah, there are lots of them around here. This war will make men of them."

OCCUPATION COMPLETE

Italians are Now in Peaceful Control of Town of Avlona.

ROME, Italy, Dec. 28. — News received from Avlona, Albania, says that the occupation of the entire town by Italians has been effected.

All the Government buildings in the Albanian seaport were taken over by the Italians. Perfect order, the advices say, has been re-established.

The 10th Regiment of Bersaglieri Sharpshooters have left Palermo for Avlona, Albania, where they will arrive to-day and replace the bluejackets, who were landed last week to restore order and protect Europeans and the peaceful inhabitants.

None of the powers have protested against Italian occupation of Avlona, Albania, and the hope is expressed by many in Rome that no complications will arise which will force Italy to abandon neutrality.

A CHANGE IN PLANS

Second Canadian Contingent Will Form Complete Division

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—The original intention of incorporating four of the 18 infantry battalions now at Salisbury Plain in the second Canadian division has had to be abandoned and a full army division will go as the second contingent from Canada.

Twelve of the eighteen Canadian battalions in England have been included in the first Canadian division, leaving a surplus of six battalions, the 6th, 9th, 11th, 12th and 17th and ~~Princess Patricia's C.L.I., the 6th,~~ composed entirely of detachments of mounted corps, is destined to furnish reinforcements for the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Strathcona's Horse, and the divisional squadron of cavalry, the 9th, 11th, 12th and presumably the 17th are to be utilized for providing infantry reinforcements. Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry has been allotted to one of the divisions of Lord Kitchener's new army, and of the battalions mobilized or about to be mobilized in Canada, four more than was originally calculated will be required to complete the second Canadian division, the infantry portion of which will be reorganized as follows:

4th Canadian Infantry Brigade, Ontario; 18th Battalion, London; 19th and 20th Battalions, Toronto; 21st Battalion, Kingston; 5th Canadian Infantry Brigade, Eastern Canada; 22nd (French-Canadian) Battalion, St. Jean, P.Q.; 24th Battalion, Montreal; 25th Battalion, Halifax; 26th Battalion, St. John, N.B.; 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade, Western Canada; 27th and 28th Battalions, Winnipeg; 29th Battalion, Vancouver; 31st Battalion, Calgary. The 23rd Quebec may be included in the 6th Infantry Brigade.

Families Are Secure.

Perhaps the oddest arrangement yet arrived at by Canadian recruiting officers was that prevailing at Kingston, Ont., the home of the 14th Prince of Wales' Own Rifles. In order to make sure that families of soldiers would have every comfort, the local officers have made every "family man" sign away his right to $25 of his monthly pay. A few grumbled at the hard condition, but most took it with a smile. This ensured the wife and children $45 monthly, including the $20 allowed to wives and families by the Dominion Government.

NEED NOT TAKE OATH

Canadian-Born Germans are Citizens in Good Standing.

In view of the very natural suspicion with which all Canadian-born are looking these days upon everyone with a German name or German blood to mark him out, it is interesting to note that there are many citizens living in Canada, some even in Toronto, who are of German extraction, but who are still just as strongly Canadian, from a naturalization standpoint, as are the amateur detectives themselves. It has been pointed out that the mere fact of German name or German blood does not prevent a person being Canadian, without any claimed to the Vaterland.

Under the Naturalization Act, the law may be briefly stated as follows:

Under British and Canadian law the following persons are naturalized British subjects: (1) Any person born within his Majesty's dominions and allegiance. (2) Any person born out of his Majesty's dominions whose father was a British subject at the time of that person's birth and either was born within his Majesty's allegiance or was a person to whom a certificate of naturalization had been granted. (3) Any person born on a British ship, whether in foreign or territorial waters or not. This does not apply to a person born on a foreign ship in British territorial waters if the latter is the only reason for claiming British citizenship. Clause 2 also applies where by treaty, capitulation grant, usage, sufferage, or other lawful means his Majesty exercises jurisdiction over British subjects.

In addition to the foregoing the Act provides that children born in a foreign country whose father or mother became naturalized in Canada shall be deemed to be naturalized British subjects. The section is as follows:

"If the father, or the mother being a widow, has obtained a certificate of naturalization within Canada, every child of such father or mother who, during infancy, has become resident with such father or mother within Canada, shall, within Canada, be deemed to be a naturalized British subject."

From the above it will be seen that the Canadian-born German is quite excused from taking the oath of allegiance to Britain. Even more than that, the German-born German whose parents have become naturalized does not need to take the oath to become a British subject. Many Germans of these two classes, particularly the latter, have been greatly exercised because they have not taken the oath of allegiance, but the law shows that any excitement along that line, either on the part of themselves or their critical neighbors, is unnecessary.

When it comes to holding property there is very little discrimination against a foreigner. The Act states that in Canada citizens of other countries, not naturalized, may acquire, hold, or dispose of real and personal property in the same way as the natural-born British subject. Title to the property may be acquired in the same manner as the Canadian subject. The only restriction is found in the Dominion Lands Act, which provides that an alien cannot obtain a title to a free homestead until he becomes a naturalized subject. He, however, is not disturbed in the possession of any land which he may have acquired, and in all other respects enjoys the full protection of the law. A further restriction is imposed upon the personal rights of the alien, inasmuch as aliens in Canada cannot qualify for any office, municipal or Parliamentary, or other franchise, and may not become the owner of a British ship.

The Naturalization Act provides that aliens who have been resident for three years within the country may become naturalized by taking the oaths of allegiance and residence before a commissioner. The papers must be submitted to the clerk of the county or district court, who posts the name of each applicant in his office for three weeks prior to the sitting of the court. If, during that three weeks, no objections are entered, the applicant is declared by the court to be a British subject and a certificate of naturalization is granted. British subjects who have become naturalized in any other country and return to Canada, may become re-naturalized after residing here for not less than three months.

AN OLD-TIME STORM

Great Blow on Lake Ontario Fifty-Five Years Ago.

Mr. Louis H. Daniels, of the Daniel's Hotel, Prescott, who was a steamboat agent in Front street, east of Yonge, Toronto, in 1855-60, has sent the Toronto Telegram a paragraph recalling the great storm which swept Lake Ontario on Wednesday, the 25th November, 1856. There are many old time Ontarians who will remember that day and a few of the mariners who are still about and who sailed the lake in the fifties will also remember the great gale. Mr. Daniels writes:

"It will be 55 years on Wednesday, Nov. 25, since L. H. Daniels, of Prescott, and the late T. D. Shipman, left the American Hotel on the northeast corner of Front and Yonge streets, Toronto, and boarded the fine steamer Zimmerman, Capt. Milloy, bound for Niagara-on-the-Lake and Lewiston, on her daily routine trips. The Zimmerman was a large side-wheeler named after the late Samuel Zimmerman, who was one of the killed at the Desjardin Bridge accident, which occurred in the spring of 1857.

"The morning was dark and ominous, with a rattling breeze from the northeast. As we proceeded southward the force of the storm greatly increased. We landed at Niagara to transact some railroad business there, and joined the big steamer on her return from up the river. Soon after leaving the dock, the dinner bell was sounded and some forty passengers, nearly all gentlemen, proceeded below to partake of a sumptuous repast. Soon after many of these left the table as it was becoming decidedly rough. Capt. Duncan Milloy was one of the number. He left at once for the pilot house, where three or four big, stalwart men were in control of the wheel. The big 'Golden Lion,' an ornament on top of the pilot house, was blown down, some thirty feet of her starboard bulwarks were smashed in, and the water had free course across her decks. Several of the big rods supporting her smoke stacks were broken away, and after three hours battling with the frightful storm, we returned to Niagara, realizing we had had a narrow escape from a serious shipwreck."

Mr. Daniels was for forty years the agent of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company at Buffalo and Toronto in the fifties and in Prescott in later years. In 1860 he left Toronto, and in 1862 entered the hotel business at Prescott, of which place he was mayor in 1908-9. He was one of the best known men in the city during his residence. He sold out his hotel in Prescott last July, as he thought at 82 years of age it would be a good thing to retire from business. T. D. Shipman, who died in Quebec a few years ago, was also a well known steamboat man, and was chief agent of the R. and O. Company at Quebec, while Mr. Daniels was the Toronto agent. Shipman was a keen, sharp business man and had lots of friends amongst the Board of Trade men and marine men during his residence in Toronto.

Many On Battle Line.

The announcement that Capt. Alan Graham, A.D.C., figures in the list of wounded at the front, while not confirmed by any news received at Ottawa, directs attention to the fact that no one institution is quite so well represented in the battle line as is Rideau Hall.

As soon as war was declared six officers attached to the duke's staff left to join their regiments, while Col. Lowther had gone over some months before. The others are Col. Farquhar, military secretary, commanding the Princess Patricias; Col. Sir Edward Worthington, Maj. Rivers-Bulkeley, Capt. Boscawen, Capt. Buller and Capt. Graham.

Maj. Rivers-Bulkeley has been killed and Col. Lowther and Capt. Graham wounded.

ALLIANCES OF THE NATIONS HAVE FAILED

Only Foundation for World Peace is Righteousness Says Rev. R. G. Peever

Righteousness is the only foundation for world peace, declared Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., last night, when preaching on the subject of World Peace to a big congregation in George Street Church. He used the present tactics of the Germans, as an illustration of how impossible it was to have peace. The Christmas truce suggested by the Vatican between the warring nations was at once agreeable to Germany but it became an unspeakable mockery when one thought of Germany with her sword through the bleeding heart of Belgium. The pastor felt there was great truth in Dr. Chown's words when he stated in Toronto that one could not build a heaven upon the mouth of hell. There could be no Christmas truce, no angel song, for the man of Galilee had said "inasmuch as ye have done unto the least of these ye have done it unto Me." Christ and the Christmas spirit could not stand for greed.

Alliances Failed.

Mr. Peever then took up the various attitudes on world peace by governments and men. First there was the balancing of nations as illustrated in the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente and the Balkan alliance. All these had failed. The balancing of nations had not produced world peace. Then there had been the balancing of armaments of nations, an illogical and damning dictrine which was as much as saying in time of peace prepare for war with the result that nations had gone mad in war expenditures and war debts. The armaments of nations had been a sad failure.

The third attitude was civic societies and the Hague tribunals. In the pastor's estimation that was the attitude upon which a foundation of open world wide peace could be secured. Righteousness and justice were the habitations of God's throne and the man of God had contended that he would establish a kingdom that the gates of hell could not prevail against.

During the day Mr. Peever feelingly referred to the loss sustained by the church and city in the death of Mrs. T. M. McFadden, who was a faithful member of the congregation. He asked the various official boards of the church to meet after the services to arrange for attending the funeral today.

FILIPINO OUTBREAK HAS FAILED

U.S. Authorities Are in Full Control of the Situation

MANILA, Dec. 28. — Reports from Navotas, a town six miles north of the capital, say that simultaneously with the outbreak at Manila on Christmas eve thirty men entered the municipal building, seized three policemen on duty there, and ineffectually tried to open the safe.

Later the Filipinos seized a number of attendants conducting midnight mass and also captured the Filipino governor, Melendras. When reinforcements of police arrived the revolutionaries fired a volley and then retreated. Later they encountered another force of police with which they exchanged shots, and in this engagement the constabulary succeeded in arresting ten men. In all, 21 Filipinos were taken prisoners at Navotas.

The authorities to-day are in full control of the situation and the incident is considered by them to be closed.

Canadian Prisoner in Berlin

News has reached Toronto of the imprisonment in Berlin by the Germans of Davidson Ketchum, the 20-year-old son of the late Judge Ketchum of Cobourg, and for a time assistant organist of St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Toronto. The boy was studying music in Berlin under the famous Russian, Dr. Lhevinne when war broke out, and was at once placed in solitary confinement in a cell, having only a tiny window high up in the wall. After spending some time in the solitary cell, he has been transferred to a detention camp, where he with five Englishmen, are housed in a shed with insufficient food.

BRINGING UP THE BIG GUNS

Germans are Looking Forward to Sieges in Poland

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent telegraphs:—The Germans on Friday sensibly slackened their hitherto frantic attempts to force a passage of the rivers which mark the Russian front. On the left bank of the Vistula they have now brought up a number of heavy calibre artillery, up to and including 11-inch guns. These monitors are moved along the ordinary roads by motor traction, but on an emergency can even be dragged by horses, thirteen to a gun. Naturally they move only on the best chaussee roads, and these are extremely sparse in Poland, but frost has now set in and will doubtless facilitate heavy traffic of every kind, provided the snowfall is not too heavy. Presumably the heavy artillery is not intended so much to force the passage of rivers as to assist in the bombardment of fortresses which the Germans apparently now foresee may soon be within range of their guns. Their first idea was — if they got across the rivers — that they would soon dispose of the Russian forces behind this line and march gloriously into Warsaw.

The Germans have brought up their heavy artillery a little prematurely, perhaps, for it still is a long way to Warsaw—even when the passage of the rivers is forced, which has still to be done. In fact, after sacrificing enough men to make an army corps in a week's attempts, day and night, the Germans have decided to get through without wetting their feet along the left bank of the Pilica. I have, however, no definite knowledge here. According to my information, the Germans have taken nothing whatever by assault, neither towns nor positions, since Russia decided to reconstruct its strategic front.

AUSTRIANS FARE BADLY

Russian Advance Has Again Played Havoc With Army

Germans Are Assembling Another Huge Army Against Warsaw

LONDON, Dec. 28. — In Poland where the Russian Emperor has joined the Grand Duke Nicholas at the Russian headquarters, the German attacks on the Bzura and Rawka rivers are being made almost exclusively with artillery, while an offensive in force has been assumed farther south along the River Pilica, where hard fighting continues, and both sides claim to have inflicted heavy losses on their opponents.

The Russians apparently have again gained ascendency over the Austrians in south Poland and Galicia. The Austrians themselves admit the loss of the towns of Jaslo and Krosno, on the south Galician Railway, which their army from across the Carpathians recaptured a week or more ago. The Russian report last night is the record for a series of victories from middle Poland to the foothills of the Carpathians.

Unless some prisoners have been counted more than once the Russians according to their own accounts, have taken 30,000 Austrian prisoners since they resumed the offensive.

A despatch on Saturday stated:—

"The success reported in East Prussia is confirmed by the general flight of the population into the interior of Germany.

"By extraordinary efforts the Germans are drawing together upward of 1,000,000 men to the Russian front, and this movement may be influenced by a desire to take Warsaw."

The war expert of The Novoe Vremya of Petrograd, in a summary of the war published Saturday, refers to what he calls the "Collapse of the Austrian campaign in Galicia; the lack of cohesion on the part of the German armies to the north of Cracow, and the dogged perseverance, but with waning spirit of the Germans at Sochaczew, which he says describes the situation in Poland.

It is believed that the defence of Przemysl by the Austrian garrison is now in its last gasp. The failure of the frequent and disastrous sorties which the defenders have made against the encircling line of Russians has destroyed the morale of the Austrians, who are now forced to choose between the alternatives, surrender or complete annihilation.

The following official communication was issued from General Headquarters at Petrograd last night:—

"On the left bank of the Vistula, the general position is without essential change.

"Between the lower courses of the Vistula and the Pilica the fighting on Dec. 25 was of less desperate character, with the exception of that region bordering on the Pilica, where throughout the night and day violent combats continued. Likewise fighting of a desperate nature with the Austrians has been going on along the lower courses of the Nida river. On Dec. 24 in that region we took prisoners 68 officers and about 4,000 soldiers.

"In Galicia the fighting along the the lines of the Bzura and Rawka rivers was confined in general to artillery fire. We have repulsed with success various attacks by the Germans.

"Along the lower course of the Nida river we ousted towards evening of Dec. 25 from the village of Wislica the Austrians who had obstinately defended it, and who attempted to fortify themselves on the left bank of the Nida. We then drove the Austrians beyond that river.

"South of the Vistula, in the region of Tarnow (Galicia), on Dec. 25, we drove back the Austrians from the Tuchow-Olpiny lin. The enemy abandoned ten rapid-firers, and we took 43 officers and more than 25,000 soldiers prisoners. The next day we continued the pursuit of the Austrians, who retreated in disorder. We captured eight machine guns and about 11,000 prisoners. We occupied the heights near Siedliska, on the left bank of the Biala river.

"In the direction of Dukla (Carpathians) there were engagements on Dec. 25 and 26, and the Austrians, driven from the Zmigrod-Dukla line, are in full retreat. In the latest encounters in this region the Austrians suffered enormous losses and left in our hands as prisoners more than 10,000 men."

Commission is Cancelled.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28. — There has been no friction between Gen. Sam Hughes and Gen. Alderson, who is in command of the first Canadian contingent.

A day or two ago, a cable was sent by a Canadian correspondent with the troops at Salisbury Plain, stating that there was friction and that as a result, the resignation of Gen. Alderson might be expected.

The correspondent who cabled the story had been given a supernumery lieutenancy to enable him to remain with the troops. This commission has been cancelled.

Turkish Troops Leave for Front.

ROME, Dec. 28. — The Turkish military authorities have removed the troops and artillery from Adrianople and are sending them to defend the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, according to a despatch from Athens.

CANNOT PIERCE THE ALLIED LINE

The Germans Vary Slow Retreat With Vigorous Attack --- Violent Bombardment and Infantry Fighting.

PARIS, Dec. 28. Violent bombardment by the Germans of positions of importance on both the right and left wings of the allied battlefront, with scattered attempts by infantry to break through the Franco-British lines, were outstanding features of the official reports issued by the War Office yesterday.

In fact artillery duels were fought along the whole of the front from the sea to the banks of the Moselle.

The most sustained cannonading of the German guns was against St. Die, which was under a continuous rain of shells from 9.30 in the morning until noon yesterday.

In point of numbers of guns and men engaged the most important conflict was that waged by the Germans in an effort to dislodge the French and British troops, with Indian contingents, at La Boiselle and other neighboring trenches in the vicinity of Albert.

Here the Germans opened an attack shortly before midnight on Saturday, and their guns kept up an almost incessant cannonade all night, the artillery being silenced only long enough to permit of the advance of their infantry in futile attacks which were broken before they reached the line of the allies' first trenches. Two of these attacks were made, but in each of them the allies presented such a solid front that the Germans were not able to carry their advance through.

In Flanders a lull has come in the fighting owing to the dense fog which has swept up from the Lys and has drawn a veil between the opposing line of trenches almost to the sea.

In the angle of the Oise and the Aisne the French are still holding Gen. von Kluk's forces to their trenches while strengthening the positions they assumed before Puisaleine during the fighting of last week.

The strength of the German lines of defence along the western battle front is indicated by a semi-official note issued in Paris in reference to artillery captured by the French in attacks on German trenches in the Perthes region on Dec. 24.

The note says that when these trenches were taken the French gained possession of two quick firers, several siege guns mounted on carriages, one gun of 50 millimetres with an armored cupalo and a revolving gun of 37 millimetres.

The following French official statement was issued by the War Office last night:—

"After having all last night directed a very sharp artillery and infantry fire against our troops stationed at La Boisselle and in the adjacent trenches, the enemy delivered two consecutive attacks, without success.

"We hold strongly the trenches captured near Puisaleine. On the heights of the Meuse we have consolidated our occupation of the ground taken near the trench of Garonne.

"Saint Die has been bombarded violently from 9.30 o'clock in the morning to noon.

"Between the sea and the Lys the day was calm and cannonading intermittent.

"Between the Lys and the Oise there is nothing to report.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in Champagne artillery duels continued. In the region of Perthes the enemy, after a violent bombardment upon the trenches which he had lost, attempted a violent counter-attack, which was repulsed by the fire of our artillery and infantry.

"In the Argonne there was slight progress to the south of Saint Hubert. One company gained between 100 and 200 metres. We bombarded a ravine, forcing the enemy to evacuate several trenches. Between the Meuse and Moselle, to the east of Saint Mihiel, two German attacks against the fortifications of the burnt woods were repulsed.

"A dirigible dropped a dozen bombs on Nancy in the centre of the city and without military reason. Our aviators in contrast bombarded the aviation hangars of Frescar, one of the railroad stations of Metz, where movements of trains were noted, and the barracks of Saint Privat at Metz. In upper Alsace, our troops realized further progress upon the heights which dominate Germany, and have repulsed some attacks there."

German Story Is Denied.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 28.—The Russian Government has authorized the official news agency to deny in the most categorical manner the statement that Russia had ceded to Japan half the Island of Sakhalien in exchange for heavy artillery. It is asserted that the report is absolutely unfounded.

One of the items given out by the German official press bureau at Berlin Dec. 25, stated that reports had been received from Copenhagen to the effect that Russia had traded half of Sakhalien to Japan for heavy guns.

NET CAUGHT SUBMARINE

French War Craft Collided With Steel Barrier

LONDON, Dec. 28. — A steel net stretched across the entrance to Pola Harbor, the great naval port of Austria, proved the undoing of the French submarine Curie, says a despatch from the Milan correspondent of Lloyd's News.

In company with other submarines the Curie was attempting to force an entrance into the harbor for the purpose of torpedoing an Austrian squadron at anchor there. The Curie had penetrated to the harbor bar when she collided with the net. An Austrian merchantman gave the alarm, and the forts opened fire. Two shots struck the Curie, which gradually sank. The captain and crew, with the exception of one officer, swam clear and were captured.

TO DEFEND ANTWERP.

Germany Has a Reserve of 200,000 Men in Fortified Zone.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 28. — German officers have been good enough to state that there are now in the fortified zone of Antwerp about 200,000 men. They will remain there until the city is besieged by the allies from Roulers, and they will then retire on Ghent, but Antwerp will be fiercely defended before evacuation. Garrison troops no longer appear in the city, but remain in the neighborhood of the first-line of forts. Day and night about 3,000 men are working at the reconstruction of the forts. Fort Waehlen has been abandoned, but great activity is being displayed at Fort Wavre and St. Catherine.

BUSINESS METHODS APPLIED TO THE FARM

Utilization of Waste Space a Problem Worthy of Up-to-date Farmer s Careful Consideration.

The cost of building material is yearly mounting higher and present conditions indicate that it will go still higher. Alert farmers are beginning to appreciate the fact that the proper conducting of the farm means engineering and studied systematizing in every one of its many phases.

It costs so much to erect a barn that will enclose and shelter a certain volume of space. This space immediately becomes valuable, to obtain it a certain investment has been necessary, depreciation loss amounts to a considerable sum yearly, there is a yearly tax. If this space is utilized its value and even more, may be realized; if allowed to stand idle, a loss equal to its value will be sustained. Of course, there will be times when space is at a premium and again times when there is ample and to spare, as when mows are crammed with hay and when they are empty; but as this fluctuation is not stable, one must figure his space accommodations at a time this part is occupied.

We have learned that a little thought and figuring will aid one in adapting the various articles needing shelter to the nooks and corners of vacant space best suited to them. When badly pressed for room we have on various occasions hoisted some of the smaller implements into the vacant space above the hay mows. They can be easily moved when necessary, but often plows and harrows that were used for fall work and are to be used early in the spring do not have to be moved if the mow is not used during the winter. Even if they do have to be moved from one side of the mow to the other, it is likely to be time well spent.

We utilized some idle boards and erected two small or loft floors over the driveway in the granary. Though too small to hold large tools, they make place for a lot of smaller articles which are used but few times yet are necessary to have about, butchering utensils, reels of wire, bundles of repair shingles, etc. Many of the smaller articles in this category are suspended on nails and hooks attached to the rafters and gable ends. In this way valuable floor space is saved and the articles are in plain view and easily located when needed.

Between the joists over the stables and under the mows we have provided places for a lot of things by nailing an occasional slat crosswise beneath them. Especially do we find there long narrow spaces adapted to the storing of boards and scantlings. As fences and old buildings were torn down we have saved the good lumber and stored it in this way. Now, when a piece is desired it is so easy to go to the barn and walk along beneath the pieces until one is found suiting the demands. Here only a few are at a place and they are easily inspected, whereas, when all are in a single pile one has often to handle almost the entire pile before he finds what is wanted.

It has been our practice to hoist our hay ladder into the vacant space between the mows over the driveway in the barn. It is hoisted high enough so that it in no way interferes with the passage of the team beneath it. Poles resting on the cross beams support it. In this way the rack itself is not only given shelter and gotten out of the way, but constitutes a receptacle for other tools and articles that are placed upon it.

We have also constructed a low loft over the driveway. It is at a place where there is no need of a load being driven beneath it so we made it just high enough to permit us to carry feed under it into the feed lot. Such a loft utilizes a lot of vacant space, and by using some old boards and poles, is easily made. A wagon can be backed up to it and such implements as plows, harrows, etc., can be lifted directly upon it.

We had a pair of extra side boards for the wagon bed that needed storage in a dry place. We searched but a short time, low down along one of the stable walls two pins were driven and the side boards placed upon them. The space they took up was hardly appreciable.—J. [illegible] Grose in "Successful Farming."

The famous Victoria Falls of the Zambesi river in Rhodesia, it is estimated, could be made to yield 35,000,000 horsepower, or just about the same amount as all of Europe's courses.

A Unique Symbol of Freedom

A curious custom is observed in the village of Great Bookham, Surrey, England. When the wife of a tradesman goes off for the usual summer holiday to the seaside one or two expert climbers ascend at midnight to the roof of the house and insert old brooms in the chimneys as a sign that the head of the house has the supervision of the domestic arrangements in addition to his ordinary work.

COLLINGWOOD SCHREIBER HAS HAD A REMARKABLE CAREER

Veteran Railway Construction Expert, Who at the Age of Eighty-Three is General Consulting Engineer in the Canadian Government, Has Participated in Building of Every Great Canadian Railway.

No one so thoroughly epitomizes the railway history of Canada as Collingwood Schreiber, C.M.G., at present General Consulting Engineer to the Canadian Government, says Francis D. Cameron in Toronto Star Weekly. It is not merely that his career includes almost the whole period of railway building in the Dominion. It is that he has played a large part in the construction of our railways. He has had a hand in the surveying or building of every one of our big systems of iron road. One might also say that he epitomizes the transportation history of Canada, for he has also supervised the construction of a goodly part of our present canal system.

When Mr. Schreiber came to Canada as a young man, there were only 205 miles of railway in operation in this country. That was just two years later than the middle of the century. His first year with us he went into his life work, and took part in the building of the first line of railway between Toronto and Hamilton. In that work young Schreiber "made good" and he has been in the forefront of railway builders—ever since. He helped to build some of the lines now included in the Grand Trunk system. He had charge of the engineering work on the Intercolonial. He superintended the construction of the Canadian Pacific. As chief engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals he supervised the plans for the building of sections of the Canadian Northern system to be. And since 1905 he has devoted his energies to inspecting the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. Schreiber was eighty-three years of age on the 14th of August. Most men who have the good fortune to outlive the Psalmist's span of life are glad to rest when they reach Mr. Schreiber's age. But he is one of the unresting natures of the world. He is a big man physically, and he has a magnificent constitution. Year by year since the road was begun he has made his annual trips of inspection over the route. This year he was able to do his work in the comfort of an inspection car. But only four years ago, when he was seventy-nine years of age, he covered five hundred miles on horseback and afoot in connection with the survey of the line.

Mr. Schreiber belongs to that much-maligned race of men, the preacher's sons. His father, the Rev. Thomas Schreiber, was rector of Bradwell, in Essex, Eng. His grandfather was Admiral Bingham, and Collingwood was named after the great sea captain. Young Schreiber was apprenticed to a surveyor, and it was from him that he learned the rudiments of that science of which he became in after years an outstanding exponent. It was as a surveyor that he got employment on the Toronto & Hamilton Railway on his landing in Canada; and his training stood him in good stead in the new land.

He stayed with the new railway until it was completed in 1856, and by that time had become so well known as an efficient and capable engineer that he was taken in as a partner in the engineering firm of Fleming, Ridout, and Schreiber, of Toronto. The head of the firm was, of course, the man who managed the basic surveys for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and now Sir Sandford Fleming. Fleming and Schreiber are two great names in the railway development of the Dominion. Sandford Fleming achieved the greater fame through the building of the first transcontinental in the world, but Collingwood Schreiber has been more intimately connected with the general system of railway transportation throughout Canada.

While in partnership with Sandford Fleming, Schreiber superintended the construction of the Esplanade at Toronto. During four years later he had control of the construction of the Northern Railway, which is now part of the northern division of the Grand Trunk. In 1863 he was invited by the Government of Nova Scotia to assist in the development of the railway province, and was thus brought into close touch with what is now the Government system of railways. For four years he was engaged in the construction of the Pictou railway, which was taken over by the Dominion Government after Confederation; and from there went on to lay out the Lake Temiscouata section of the Intercolonial. He built the Eastern Extension line, now part of the I. C. R., became superintending engineer and commissioner's assistant over the entire system; and in '73 was placed in charge of the operation of the new railway.

The decade after 1880 Collingwood Schreiber spent in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He went to the C. P. R. as the successor of his old partner, Fleming, and became chief engineer of the road in Fleming's room and stead. He held this position during the critical times of the construction of the great transcontinental, and until it was getting on its feet; and then he returned to the service of the Government, as chief engineer and Deputy Minister of the Department of Railways and Canals.

For over nine years he has held the position of General Consulting Engineer to the Government with the rank of a Deputy Minister, his chief work being the inspection of the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific as the representative of the people of Canada. For over sixty years Mr. Schreiber has been actively associated with the railway development of the Dominion. The railway history of Canada will be incomplete unless it includes the "Memoirs of Collingwood Schreiber."

Going For the Germans.

Rev. John Marshall, the missionary at Jack River, the farthest north charge in the Anglican Church in Canada, located in the Hudson Bay territory, tells an interesting war story.

One evening while taking a short walk, Mr. Marshall was stopped by the chief of one of the neighboring Indian tribes and asked if it was true that the Motherland was fighting with Germany. On being assured that such was the case, the chief walked away, apparently in a deeply thoughtful mood.

Next morning, before his usual rising hour, Mr. Marshall was awakened by the sound of numerous horses' hoofs approaching the street on which he lived. Such an unusual occurrence aroused Mr. Marshall's curiosity, who as soon as possible rushed out to the street, where he came face to face with the sheriff of Jack River, who was on a similar errand. Looking up the street they saw a whole tribe approaching under the leadership of the Indian chief to whom Mr. Marshall had spoken the evening before. The Indians were mounted and supplied with everything to carry on modern warfare. As the Indians drew nearer Mr. Marshall and the sheriff stopped the chief to find out the reasons for the mobilization. As the event unfolded it was apparent that the Indians were intent upon taking vengeance upon a German settlement situated only a few miles from Jack River. Mr. Marshall and the sheriff had their hands full dissuading the chief from carrying on warlike operations against the Germans.

WHERE RAIN IS A NOVELTY.

Think of Having a Shower Only Once in Twenty-four Years!

The Chilean provinces of Atacama, Tarapaca and Tacna are in the rainless region, or desert country west of the Andes, and are entirely devoid of vegetation. The winds in all of this region are from the east and in passing over the elevated perpetual snows of the Andes are stripped of their moisture and arrive on the coast perfectly dry.

The last rain, a slight shower which fell in Antofagasta, in Atacama province, was the first rain which had fallen in sixteen years. The last rain which fell in Iquique, in Tarapaca province, was the first in twenty-four years. With both of these showers a notable phenomenon occurred. The bare hills back of these cities assumed a green tint from a little plant which sprang up almost in a night. The query is, "From where did this plant come?"

The whole of the coast presents a most dismal and discouraging appearance from the sea, but the climate is healthy, being especially adapted to pulmonary and throat troubles from its extreme dryness and freedom from germs. The heat is modified by a local sea breeze, and the sea bathing is most invigorating, as the water is cold.

You can't make both ends meet by stretching your imagination.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

COULDN'T SUPPORT IT.

SAID Silas Gray to William Jones:
"There's something stirring in my bones.
I cannot tell just what it is.
It ain't exactly rheumatiz.
If it was ague I would shake.
It don't seem nothing that I take.
Don't help me out the slightest bit.
I wish the blame disease would quit.

"It's not that I have aches or pains
Like them that of the gout complains,
Or creaky joints, but I'll be blest
If I don't want to loaf and rest.
You know I never was no shirk,
But I hain't got no taste for work.
It seems I just can't get up steam.
I want to sit around and dream.

"And I don't seem to care a dot
If school keeps running on or not.
I find the thing that has me bound
A good disease to carry round.
I wouldn't trade it, you can bet,
For mumps or measles—not just yet—
But still I'd like some notion faint
Of what it is and what it ain't."

"It may be love," said Silas Gray.
"I've heard that lovers feel that way."
"I wish it was," said William, "but
All that long years ago I've cut.
If I had money or a name
That put me somewhere in the game
That tired feeling it might be
But, pshaw, that there's too rich for me."

Quite So.

"Do John and Ethel seem congenial?"

"Very."

"That is nice."

"Yes; they both are in love with the same person."

"Indeed! Who is it?"

"John."

Cheerful.

"You seem happy."

"I am."

"Do you know why?"

"Sure."

"Why are you?"

"It doesn't cost any more than to be grouchy and is a heap healthier."

One on Him.

"Is she pretty?"

"No; homely enough to stop a watch."

"What! Miss Millionaire?"

"Yes."

"Must have stopped yours, then, for she told me she thought you never would go home last night."

His Ambition.

"He says he is bound to make a name for himself."

"Splendid artist?"

"No."

"Musician?"

"Oh, no; he says just any old kind of trouble will do it."

Prevaricators.

"Pa?"

"Yes, my son."

"Do men run for office?"

"Yes."

"Is that the only way they get it?"

"Some of them lie for it."

The Promoter.

"Are you a mind reader?"

"Mind reader?"

"Yes."

"No; I am a mind maker."

His Preference.

"He has a rich mind."

"Good for him! But I prefer a rich uncle."

Fixed Him.

"Did you tip the waiter?"

"No; I settled him."

RATS LIKE TO GNAW TUSKS.

And Thus the Rodents Are a Help to the Ivory Workers.

There is a curious but little known fact that well illustrates the ravages that rats can inflict on the hardest substances with their sharp little teeth.

Many of the elephants' tusks imported into London for the use of ivory ornament makers have their surfaces grooved into small furrows of unequal depth, as if cut by a very sharp edged instrument. Surely no man can have taken the trouble to do that, for what would be the profit of his labor?

The rats are at the bottom of the mischief. They have found out the tusks that contain the most gelatin or animal glue, a sweet and delicious morsel for the rat's dainty palate, and having gnawed away as much as suited their purpose, have left the rest for the ivory cutter. He, for his part, is able and willing to profit by the fact that the rats have made clear.

The ivory that contains a large amount of gelatin is softer and more elastic than that which does not, and as elasticity is the thing most needed for billiard balls the ivory worker chooses this rat marked ivory and turns it into beautiful, elastic billiard balls. The elasticity of some of the balls is so great that if thrown down forcibly on a hard pavement they will rebound into the hand to the height of three or four feet.—Exchange.

Clog Almanacs.

In early times in England the people used what were called clog almanacs, which remained in use till the beginning of the eighteenth century. An old writer thus describes them:

"This almanac is usually a square piece of wood containing three months on each of the four edges. The number of days in them are expressed by notches, the first day by a notch with a patulous stroke turned up from it and every seventh by a large sized notch. Over against many of the notches are placed on the left hand several marks or symbols denoting the golden number or cycle of the moon. The festivals are marked by symbols of the several saints issuing from the notches."

PETES' LINEUP FOR FIRST GAME

Both New Defence Players Will be in Action

Goal—Janes.
R. Defence—Hunter.
L. Defence—Pethick.
Rover—Park.
Centre—Halpin.
L. Wing—Kelly.
R. Wing—Kennealley.

This is the line-up for tonight's big game at Brock Street Rink with Bowmanville. The Lake shore town is sending up the strongest team in years but the old blue and white are fully hopeful that they can send the visitors home with a loss chalked against them.

Petes are Strong.

The local Intermediates should go well this season for at the present stage they look a great deal stronger than teams of the last few years. Janes has shown his ability in the nets and claims to be prepared to kick 'em out tonight. Hunter and Pethick have given every promise in the practices and the fans will have the opportunity to see the pair go. The forward line is composed of Kelly, Park, Halpin and Kennealley all of whom have figured in Intermediate games other years. Kennealley is a left hand shot but will be on right wing, a position he has played several times.

Secretary Harry Morgan, of the Peterboro hockey club has suggested that a game be played between the junior O. H. A. team and the members of other O. H. A. teams who are holidaying in the city, the proceeds of which would go toward Adjutant McElhiney's lodging home. The suggestion is a good one and fans would be pleased to see some action taken along that line. The visitors could present a mighty strong team, as Stratton, Cavanagh, Matthews, Huycke and numerous others are in the city.

SHERWOOD MAGEE

Sherwood R. Magee, the hard hitting outfielder of the Philadelphia National League Club, has been traded to the Boston Nationals for cash and some players. The deal was put through at a meeting held in New York by President W. F. Baker, of the Philadelphia Club, and President James Gaffney, of the Boston Club.

Magee signed a two-year contract with the Boston Club.

The players the Philadelphia Club will receive from the Boston team will be selected at a meeting to be held in New York today by Baker, Gaffney and Manager Moran, of the Philadelphia Club.

There have been persistent reports in circulation since the baseball season closed that Magee would be signed by the Federal League. Federal League agents, it is known, have been after Magee, but he failed to reach an agreement with them.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED MRS. FITZSIMMONS

Chicago, Dec. 28. — Various episodes of their marital life, in which she figured as an abused person, were related by Mrs. Julia Fitzsimmons, wife of Robert Fitzsimmons, former world's champion heavyweight pugilist, in testifying in her suit for divorce.

"He used to go away," said Mrs. Fitzsimmons, "and would be brought back intoxicated by some of his beautiful friends."

The day before their final separation in July, 1910, the wife said her husband kicked her. "We had a quarrel earlier," she explained, "about his drinking, and I hadn't been speaking to him, because he refused to quit, so when I passed by the door he kicked me."

Threats to shoot her were related by the witness, who said that at various times her husband pulled her hair or grabbed her throat, and sometimes threw bottles at her.

"I don't want any alimony," she told the court. "I always worked before we were married, and I have had to since."

Mrs. Fitzsimmons asked permission to resume her maiden name of Julia. Before becoming Mrs. Fitzsimmons in 1903 she was a professional singer.

No defence was offered, and a default was entered.

DEFENCE GOING MUCH STRONGER

Hunter and Pethick Showed Good Form at Practice

On Saturday evening the Intermediates held their final workout previous to tonight's game and although the complete squad was not on hand the railbirds were satisfied that the team as a whole would be in good shape for their battle with Bowmanville. "Ack" Hunter and Pethick worked on the defence and the latter showed better form. M. Martin and Long were also out and played the other defence.

Kelly, Park, Halpin and Kennealley composed the forward line. Leo Derocher of Ottawa figured between the goal posts as Janes and Dwyer were absent.

COMMENT

As You Like it

It has been announced from the O. H. A. headquarters that Lou E. Marsh of Toronto will officiate at tonight's game. Marsh has not made an appearance in Peteroro for a number of years.

After the intermediate practice on Saturday evning the team elected "Ack" Hunter as their captain. That the appointment was a good one goes without saying. Hunter has had a great deal of experience in the game and coaches the team continually.

Many a man would never be heard of were it not for his obituary notice.

Love goes to extremes. It generally makes a woman either very happy or very miserable.

The Greatest Happiness Comes to Ourselves
When We Make Others Happy With Our Gifts

The value of a gift consists not in costliness or variety, but in the feeling of affection, or regard, or sympathy, or honor, which it is supposed to carry. It is time that both the giver and receiver realized this. Too often the spirit of gift-giving is utterly sacrificed in the contest between the desire to spend and the duty of refraining. For a gift to be worth the giving, no sacrifice of duty must be entered into. A tiny flower given in love and simplicity is better than a rare and costly gem procured with worry, anxiety and doubt. When you give something TO WEAR, you exhibit good sense, good taste, and good judgment.

Let us suggest: UNDERWEAR, UMBRELLAS, NECK SCARFS, CRAVATS, PYJAMAS, JEWELRY, HOSIERY, SUSPENDERS, HANDKERCHIEFS, HOUSE COATS, GLOVES, MUFFLERS, SUITS, SWEATER COATS, SHIRTS, COLLARS, TIES, HATS, CAPS, OVERCOATS, Etc. In fact, everything carried by firstclass clothing and mens' furnishing stores.

MANY DELEGATES CAME FOR BOYS' CONFERENCE

Opening Session Will be Held in George Street Church To-night

Over one hundred and sixty have already registered for the boys' conference, which commences this evening a three days' session in Peterboro and at which boys and young men from the entire Bay of Quinte district are expected to gather in large numbers. There will be one hundred and seventy-five at the very least, according to an estimate by Rev. R. G. Peever. The conference is called to promote a wider interest and develop leaders in boys' work in rural town and city communities throughout the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Some Good Speakers.

There will be addresses by seven or eight recognized leaders of the Methodist church on boys' work and a vast amount of helpful and stimulating information relative to the question is expected to be furnished.

The inner wants of the visiting boys will be well looked after by the Methodist Church Ladies' Aid Societies.

Tonight at eight o'clock, George street ladies will supply supper. On Tuesday at noon the ladies of Charlotte street will do the honors, and Mark street ladies at night. On Wednesday at noon St. James Church Ladies' Aid will be the dinner hosts and on Wednesday night at eight, a grand farewell dinner will be supplied by all four churches, served in George Street Methodist Church.

The boys have been arriving all day and are being billeted at the homes of church members around the city. The conference will be on for three days, commencing tonight.

GOOD SINGING BY ST. JOHN'S CHOIR

The services at St. John's Anglican Church last night was of a musical character and consisted of a fine anthem and several carols appropriate to this season of the year. The choir are to be congratulated on the manner in which the selections were rendered as both music and singing were well done. The choir voices blended well so that its articulation was good as well as its tune and volume. The church had been very prettily decorated and a large congregation was present to hear the choral service. Rev. Canon Davidson read the usual announcements.

There are four candidates in the race for deputy reeveship, namely Thomas E. Young, Fred Stenson, Robt. E. Dobbin, and J. H. Forster.

For councillors the following are lined up—Wm. Robson, Arthur Vass, John F. Clarke, H. B. Rye, James N. Bell and William Steven.

HAD A GOOD XMAS DINNER

John Donahue Thinks Gaol Not a Bad Place

"Gaol isn't such a bad place, after all," remarked John Donahue in police court today. Donahue said he had been treated to a good Christmas dinner there, anyway.

He was discharged this morning after a week's remand to enable him to get in touch with Mr. Cresswell, whom he said would hire him to work in the lumber camps this winter. He promised faithfully to abstain from whiskey and steer clear of the police.

Charles Saunders, who was remanded a week ago on a charge of vagrancy, was also given a walking ticket. He claimed Carleton Place as his home. Chief Thompson stated that Saunders had tried to entice two small boys out into the country.

President—John Hanrahan.
Vice-Pres.—Michael Sharpe.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Thomas Gorman.
Fin. Secretary—John J. Kylie.
Rec. Secretary—A. H. Lehane.

Marshals—T. McCabe and J. Riley.
Guard—D. Sheehan.

Trustees — J. A. Sharpe, M. H. Quinlan, M. G. Donohue, C. P. Murty and George A'Hearne.

Representatives of the advisory board of the amalgamated total abstinence societies — J. Maher, J. A. Sharpe, John McCabe, Sr., A. H. Lehane, and Jas. Hickey.

Program Is Kept Up.

The Government program for the development of New Ontario did not suffer to any material extent during the fiscal year of 1914, which has just closed. Any retrenchment that might have been thought necessary in view of financial conditions in the country did not materialize until the year's work was completed, and the total appropriation for last year, out of the five millions set aside for this purpose, was spent under Commissioner Whitson, according to intentions. Premier Hearst, who is still carry on the duties of Minister of Crown Lands, gave the year's figures recently.

In all, the expenditure for 1914 was $802,578.18, a sum somewhat less than that of last year. These expenditures have now taken $2,067,098 out of the total New Ontario appropriation.

One new venture of the department has worked out very satisfactorily. The demand of prospective settlers for a knowledge of the crop possibilities of the north decided the Government to establish several experimental farms, and these have already proven their worth. With $9,000 for this work, farms have been worked at Cochrane, Hearst, Groundhog and other points. The root crops have shown wonderful growth and the wheat returns are also encouraging.

The bulk of the expenditure has been on good roads, and that the work is still proceeding. It is probable that the permission to export pulpwood, granted last year, will be continued through the fall and winter because of unemployment troubles. This permission originated with the vast quantity of blown-down timber following the fall storms, and Premier Hearst will ask the House for the privilege of its renewal if local markets cannot be had. It is purely an emergency condition.

Creating Interest.

"I understand that you favor local option."

"Yes," replied Col. Stilwell.

"But you are not a total abstainer yourself?"

"No. But my doctor has limited me to a very small allowance, and I like to add as much as possible to the excitement of getting a drink."—Washington Star.

FELL INTO OPEN WELL

Mother and Sister Were Unable to Save Young Man From Death

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 28.—Despite heroic efforts by his mother and his sister to save him, Charles Mahoney, 17-year-old son of Albert Mahoney, a farmer in Sandwich East, was drowned Saturday evening when he fell into an open well. Fifteen minutes after the young man left the house to go and draw water Mrs. Mahoney heard faint cries for help. She and her daughter ran outside, but at first were unable to locate the boy.

When they found him he was trying to find a foothold on the slippery sides of the well. Rushing to the barn, the frantic mother and sister joined several halters and lowered the improvised rope. It was seized, but the boy was unable to hold on when they attempted to haul him up.

Finding this means of rescue useless, a ladder was used, but 15 minutes in the icy water had rendered Mahoney helpless. He could not get a foothold. Three times the mother climbed down the shaky ladder in an attempt to assist her son, but her efforts were fruitless, and the boy sank with a cry of "Good-bye, mother!"

Neighbors were called and the body was recovered.

The Mahoney family is one of the best-known in Essex county.

NEEDS AND REQUIREMENTS OF SOLDIERS

President of Kitchener League Receives Communication From Official Source

Mrs. Jos. Knox, president of the Canadian Kitchener League, is in receipt of a communication which gives some first-hand information as to the needs and requirements of the hospitals where soldiers are being treated and of the soldiers who are in training. Mrs. Knox wrote for information, and the reply is as follows:

Mrs. James Knox:—

Dear Madam,—Your letter of October 20th has just reached me today. It has been delayed in some way at the Canadian Camp. The Canadian War Contingent Association was formed by the British Colonial Office with similar associations for Australia, New Zealand, India, etc., to act as a sort of clearing house and go-between for the activities of the various over-seas helping leagues. We have already established a splendid hospital near Folkestone of sixty-five beds which have been filled continually with British and Belgian wounded. The Canadians as yet are not at the front. We in conjunction with the Canadian Red Cross and Field Comfort Officers are handling things for the Canadian troops. We shall be very pleased to see that such things as you desire are forwarded to the Belgians.

For our hospital we need a constant supply as the misfortunate Belgians come in half naked. Few have underclothing or socks beneath their uniforms. We send these splendidly brave men away when convalescent fully equipped besides supplying them when in hospital. Many of the British soldiers have lost their kits by the time they reach the hospital and of course we do the same for them too. Now as to our requirements we need flannel shirts both day and night, woven underwear, body belts and socks, mufflers, woollen mittens and wristlets, woollen helmets and Cardigan jackets (knitted) or chamos lined vests. The cold is frightful and the soldiers cannot be too warmly clad.

For the hospital we also need dressing gowns, towels and plain roll bandages. Queen Mary, after whom at her own request, the Canadian hospital is named sent a number of suits of clothes, dark blue, made of a wool and cotton mixture. These suits are used in all hospitals while the wounded men are unable to go out, but are able to be up. We are badly in need of more and the need will increase. It could be a great boom to us if you could have some made. They are not hard to do. The coat is just a plain sack, little more than a smoking jacket. They should be made for a rather tall man, five foot, nine inches, and the coat big. If it is the fate of our Canadians to be wounded we shall of course receive them at our hospital and these suits shall be very useful for them.

It is the experience of all that nine times out of ten the wounded men get separated from their kits (quite naturally) and in the interval of finding and forwarding them the men must be clothed.

For the Canadians at camp I would recommend mufflers, socks, helmets, khaki colored wool and padded or lined sleeveless vests to be worn under these tunics. I believe they are to be supplied with the short fur coats worn by the troops at the front but the vests will be very welcome. We do not need helpless case shirts. Anything else is welcome. The Belgians will be glad of, and can make use of, anything.

The Servians too, are in a great state of want and many Canadians and English people are trying to send them medical stores of all kinds. They have put up a marvellous fight.

As to the sending of the things I would advise you to write or ask your local agent to write to Mr. G. M. Bosworth of the C.P.R. at Montreal. The Canadian Pacific Railway is I understand handling many cases of comforts sent from Canada to England but at what rates I do not know.

I am sorry the people in Canada have not understood earlier the work the Canadian War Contingent Association has undertaken. We are the headquarters for receiving, distributing and giving out information about the comforts for the troops. However better late than never. I am receiving from all over the Dominion letters and am putting people in touch with things over here. It must be most annoying to be left as long as you were with no response to the kind enquiry as how your league might help. I enclose a picture post card of the hospital and one of the circulars. From this you will see that Mr. Perley who has taken Lord Strathcona's place, is head of one committee and Mrs. Perley is head of another of which I am honorary secretary.

The last committee receives and distributes all parcels of clothing, comforts, etc. I should be grateful if you should spread the above information as widely as possible. At all times I am glad to give information of any kind about the association. Please address letters and all boxes of clothes, supplies and comforts to, The Honorary Secretary, Ladies' Committee, Canadian War Contingent Association, Westminster Palace Hotel, London, England.

Trusting that it is not too late to avail ourselves of your kindness and those associated with you on behalf of the Canadian soldiers,"

Sincerely yours,

(Sgd.) Eleanor McLaren Brown.

P.S.—Any packages that are meant for particular units of the Canadian forces should be distinctly marked with the name of the regiment for which they are intended.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN IN OPERA REVIVAL

De Wolf Hopper, and Festival Co. at Royal Alexandra Toronto

Playgoers who hark back to the days of comic opera at its best, and the younger generation who have heard so much about them but have never seen them, will welcome the announcement that De Wolf Hopper and the Gilbert and Sullivan Festival Company are to play an engagement for an entire week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, starting next Monday night. Among the well-known singers who will participate in these revivals are De Wolf Hopper, Idelle Patterson, Arthur Cunningham, Arthur Aldridge, Gladys Caldwell, Herbert Waterous, John Willard, Herbert Cripps, Jayne Herbert, Maude Mordaunt, Alice McCombs and Anabel Jourdan.

The success which came to William A. Brady when he revived "The Mikado" was so pronounced that he determined the time was ripe for other Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, and to that end he added to the repertoire the chief productions of Gilbert and Sullivan. In each and every case not only was managerial judgment upheld, but the public answered with such patronage that completely overshadowed the success made when the same operas were originally produced a little over a third of a century ago.

In making these revivals, it has been the aim of the producer to adhere strictly to all the stage traditions which surrounded the management of the Savoy Theatre, London, where these operas were originally produced, and to that end all the business found in the original prompt books, from which the present revivals were rehearsed, have been carried out.

The repertoire for the week will be as follows: Monday and Saturday evening and Thursday matinee, "The Mikado"; Tuesday evening and Saturday matinee, a grand double bill consisting of "Trial by Jury" and "The Sorcerer"; Wednesday and Friday evenings, "Iolanthe" and Thursday evening only, "Pirates of Penzance."

HACKETT GETS HIS MILLION

New York, Dec. 28. — James K. Hackett got his $1,200,000 fortune, and left town immediately to spend the holidays in the country, his lawyer could not say where.

The fortune represents the bulk of the estate of the late Minnie Hackett Trowbridge, the actor's niece, who died on March 1 last, Mr. Hackett being declared next of kin and sole heir.

"Mr. Hackett's new fortune," said his lawyer, "will not interfere with his profession in the slightest degree. He will continue just the same. This simply will give him ready money to use in exploiting several schemes in which he is interested."

Mr. Hackett played "Othello" in Peterboro last fall. He was born near Kingston.

LAID AT 'REST

Beautiful floral recognitions and a large funeral cortege denoted the esteem in which the late James Cavanagh was held. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon to St. Peter's cemetery. A very solemn and impressive service was held at St. Peter's Cathedral, conducted by Rev. Father Phelan.

The bearers were William Sharpe, Bruce Robinson, Harold Gibbs, Wm. Robinson, Patrick O'Toole and Jerry Sheehan.

No Music Here.

An old lady was compelled to carry an ear trumpet with her wherever she went. Upon visiting a small church in Scotland, not long ago, she was watched very suspiciously by the sexton until she reached her seat. Then, as if he could stand the suspicion no longer, he went over to her, and, shaking a warning finger emphatically, he said:

"Madame — one toot and you're oot."—Exchange.

COULD NOT FIND WHO CAUSED VIOLENCE WHICH LED TO WM. O'BRIEN'S DEATH

Deceased Was Seized With a Hemorrhage at the Base of the Skull — Doctors Say Brain Tissue was Abnormally Soft — No Evidence Before Jury That Blow Was Struck

After hearing the evidence of several men who were at the hotel, and that of Drs. Gallivan and Eastwood, who conducted the post mortem examination, the coroner's jury investigating the death of William O'Brien, who died at the White House on Christmas Eve, deliberated for one hour at the police court room last night and returned a verdict "that deceased came to his death on the night of December 24th, at the White House, death being caused by a hemorrhage at the base of the skull, due to violence; but whether the said violence was received from the hands of some other person or was caused from anger, excitement or other similar causes on his own part, we are unable to find from the evidence submitted."

Little light was thrown on the fatality from the evidence given by witnesses who were in the hotel at the time. The proprietor of the hotel, alone, saw the two men in a clinch. To his knowledge, no blows were struck.

The crown attorney endeavored to find out who drove Grose into the country after O'Brien's death, but the witnesses who were questioned as to this phase of the case swore that they did not.

The most important evidence was given by Dr. Gallivan and Dr. Eastwood. Dr. Gallivan produced a written report on the findings in the post-mortem. There were, he said, no marks of external violence. The covering of the left lung was adherent to the covering of the heart. The chambers of the heart were clotted. Artificial respiration was liable to cause this clotting, he said.

At the base of the brain there was a hemorrhage. This was at the junction of the spinal chord and the brain. The hemorrhage might result from undue force spent at that particular point.

"Meaning a blow?" questioned the crown attorney.

"A blow would do it," replied witness.

The witness further stated that death must have been practically instantaneous.

To the coroner, witness said a fatal infusion of blood could be found without a blow having been struck. This would be under such conditions as a strain on the part of deceased, a struggle, by grabbing deceased by the neck or by choking him. Excitement would also increase the blood pressure.

Brain Tissues Very Soft.

In his examination of the brain, the doctor said he found the brain tissue to be very soft. It was abnormally soft tissue. Violence might complete the rupture.

"Could you have a blow sufficient to cause a rupture, without any external evidence of that blow?"

"Yes."

To Mr. Gordon, witness could not say how long the conditiotn of softness of the brain tissue had existed. A spasm of sudden anger would increase the blood pressure and contribute to the hemorrhage. The efforts of O'Brien during the scuffle might have caused it.

To the conorer, the doctor said the softening of the brain contributed to the hemorrhage.

The evidence of Dr. Eastwood did not differ from that of Dr. Gallivan.

In addressing the jury the coroner said the case was a sad one and the most serious since he had been coroner. There was no direct evidence, he said, that a blow had been struck. Evidence of witnesses showed that there had been a scrap. Some of the witnesses were unsatisfactory and he was sorry the police had not been able to secure witnesses who could tell more of the actual fight. The evidence of the doctors showed death to be due to a hemorrhage of the brain due very probably to external violence. There was a condition of the brain which predisposed to a hemorrhage. The doctors had sworn that it was quite possible to have a hemorrhage without external violence and yet the absence of certain marks did not necessarily mean that no blow was struck.

John O'Brien, father of the deceased said he saw his son alive last at 1.30 on Thursday. He was aged 21 and was in the best of health. About a year and a half ago Dr. McNulty had performed an operation on his son.

He had not known of difficulties between Grose and his son until after the latter's death.

"Is there any other evidence you would like to give," asked the crown attorney.

"No," replied witness.

Chris G. Graham, proprietor of the White House, said he was in the hotel all evening. He had seen the prisoner but did not remember having seen the deceased. Grose used the phone a couple of times. He was sober so far as he knew.

He was in the office at the time. While at the phone, he heard a scuffle. Hurrying to the hall, he saw both men in a clinch. He spoke to Grose and separated the two. O'Brien leaned against the wall. He was making a gurgling sound.

Witness said he made two or three calls before he got a doctor. In the meantime others were caring for O'Brien and he joined in helping. The pulmotor was phoned for but the doctor arrived first.

He told Grose to leave the hotel.

Did Not See Blow Struck.

"You didn't see a blow struck?

"No, there was no blow struck."

"Do you know of anybody who saw a blow struck?"

"No."

Witness said all he heard was the scuffling. There was no loud talk.

After the affair he had learned that the two men had had a quarrel, some time before.

Heard No Threats.

Leslie Howden said he was in the White House and that he had seen both men. He heard talking but did not hear what the men were talking about. He heard no threats, and did not see the scuffle.

"Did you hear of any trouble between the two prior to this?"

"No."

"Did it strike you that Grose had been drinking?"

"No."

Bert Stewart, also was in the hotel. He knew Grose but not the deceased. He was with Grose and was in the room with him. Kennedy and Kilgour, also, were in the room. Roddy and O'Brien (not the deceased) came in later. This was about nine o'clock and he remained there till after the fatality. Grose had carried in drinks.

"What was he drinking?"

"Lager or ale."

"Do you know how many drinks he had?"

"He might have had three or four, or half a dozen."

"What condition was Grose in?"

"He didn't act like a man who was drunk."

"Did he act like a sober man?"

"I didn't notice."

"Were they all sober?"

"I wouldn't say."

Witness said he did not see anything of the scrap. He heard a scuffle and when he left the room, deceased was on the floor and Mr. Graham was opening the front of his shirt. He helped in carrying the deceased outside. Later he left the hotel, and met Grose. He said he was going to a barber shop.

"Did you hear any threats made by Grose?"

"No."

"You didn't know O'Brien was in the house till you saw him on the floor?"

"No."

Witness said he could not think of anything else he could tell. To the coroner, he said he met Grose at the corner and they walked to the Grand Hotel. Grose said he was going out to have a shave.

"Do you remember what you said as you walked from the corner to the hotel?"

"No, although I might have said something about carrying O'Brien out."

"You had no conversation about the deceased?"

"Not that I remember."

John O'Brien was in the room at the White House. He saw Grose first about 10.15 and last about 11 o'clock. This was on George Street. He did not see the scuffle as he left there before it took place.

Grose did not seem to be drunk but he would not say he was absolutely sober. Witness said he did not hear Grose mention deceased's name. Kennedy and Stewart were with Grose when he met the party on George Street. He did not have anything to say to them.

"Have you told us all you know about it?"

"Yes."

Wallace Kennedy, another member of the party in the stall at the hotel, said he got there about 8.45 and was there when Grose first came in. All were drinking.

"Do you know how many drinks Grose had?"

"Five or six."

"What was he drinking?"

"Lager."

Drove to Grose's Home.

Witness said he did not see any row and he did not see the body. He was out driving after the affair. In company with Gilgour, he drove to Grose's house to see if he was there. They did not see Grose.

"Did you go out in the country that night?"

"Yes, to Stewart's farm."

"How did Stewart get out there?"

"He was not there."

"You stayed there all night?"

"Yes."

Witness said Stewart's man (Barlow) arrived in the morning. He (Barlow) had taken a man whom he did not know, out to the country.

Bruce Stewart recalled said he did not drive out to the country that night and he did not drive Grose to Millbrook.

Herbert Kilgour said he was at the White House from about 9 p.m. till 10.45 p.m. He was in the stall with Grose and the others. Grose was serving drinks.

"About how many drinks did he have?"

"About four?"

He did not see the scuffle and he did not see the body. After leaving the hotel, he went to Patterson's barber shop. He saw Grose in a barber shop on George Street. Later

GERMAN POSITIONS ON THE YSER BROKEN BY ALLIES

British Warships are Co-operating With Land Forces in Action Along Coast

WHAT ANOTHER AUTHORITY SAYS.

MR. JOHN MURPHY, Electrical Engineer, Department of Railways and Canals, and Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, is a well-known authority on the difficulties arising from frazil and anchor ice. He says: "It is also generally believed that water powers will never be immune from ice troubles; but, with this belief I do not agree." Again: ". . . absolute continuity of supply is a necessity in connection with electric light and power services. A shutdown of one minute's duration is an unpardonable occurrence."

These statements were made in an address to the Science Undergraduates' Society of McGill University, and were printed in the Canadian Engineer of May 1st, 1908. A consideration of the part of the address dealing with ice conditions on the Ottawa appears on page 2, column 1, today.

NEUTRAL VESSELS SUFFER FROM MINES IN NORTH SEA

Times Says Britain Has not Laid Down one Mine Off the East Coast of England

GERMAN MINES ARE INSECURELY ANCHORED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 29. — Eight ships have struck mines in the North Sea and sunk since Christmas eve. The majority of them are neutrals. Many people have the impression that these are British mines, but the Times says Britain has not laid down one mine off the east coast of England.

Neutral shipping has been warned that German mines are insecurely anchored and are liable to drift considerable distances.

Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, collectively, have suffered a loss of 22 vessels and 87 lives through mines since the beginning of the war. During the first four months of the war the enemy destroyed or captured 54 foreign going British vessels, the hulls and cargoes of which are valued at 30 million dollars. So small is this loss relatively to the total ocean-going commerce that insurance underwriters have a handsome profit.

ST. GEORGE'S IS OCCUPIED GAINS MADE IN THE ARGONNE

DRIVE FOE OUT OF TRENCHES

After Violent Engagement Allies Are Closely Investing Steinback and Have Taken Possession of Ground Near the Village --- Germans Fight Fiercely Between the Lys and the Somme

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 29.—(Official Communication). — "In Belgium the village of St. George's has been occupied by our troops, who have established themselves in this location.

"From the Lys to the Somme the enemy has bombarded our positions rather violently.

"We have gained a little ground in the Argonne.

"On the heights of the Meuse, several German counter-attacks have been repulsed.

"Forces of the enemy which had occupied our trenches in the vicinity of Redoubt, in the burne diorest to the west of Apremont, have been driven out after three successive counter-attacks.

"In Upper Alsace, following a violent engagement, we are today closely investing Steinbach, and our forces have taken possession of the ruins of the chateau to the northwest of this village."

PARIS, Dec. 29.—A storm of violent proportions which swept over the battle front from Flanders almost to the German frontier on the allies' right yesterday held the opposing armies in leash. The fall of snow that was driven down in a terrific gale upon almost the entire war area acted as a curtain which effectively obscured the view of the enemy from the gunners, and a truce was enforced practically along the whole front.

However, in the Argonne region, where forest fighting has been furious for the past fortnight, the French forces managed to press forward through the storm for material gains.

Reports of the fighting which occurred just preceding the period of enforced inactivity indicate that the allies made decisive gains at the two extremes of the line against Muhlhausen and in front of Nieuport. Both of these movements are of great military importance, as they are preliminary developments of flanking manoeuvres which must surely discomfit the invaders when the time comes for the allies to assume definitely their offensive.

During the past four days, according to a despatch to The Paris Temps

WAR WAS ALWAYS IMMINENT OR AT LEAST PROBABLE

Through German Aggression Says Premier Borden to Canadian Club

Prussian Gospel of Force and Violence Must be Crushed Completely

Many Things Which Count Besides Armed Forces in the Field

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—Premier Borden addressed eight hundred men at the Canadian Club luncheon, the audience including most of those prominent in business and the professions. In announcing the attitude of his government, towards the present crisis, he said, "What remains to be done, shall be limited only by the need."

Speaking of the long standing German menace he said that while Germany had in ten years brought Europe to the verge of war which was averted twice by her opponents yielding and the third time by a resolute stand taken by England, in the words of an experienced British statesman as expressed to him, "the international kettle was always on the verge of boiling," so that when the diplomatic records of the past ten years are published, it will be found that through German aggression, war was always imminent or at least probable.

There is but one way to deal with the Prussian gospel of force and violence said the prime minister. It must be smashed utterly and completely. The resources of the Empire exceeded those of Germany as much as German preparedness exceeded Britain's preparedness. There are many things which count beside armed forces in the field.

Within another year, it was probable Britain's free colonies will have put in the fighting line a quarter of a million men.

WAR CONTRACT SCANDAL HERE ?

A Toronto journal of considerable notoriety, if not circulation, has undertaken to make charges against a local manufactory, and the Federal Government, to the effect that a "war contract scandal" is brewing in Peterboro. Lad Shot in Groin

Harry Leahy, aged nine, son of Mr. John Henry Leahy, of Douro, is lying in St. Joseph's Hospital very seriously injured, with grave fears entertained that he will not recover. He was accidentally shot in the abdomen by his father on Christmas Day when a rifle from which the latter was removing cartridges was discharged.

His father had been out hunting on the holiday, and on coming back to the farm commenced to unload the rifle before entering the house. The rifle was pointing towards the door of the house, when his nine-year-old son appeared in the doorway and at that very moment the gun was accidentally discharged, the full contents entering the lad's groin.

He was conveyed to the hospital on Saturday and attended by Dr. Gallivan. The physician stated that he was in a most serious condition.

ICE CONDITIONS AFFECTING POWER PLANTS AT OTTAWA.

MR. JOHN MURPHY, in addressing the students at McGill University, referred to conditions as they existed on the Ottawa River. This river is very much like the Otonabee, having long stretches of placid, smooth-flowing water, broken at intervals by rapids and falls. The main difference is that the Ottawa is a much larger river than the Otonabee.

There are many hydraulic power plants at Ottawa, most of them situated around the Chaudiere Falls and within a short distance of the point where the first "run of stone" for a gristmill was erected in the early part of the last century. Some of these power plants are below three sets of rapids, others are located at Des Chenes, and though these latter have a stretch of 25 miles of smooth lake and river above them, they, with the others, were periodically placed hors de combat by frazil and anchor ice. Usually a cold, northwest wind lashed and furrowed Lake Des Chenes, and, in preventing surface ice forming, produced immense quantities of frazil. Frazil is thus likely to form on any body of water that is not protected from the action of the cold air by a layer of surface or sheet ice, or by some artificial covering. Frazil has on several occasions within Mr. Murphy's own observation temporarily choked up the total flow of the Ottawa River itself by blockading the rapids.

One of the earliest attempts to cope with the frazil difficulty was the hanging of cedar boughs from a stout rope stretched across the surface of the channel. This was done by grist millers many years ago, and the cedar bough barriers floating low in the water soon became covered with frazil, and served as a starting point for the formation of surface ice. As these barriers soon formed dams, and then were sometimes torn from their moorings by the force of the flowing water, and the whole mass was carried into the racks at the power plants, this practice was not universally adopted. It was harder to remove the cedar boughs from the racks than the frazil.

Mr. Murphy describes three ways in which a power plant suffers from frazil ice:

(1) The openings in the rack get clogged, and, as the supply of water to the penstock is reduced, the output or capacity of the plant is lessened. When rack-clogging once begins, a complete shutdown is usually inevitable within a very short period of time. Some institutions, believing a shutdown unpreventable in any other way, entirely remove the rack just before winter sets in. Their water-wheels run the risk of being destroyed by floating debris, but this risk is, in their opinion, preferable to the certainty of rack-clogging. Hand and mechanical rakes are used for the purpose of cleaning the racks. This raking work simply consists in scraping the frazil from the bars; when it is scraped off, the current carries it into the penstock. If a side sluice exists near the end of the rack, much of the floating frazil may be passed over it.

Some idea of the amount of work required to keep a rack open during an attack of frazil may be gathered from the statement that the combined efforts of two motor-driven rakes and a gang of willing, able-bodied hand-rakers, placed so close together that they elbow each other, are often unable to keep a rack half open. This method resembles meeting a principle or law of nature with mere brute force, and, in such a contest, nature usually proves the stronger. That is not the best way to meet the problem, because it does not go to the root of the difficulty. Such a method, however, is at times very useful.

(2) The next difficulty is the sticking or freezing of the water-wheel's controlling gate. The frazil clings to the chutes and to the exposed part of the gate, and it cements the gate so firmly to the parts of the case which surround it that the gate cannot be moved. The wheel in this condition becomes uncontrollable, and the powerful automatic governors are unable to loosen the gates. Frazil will not unite with metal, it will not freeze to it, so long as the latter's temperature is kept above the freezing point.

If the load which is being carried by a power plant goes off while the controlling gates are frozen to the wheel case disastrous electrical and mechanical breakdowns are almost sure to follow. One not intimately acquainted with those conditions can scarcely imagine the serious plight in which a power plant and its attendants are placed when the controlling gates become frozen tight.

(3) The third difficulty to which frazil subjects a power plant is the clogging of the chutes. The effect of this is just the same as closing the gate, and a complete shutdown is usually the result.

A consideration of Mr. Murphy's suggestions for overcoming ice troubles will be published tomorrow.

WOMEN AND CRIME.

THE ALARMING INCREASE of the murder of women by men in fits of anger has aroused the attention of the authorities everywhere, but chiefly in the United States, it is said. The cause is said by neurologists to be the ever-increasing rivalry of the two sexes in work life. Women no longer submit as a matter of course when their husbands "say" anything. They give their opinions quite freely, and often with what appears to be "quite a superior air," as one investigator puts it. Men claim that it was they who provided the means for the education of women, and they do not propose to have it turned against themselves. In what are termed the higher classes, this species of crime has increased amazingly. "If women wish to rule, they will have to fight for it," says one. The outbreak of the American admiral, who affirms that American youths are brought up by women and are more like misses than men, has challenged attention. Is the next generation to be woman's? That is the question both sides are asking. Meanwhile there is bound to be trouble.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BILINGUALISM, says Beck's Weekly, is all right in its way, but a little knowledge of French is sometimes a dangerous thing. Thus, when a store in St. Catherine street sticks a placard over a shelf on which boxes of chocolates are displayed, with the words, in staring type: "Emportez les petites paquettes, s'il vous plait," the invitation is open to several interpretations. A gentleman who read it as meaning, "Take away the little packages, if you like," was brought up with a round turn when, availing himself of this generous offer, he was asked to explain his action to the manager. He "got away with it" all right, but now he knows that the placard merely means that people are expected to take small purchases home themselves, and that they cannot be shippd by the firm.

THERE SEEMS to be a good deal of agitation in town over alleged unfair treatment of the city and business men by the railways, both as to trains and freight rates. On being asked if there was any way out of the difficulty, Mr. Burnham said that he would be only too pleased to receive all complaints founded upon fact, for which day and date and details are given, and lay them before the Railway Commission, which has supreme control in these matters. Whatever difficulties exist can and will be solved fairly and justly by the Railway Commission, and promptly as well, but vague complaints are of no use.

AS THERE SEEMS to be considerable dissatisfaction among local manufacturers as to their assessment under the Workmen's Compensation Act, those having grievances should lay them before the local member in the Legislature, Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

J. M. GREENE would be a valuable addition to the Board of Education. There are several other good candidates, but Mr. Green should be one of the four to be elected, and the ratepayers should make no mistake about it.

Another Chant of Hate.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

Another chant in the same key has been written by Albrecht Schaeffer, and published in the Berliner Borsen Courier, which observes: "In this terrible poem, the dying German gathers up his fleeting strength to fling it at a Briton. The poets of the enemy peoples may see in this an expression of Chauvinism. And Chauvinism it is, but a Chauvinism elevated and righteous — such as they cannot dream of. Romain Rolland, Maeterlinck, Kipling, beloved and honored, grown as they are into our German hearts, how have they sunk before the mighty trial of this war. We now set our poets, our Gerhard Hauptmann, our Richard Dehmel, our Albrecht Schaeffer, against theirs, for we are entitled to glory in them!" There is not much reason to glory in Schaeffer if his poem is a fair sample of his work. It is to be observed of the war poems that there is a vast difference between those of the British poets and those of the Germans. While the British writers do not fail in denouncing Germany, they do not use the language of bitter hate. What the Germans do may be gathered from the poem that Albrecht Schaeffer has produced.

An Interesting Suit.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

An interesting suit has just been decided in New York, by which the Canadian Pacific Railway has been compelled to pay $25,000 to Mr. D. J. Black, of Buffalo. This is the result of an appeal by the company from a former verdict. Mr. Black was employed in the fall of 1911 by the C. P. R. as station agent at Wycliffe, in Western Canada. Owing to the illness of his parents he was forced to return home, and while there secured employment nearer home, and resigned his position with the railroad. They accused him of having misappropriated $324, and he was taken back to the West and tried, but the case was dismissed. An appeal was entered, and then he entered action against the railroad, with the result that he has been awarded $25,000 for malicious prosecution. It is probable that actions of this nature led to the old accusation that a corporation had no soul.

Questions of This Day.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

These are questions that are bound to force themselves on thoughtful Christians at this season. Do we believe in Christmas, or do we simply yield to force of habit in carrying out old customs? After two thousand years of teachings about Jesus, what have Christian men and women today to say about the teachings of Jesus? Jesus came into the world with a new message for humanity, a revelation concerning God, and a gospel for mankind. How are we to reconcile the state of the Christian world today with this message of two thousand years ago?

Hon. W. J. Hanna's City.

(Stratford Herald.)

The Sarnia Observer has issued a large and splendid cityhood commemoration edition with a mass of illustrations and letterpress attesting Sarnia's progress. Sarnia has certainly hit a fast gait of recent years. It is the young city where Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, still keeps his residence, resisting Toronto's allurements. It has to be some place to compete against the provincial capital, but there are many consolations and satisfactions in having a home in Sarnia.

Up to Us.

(Edmonton Bulletin.)

With the Belgians it is not a question whether Christmas will bring the usual joys and the usual tokens of friendly esteem. With them the question is whether they will live through the winter or starve. Recent despatches tell us that America must answer this question. It is up to us.

IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

Editor Review.

Dear Sir,—The idea that some few people have irrespective of party of "drawing closer in imperial union" reminds me of the young lady who was squeezed to death by a too ardent lover. There appears to be such a movement on foot at the present time. Surely there is no necessity for overdoing these things. Canada is showing her wholehearted devotion to the cause of the British Empire and British civilization and any attempt to "squeeze it" may result in serious consequences. Not all the preaching and praying of a hundred years could have caused to be shown the fervour of Canadian love of British civilization and liberty in such a way as this war has shown it. The only danger to the cause is from those whose Windsor uniforms are of the junior order. If they want decorations let them go and buy them at Eaton's but for goodness' sake let them keep from spoiling what is already a good job.

Yours,

CANADIAN.

DAY OF INTERCESSION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Will you allow me space for a few, it may be humble, words, on a subject that at the present time seems of great importance and comes very near my heart?

Yesterday it was announced in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, that next Sunday, in compliance with the request of the Governor-General, at the close of the lesson sermon there would be a special season of prayer in behalf of the Empire. I would like to ask, as a true subject of our king, that all who know God aright, and I believe in this method of prayer, as taught in Christian Science be present on this important occasion. To my mind this should be no formal obedience, but a sincere searching of hearts, as a great responsibility is laid upon every one who believes in God and the power of prayer. If King or Governor were drowning and called for our individual help we would gladly do anything we could do to save them. There is a more important call, not the saving of one or two, but of millions of human lives, and a righteous cause.

Recently, when I read of the slaughtering of women and innocent children, on the coasts of England, there arose in me a spirit that wanted to be there and slay the intruder with a blow, but such was not my power or privilege; now we have an opportunity of doing our duty as loyal Canadians.

We do not have to intercede with God to be on our side and help us slay the other fellow, as some aver, this would only build a wall between God and the object of our prayers.

Abraham Lincoln said, "Let us not ask that God be on our side, but that we be on God's side." I listened to a lecture once by Dr. Wild in which he claimed, Britain was the lost tribe of Israel. In this same lecture he said that England would have a desperate struggle, would be almost overpowered, but would arise and be the great nation of the world. Would it not be well for us, as British, to think that that time is come. The scriptures say, "As a man thinketh so is he." Shakespeare said, "There is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so."

If we are the Israel of this age would it not be well for us to try and imitate the old when led by Gideon against the host of the Midianites, see Judges 7 chapter. Let us then be as Israel of old, every man in his place, in our obedience to the call for help, remove the object, or thought that would obscure the light, and let the light of righteousness and freedom shine so brightly that the host of greed, cruelty and mad ambition will flee before it. It is only the will we wish to destroy, but if certain nations or personalities persist in clinging to the wrong, let them go down with it. We are not going to pray that Germans or any other nationality be destroyed, but that "righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters the sea," and our beloved soldiers saved from having to slaughter their fellowmen.

Again I say let us be in real earnest that great good may be the result of our united thought, based on the one God, Love and who is too pure to behold iniquity, and changes not. Great is our God, in Him alone we trust.

Have love! Not love for one alone,
But man as man thy brother call;
And scatter, like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.
—Schiller.

Thanking you in advance,

R. J. TODD.

Well, Does Anybody Say "Po-tah-toes?"

"The causes of war are sometimes strangely trivial," remarked the student of history.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I know a once peaceful family that has lined up in factions over the question of whether it is proper to say 'to-mah-tos' or 'to-may-toes.'"—Washington Star.

The Actor Headsman

He Conceived Himself to be the Real Thing

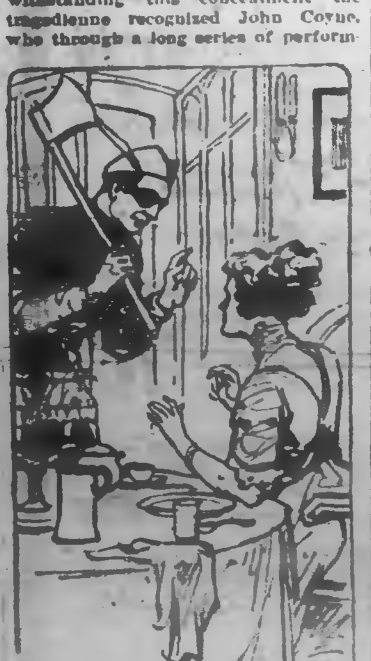
By F. A. MITCHEL

The tragedienne had played the role of Mary, queen of Scots, to a crowded house. Throughout the play the audience had sat spellbound, and during the last scene—that in which the queen is led to execution—not a sound was to be heard in the theater except what pertained to the melancholy procession on the stage. Then when the curtain fell just before the ax was supposed to fall on the beautiful neck resting on the block the hush gave place to long drawn breaths. The audience arose and passed out without the usual hum of conversation, but silently, as if the real tragedy of several centuries ago had been enacted.

The tragedienne entered her carriage at the stage door and was driven to her hotel. No one was about except the night clerk in the office and a callboy. The tragedienne passed up to her rooms, in one of which a table was spread with a few light dishes. Throwing off her wraps, she seated herself and partook of the meal.

It was summer, and the window doors were open, giving access to a stone balcony without. The tragedienne was in the act of lifting a morsel to her lips when she paused and listened. There was a sound on the balcony. Then a figure stepped into the room.

Though a man, tall, lithe, muscular, his tread was as noiseless as that of a cat. He was clad in tight fitting black and on his shoulder carried an ax. On his head was a conical cap, and his features were covered by a mask. Notwithstanding this concealment the tragedienne recognized John Coyne, who through a long series of performances had taken the part of executioner in the play that was making her famous.



"IT IS TIME FOR YOU TO PREPARE FOR THE BLOCK."

"Why, John! What brings you here at this time of night without having changed your dress?"

"I have come to announce that it is time for you to prepare for the block."

Had the words not been spoken with evident seriousness the tragedienne might have fancied that the man was joking. Another feature conduced to make her think he was in earnest. It had been noticed that Coyne had recently been acting strangely. Some time before that he had asked to be given another part. The one he performed he had played so long that it had begun to pall on him. Night after night he had looked upon the queen of Scots enacting the scene leading up to the execution and had been under the influence of her impersonation of one whom he was about to behead. He had not given this as a reason for his desire to change; he had said that he was ambitious for a speaking part, whereas that of executioner was a silent one. But he had confessed to the tragedienne that while enacting the role he had felt himself to be a real headsman.

It was this that caused the tragedienne to shudder at the solemn manner in which he had announced what he had come for. Indeed, she caught at once at an explanation of his strange coming. He was mad; he was armed with an ax. She was alone, with no means of summoning assistance except by an electric button, between which and her stood the lunatic. Besides, there was no one she could call who was capable of protecting her.

Persons when confronted by one whose mind is unhinged, if they keep their own heads naturally feel it necessary to humor the person they dread. The tragedienne saw at once that to oppose John Coyne would be to excite him. All she could hope for was to delay him that she might in the meanwhile conjure up some expedient by which to save herself.

"John," she said, "I ask but one boon of you. Before I pass to that bourn whence no traveler returns permit me to partake of meat and drink to gain strength to endure the ordeal."

"There is time for that," said Coyne, lowering his ax to the floor and supporting himself by the handle as he had done so often on the stage while waiting for her to speak her lines.

The tragedienne tried to resume her meal, but could not force herself to swallow the food. She drained a glass of wine and poured out another. This she did to give her strength to withstand the man who was bent on beheading her.

"John," she said by way of keeping her mind employed, "how did you come up here?"

"By means of a lattice."

"Could you go back the same way?"

"I could."

"I'll not be convinced unless I see you do it."

"That your majesty will never see. Before I go from here I'll sever that fair neck."

He said this with such determination that she saw her ruse had failed. She did not dare urge him. She was silent for a time, then tried another plan.

"When my neck is on the block, John, I wish you to strike with true aim. Let there be no bungling. To steady your arm drink a glass of wine."

She filled a goblet with the beverage and held it up to him with a pleading look. He refused it.

"If my arm is to be steady," he said, "the head that directs it must be steady. Would you have me put an enemy into my head to steal away my brains?"

Another ruse had failed. The tragedienne sat trying to force herself to eat, while the madman stood resting on the handle of his ax waiting for her to finish.

"John," she said, "would you not go to my cousin Elizabeth and make a last appeal for me?"

"I go to the queen of England to ask for mercy for your majesty! A headsman would not be admitted to audience, to say nothing of being granted the boon he would ask. Besides, so long as there is a queen of Scotland there is a barrier to a queen of England."

"Do you suppose that my cousin will, at my death, proclaim herself queen of the Scots?"

"You ask me questions of state, whereas I am but a headsman. Come: I am ordered to strike the blow that leaves Scotland without a queen. Hark! The bell is tolling. The hour has arrived."

Though she could not see his features for the mask, she knew that his eye was wild with insanity. He lifted his ax, and she feared that he might swerve it against her.

"The block!" she cried. "Where is the block? Blindfolded, I cannot see it."

Extending his hand, he grasped hers. She arose from the table and took a few steps under his guidance. Then it occurred to her to direct by will power the way they should go. She tried to lead him to the electric button that she might ring the bell, but she had not dominated him, and they moved rather toward the window. Stopping before it, she said:

"Is your ax sharp? Can you finish the work with one blow?"

"It will serve its purpose."

"Let me feel of its edge."

Gently taking the ax from him, she ran her thumb over its blade and was somewhat relieved to find that it came from the property room of the theater, was the one he had so long used in the performance and was made of wood. There was consolation in this, but the weapon, if not sharp enough to cut off her head, was sufficiently formidable to beat out her brains.

"What!" she cried. "Do you propose to sever my head from my body with that blunt instrument? I'll submit to death, but not to mangling."

She tossed the ax out of the window.

The actor, who thought himself a veritable executioner, was disconcerted at his loss. He went out on the balcony, bent over the stone balustrade and looked down for his ax. The tragedienne, quick as a flash, closed the glass doors and turned the latch. Since they were not to be opened from the outside the lunatic could re-enter the room only by smashing the glass. But the tragedienne did not wait for him to do this. She ran to the door of the room, down the stairs and on reaching the night clerk fell fainting on the floor before him.

When she had revived and told her story the clerk called an officer, and together they went to the scene of what had nearly been a tragedy. All was quiet there. The policeman opened the window. The balcony was deserted. Evidently John Coyne had descended by the way he came. A search was made for him, and he was found on the street muttering to himself incoherently. He was taken to his lodging and the next day removed to an asylum.

The evening on which this incident occurred was the last on which the tragedienne played Queen Mary. Her manager, who was loath to lose and have her lose the profit that would accrue from her marvelous impersonation, used all his persuasive powers to induce her to continue, but without avail. She said she had driven one man mad under the strain and declared that if she continued to play the part she would in time follow him to bedlam. This ended the argument, and the next play in which she appeared afforded her a more cheerful part.

She also made a change in her habit of eating her supper after the night performance. Since her escape from an actor headsman with a wooden ax she invariably has some friend to sup with her. If she fails to secure such a companion she goes to bed without a supper.

A Unique Method.

Norfolk County men gathered at a sale of cattle in Simcoe recently helped along the Belgian relief fund in a rather unique way. Dr. Eaid put up a calf for sale, which was to be offered again by each successive purchaser. The animal passed through several hands, the several sales aggregating the sum of $623, which was handed the Treasurer Mrs. R. W. Wallace. Not satisfied with this amount the owner at the end of the week had the sale continued to swell the fund.

Lotion For Enlarged Pores.

Before bathing the face in warm water with a face brush rinse thoroughly in tepid water to remove all traces of the soap, then in cold water, lastly applying the following astringent wash with a bit of absorbent cotton: Boracic acid, one dram; alcohol, one ounce; rosewater, two ounces. This will cleanse and close the pores eventually, but you must be patient and persevering in order to effect the desired result.

MARK THE FLARE.

All Fashionable Tailored Suits Have One This Season.

SILK AND WOOL SUIT.

More women are interested in the tailored suit at this time of year than in any other style of dress. Every one must have a gown for the street, while only the few find the elaborate afternoon and evening frock a necessity. Suits this season are plain, but their chic is obvious in the line. There is a decided flare to tunics and skirts. The suit pictured here is of dark blue silk and wool mixture. It has a narrow foundation skirt and flaring tunic, the latter a continuation of the belted body of the coat. Dark blue velvet and bone buttons trim the suit.

HINTS FOR SHOPPERS.

Modish Blouses With Long Sleeves and Mannish Collars.

Satin overblouses and lace overblouses are the things. Some are even designed in odd, vestlike effects. Plaited ruffles of chiffon or lace unite these to their chiffon under parts.

For wear with the tailored gown there are excellent shirts of crepe de chine, tub silk or linen, buttoning up the front with small round buttons and made with rolled over, mannish looking collars, which also button in the front, and tightly too.

Long sleeves are a component necessity, but both sleeves and collar are made with pique collars and cuffs which may be detached and freshened, thus prolonging the service of the garment beyond the only too brief period which ordinarily belongs to such.

For traveling or semiformal wear there are chic little waists of roman striped silks. These have white silk collars and cuffs and are most useful.

Plaided velvet waists of wonderfully deep toned colors combined in new designs are especially distinctive in appearance.

Belts, cuffs and trimming touches in solid color velvets enhance the beauty of these newer waists to a most irresistible longing to possess one.

CAPES ARE BECOMING.

They Suit Most Women the Secret of Their Great Popularity.

The cape has become a garment of elegance, whether it be fashioned of spotless, tailless ermine or its clever imitator, French coney, or of more commonly accepted taffeta, serge or velvet.

Plush and velvet capes are the most popular types; furs the most costly; brocades and Byzantine embroidered silks a close second to the furs, which last, however, are always regally superior in any season, and taffeta and broadcloth. The collar is of fur, of velvet, of metal lace or of satin according to the material employed in the making of the cape. It usually contrasts with that, not even excepting fur made wraps. In these it is a chic conceit to model collars of wondrously colored velvets, which are in total harmony with the high lights or the deep nuances of the fur coloring.

For fur and for velvet, plush or brocade wraps fur collars which hood the shoulders in close fitting, circular cut decisiveness are the most modish.

Long or Short Coats—Which?

A war is being waged between the short and the long suit coat. Dressmakers decree that it is the long coat which shall be worn, but nevertheless show their inconsistency by still clinging fondly to the short.

As a result many of the smarter costumes for formal occasions have jackets which extend no further than the waist line. A compromise in the walking suit has been effected by the making of the coat long in back and quite short in front. Their skirts, as those of the dresses, are not standardized as to width.

GRAY KNITTING

—(By Katherine Hale.)

All through the country, in the autumn stillness,
A web of gray spreads strangely, rim to rim:
Incessant, gentle, dim.

A tiny click of little wooden needles,
Elfin amid the gianthood of war:
Whispers of women, tireless and patient,
Who weave the web afar.

Whispers of women, tireless and patient—
"Foolish, inadequate!" we hear you say;
"Gray wool on fields of hell is out of fashion."
And yet we weave the web from day to day.

Suppose some soldier dying, gaily dying,
Under the alien skies, in his last hour
Should listen, in death's prescience so vivid,
And hear a fairy sound bloom like a flower—

I like to think that soldiers, gaily dying
For the white Christ on fields with shame sown deep,
May hear the fairy click of women's needles
As they fall fast asleep.

THE CAPTAIN'S ORDERLY.

He Was Stronger On Patience Than on Initiative.

A splendid story that comes from Winnipeg is being told with great avidity in higher-up military circles.

Capt. A. G. S.——, in command of a Western Manitoba infantry regiment, arrived in Winnipeg after a long, wearisome journey by train. He was met at the station by several brother officers and the private who was to be his orderly. Giving the man—Jones, we will call him, his valises and grips the officer ordered the man to take them to the —— hotel.

The officer arrived at the hotel an hour afterward and found the orderly standing at attention in the lobby with the officers effects lined up beside him.

"Why didn't you take these things to my room?" the officer asked the man.

"Yes, sir," came the orderly's response.

Meeting friends just then Capt. S—— did not arrive at him room for another half hour. And when he turned the corridor to get to his room he found Jones outside the door, the valises and grips piled up as before.

"Great Scott, man, why didn't you take them in and unpack them?" exclaimed the exasperated captain.

"You didn't give me instructions to that effect, sir," respectfully replied the man, hastening to do as he was bid.

After the things had been placed to the officer's satisfaction he asked the orderly to come down and have a drink.

"I don't drink, sir, thank you," came the answer.

"Well, come and have a cigar, then," said the officer, opening the door.

"Thank you, sir, but I don't smoke," again refused the orderly.

"Great heavens, man, what kind of a man are you, anyway? Who are you? Where do you come from?" Capt. S—— shouted, sinking down into a chair.

"Well, sir," replied Jones, "before I enlisted, sir, I taught psychology and philosophy in B—— University."

Glazed Earthenware.

Glazed earthenware was long supposed to be of no more ancient date than the ninth century, but the discovery of glazed ware in Egypt, of glazed bricks in the ruins of Babylon, of glazed coffins and enameled tiles in other ancient cities proves that this is not the case. The Arabs seem to be entitled to the credit of having introduced glazed ware into modern Europe. The Italians are said to have become acquainted with this kind of ware as it was manufactured in the island of Majorca and gave it the name of majolica. The French derived their first knowledge from the Italian manufactory at Faenza and christened it faience.—London Saturday Review.

INTERFERENCE OF TRADE IS RESENTED BY UNITED STATES

FORMAL PROTEST TO GREAT BRITAIN

After a Month Spent in Preparation of Document the Washington Government Sends an Emphatic Objection to Stoppage and Searching of American Ships—Note is Really to Triple Entente Powers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29. — The United States Government yesterday despatched a long note to Great Britain insisting upon an early improvement in the treatment of American commerce by the British fleet. It gave warning that much feeling has been aroused in this country, and that public criticism was general over unwarranted interference with the legitimate foreign trade of the United States.

The document, constituting the strongest representations on this subject made by the United States to any of the belligerents since the outbreak of the war, was cabled to Ambassador Page to be formally presented to Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary. Its preparation was begun a month ago by Solicitor Cone Johnson, Counsellor Robt. Lansing and Secretary Bryan, and finally during the last two weeks had the personal attention of President Wilson himself, who revised its phraseology with minute care.

As the detailed point of view of the United States, is numerous specific cases of detention and seizures of cargoes, had been set forth in a series of emphatic protests, most of which have gone unheeded, yesterday's communication was couched in general terms covering the entire subject of the relations between the United States and Great Britain as affected by the latter's naval policy, considered highly objectionable by this Government.

The note declares at the outset that the representations are made in a friendly spirit, but that the United States considers it best to speak in terms of frankness, lest silence be construed as an acquiescence in a policy on the part of Great Britain which infringed on the rights of the American citizens under the laws of nations.

Since France has adopted practically the same decrees on contraband as has Great Britain, yesterday's note is virtually a statement intended for all the members of the triple entente.

Feeling has been aroused on the subject to such an extent, the communication adds, that the American Government feels compelled to ask for definite information as to Great Britain's attitude in order [illegible] may take such measures as will protect American citizens in their rights.

Reference is made in the note to the high principles of equity which have actuated Great Britain in her championship in the past of the freedom of the seas to neutral commerce, and the hope is expressed that even though a belligerent herself, she will realize the seriousness to the neutral of continued interference.

The position of the United States, as expressed in yesterday's note, is a consequence of several steps by Great Britain, France and Germany on the subject of contraband. Although the declaration of London, drafted in 1909, embodying the previous understandings of international law and new rules for the conduct of maritime warfare with respect to neutral commerce, had not been ratified when the present war broke out, it was thought for a time all countries would adhere to it. Great Britain by an order-in-council, on Aug. 20 last, declared the Declaration of London effective with certain modifications. Germany announced to all neutrals her willingness to adhere to the whole declaration. The United States took the position that it could not accept piecemeal adoption by the allies of the Declaration of London with their own amendments, and declared that it would be guided by the general practices of international law, irrespective of the Declaration of London.

Langelier Gains Ground.

QUEBEC, Dec. 29. — Sir Horace Archambault of Montreal, Chief Justice of the Appeals Court, was sworn in yesterday at the Parliament, as administrator of the Province of Quebec, during the illness of Sir Francois Langelier.

An official announcement made yesterday at the Parliament Buildings states that Sir Francois is steadily gaining and that hope has never been abandoned for his recovery.

Brockville Man Kills Himself.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Dec. 29.—G. A. Tennant, of Brockville, committed suicide at his home yesterday by cutting his jugular vein with a penknife. He had been in poor health for a long time.

WILSON'S STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29. —President Wilson, referring today to the American note to Great Britain insisting on better treatment for American commerce, declared that large damages eventually would have to be paid by England for the unlawful detention of American cargoes.

Do It Now.

If you have something hard to do,
 Begin it in a hurry.
Don't dawdle 'round and put it off,
 And let it cause you worry.

If you have work that must be done,
 The best way is to do it.
If you postpone it needlessly,
 You're pretty sure to rue it.

A task seems easier to do,
 When you have well begun it.
Just brace up and begin it, then,
 And, first you know, you've done it.
—Somerville Journal.

SCHOOL TRUSTEE

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen, — Having been nominated for School Trustee for the year 1915, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in my behalf. If elected I promise to support and advocate only such measures as would assure the strictest economy commensurate with the educational requirements of the city.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year, believe me to remain

Yours truly,

ROLAND DENNE

Card to the Electors

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH :

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire respectfully to solicit your votes and your influence that I may be elected Mayor of the City of Peterborough for the year 1915. I was born in this City and have lived here all my life, and feel, and have always felt, a deep interest in the City.

I have served you in the City Council for eight years, having been elected several times by the whole City under the general vote system and also since then have represented the South Ward. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works two years and Chairman of the Property Committee four years, and served as a member on all the other Committees, and the experience I have had and the knowledge of the affairs and needs of the City I have obtained during those years will be of advantage in the position of Mayor if you elect me to that office.

I offer myself as a candidate at this time because I have been requested to do so by a large number of electors. One year ago a number of my friends urged me then to be a candidate, but I stood aside upon the statement to me by the present Mayor that he wished the office for one year only, and would not run for a second term, and that my two-year term as Alderman would then have expired, and it would be a more convenient time for me to be a candidate for the office, consequently, I am not violating any custom in being a candidate this year.

My course in the Council is known to you, and, while I do not claim not to have made a mistake in the eight years, I feel that I can ask you to support me upon my record as an Alderman. During the coming year I believe the Council should have two principal aims, namely, to conduct the business of the City with the strictest economy, so as to make the tax rate as low as possible, and to expend the revenue upon necessary works in such a manner as to give as large an amount of employment as possible for the money expended and to produce the best results. If you elect me I will keep these aims in view, that the burden of taxation may be as light as possible and that work may be given to those who need it upon works for the benefit of the City so far as the revenue will permit.

Again soliciting your votes, and wishing you all the compliments of the season,

I am, yours respectfully,

GEO. H. DUNCAN

BUDDING LEADERS OF MEN IN CONFERENCE OF THREE DAYS

Young Men of Bay of Quinte Conference Assembled to Study Christain Leadership Are Accorded a Hearty Welcome to the City --- An Enthusiastic Address by Rev. C. W. Bishop

First impressions are always strongest and certainly the opening session of the three days' conference of boys and young men which was held last evening in George Street Church created an outstanding favorable impression upon the large number who were present. The flower of Methodist young manhood throughout the Bay of Quinte district have assembled in Peterborough for three days to study Christian leadership and how to promote interest in the work and develop leaders. Approximately one hundred and sixty-five boys and young men have come to the city to study these questions and before the conference is ended some bright and enthusiastic services are confidently anticipated. Last evening's session was but a forerunner of what is to come.

From six to seven o'clock the boys enjoyed a supper served in the basement of the church by the Ladies' Aid Society. From seven to eight a song service took place in the church into which the boys entered with hearty voices. The boys were then divided into district groups and a leader and secretary for each selected. After this a solo by Mr. Fred Myles acceptably paved the way for the regular evening service. Rev. R. G. Peever presided.

Rev. Mr. Bishop.

It was worth something to have heard the address delivered by Rev. C. W. Bishop who was the principal speaker for the evening. For the right kind of speaker at a boys' conference it would be difficult to secure a more enthusiastic and helpful speaker than Rev. Mr. Bishop. He simply pumped good resolutions and enthusiasm for high ideals and Christian leadership into the audience. For one hour he laid down the principles of successful leadership in a plain but powerful manner.

In starting his address Mr. Bishop stated that it was always a delight and an honor for him to address an audience of young men and especially such an audience as the one that had assembled. He failed to see how any man could fail to feel a thrill at the responsibility that followed such an undertaking. He believed he was speaking to a select group of young men and boys who had a certain concentrated and definite work in the world yet to perform. They were in a state of potential leadership.

Rev. Mr. Bishop then went on to speak of leadership, treating the subject from almost every conceivable angle touching however in the limited time at his command only the most outstanding features represented in leadership. He declared that the greatest need of religious work today was leadership. Nothing was paramount to it. The famous John R. Mott once said that every problem that faces Christianity today comes back in its last analysis to leadership. No movement could rise above its leaders except where they themselves wer enabled to transcend their lives and their movements by greater qualities of leadership. Movements had flourished and then gone backwards but the reason was because of the mediocre leaders that sooner or later got into it and caused its fall. Mr. Bishop said that all he could urge upon such an audience was to invincably resolve to forge ahead, to become leaders in Christian thought and culture. He considered that youth was the time in which the chord of ambition could most easily be sounded. It was during youth that one was most ambitious, when one could be most readily reached by good influences. Mr. Bishop declared that the average young fellow today who was engaged in Christian work was easily accessible when it came to encouraging to go outside of himself in promoting the services of God. They were willing to help others and had a large conception of service. Mr. Bishop declared that he knew that some boys secretly cherished great ambitions and aspired to great men and achieve even greater things than they. Some were harboring ambitions that were only represented in the names of the greatest men of today, names like Dr. Chown, John R. Mott and Sherwood Eddy.

Mr. Bishop had some things to say about the positive side of leadership bringing out clearly the qualities that should be cultivated and what should be avoided. It was a peculiar thing but true that at the very age when youth was most susceptible to good influences that he was also the object of all the evil instincts that prey for a hold upon man. It was the dangerous period that had to be carefully trod.

Mr. Bishop judging from the intense interest that rewarded his address last evening will be a welcome speaker any time during the conference.

Address of Welcome.

The conference was first addressed by His Honor Judge Huycke to whom fell the honor of delivering the address of welcome to the visiting boys. He assured them that they were heartily welcome and hoped their stay would be profitable and beneficial. There was a splendid feature awaiting them if they were engaged in the work of cultivating Christian leadership. He believed that the greatest work the church was carrying on today was the work among its young men, greater even than mission work in the foreign field. The young men present stood he felt for Christ and Christianity. They were learning to develop a lofty Christian character and a strong gentle, courteous, firm, cultured, honest disposition. One did not have to be rough and boorish to be strong. It was the polished, highly tempered steel that was the finest. Judge Huycke hoped they would all enjoy their stay in Peterborough and that they would all return again some day.

A slight alteration in the evening program was necessitated by the unavoidable absence of Rev. Mr. Bartlett who was slated for an address. However Dr. Stephenson of Toronto very ably filled the gap and as usual gave a most appropriate address that was full of good nature but permeated by sound Christian teaching.

Dr. Stephenson.

Dr. Stephenson compared men to potatoes. He considered that it was a crime in these enlightened days for a farmer to grow small potatoes and if it was a sin to err in that respect how much worse it was to grow small narrow-minded men. Under divine direction people should find out how to become large, strong, true representatives of Christianity. There were great opportunities today more so than ever before in the history of the world. He agreed with Judge Huycke that the greatest need today in the world was young men leaders, young men of character. Men were needed who had the very highest possible conception of what it means to be a Christian. He closed with a strong plea that the boys might return home better and more efficient workers in the Master's vineyard.

We're Glad You Came.

It fell to Mr. Leo Copp of Peterborough to deliver a little address of welcome to the visitors. His topic was "We are glad you came." Mr. Copp said the world today was looking for leaders in business, in religion, and on the battlefield, and he was glad those present were interested in the preparation for leadership. He hoped that when the conference was over the delegates would return home determined to start the wheels turning.

What We Came For.

In a very able response Mr. J. F. Lane, of Oakwood, Ont., informed the conference what they had come to Peterborough for. He hoped that when the conference was closed and the boys had gone back to their respective societies they would not merely present a few notes on it and then let it pass into oblivion. Rather they should take back an intense determination to let it bear fruit and start them on the path to big things and inaugurate a desire to achieve leadership at all costs. In order to be a good leader one had to be a good follower. When Christ wanted disciples he first said "Follow Me." Later He sent them out as leaders and teachers. He hoped the boys would derive great blessings from the conference and reconsecrate their lives to Christ.

HEWLETT SAVED?

Flight Commander May be Prisoner of War

LONDON, Dec. 29. — The British aerial raid on Cuxhaven may yet prove to have been without loss of life to the British.

According to a despatch published by The Daily Sketch, Flight Commander Francis Hewlett, whose seaplane was wrecked, the commander himself being reported missing when the flyers and their convoy returned, is now reported to have been saved.

It is believed that the daring naval flyer was picked up by a German warship, and that he is now a prisoner of war.

The only damage the British expedition sustained was the loss of several hydroplanes, costing $45,000, and the loss of life was Commander Hewlett.

German Comment on the Raid.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 29. — "Cuxhaven was not a sleepy Scarborough. Everybody was on duty and we prepared a worthy reception," is the comment of The Neue Hamburger Zeitung yesterday on the raid of the British upon the German naval base last Thursday.

"The difference was that our airmen and Zeppelins dropped bombs which set the English on fire," the Zeitung continues. "The English dropped missiles, which fell alongside the objects at which they were aimed."

SPY CAUSED LOSS OF HORN BROS. MILL

According to the Lindsay papers, the destruction of the Horn Bros.' mill, was caused by either a German spy or a German sympathizer.

STORM RISES IN TURKEY

Proclamations Call on Turks to Rise Against Germany

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A London Daily Express despatch from Athens to The Herald says:

There is every indication that a storm is gathering in the interior of Turkey. The police have seized thousands of proclamations in the barracks in Constantinople, calling on all true Turks to rise against the Germans and the committee of union and progress, in order to save Turkey, "because the enemy is at her gates."

Consternation is widespread in the governing circles in Turkey, and there is general dissatisfaction over the lack of military successes. It is feared the fleet cannot be trusted and Enver Pasha and Field Marshal von der Goltz have prepared the way for drastic changes. Talaat Bay's party is working in the direction of proposing peace on the basis of maintaining the status quo. This neutrality is not acceptable to many of the Turkish people.

PRUSSIANS CONDEMNED

German Humanity League Issues an Appeal

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Morning Post has received from Herr Karl Bernstein who writes from Rotterdam, a translation of a New Year's appeal to be issued to the Socialists in Europe and America by the committee of German Humanity League. After reciting German outrages the appeal concludes:—

"We know from authentic intelligence which reaches us that the restless indignant and deceived democracy now undergoing privations and nursing its grief cannot be restrained by force from making an active protest and we most earnestly appeal to every comrade who cares for maintenance of international obligations to strive his utmost to crush and sweep away forever the domination of Prussian militarism within Germany, which by its conspiracy against humanity has disgraced and humiliated our nation in the eyes of the civilized world."

The appeal is signed by Karl Bernstein, Jacob Hamelsdorf, Emil Gott, Conrad Schwaba, Gustave Ochse, Ernest Schuster, Franz Gaussen, Albrecht Setter and is dated at Rotterdam, Dec. 29, 1914.

Courage of Wounded.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 29.—"This is entirely a shell and shrapnel war—bullet and bayonet wounds are rare," writes Lieut. Dr. J. Cameron Wilson, of this city, who is attached to the headquarters of the British Red Cross at Boulogne. Dr. Wilson adds that a surprising number of his patients have frozen feet, and that the grit and courage of the wounded is wonderful. The writer speaks of a 15-year-old bugler whose feet was frozen and who was "chock full of shrapnel."

ST GEORGE'S IS OCCUPIED

from its correspondent in Basie, Switzerland, the most terrific fighting has been taking place on the whole front of the Vosges region. The fighting was most violent on Friday and Saturday, when the roar of the guns incident to a furious cannonade was distinctly heard on the Swiss border.

French airmen had previously reconnoitered the German gun positions in a flight over Muhlhausen, only eight miles in advance of the French lines. Upon their return the French gunners, having been given the corrected range by the observers who went aloft with their airmen, opened a most deadly fire upon the German batteries. Many of the German guns are reported to have been been silenced.

"During the entire day a violent storm has interfered with the operations along the greater part of the front. It is reported, notwithstanding, that we have made some progress in the Argonne region.

"In Belgium we have continued to advance. To the west of Lombaertzyde we are actually at the foot of the sand dunes on which the enemy has established his line of resistance.

"At a point south of Ypres we have lost a section of trenches near Hollebeke.

... the region of Lens, near Carency, the enemy yielded, under our attacks, 800 yards of first-line trenches.

"In the valley of the River Aisne and in Champagne there has been intermittent artillery fighting which was particularly severe in the vicinity of Rheims and around Perthes. Here the enemy directed their artillery fire especially against the positions to the west of Perthes conquered and occupied by us.

"On the heights of the Meuse there has been slight progress by our troops along the entire front.

"In the Vosges, the enemy bombarded the railroad station at St. Die, but the railroad service has not been interrupted.

"In Upper Alsace, to the northeast of Steinbach, a counter-attack of the Germans was repulsed."

Successes for Russians.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 29. — The following statement from the General Staff of the Russian commander-in-Chief was issued last night:

"On the 27th there was no important engagement between the lower Vistula and the Pilica rivers. The German attacks were everywhere repulsed. The Germans suffered heavy losses, especially during a vain attack they made to the southeast of Skiernlewice.

"Between the Pilica and the upper Vistula the enemy has now adopted the defensive.

"Our troops stormed the village of Szitniki, which was stubbornly defended by the Austrians. The enemy has definitely evacuated the left bank of the Nida.

"To the south of the upper Vistula on the front of Opatow-Biecz, the fighting continues to develop to our advantage. From the 18th to the 26th we captured there 200 officers and 15,000 soldiers and forty mitrailleuses.

"The enemy's retreat in the region of the Dukla Passes and on the road to Lisko is becoming more and more precipitate and disorganized. On the 26th we captured in this region as many as five thousand prisoners.

"The efforts of the enemy to transport his forces from the direction of Czenstochowa toward the Carpathians was a complete failure owing to our manoeuvres."

Fresh German Reinforcements.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 29. — (Via London.)—Comparative quiet reigned in Flanders on Christmas Day, but gunfire could be heard Saturday, beginning in the early morning, according to the Sluis correspondent of the Telegraaf. He says that the Germans have received further reinforcements, especially at Knocke and Heyst.

OBJECTION BY REAL NURSES

They Say Society Belles Are Doing More Harm Thun Good

LONDON, Dec. 29.—"Too sick to be nursed to-day," a placard said to have been placed over the bedstead of a soldier wounded in the South African campaign, is much needed in British hospitals now, according to the National Council of Trained Nurses, which has sent to Lord Kitchener a protest against the employment of incompetent nurses. In acknowledgment of the resolution, the Secretary of War asked the Council to submit evidence in support of its charges, and a report on the matter is expected shortly.

The professional trained nurses are complaining that young women of means and social influence, attracted by the sentimental side of nursing at the front, have stormed the hospitals and have in many cases obtained positions, notwithstanding that they knew nothing of the work.

Such being the case, according to the allegation of the Nurses' Council, the rush of amateurs has pushed aside the competent, greatly to the misfortune of the wounded Tommy, who has to submit to "fussing" and petting at the hands of pretty, untrained girls, which, while sentimentally appealing, does not go very far toward ministering to his real needs.

The agitation against the incompetent nurse was raised early in the war, but only just now have the organized nurses, numbering some 6,000, brought the matter officially to the attention of the War Office.

Sunk By Mines.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — Several disasters, the result of striking mines in the North Sea, are reported. Among those sunk were the steamer Linaria, whose crew was rescued, and a Glasgow steamer. The Linaria, which belonged to the Stag Line of North Shields. She was built in 1911.

Hangar and Airship Destroyed.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Times declares that there is excellent reason, despite German denials, for believing that Parseval shed and airship was destroyed in the British raid on Cuxhaven. It adds that serious damage also was inflicted on the Zeppelin sheds.

In Daily Fear Of Death—Until "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Relief.

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my eye caught a billboard of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I cured myself entirely. My case was no light one, either, Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear that it would get around my heart and kill me. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion".

ROUMANIA IS NOW READY

Parliament Gives Government Full Liberty to Take Action

LONDON, Dec. 29. — The London Telegraph correspondent at Bucharest (Roumania) telegraphed yesterday as follows:—

To-day, in a debate upon an address in reply to a message from the throne, the Prime Minister asked the majority to waive discussion, and asked the Opposition to leave the Government "full liberty of action to fulfill its great duty."

The Conservative party expressed its willingness to do this. M. Disesco, on behalf of the Conservative Democrats, repeated the declaration made by Take Jonesco in the Chamber, according to which Roumania ought to abandon her neutral position and make an immediate alliance with the Triple Entente. He accused Austria of ingratitude towards Roumania, and concluded by observing that two sections of the Opposition, the Conservatives and the Conservative Democrats, had declared for an abandonment of neutrality and for an alliance with France, Russia and Britain. He expressed the hope that presently this policy would be adopted officially.

The address to the throne was agreed to unanimously.

The population of Roumania numbers over seven millions, the majority of the people belonging to the Orthodox Church.

Military service is compulsory and universal. The peace strength is 170,000 men, and the second line or reserve troops muster 36 battalions, or in all a war strength of nearly half a million men.

Official Warning to Londoners to Avoid Danger in Streets

LONDON, Dec. 29. — The London official bureau yesterday afternoon made the following announcement:

"The naval and military authorities call the attention of persons using the streets to the danger from fragments of shells from bullets from the guns used against hostile aircraft attempting to raid London.

"The civil population are warned to keep under cover preferably in basements on hearing the sound of firing by guns or of explosives."

Prisoners Well Treated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Chandler Anderson, who as special attache of the American embassy in London, made an investigation of military prison camps in practically all the European belligerent countries, declared yesterday that there was no substantial difference in the treatment of prisoners of war, and that probably in every case they were cared for as well as their captors could afford, considering their own military necessities.

One Day's Pay Tax on Workmen.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 29.—The Handelsblad yesterday declares that the Germans have imposed a war tax of one day's pay monthly upon all workmen, whether German or foreign. In some trades workmen are paying two per cent. of their earnings.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Dec 28.—Heavy profit-taking by large holders, including a widely known speculator, gave the wheat market today a sharp setback after a decided advance. Corn finished ¼c to ⅜c off, oats down ¼c to ⅜c, and provisions unchanged to a drop of 2½c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 28.—A lack of demand caused a sharp break in grain prices today, following a strong opening. In the south there was considerable unloading, and few were inclined to take up, and values dropped, Winnipeg following in sympathy. Early buyers were sellers later. There were few offerings of cash and few buyers.

Export enquiry continues good. Total inspections on Saturday were 312 cars, as against 474 last year, and in sight on Monday were 350 cars.

Winnipeg wheat futures closed ½c to ⅝c lower, cash closed ⅜c lower for contract grades, oats closed ⅛c lower, and flax 4½c to 4⅝c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—There was no improvement in the demand from over the cable for Manitoba spring wheat today and business in consequence was quiet, but the demand from local buyers for car lots was better than it has been of late.

The foreign demand for spring wheat flour was fair at a further advance in prices of 3d per sack in some cases, but owing to the limited amount of ocean space available only a few orders could be accepted by millers. The local trade continues quiet, but the undertone of the market is strong and higher prices are expected soon. Demand for millfeed is fairly good.

A fair trade was done in butter, and the feeling is strong. Cheese is quiet. Eggs fairly active and firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 28.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.26⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.22⅝ to $1.25⅝; No. 2 do., $1.19⅝ to $1.23⅝; Dec., $1.21⅝.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 227 cattle and 422 hogs.

Trade in cattle was about steady at last Thursday's quotations.

The bulk of the hogs were from the northwest and were for feeding purposes, selling around $6.50 per cwt.

Rice & Whaley sold 5 carloads on Monday: Four carloads of canners at $4 to $4.15; 1 load of butchers' heifers at $7.25.

Dunn & Levack sold:

Canners—27, 910 lbs., at $4.15; 14, 640 lbs., at $4.65; 21, 910 lbs., at $4.10.

Bulls—1, 1340 lbs., at $6.25.

Cows—2, 820 lbs., at $4; 3, 850 lbs., at $5.75; 2, 1200 lbs., at $5.

Lambs sold at $7.90 to $8.25.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, prices were slightly lower owing to the fact that butchers bought sparingly as they carried over considerable stock from the holidays. Packers bought freely of canning stock and a fair trade was done in this line at steady prices with sales of cows at $4 to $4.25, and bulls at $4.75 to $5 per cwt.

The excitement which prevailed in the market for lambs last week on account of the keen competition between local buyers has abated considerably, and in consequence the market today was quieter with an easier undertone and prices declined 25c per cwt. There was some demand for small lots and sales of Ontario stock were made at $8 to $8.25, and Quebec at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt.

Sheep were unchanged with demand limited. Hogs were firmer, there being a good demand for supplies, which were small and sales of selected lots were made at $8, sows at $6 and stags at $4 per hundred pounds weighed off cars. A few loads of northwest hogs were on the market, and sold at $7.70 per cwt. as compared with $7 to $7.50 last week.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75; do., medium, $6.50 to $7; do., common, $5 to $6, canners, $4 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; do., medium, $5.50 to $6, do., bulls, $5.25 to $6.50; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75; do., common and medium, each, $60 to $65, springers, $50 to $55.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

PETES ANNEX OPENING GAME BY TWO GOALS

Bowmanville Poked in the First Counter, But Ever After the Blue and White Were in the Lead --- Final Score Was, 10 to 8

PLAYING hockey that at times would win a championship and at other times would bring defeat at the hands of the lowliest, the Peterboro Intermediates succeeded in winning over Bowmanville last evening in the opening game of the season. The score was 10-8. The Peterboro team had been heralded as one of the best septette's that ever wore the blue and white. This fact had the fans entertaining very optimistic thoughts and there were times last evening when these thoughts were justified but there were also times when the team did not look quite so good. It was the first game however and naturally there is some excuse for the players not being in the best of condition. The three twenty-minute periods assisted so far as standing the pace was concerned but the shooting was not that calibre that we would call "British." All the players roved more or less for the greater portion of the game, thus combination was scarce.

When the Peterboro aggregation stepped out on the ice they looked like a picked team. Four or five different kinds of sweaters made up the uniforms. The some 500 fans were kept waiting a few moments while Referee Lou E. Marsh was getting his timers ready and then the official called the players to mid-ice. He commenced the game with a whistle but had to pass it up for a bell as the whistle could not be heard by the players above the noise of the crowd. The game had hardly commenced when the great improvement brought about by the installation of a new lighting system at the rink was noticed. The puck could be followed all over the surface without any difficulty and the goalers could keep the long shots lamped.

The Petes' goaler, "Skid" Janes, put up a grand little game between the posts. Time after time he sailed out and blocked cleverly when goals seemed certain. He had his eye on the long shots all evening and picked hundreds of them off. "Ack" Hunter and Jack Pethick the new defence made their debut and demonstrated their ability to a nicety. Both played good hockey and the speedy rushes of the former Toronto player were particularly prominent. On the forward line the pick of the locals was Fred Kelly. The old warhorse went up and down the boards back-checking and rushing with the old time class. He was continually on the move and largely shared the honor of the victory. Maurice Park was played at rover and although he went hard all evening he did not accomplish the work he can when playing centre. He broke into a few rushes but oftimes held the puck a little too long instead of passing. The combination will come, however, after a couple of more practices. Grover Halpin was not so prominent as many anticipated but at that he played a steady game. His back-checking in the last period assisted materially in holding the visitors down. Kennealley who played right wing was under a big handicap as he is a left hand shot. On several occasions goals were missed because he was on his wrong side. Like Halpin his back-checking in the last period proved helpful.

The goal custodian of Bowmanville played a great game and his defence, F. Williams and R. Jones also went strong. The forward line was not so brilliant but the two wing men, Hooper and Higginbotham, played a great game at "inside home." When it comes to loafing off-side we'll take our hats off to those two. Higginbotham was also the speed guy and uncorked several long rushes. Greenfield at centre and R. Williams at rover player fair hockey but neglected to check-back.

Lou E. Marsh refereed and the old warrior got by fine. Old timers thought there would be some fun with Marsh officiating but most of his old enemies have left this locality.

The teams:—

Peterboro.		Bowmanville.
Janes	goal	Spry
Hunter	r. def.	Jones
Pethick	l. def.	F. Williams
Park	rover	R. Williams
Halpin	centre	Greenfield
Kelly	l. wing	Hooper
Kennealley	r. wing	Higginbotham

The score by periods:—

First period—Peterboro 4, Bowmanville 2.

Second period—Peterboro 9, Bowmanville 5.

Third period—Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 8.

First Period.

Considerable delay was experienced in getting the game under way as "Gamey" Stratton who has been selected as penalty time-keeper could not be found. Another appointment was made and then Referee Marsh "called the roll." The Petes won the toss and defended the north goal. The players seemed lost for the first few moments and all wanted to do the roving. Hunter secured the rubber from the vicinity of his own goal and rushed right in on Spry, but his shot went over the top of the net. A moment later Kelly gave the visiting netman a hot one to handle which he did. Hooper contributed a pretty rush, getting right in on top of Janes but the "Mayor of Cavan" sailed out and met him, blocking the shot.

Lou Marsh had been having trouble trying to make the players hear the whistle so he changed it for a bell. The change found greater favor among the fans. Hunter and Kelly broke into a combined rush but again Spry blocked cleverly. Play centred around the Peterboro goal and Pethick almost caused sudden deaths among the fanettes when he made a bad pass in front of the nets. Hooper secured the puck but Janes met him and cleared nicely. The wing men of the visitors' were everlastingly loafing off-side and had to be warned. Marsh was very particular about off-sides calling them when they meant only inches. He drew a prolonged howl from the rooters when he missed one, a ten footer, which assisted Bowmanville out of a bad corner. Higginbotham drew a term in the penalty box for holding and while he was off Kennealley and Kelly delivered a beautiful rush only to have the shot go wide. The shooting of both teams was far below par.

Pethick broke into the limelight with a long rush but missed the target. Jones was benched for tripping and a second later R. Williams secured the rubber on an off-side and beat Janes. Time ten minutes. Peterboro 0, Bowmanville 1.

The fans called for a goal and it just took the team one minute to gratify that wish. Kelly did the trick on a shot from the side. Peterboro 1, Bowmanville 1.

The players began to find their places and naturally a little more combination resulted. Higginbotham was hooked in the mouth and stood up minus a piece of a tooth. Both teams pressed hard for a counter and both Kelly and Kennealley did a little more back checking. A combination rush by the blue and white went from one end to the other and Pethick beat Spry with a clean shot. Time, 3 minutes. Peterboro 2, Bowmanville 1.

The lakeshore aggregation had hardly time to make a stroke after the puck was faced as Halpin and Park went straight from centre to their net and Park slipped one by the goaler. Time 30 seconds. Peterboro 3, Bowmanville 1.

Once again did Referee Marsh warn Hooper for loafing. The teams were playing more combination and the shooting not so erratic. Park secured the rubber near the Petes' net and "grapevined" up to Bowmanville's territory. He shot and Spry kicked it out but Halpin was well in and slammed the "nigger" past the netman. Time 2 minutes. Peterboro 4, Bowmanville 1.

Hunter adorned the wall as a result of holding a player by the arm. While he was off a scrimmage occurred close to Bert Janes' door and during the mix-up Higginbotham drove the puck in. Time 1 minute. Peterboro 4, Bowmanville 2.

Second Period.

Right off the reel Higginbotham "Vernon Castled" it up the centre of the ice but "Skid" blocked cleanly much to the delight of the fans. The visitors were going very well at this stage and time after time sent combination rushes down on the Petes' ramparts. Pethick and Hunter resisted the attacks but seemed unable to rush the puck back. Finally after three minutes of play Hooper shot from quite a way out and Janes failed to connect. Peterboro 4, Bowmanville 3.

The fans did not relish the idea of the Petes being one solitary counter to the good and urged the team on. The pace was telling on the visitors' defence and Kenealley was commencing to drag. The right wing man dropped back on the rear division and Captain Hunter and Kelly combined on a pretty rush which resulted in Kelly ringing the bell. Time 2 minutes. Peterboro 5, Bowmanville 3.

'Tis thought that the pace went to R. William's head at this stage as he deliberately chopped Hunter directly in front of Boss Marsh. A blind man couldn't have missed it. The said Williams was shown to the swinging door. Kelly who had been going strong all evening put forth an extra effort and came through with a dazzling rush, the rush he so often produced a couple of years ago. He went down the left boards, circled to the right side and lifted the rubber past Spry. It was one of the best features of the game. Time 1 minute. Peterboro 6, Bowmanville 3.

The Petes lagged a trifle following Kelly's contribution and Janes was called upon to show his ability. He of the place called Cavan, was there with bells and turned off a deluge of shots. It took two minutes for the visitors to puncture the nets but they finally did, the shot coming from Greenfield's stick. Peterboro 6, Bowmanville 4.

The guests had found Janes not an impossibility and gave him a number of long shots but they were all easy picking. The old army game of long shooting was pipe for the local net custodian. Play hovered around Bowmanville's goal for awhile and then Kennealley passed out to Halpin who shot. Park slammed in the rebound. Time 1½ minutes. Peterboro 7, Bowmanville 4.

Pethick and Hooper attempted to embrace each other along the boards and Referee Marsh, fearing lest perhaps a Dr. Roller-Eugene Tremblay bout would ensue banished both of them. "Ack" Hunter thinking his rock elm an axe went to cut the limbs from under Jones and he likewise was presented with a blanket. Higginbotham made the number in the box, four, a moment later when he was caught hooking. All the men were on again however before the goalers were even asked to handle a shot.

Kenenalley had to retire and he was accompanied by Greenfield. F. Williams made a long rush and wound up by slipping the rubber past Janes by means of a very nice shot. Time 3 minutes. Peterboro 7, Bowmanville 5.

The next incident caused a big laugh. "Ack" Hunter, who had been playing a bear of a game, went half way down the ice and decided to try a long shot. It looked like a joke to see the local captain shoot from mid-ice but the fun was complete when the rainbow shot beat Spry. Time 1 minute. Peterboro 8, Bowmanville 5.

Jones was struck with the puck and was carried off the ice. The injury was not serious however and he was able to continue in a few moments. Jones had dropped near his own net and thus the puck was faced off in that vicinity. Halpin succeeded in slamming it in for the last score of the second period. Time, 1 minute. Peterboro 9, Bowmanville 5.

Third Period.

When the teams lined up for the final 20 minute session Kennealley and Greenfield were on again. The Bowmanville crew hit a terrible stride and shots rained on Janes from every angle. The goaler was cool as an iceberg and turned them all aside. Hunter and Hooper collided near the boards and the wing man fell against the woodwork, injuring his elbow. He continued in a moment or so. Fred Kelly again unearthed a nice rush but Spry blocked. Every man on the ice was going at top speed and the Peterboro forward line back-checked very well. Kennealley accidentally hooked F. Williams in the mouth and the latter was forced to quit. Kennealley was benched much to the dissatisfaction of the fans as he was in no way to blame. Park was dropped to even up.

Playing five men to six the locals showed wonderful class. Time after time they back-checked and saved sure goals. Pethick went particularly hard at this stage. Hunter, Halpin and Kelly combined on a very nice rush and Kelly scored. Time 5 minutes. Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 5.

Halpin and Hunter made another gallant effort a second later but lost it at the mouth of the nets. Kennealley was on again and distinguished himself by back-checking. Higginbotham broke away for a "Jerry Coughlin" rush and Kennealley was right on top of him. The pair circled from one side of the ice to the other but Higginbotham secured a shot and it passed Janes. Time 2 minutes. Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 6.

The pace was fastest at this period, despite the fact that the player had been going fifty minutes. Park was badly missed by the locals, no one being in centre ice to take the passes. Hunter and Kennealley got right in on Spry but the shot went bad. Jones and Higginbothan went down on a very nice combination and Jones registered. Time 2 minutes. Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 7.

Jack Pethick started on a speedy rush but Greenfield tripped. The latter was cooped for the offence. Hooper and R. Williams combined and Hooper tallied. Time, 1 minute. Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 8.

The fans grew a little peeved at the run the visitors were making for the honors and urged the blue and white to score. The play grew desperate. Pethick and Kennealley beat everybody but the goaler and the crowd heaved a long sigh. Kelly and Hunter repeated the performance, passing every one but Spry. The goal custodian from Bowmanville was putting up a grand game. The puck remained around Bowmanville's net and Kennealley drove it in but Referee Marsh did not allow the goal claiming the wing man was off-side. From the press box it looked alright. The full time gong sounded a moment later. Final score: Peterboro 10, Bowmanville 8.

BOYS AND BOY LIFE

Y.M.C.A. and the Epworth League Representatives Give Addresses

SANG TIPPERARY

The boys' conference that is being held in the city resumed proceedings this morning at 8.45 in the basement of George Street Methodist Church.

Considering that this is the first time such an enterprise was ever attempted by the Bay of Quinte conference the success that is being encountered is an immense source of gratification to all concerned. There are some one hundred and seventy boys registered, the number being considerably augmented last evening. These boys and young men are billeted at homes throughout the city and are enjoying their stay to all appearances.

Features of this morning's session were addresses on boys and boy life delivered by Mr. Taylor Statten, Dominion secretary for boys' work in the Y.M.C.A., and Rev. F. L. Farewell, B.A., associate secretary of Epworth leagues and Sunday Schools. Rev. Mr. Kenny of Bowmanville also spoke on Bible Study emphasizing the great need of earnest thought being given to the teachings of God as laid down in the Scripture.

Boys Sang Tipperary.

Mr. Farewell's address and Taylor Statten's were illustrated by blackboard drawings, and the simplified manner of their presentation rendered them decidedly instructive and beneficial. A demonstration of organized Bible class study by the Excelsior Bible Class of George St. Methodist Church, conducted by Mr. Carson of the Y.M.C.A., was educative in every sense and demonstrated very clearly just what organized Bible classes can perform. The class was conducted just as if there were no audience present. Before this was started however Mr. Carson had the windows opened to admit pure air and put the audience through some breathing exercises winding up with the hearty singing of "Tipperary." The boys sang the stirring old song with great vigor and enthusiasm.

Both Mr. Farewell's address and Taylor Statten's talks were along the lines of how to develop boy life to the fullest. Mr. Farewell showed on the board by means of a line the various stages of life through which a boy passes.

From twelve to twenty-five was the period of preparation. Up till he is twelve the average boy presents no great problem to any one. After that until he was sixteen he felt the play of new forces and influences within him. Between those two ages he often feels that he knows everything. He is in the upheaval period or as one man had said, "was climbing fool's hill." From sixteen to twenty-one he was in the reconstruction period when reason came to his assistance. Then from that age to twenty-five he was in the getting away period. At twenty-five a fellow should be living his largest life of service in the Kingdom.

Mr. Farewell then showed how organized Bible study could be fostered after sixteen and into what departments an organized Bible class could be divided. One of the functions of such a class was to assist others into them. There should be membership committees, athletic committees, and other departments to attend to the various needs of a body of boys.

Taylor Statten.

Taylor Statten, Dominion Boys' Secretary, then gave an address with blackboard illustrations laying down the rules governing the Canadian Standard of Efficiency tests which have been adopted by the Y.M.C.A.'s as the basis of calculating boyhood development and efficiency. The tests were divided into four parts, intellectual, physical, spiritual, and service. Boys who were backward in one or more of these were encouraged to develop their powers and so measure up to the tests of efficiency. A boy might be physically capable but spiritually undeveloped or vice versa. Nowadays everything was being reduced to a science and the same principles were being applied to raising efficient, strong all round boys.

There were one hundred and ninety boys and men present at the session this morning which adjourned at twelve o'clock when a group photo was taken by Mr. Fred Roy, after which the boys marched to Charlotte Street Sunday School room to partake of dinner served by the ladies' aid of that church.

A most hearty invitation is extended to all girls to spend these hours at the Association rooms. A fire in the fire place and the "homey" look of the big reception hall will bring cheer to the heart of the girl from the old land.

PRINCESS LOUISE

Emperor William thought he could run his end of the war without women. But he has changed his mind. The decree barring "petticoat strategists" from councils of war has been changed to admit the Kaiser's only daughter, Princess Louise, colonel of the Prussian regiment "The Death's Head" Hussars.

The princess, who is the wife of the Duke of Brunswick, is said to have profound understanding of military strategy and tactics, and it was a need of this knowledge that made her imperial father give her a place in his war councils.

There will be no social dancing class at the Conservatory tonight.

Mr. Art Hall, of Rochester, who spent Christmas in Peterboro, left last night for Montreal.

EXTRA GOOD FILMS AT EMPIRE THEATRE

"The Spitfire," the famous Daniel Frohman's presentation featuring Carlyle Blackwell scored a decided hit at the Empire Theatre last evening. This film will be shown today and tomorrow, and no lover of comedy drama should miss it. The complete program is very good particularly the Belgium War Pictures which were taken only recently when the brunt of the great European struggle centred in little Belgium.

The management of the Empire Theatre is putting forth extra efforts to present educational films and judging by the large patronage the theatre is receiving, the theatre-goers of the city appreciate the efforts.

Could Not Find Who Caused Violence

he saw Grose in the Grand Hotel. Afterward's he drove out to Stewart's farm. He did not know where Grose went to. As far as he knew, Stewart remained that night at the Grand Hotel.

To the coroner, witness said he had seen O'Brien in the hallway of the hotel. He couldn't say that Grose was talking to the deceased at that time.

FOE SUBJECTS ST. GEORGE'S TO VIOLENT BOMBARDMENT

German Point of Support is Captured and Allies' Heavy Artillery Replies Effectively to the Enemy's Fire in Aisne Valley and Champagne.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 30. —The official announcement this afternoon says: "In Belgium we have won a little territory in the region of Nieuport, opposite Polders, and to the north of Lombaertzyde. The enemy subjected St. George's to a violent bombardment. This is the position we are putting in a state of defence.

"We have captured a German point of support located to the southeast of Zonnebeke on the road between Becelaere and Paschendaele.

"From the Lys to the Oise there is nothing to report.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in Champagne the enemy has manifested another burst of activity in the form of violent artillery fire, to which our heavy artillery has replied effectively.

"In the Argonne we have made slight progress in the region of Four-de-Paris. Between the Argonne and the Moselle there has been cannonading along all the front.

"In the Vosges the enemy delivered an attack against our position at La Tete De Faux. This was repulsed.

"In Upper Alsace we are consolidating our positions. Our heavy artillery reduced to silence heavy German howitzers which were bombarding Upper Aspach."

PROTEST FROM UNITED STATES IS DISCUSSED BY CABINET

American Ambassador Will Go Over the Question With Sir Edward Grey---Shippers Are Advised by President Wilson to be Careful.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 30. — Foreign Secretary Grey returned to London from the country today. The coming of the Secretary was followed by a meeting of the Cabinet in the afternoon, at which, before a full muster of ministers, there was discussed the protest of the United States Government concerning the existing restrictions on American commerce.

The note of the American Government has only just reached the British Government, and it is likely to occupy the attention of the ministry for a considerable time. The U. S. Ambassador, it is understood, will be invited to go over the entire question with Foreign Secretary Grey.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The American note of protest against the British treatment of American commerce and insisting upon an early improvement came as a complete surprise to the British public, as there had been virtually no intimation that any friction had arisen between the two Governments.

The placards posted by the evening papers were given over exclusively to the American note, and the papers gave it the largest headlines they have given any news during the past month. Consequently the British people regard this as one of the most important occurrences of the whole war. Nothing of the kind since President Cleveland's Venezuelan message has produced such a sensation.

The first impression of the public is that the note may create friction and perhaps some unfriendly feeling, although the newspapers point out that it specifically states that the representations were made in a friendly spirit.

The situation is comparable to that which arose at the time of the South African war, when neutral shippers began to send cargoes intended for the Transvaal Republic to the neutral port of Delagoa Bay.

The Washington note had not reached the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon, but it could not have been dealt with had it arrived, as Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who has been away for the Christmas holidays, is not returning until to-day.

AN ENGINEER'S SUGGESTIONS

The suggestions of Mr. John Murphy, the electrical engineer of Ottawa, for overcoming difficulties in power plants due to frazil and anchor ice are considered on Page two, Column one today. They should be read by every ratepayer, power user, and wage-earner in the city, if they are desirous of preventing a total tie-up of industry such as occurred here a few weeks ago.

The case undoubtedly is murder. The body was partly buried, only the nose being visible through the snow. It is believed the crime was committed as long ago as Monday.

ASSAULTED HIS DAUGHTER WHEN HE WAS DRUNK

Whitby, Ont., Dec. 30. — William Stone, who was arrested on December 15th for assaulting members of his own family, was arraigned before the police magistrate last night. The charge is that he did choke his daughter Lillian with intent to inflict actual bodily harm. The daughter gave evidence that on the occasion of the assault her father was under the influence of liquor. During the quarrel Stone, she said, threatened to murder his daughters. Further evidence being required, the prisoner was remanded.

NORTH MONAGHAN IN GOOD SHAPE

The Township Has Good Balance Over all Liabilities

The financial affairs of North Monaghan township were never in better shape than at present, as is clearly shown by the financial statement which was distributed to the ratepayers at the nomination meeting on Monday last. True, there was some criticism by interested parties, but they failed to convince the ratepayers that the affairs of the township had not been well managed. As will be shown by the following statement of the assets and liabilities, the township has a balance of $1,806.42 over all liabilities.

It will be well to remember that this is the statement of the treasurer, not of the reeve or any councillor or other interested parties, and is absolutely correct.

Assets
Town hall and furniture	$800.00
Road machinery, including stone crusher, $100.00 and $1,302.21	1,402.21
Gravel pit, as of 1913	250.00
Amount due by township of Cavan	34.00
Uncollected taxes	10,980.98
Gov't railway tax (estimated)	115.00
Cash on deposit	1,934.84
	$15,517.03
Liabilities
School rates	$6,831.50
County rates	3,025.87
Salaries	247.50
Bills payable with interest	2,140.90
Accounts due and unpaid	728.86
Accounts outstanding (estimated)	175.00
Debentures due Dec. 31, 1914	559.98
Balance assets over liabilities	1,806.42
	$15,517.03

Reeve Howden has every reason to feel satisfied with this statement, and it was largely due to his guiding spirit that the financial affairs are in the splendid condition they are now in.

ALDERMANIC ELECTION IN NORTH AND WEST WARDS

Ald. M. McIntyre Leaves the Field in East City and His Brother A. A. McIntyre Enters North Ward—H. P. Morgan Opposes Ald. Green in West Ward—Dr. Morrison Retires From Board of Education.

The second lap in the municipal elections was run last night when aspirants for civic honors and abuse, followed one another to the city hall and signed the necessary declaration, which certifies as to their eligibility to face the music.

The list contains the names of Mayor Buller and Alderman G. H. Duncan, who will fight it out for the right to wield the gavel from the easy chair in the city council chamber.

Ald. M. McIntyre failed to appear and as a result Mr. Geo. Evans will take his seat in council along with Ald. Weir and endeavor to represent the East Ward.

Ex-Ald A. A. McIntyre decided to stand for election in the North Ward in opposition to Ald. Wm. Langford. R. J. Kidd, who also was nominated did not qualify.

In the West Ward, Mr. H. P. Morgan will oppose Ald. G. W. Green. This contest promises to be one of the hottest in the series.

There will be no contest in the Centre and South Wards as Ald. Dobbin and Mr. John Edgar were not opposed.

It may surprise some ratepayers to learn that Dr. M. A. Morrison, the present chairman of the board of education did not qualify. The remaining members whose term expired and were nominated remain in the field. They are Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, J. J. Turner, Jr., and V. Eastwood. The new nominees, J. M. Greene, G. N. Gordon and R. Denne qualified.

WITHDREW CHARGE PAID HALF THE COSTS

County Magistrate Langley presided at a sitting of the county police court yesterday afternoon at which was heard the charge made by Francis White against Euphemia Hollings, both of Asphodel. The charge was house-breaking and assault, alleged to have been committed by the defendant. G. W. Hatton conducted the prosecution and H. Norwich of O'Connell and Norwich acted for the accused.

Francis White was called and gave evidence to the effect that he owns a house in the township of Asphodel and had rented all of it save one room to Euphemia Hollings and her family. On December 5th Mrs. Hollings broke open the door separating White's room from the rest of the house and assaulted him with her fists. After considerable cross-questioning by Mr. Morwich, White decided to withdraw the charge and agreed to pay half the costs. The Hollings family will quit the residence of the informant in a week's time.

FIREMEN FOUGHT STUBBORN FIRE

Blaze in Chimney Called for Large Quantity of Chemicals

What at first looked to be only a chimney blaze developed into a stubborn fire today in the block situated at the northwest corner of Hunter and George Streets which caused a considerable amount of damage to the woodwork, joists and timbers in the three floors of the building. An overheated double chimney which was full of soot was the cause of the trouble which gave the fire department the worst fight of its kind in the last four or five years. While no water was used there was a heavy demand for chemicals before it was eventually checked and controlled. The chimney was heated from cellar to attic by a stove in Minicola's cellar which caused the soot to ignite and send dense volumes of smoke from the chimney directly over Hickey's tailoring shop which is on the second floor facing Hunter Street. The heat from the chimney ignited the joists and timbers around it on each floor and the firemen were compelled to chop out several places in order to project the chemicals on places where the fire was the worst. This was responsible for most of the damage that will occur although smoke was also responsible. On the third floor there is a big gap in the ceiling where the firemen encountered the most stubborn resistance and which had to be chopped out in order to fight the flames. Mr. Hickey said he was putting in a claim for $200 with C. Young and Son, who had their stock insured for $600. He had some materials stored there which were soiled and damaged by chemicals. The chimney which caused the fire is used by all the tenants of the block, who have stove pipes connecting with it.

All the available chemicals usually carried by the department were used up, and four tanks had to be sent back to the station to be refilled.

Mr. Hickey was engaged in measuring a customer for a suit in his parlors when he heard the sound of crackling in the room at the top of a stairway that leads up to his stock room. That was at ten o'clock this morning, and thinking it was the wind rattling paper in that room he gave it no attention. It developed that this was the chimney on fire and soot burning inside

Mr. Eastwood of the Royal Bank was out of the city, and the amount of the estimated damage and what insurance was carried could not be ascertained.

Call to East City.

A chimney fire at the house of Mr. Patrick Allan, 534 Concession street, sent the fire department there at 9.30 this morning. It was soon controlled and no damage of any consequence occurred.

SOME TIPS FOR HOUSEHOLDERS

New Garbage Contractors Commence Work on Saturday

The new garbage contractors will commence their work on Saturday next and as the service will be twice a week throughout the year instead of only during the summer months as formerly, it will be necessary to reconstruct the routes as follows, which is the same as last summer:—

Mondays and Thursdays — All south of Charlotte from the river to Monaghan Road.

Tuesdays and Fridays—All north of Charlotte and east of Aylmer to the river.

Wednesdays and Saturdays — All north of Charlotte and west of Aylmer to Monaghan Road.

To ensure efficient service it is necessary to follow the regulations closely.

Put your garbage and ashes out on the morning of day of collection not later than eight o'clock. Don't wait till the garbage waggon has passed the house before you bring your pail out, and then expect the collector to retrace his steps. Wrap all garbage in paper to prevent freezing to the can and keep cover on can. This will lengthen the life of the receptacle, as the contents can then be emptied without the use of a crowbar.

Cardboards or boxes without lids are not suitable receptacles for garbage and will not be allowed. Also they will be confiscated. Only garbage pails or other receptacles approved by the Sanitary Inspector are permitted by the by-law.

Don't send in complaints about non-collection before the collectors have made their round or you are sure you have been overlooked. This is frequently being done and it is not fair to the collectors.

There will be no collection on New Year's Day.

LOCAL MAN AFTER HOTEL IN LINDSAY

The Lindsay Post says rumor has it that a local hotel will change hands at an early date. A Peterborough man is after the license, and a meeting of the license commissioners will be held at an early date to consider the application.

FIERCE GALE ALONG THE FRENCH COAST

Lives Lost at Points in England --- Liner Blown Out of Harbor at Dover Was Wrecked

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 30. — The Daily News says the wildest gale of the winter has raged over the French coast, putting a stop to all military and naval operations. Full effects of the storm which raged on both sides of the Channel are only now being reported. Several lives were lost at various points in England, and at Dover, where the wind blew eighty miles an hour, a [illegible] steamer, said to be the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, was blown out of the harbor and wrecked.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—The steamer Montrose, which was blown out of Dover harbor by the recent hurricane, was the ship on which the notorious Dr. Crippen fled to Canada. At the outbreak of war she was taken over for transport work by the Government. She was blown on to the Goodwin Sands and will probably be a total wreck.

GERMANS SMUGGLED INTO THE STATES FROM NIAGARA FALLS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — A Tribune despatch from Cleveland says Germans are being smuggled out of Canada into the United States from Niagara Falls. The authority for this statement is Herman Wenz, who claims to have lived in Montreal, and for some time evaded suspicion owing to his fluent speaking of French. When his nationality was divulged he fled to Niagara Falls to avoid arrest, and there encountered a French-Canadian who for $20 concealed him in a trunk and shipped him to Buffalo.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 30, 1914

AN ENGINEERS'S SUGGESTIONS FOR OVERCOMING ICE TROUBLES.

MR. JOHN MURPHY, the Ottawa engineer, noticed that those power companies which had not thought seriously of overcoming the difficulties of frazil and anchor ice waited for nature to set them free. That is, they waited for the sun to thaw them out. He noticed first that the racks that faced the south were thawed out several hours sooner than those which faced the north; these latter also froze much sooner, so that such plants were out of commission longer, yet this valuable point has apparently been given little or no consideration by the designers of power plants.

It has been the practice at hydraulic plants other than hydro-electric stations to let the sun thaw them out. No effort is made to start them again during the same night that frazil shuts them down. After the ice has been removed from racks and penstocks, the frozen gates had to be loosened either by liberal doses of brine applied to the gates, or a fire of oily waste and kindling wood had to be built around the wheel-case for the purpose of actually melting the ice and freeing the gates. Steam was used for actually melting the ice, when it was available.

This ice-cleaning-out and ice-melting process usually occupied from three to five hours, the length of time depending upon the amount of ice to be removed, and the difficulty of getting down and up the head gates of the stop logs—the latter, when down, generally froze in position also, and another difficulty was thus placed in the way of quickly re-starting the plant.

The second point was in regard to the effect of cold air upon the vulnerable parts of water-power apparatus. Observing, for a number of years, many power plants, Mr. Murphy noted that water-wheels, protected by wooden racks, were, during frazil attacks, usually able to run later into the night than those protected by iron racks." Frazil can be removed from wooden racks very much as plastic mud can be scraped from one's boots, but much more physical effort is required to detach it from metal bars, because it crystallizes on them. Usually these iron racks project into the air, which is frequently down to zero F., when frazil is forming. During such a time the water's temperature only goes one or two thousandths of a degree below the freezing point. The metal bars, being good conductors, are cooled much more by the wind or cold air, so that these bars actually help to freeze the water passing through them. Hence, when frazil is in the water, it will stick to metal bars so tightly and rapidly that scraping is an inadequate, almost foolish, effort to cope with the difficulty. Wood is such a poor conductor of heat that it has practically no effect on the water, and the frazil will not crystallize on a wooden rack, although it will clog it up, if it is not kept passing through."

The tail-races are often exposed to the action of cold air; the heavy metal draft tubes become chilled, and, by conduction, the water-wheels, whose case becomes chilled. Frazil then will soon tie up the plant.

A set of water-wheels, properly equipped, can, by the simple opening of a steam valve and the application of a little heat to the wheel case, be cleared of frazil ice in a few minutes where it formerly took hours. By the earlier application of heat to the wheel case, frazil will not accumulate in it at all, and the plant can be kept in continuous, uninterrupted operation.

Dr. Barnes discovered that the water's temperature in winter was sometimes 32.001 degrees F., and sometimes 31.999 degrees F. When the water warms to the former temperature, anchor ice is loosened; when it cools to the latter, frazil is produced.

> "The light thus shed upon my study of the Ice Question by the publication of Dr. Barnes' work, opened up the following line of thought: Energy measured in millions of horse-power may be necessary to change the water used in a power plant from the solid to the liquid state without changing its temperature; hundreds of thousands of horse-power may be required to raise the temperature of all this water one degree; but the hydraulic power plant operator has nothing to do with either of these problems. His problem is to prevent the temperature of his apparatus from being lowered to the freezing point—his duty is to keep this temperature 1-1,000th of a degree on the positive side of the freezing point, and frazil will have no inclination to stick to it."

When we were discussing this question with a ratepayer of this city, he asked us skeptically if we wanted the authorities to warm all the river water—evidently a preposterous undertaking. Mr. Murphy says that is not the problem at all, because the temperature of water varies so very little in winter. What is required is to warm the machinery, and frazil, which causes 85 per cent. of all shutdowns, will not constitute a difficulty.

His suggestion is that first of all the action of the cold air should be excluded from every part of the plant. Secondly, heat is applied to those parts of the plant at which frazil ice is likely to accumulate, i. e., at the rack and at the controlling gate. He has apparatus for heating wheels that, during a period of three years, were never choked up, nor was the gate frozen to its case.

> "The governors in the first station equipped in this manner, consisting of three units of three water-wheels per unit, have not only controlled the variations in load which occurred on the light and power system supplied from this station, but they have also on innumerable occasions taken care of the variations in load on a calcium carbide plant, on a cement plant, and on a street railway plant, while the controlling gates of the three latter plants were all frozen stiff for days and nights together."

As to the cost of operating such a simple plant for overcoming frazil difficulties, there never was more than one ton of coal consumed in twenty-four hours in order to keep a plant with an output of 3,000 horse-power in continuous operation at times when frazil shut down all other wheels within ten miles of it. To supply 3,000 horse-power from a steam plant requires about six tons of coal per hour.

Besides this, a number of experiments were also made in electrical rack-heating, and these were carried far enough to show that the method is practicable. One-fiftieth of 1 h.-p. hr. of electrical energy broke the bond between solid ice and a piece of iron rack, which could only otherwise be removed by the very vigorous use of an axe.

The testimony of this well-known electrical engineer is very emphatic to the point that Peterborough need have no trouble with its power plants so far as frazil and anchor ice is concerned.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WHILE the Chief Magistrate is elected for one year only, it has become a custom in this Province to accord the incumbent a second term, unless there is very good reason for not doing so. In the case of Mayor Buller, he has been a good Mayor, and is entitled to a second term. His opponent has made a good alderman, and it is unfortunate that he should at this time oppose Mayor Buller, who is, by all precedents and customs, entitled to a second term. There is no denying that the Mayor has been active and self-denying in the discharge of his duties, and there is every reason to suppose that he would be not any the less so in the coming year.

THE MUCH-NEGLECTED East City is entitled to the best representation it can get. Among the candidates for aldermanic representation, it is encouraging to notice among the younger business men offering, the name of George Evans. The people of the East Ward would be well represented by Mr. Evans, who is a successful business man, and a property owner who has confidence in the future of East City. Since the above was written the electors of the East Ward have acted wisely in returnnig Mr. Evans by acclamation. He will now have a chance to do something for East City.

THE poor old Examiner is in a terrible funk because the alderman elected by acclamation in the South Ward is not to its liking. Would it not be well if our contem. would wait until it has some good grounds for objecting to Mr. Edgar as a representative. He is among the younger business men of the city, and there is every reason to believe he will devote the same energy in the discharge of his civic duties that he does in his own buisness. The Examiner's partizanship, as usual, overcomes its sense of fairness.

A LIVELY little Toronto weekly has undertaken to scent a scandal of large dimensions in Government contracts in Peterborough. Suffice it to say that the "scandal" is a proverbial "mare's nest." In other words, a little personal spat has produced a lot of noise. However, the member has very properly demanded a full investigation and report. No such charge can safely be ignored.

Another Chant of Hate.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

Another chant in the same key has been written by Albrecht Schaeffer, and published in the Berliner Borsen Courier, which observes: "In this terrible poem, the dying German gathers up his fleeting strength to fling it at a Briton. The poets of the enemy peoples may see in this an expression of Chauvinism. And Chauvinism it is, but a Chauvinism elevated and righteous — such as they cannot dream of. Romain Rolland, Maeterlinck, Kipling, beloved and honored, grown as they are into our German hearts, how have they sunk before the mighty trial of this war. We now set our poets, our Gerhard Hauptmann, our Richard Dehmel, our Albrecht Schaeffer, against theirs, for we are entitled to glory in them!" There is not much reason to glory in Schaeffer if his poem is a fair sample of his work. It is to be observed of the war poems that there is a vast difference between those of the British poets and those of the Germans. While the British writers do not fail in denouncing Germany, they do not use the language of bitter hate. What the Germans do may be gathered from the poem that Albrecht Schaeffer has produced.

Schaeffer's Poem.

Oh Fury! Oh holiest Fury! a Briton is in view!
Now, my heart, hold firm, grip tight
With iron-fisted grasp on sabre bright,
In mine ear the music of a murd'rous hew!

Again, and for the last time, will I treasure
The venom which in my heart doth rage and cry
With bitter hate that knows no end nor measure,
With which the name of England I defy!

To earth, base Britain, crushed out being in the mire!
God! stand not in the way whilst she is smitten!
Or, dying, God! on Thee my soul shall vent its ire!

"Down, England!" and, gathering his last remaining strength,
He stretched his quivering limbs to their full length,
To gaze into the eyes
Of him who lay there dead!

With snake-like dart his sword 'gainst the sleeping enemy sped,
Then, laughing loud, he shook his fever'd head
While in the staring pupils, glazed and set,
His own eyes a murdered nation's shadow met.

Set free at last, from the torment of its hate and pain,
From the poison cleansed which consumed it more and more,
His soul, pure as an angel's, upward soared,
The Lord to follow with His sword of flame!

THE EFFICIENCY CANDIDATE

Editor, Review:

Sir,—I notice that Ald. Duncan, in his address, describes himself as the efficiency candidate. I wonder if he knows what efficiency means? How long has be been so efficient? Was he efficient in Mayor McWilliams' time, when he was chairman of the board of works? Older citizens remember how he managed his work then. What happened to him the next time he sought public confidence? Did he get it? He is understood to be the champion of Italian labour and thinks a lot more of it than he does of British labour. He is credited with stating that an Italian was a far better workman than an Englishman. B stands for Buller, and B also stands for British fair play. That's all Buller asks for—British fair play —and he will sure get it.

WORKINGMAN VOTER.

THE FLAG.

Editor, Review:

The following communication appeared in today's Mail and Empire:

To the Editor, Mail and Empire:

Sir,—In the Canadian Churchman of December 24th I read with much interest a letter from the pen of the Rev. J. C. Davidson, suggesting the hoisting of flags on churches, commercial buildings, factories, homes, etc. I suggest that the flag be the Union Jack, of regulation size, each church to provide its own flag, and to hoist it on the day that peace is declared, there to wave for all time. Preparations could be made at once, ordering flags, erecting poles, etc., to be in readiness for the great day that we all long for.

Yours, etc.,

BRANTFORD CHURCHWOMAN.

Brantford, December 23.

SUGGESTS A CHANGE.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Mr. G. N. Gordon is a candidate for the Board of Education and two other men are running also. It seems to me that it is time for a change and to break up the old ring which has been running the Board of Education for many years. They have done their best to keep others out and new blood is needed in this old body.

The three candidates have taken an active part in public affairs, and Mr. Gordon particularly has had considerable municipal experience where he was always active and progressive and watched the interests of the workingman while in the council, and the anxiety of the old members of the Board to keep him out of the Board of Education, is a pretty good sign that he is not wanted there and is a very good reason why the public should see him elected. There has been too much friendship altogether between the members of the Board. A man who is inclined to stir up trouble, and has a tendency to fight like Mr. Gordon has, should be elected.

Yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—I am entirely in sympathy with the candidature of G. N. Gordon for the Board of Education. This board needs one lawyer upon it to watch the contracts and business that is going through. It needs a man who is in sympathy with conditions which have already existed there and who will watch in a fearless way to see that nothing takes place along the line of extravagance and careless dealing.

Mr. Gordon is a man who has always been most active, and, while he has faults, one of his virtues is that he is a good scrapper and will not allow anything to be put over him if he knows it.

It looks to me as if this was the time to elect some new men to the Board of Education, and if the labour unions do what they should, they will watch their interests and elect the new men.

Yours truly,

WORKINGMAN.

AID FOR SHIPS IN FOG

Wireless apparatus designed to help ships groping in fog to determine their positions soon will be established at Cape Cod by the United States Navy Department. The apparatus has been perfected to such an extent that it will be possible to locate an enquiring ship after measurement of the radio waves by the points of the compass.

A ship enquiring by wireless first might be informed it bore S.S.E., one point E. Upon the receipt of a second message from the same shore station half an hour later, showing a change in the compass points, the navigator, knowing his vessel's speed, would be able to determine his position on a chart with accuracy. The apparatus is of foreign origin.

It is reported from St. Catharines that the Senatorship held by the late Hon. Wm. Gibson will be given to Mr. Frank Labor, M.P., of Haldimand.

HOW THEY GOT RID OF HIM

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

The village of Bubbling Rock—named for a spring from which gushed an abundance of pure water—was a very quiet community. There were a couple of dozen married couples with children—some grown to manhood and womanhood, but most of them still children. For Bubbling Rock was a new settlement in the new colony of Virginia, and old persons are seldom pioneers. The inhabitants cultivated the tobacco plant, at which they made a good living, and so long as they were free to worship God in their own way they were content.

But the peace of Bubbling Rock was destined to be interrupted. A man—an unmarried man—came there from Jamestown, who taught the men of the town to which he came games of chance. He not only won their money, but set them to gambling among themselves. This interchange of their funds with one another would not have been objectionable if it had not led them to quarreling. For there is nothing that will so soon make enemies of friends as winning each other's money. Instead of working the men were constantly gambling, and not only was the tobacco neglected, but not a day passed but there was a fracas.

When a number of men who had previously been fast friends had bloodied one another's noses and one man had been killed, the wives and mothers of Bubbling Rock put their heads together with a view to getting rid of the instigator of the trouble. The deliberations were behind closed doors, and the women were pledged not to reveal the plan adopted.

Those were the days when the population of Virginia was kept up and increased by shipments of persons of all grades, from the younger sons of noblemen to the most hardened criminal. The highest and the lowest met on shipboard and on arrival scattered themselves over the new country.

To the surprise of the husbands of Bubbling Rock their wives suddenly seemed to take a fancy to the gambler who had made all the trouble. They invited him to their houses, and one or two of those having the most seductive tongues held up before him the advantages of matrimony.

"Get married," said Mrs. Ralston, "and become one of us. It is only as a husband that you can achieve real happiness. This is a lonely country, and its loneliness can only be done away with by the companionship that is to be found in wedlock."

"Where shall I find a wife?" asked the gambler. "There are five men to one woman in the colony."

"Leave that to me," replied the lady. "I'll find you a wife who I will guarantee will change your life completely. She is coming out from England and is due to arrive within a fortnight."

The gambler seemed grateful for the kindly interest the lady took in his welfare and expressed himself glad at the prospect of meeting her friend.

Ten days later a ship arrived from England, bringing a cargo of women sent out to be wives for the single men of the colony. Mrs. Ralston boarded the vessel and was closeted with the captain for a few minutes, at the end of which time he summoned a young woman, to whom he said:

"You need not be put up with the rest for a husband. This lady will provide for you." Then he left the two women together.

Eunice Dargan, the young woman who had just arrived, was rather small and had mild blue eyes and golden tresses. She was the comeliest of all the women on the ship. Mrs. Ralston took her ashore with her and domiciled her under her own roof. That night she sent for the gambler and introduced him to her friend.

The next day the man for whom this gentle lass was intended discharged the cost of her transportation in tobacco and there was a wedding at the house of Mrs. Ralston.

That night the stillness of the settlement was broken by voices raised in anger emanating from the home of the man the lady had arranged to make happy. A man and a woman's voice were raised alternately in crescendo, the woman's constantly gaining the ascendancy till the sound of some heavy weight striking against the wall of the house put an end to the man's side of the argument. Then the slamming of a door was heard and all was still.

The next morning all the men in Bubbling Rock peeped from their windows to see what had been the end of the previous bridal night amenities. Not so the women. They were all posted. When the door of the gambler's home opened the meek looking bride stepped forth. Then every woman in Bubbling Rock knew that the gambler had vanished.

When the plan adopted by the wives to get rid of the gambler leaked out it was learned that on the arrival of the cargo of women sent over for wives Mrs. Ralston had asked the captain for the one bearing the worst reputation of all. He had produced the blue eyed, golden haired creature, who looked as gentle as a fawn. She had troubled the police of London more than any other person in that wicked city. To get rid of her they had sent her to Virginia.

The problem remained to get rid of the means by which the gambler was ejected. This was accomplished by giving her to an Indian chief. Then for the first time in her life she behaved herself.

Woman's World

Lady Paget Heading American Women In London Relief Work.

LADY ARTHUR PAGET.

One of the most important London movements for the relief of sufferers through the European war is that headed by prominent American women and known as the American women's war relief fund. It was originated by Lady Arthur Paget, wife of Sir Arthur Paget, whose husband is a lieutenant general in the British army. Lady Paget is the daughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens, a New York society leader, and has been an important figure in British society for many years. She is very wealthy, owning much New York real estate. Her charities are as notable as her splendid social functions. She was a great favorite with the late King Edward and has always been much liked by Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family. Besides her husband she has three sons serving in the English army. Noted for her wit, beauty and savoir faire, any philanthropic project that receives her backing is sure to be popular. The first meeting of the war relief fund, which was held in the big London drawing room of Mrs. W. B. Leeds, was attended by such Anglo-American social leaders as the Duchess of Marlborough, Lady Randolph Churchill, Lady Lowther, Mrs. Lewis Vernon Harcourt and many others.

Eradicating "Beauty Spots."

"Beauty spots" are the names given to the disfiguring little blemishes which seem to play havoc with complexions at this season of the year.

Let it be clearly understood that pimples are not caused by frosty, damp, dry, hot or, in fact, any other kind of weather, but make their appearance in direct connection with an unsatisfactory condition of the blood or digestion or the general health.

You may lessen the inflamed appearance of a "beauty spot" by the application of a lotion, but you can only remove it and the cause as well as the probability of a further appearance of the eruptions by getting the blood into a healthy state. What, then, is the treatment? Eat fruit at every meal and plenty of it. Drink copious draughts of cold water, fresh and filtered. Take a constitutional and a brisk rubdown before breakfast every morning.

Points for Mothers

New Thought Playrooms.

An interesting room in one New York home is known as the "do, do room." It is a completely equipped playroom for the children, where the word don't is never heard.

The idea of this juvenile paradise originated with the father of the family, whose childhood was marred by continually hearing "Don't do this" or "Don't break that."

The room itself is a large, sunny place, ventilated by plenty of windows, which are safely barred. One end of the hardwood floor is uncovered, while the other has a thick woolen rug, fastened so securely that acrobatic feats, ball games or any amount of running and jumping cannot loosen it.

The walls, which are deadened, so that noises cannot penetrate to other parts of the house, are covered with a blue paper, from which finger prints may easily be washed. The pictures and electric lights are caged, this precaution also making possible a mild game of baseball or any amount of handball or bean bag tossing.

The chairs and the tables are made with rounded corners. The fear of breaking dainty bric-a-brac does not bother the inmates of this "do, do room," where there are only a few brass bowls to hold odds and ends. There are no frail bookcases with glass doors and silk curtains, but built in affairs to hold the favorite magazines and books.

On the spacious broad couch is a substantial blue coverlet that will permit any amount of lounging.

Winning a Boy's Confidence.

Mothers must remember in choosing a boy's associates that very often the boy with the best manners is not the one with the finest character. Often children from the finest families are deceitful and to be avoided just as much as the rougher boys. Good manners are an excellent thing for a boy to have, but an upright, fine character is a far more important possession.

If the mother teaches her boy to make her his confidant all will be well. She should never be too busy to listen to his recital of the day's events, big and small. An hour for confidences each evening will save her no end of worry and anxiety, for, if the boy has formed the habit of telling her everything he will constantly need her sympathy and her love, and he will conceal nothing from her. In this way the mother can judge for herself as to his companions and his customs.

This formation period in the boy's character is the time when he has greater need of his mother's watchful care and surveillance than any other time, and the mother will be spared much sorrow and anxiety during his adolescence if she will watch over him and his friends in his early youth.

School Children's Luncheon.

The greater part of a school child's day is spent inside the schoolrooms, and the little pupil must be watched to see that he receives the proper amount of nutrition and outdoor exercise.

The average mother has no idea what her little son or daughter eats at the noon hour, and in many cases she would receive a shock if she knew what stuff they were putting into their stomachs when out of her sight.

Sometimes the mother gives the school child a certain sum with which to buy his lunch at school and asks no questions as to what is bought. This system is very wrong. The noon meal should by all rights be the big meal of the day for children. It is a bad idea to load the little stomachs heavily at night before retiring. The dinner should be eaten at noon.

Some schools have lunch counters, to be sure, at which hot soup, cocoa, sandwiches, etc., can be obtained, but very few children spend their money on these beneficial foods. They usually invest it in cakes, cookies and chocolate.

Children's Hobbies.

Parents nowadays are fully alive to the advantages of hobbies for their children. The little hobby hunter need never be dull.

Best of all hobbies for children is the care of pets. Somehow children all the world over are alike in this respect. However fond they may be of games and toys, there is nothing that gives them so much real delight as something alive to tend, something dependent upon them for care.

Royal children are no exception to this rule. Most of the little princes and princesses of Europe have some animal pets, and most of them go in for some other kind of hobby, such as photography, stamp collecting and other pleasant and instructive pastimes.

The Pain of Burns.

The pain of burns can be allayed by soaking the injured part in a strong solution of washing soda. This is a very simple first aid treatment, which is always available in the home where there are children, and it should be used as soon as possible. When the injured part is well soaked the burn should be covered with a thick layer of gauze wet with boric acid, which not only prevents the air acting upon the burn and making it more painful, but assists the healing of the wounded flesh.

ONE WAY TO WRITE HISTORY

A Talk With Adam About Discreet Young Methuselah.

I have a book published in the early didactic period of the nineteenth century which illustrates a certain way of imparting historical information. It was written with the laudable intention of making history interesting to people who didn't want to venture into the unfamiliar. The author thought that if the patriarchs were conceived of as New England selectmen their lives could be made as interesting as if they were New England selectmen.

And I am not sure but that he succeeded. The book is divided into two parts, a conversation with Adam covering the space of 930 years and an interview with Noah giving an account of the deluge and the other events with which he was familiar. They are represented as nice old gentlemen rather formal in their language and strictly orthodox in their opinions. Adam speaks hopefully of Methuselah, who, he says, "must be now about fifty-seven years old and is a discreet and well principled youth." He was very much disturbed over the radical views of the Tubal-Cains.

There is nothing in the book that would indicate that either Adam or Noah had been out of Connecticut.—S. M. Crothers in Atlantic Monthly.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Holiday time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB!

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself a New Year's present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

"That is easily explained."

Australian Crop Failure Hits Us.

According to a report from the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Australia, Canada will be affected next year by the situation regarding agricultural implements. Fifty per cent. of the agricultural implements imported by Australia go from Toronto. The 1914 business was based on the expectation of normal conditions, but there came a drouth and a crop failure, and two-thirds of importation of agricultural implements was unsold. It has been held over for the 1915 sales.

FEW NOMINEES AT HASTINGS WESTWOOD COUNCIL RETURNED

Hastings, Dec. 30. — A large and appreciative audience gathered at the town hall on Christmas night to enjoy the program prepared by the pupils and friends of the Methodist Sunday school, and which is looked forward to by the citizens as a rare treat. No doubt the severity of the weather hindered a number from turning out, but those who braved the elements were well repaid for their trouble. The program consisted of solos, duets, quartettes, fancy drills, and closed with a laughable farce, entitled "My Turn Next." Each of the numbers seemed to vie with the former in excellence, and showed that a great deal amount of patience and perseverance must have been exercised in their preparation. One number particularly is deserving of mention, a character song, "Dunderbeck," given by Master Arnold Parsons, a boy of eight, and which called forth such prolonged applause that he was obliged to respond with an encore, which simply brought down the house. A patriotic scarf drill by eighteen girls, and a navy drill by twenty men, are also entitled to special mention. Indeed, the general opinion seemed to be that each one of the performers acquitted themselves very creditably, and the committee in charge is well pleased with the success of the entertainment. The receipts amounted to between eighty and ninety dollars.

The company that drove over to Westwood on Wednesday night to take in the entertainment given by the Sunday school children there were well pleased with the program, and report a large attendance.

Monday being nomination day, the majority of those interested wended their way to the town hall to hear the speeches and otherwise enjoy themselves. The result, as far as we can learn, is that in all likelihood the old council will hold forth for another year, although a few nominations were made.

Schools are closed for the Christmas vacation, and the teachers are on a visit to their homes.

Austrians are Routed

Russian Victory in Galicia is Greater Than First Reported.

Most Recent Success of Grand Duke Nicholas' Army Over the Austrians Now Proves to Have Been a Huge One---Over Fifty Thousand Austrians Have Already Been Taken Prisoners by the Russians.

LONDON, Dec. 30. — News coming from the Russian front was highly gratifying to the allies. There has been a slackening of the fighting in northern Poland between the lower Vistula and Pilica rivers, where the Russians have captured some German trenches, prisoners and guns—an indication, it is believed here, that the German frontal attack on the army guarding Warsaw has been definitely checked.

In southern Poland the Russians also record some successes, while in Galicia they have apparently inflicted a defeat on the Austrians almost as serious as that which Emperor Francis' troops suffered in Servia.

Since their latest offensive commenced the Russians have taken 50,000 Austrian prisoners and captured many guns, according to the Russian official reports, and if, as was estimated, Austria had between three and four army corps on its re-entry into Galicia, it must have lost more than a third of the number in killed, wounded and prisoners. The state of the roads, which are deep in mud, has prevented the Russians from making the pursuit as effective as it might have done could the Cossacks have found a firm footing for their horses.

The Russian General Staff has issued the following bulletin:

"To-day, between the lower Vistula and the Pilica, only fighting of small importance took place. The Germans left their trenches on the right bank of the Bzura, near the village of Mistrsevice, and fell back on the left bank of the Bzura.

"On the River Rawka our heavy artillery is fighting efficaciously a large number of German batteries of heavy guns.

"In the region of Bolimovo our attacks have alternated with those of the Germans.

"We have dislodged the enemy from a trench near the village of Sumino, which they had taken from us previously, by a counter-attack, in which we captured machine guns and prisoners.

"On the centre, between the Pilica and the upper Vistula, only cannonading was heard. We made progress on the two wings.

"During an attack on a German redoubt to the south of Inow Loda, we captured three machine guns.

"Our troops met with success while crossing the lower Nida in the taking by storm of the villages of Starokorozin and Senislavice, which were well fortified. During the fighting we captured 50 Austrian officers, over 1,700 soldiers and three machine guns.

"In western Galicia we have made progress in spite of the almost impassable condition of the country, due to mud. We have driven the enemy from the front of Stromnik-Sorlice Jasliska, taking guns and a large number of machine guns.

"During the first half of December (old style calendar), we captured 50,000 Austrians."

Queer Fish.

Which fish have the power of floating and swimming back downward?

This peculiar property is possessed only by the diodon and the tetrodon, two allied families of tropical fishes which are popularly known as globefish. The tetrodon is also found off the coasts of Cornwall and Ireland. The faculty is due to the fact that the skin on the abdomen of these fishes is much looser than it is on the back, and they have the power to inflate this loose skin by swallowing air through the gullet. This of course enables them to turn over at will, and, although the great French naturalist Cuvier did not believe that when in this position they could swim as they pleased, Darwin corrected him and proved that they could swim both forward and backward in this position.

It is of course well known that the shark and the dogfish, owing to the peculiar position of the underjaw, are obliged to turn on their backs before they can seize their prey, and while in this position they are able to swim for a very considerable distance. This, however, is done by the muscular force of the fins and tail and not through any special apparatus, such as the globefish possesses.—St. James' Gazette.

Denmark's King Suspends Custom.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 30. — (Via London.)—The usual custom of the King, receiving each diplomatic mission to Denmark separately on New Year's Day, will not be followed this year, as it is feared that some representatives of a belligerent power might meet the representatives of an enemy power on arriving or departing from the palace. Instead of the former custom the dean of the diplomatic corps, Dr. G. F. Hagerup, the Norweigian Minister, will present to the King the greetings of the diplomats.

The usual dinner to all the members of the diplomatic corps has been cancelled and the King will entertain the envoys in groups.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire respectfully to solicit your votes and your influence that I may be elected Mayor of the City of Peterborough for the year 1915. I was born in this City and have lived here all my life, and feel, and have always felt, a deep interest in the City.

I have served you in the City Council for eight years, having been elected several times by the whole City under the general vote system and also since then have represented the South Ward. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works two years and Chairman of the Property Committee four years, and served as a member on all the other Committees, and the experience I have had and the knowledge of the affairs and needs of the City I have obtained during those years will be of advantage in the position of Mayor if you elect me to that office.

I offer myself as a candidate at this time because I have been requested to do so by a large number of electors. One year ago a number of my friends urged me then to be a candidate, but I stood aside upon the statement to me by the present Mayor that he wished the office for one year only, and would not run for a second term, and that my two-year term as Alderman would then have expired, and it would be a more convenient time for me to be a candidate for the office, consequently, I am not violating any custom in being a candidate this year.

My course in the Council is known to you, and, while I do not claim not to have made a mistake in the eight years, I feel that I can ask you to support me upon my record as an Alderman. During the coming year I believe the Council should have two principal aims, namely, to conduct the business of the City with the strictest economy, so as to make the tax rate as low as possible, and to expend the revenue upon necessary works in such a manner as to give as large an amount of employment as possible for the money expended and to produce the best results. If you elect me I will keep these aims in view, that the burden of taxation may be as light as possible and that work may be given to those who need it upon works for the benefit of the City so far as the revenue will permit.

Again soliciting your votes, and wishing you all the compliments of the season,

I am, yours respectfully,

GEO. H. DUNCAN

CANDIDATE IN NORTH WARD

For Alderman North Ward

TO THE RATEPAYERS:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated as a candidate for a seat in the Council for Ward No. 4, I would solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. Having had five years' experience in the Council, and having been chairman of the Power and Property Committees, I feel that I could be of benefit to the ratepayers.

I am in favor of employing our own citizens on all city work; am not in favor of letting contracts of city work to outsiders. I believe in paying our own people a good fair wage. I think the affairs of the city could be managed in a more economical manner than they have been. Our taxes are becoming burdensome, and it behooves every member of the Council to economize and get the best value for the money expended, and, if elected, I will use my very best efforts to serve the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and will be as careful of the ratepayers' interests as I would be of my own.

Wishing you all a Prosperous and Happy New Year,

A. A. McINTYRE

CARD OF THANKS

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to thank the ratepayers of the ward for the proof of confidence implied in my re-election by acclamation.

I assure I will most earnestly try to continue to deserve your confidence and to serve you and the whole city as well to the best of my ability.

I shall be glad if the ratepayers will tell me from time to time their thought of what should be done. Bearing in mind always that the interests of the city as a whole are greater than that of a section. But I wish to know what the ward wants. No two sections of the city have the same interests. But my special care shall be those of Centre Ward.

Yours very respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

(Special to The Review.)

Mount Julian, Dec. 30.—A number of the members of Holy Trinity Church, Haultain, with their friends met at the home of Miss Hazel Walsh on Wednesday evening last and presented her with a handsome gold bracelet, bearig the inscription: "Hazel, Xmas 1914."

The followig address was read by Mrs. J. D. Church and the presentation was made by Mrs. W. G. Stone:

Dear Miss Walsh,—

We, the members of Holy Trinity Church, Haultain, avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our thanks for your faithful services in our behalf.

We appreciate your services as organist of our beloved church and recognize the fact, that the responsible position, you so ably fill, is not held without great exercise of patience, and self sacrifice on your part.

In token of our esteem we ask you to accept this gift, not as a remuneration for your services but as a slight token of our thankful appreciation of your faithful service amongst us; and we sincerely hope that you will remain with us, as our organist, for many years to come.

We pray that the blessing of God be upon you and remain with you always.

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Signed on behalf of the members,
J. C. STONE,
Warden.

Miss Walsh was completely taken by surprise, so much so, she could scarcely give utterance to her feelings. She replied in a very feeling manner, thanking them for their gift and their kindness and said that she had always felt it a great pleasure to be of any assistance in the service of the Lord. A very pleasant evening was spent in music and social intercourse. Refreshments were served by the ladies, after which all departed with many wishes for a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year.

Heligoland Has Unbelievable Defence System Says Ex-counsul

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The first intimate description of the fortifications of Heligoland, Germany's guarding fortress at the mouth of the Elbe, to come out of the cloud of secrecy thrown around the defences of the Kaiser's Empire, was brought back yesterday by Richard Wackerow, for seven years U. S. consul at Breslau.

Wackerow believes he is the only foreigner who has been allowed to land on Heligoland since the outbreak of the war, but admits that there were many features of the little island's defence which were kept hidden from him.

"Heligoland is a second Gibraltar," said Wackerow. "The place is guarded by an almost unbelievable system of defence. Long channels have been cut in the solid rock of the cliff, face seaward, and in these no less than 142 Krupp disappearing guns of the 42-centimetre type have been mounted. There are 364 guns altogether in the island defence.

"Ten concentric rows of mines guard the entrance to Heligoland by night, arranged at different levels to catch submarines as well as surface ships. A great fleet of submarines is assembled behind Heligoland, as well as the German high seas fleet. I do not think it is the intention of the Germans to send out their entire fleet to engage the British until the odds against it have been whittled down."

Wackerow said the Germans admitted that they had lost in killed alone 800,000 men since the outbreak of the war. They now have three million on both fronts, he added.

HELPFUL ADDRESSES TO BOYS

TWO CALLS TO THE BOYS OF CANADA

One Grand Response Was Made When Mother Country Called

Call to Christian Service is Discussed by Rev. J. H. Arnup

Another large audience assembled in George Street Methodist Sunday School room last night at the evening session of the boys' conference. The address was delivered by Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., assistant secretary of foreign missions. Mr. Ross Laing who has been appointed associate president of the conference was chairman.

In commencing Mr. Arnup referred to the scarcity some military regiments experienced in obtaining enough men to form military camps. But this year on August 4th a cannon went off and the smoke obscured the earth. The mother country called out that she was in danger, and Canadian boys heard the call. Did the boys go? Yes. They went five times stronger in numbers than the number called for. It was easy to get men when there was a real need.

"Do we pity the men over there? No, we pity the men who can have no part in the great struggle that calls them," said the speaker.

Many to be Reached.

Mr. Arnup said there must be large numbers of boys who had yet to be reached by the Christian faith. He hoped all present would return home and try and inculcate the principles of Christian leadership into their companions.

There were three things that were necessary if other boys were to be called to work, namely, a cause worth fighting for, a campaign big enough to fight in; and a leader worth while fighting under.

"Another thing to remember," he said, "was the certainty in our lives of a risen and triumphant Saviour. Unto us is born a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. Another principle which must not be left out was that with the power of a pure heart linked with the risen Saviour there is no height to which one cannot reach. The man who finds his ideal in Jesus Christ gets the power to put his ideal in reality.

A Stupendous Program.

"In order to enlist great numbers of men you must have a program worth while. The program of Jesus Christ is more stupendous than the world ever dreamed. There was a great tide of young manhood included in this program. For the young manhood of today the program of Jesus Christ involved acknowledgment of his saving power to overcome the evil that drags men down. In the city of Tokio there were reputed to be 300,000 who go to the door of her whose road leads to ruin. There were thousands and thousands of men who had yet to learn the principles of Jesus Christ, men who had the same desires, ambitions and associations as those assembled at the boys' conference. The program of Jesus Christ was big enough to give every man his chance and opportunity and he did not need to go to India to identify himself with this program. Some fellows had a very narrow shortsighted vision of their responsibility in this program.

Speaking of the demand which the program represents he said that the program included everything that can be taken into human life. Training fitted us for service.

A Wide Sphere of Service.

There was a great sphere of service for the boys present. It was a question of finding where was the greatest need. One had to decide for himself where he would be giving the greatest service. One should decide whether his place was at the front firing off the shells or in the foundry making the shells. Mr. Arnup hoped that many of the fellows would find their way to the front. Any man without heavy business ties or strong family ties should arrange to get to the front if it was possible.

In concluding Rev. Mr. Arnup testified to the splendid leadership of Jesus Christ. He related an incident in his own life. His father died leaving little else than a good name and seven children and a mother broken down in health. His mother with faith in God had a big heart set out to make a home for five boys. When he was eleven years of age in a little country church he found the personal help and fellowship of Jesus Christ. The reason his life had been brought back to Christ was the persistence of certain Christian men and women and boys who would not let him get away.

Jesus Christ could save the world because he had done it for him.

His address was one of the most impressive and inspiring of the conference and he was given an appreciative ovation as he resumed his seat.

Addresses of immediate interest and profit were delivered yesterday afternoon by Rev. F. L. Farewell and Mr. Taylor Statten. They took up some of the phases of youthful life dealing with the social side and the decisions of youth. Mr. Farewell urged the boys to use every means that was extended to assist themselves in the acquisition of all-round education. He urged boys to grasp these opportunities. For one thing they should endeavor to avail themselves of all openings to speak in public. Such efforts would finally result in them overcoming natural antipathy and backwardness at public speaking and help them to become proficient. He enlarged upon several other qualities that would materially assist in developing the intellectual nature of youth.

Craftsmanship should be cultivated and woodcraft and other things that helped to bring a boys' dormant energy and ability to the forefront. He showed how proficiency in these things eventually culminated in a high standard of efficiency being set up.

The Physical Standard.

Mr. Taylor Statten took up the physical part in the Canadian standard of efficiency tests. He showed the crying need of more vision that existed and how without vision and far sightedness it was impossible for a young man to project himself far in any direction. Under the heading of health and education he told how a well known Toronto business man was incapacitated because he had shattered his constitution early in life by ignorance of the proper steps to preserve it. It was important to take steps to prevent ill health and safeguard one's physical being. Exercise and clean sport were essential. In this regard Mr. Statten stated that ninety-nine times out of one hundred the boy who was mean and unsportsmanlike in games would carry those characteristics through life. As a fellow played so would he live. He believed that the Canadian standard of sportsmanship was on a lower basis than the English. When Englishmen engaged in a game of cricket they played it for the glory of the game and not for the money or reward that was in it. The young men present should adopt every possible means to foster gentlemanly sport said Mr. Statten, and stand for clean speech, clean living and clean athletics. Mr. Statten emphasized the necessity for muscular development. A boy's muscles should be under control and he should be able to make them do what he wanted them to do. It was usually the boy with the soft flabby muscles that regularly went wrong and filled the goals and reformatories. Physical exercise declared Mr. Statten increased one's mental powers by stimulating unused powers of brain and physical.

In closing Mr. Statten affirmed that the purpose of the whole physical test was to promote all round physical development and to furnish inspiration and energy to young men.

The next portion of the afternoon program took the form of conferences held in different parts of the church on the rural church problem, the village church problem and the urban problem. Rev. H. W. Foley, B.D., of Brooklin, led the discussion on the first mentioned subject, Rev. C. W. De Mille of Havelock the second, and Rev. R. G. Peever of George Street Church the third problem. After this two hours were pleasantly passed by the majority of the boys in visiting the Lift Lock and a couple of other local institutions. Supper was then served by the Ladies' Aid of that church. From seven o'clock to eight a rousing service of song was held in the basement of the church.

ALSATIANS DESCRIBE GERMANS IDEA OF THE REIGN OF FORCE

Abbe Wetterle Says Emperor William is Weak and Unbalanced and is the Victim of the Pan-Germanist Party—Patriotic Military Organizations Are Supported by Armament Firms.

Writing from Bordeaux a few days ago, a special correspondent gives an account of an interviewe with two Alsatian patriots, who tell of the dream of the Kaiser's advisers of a wide-wide Germany and the inauguration of the reign of force.

I had a long talk to-day, writes the correspondent, with the famous Alsatian patriot, the Abbe Wetterle, who was the leader in the Alsation Autonomist party in the Reichstag before the war.

Helmer, the defender of the caricaturist Hansi at the Leipzig court on a charge of treason, was also present.

The two patriots fled to France at the outbreak of hostilities to avoid being imprisoned. Both expressed the opinion that the Kaiser himself did not want war, but was rushed into it by the Crown Prince and the war party

I asked their opinion of the Kaiser's character, and received the reply that he was mediocre, dilettante, with power, applying himself superficially to many interests.

He was rather weak and unbalanced, and very sentimental, but he was certainly more chivalrous than the majority of Germans, though after his many faux pas he did not inspire the people with much confidence.

Replying to further questions, the Abbe Wetterle said, "Wilhelm was certainly pacifist before the war. He like to play at being a soldier, but at heart was nothing but a good business man, and had no desire to risk his crown in a European war.

"The Kaiser is the victim of the military and pan-Germanist parties, who called him coward because he was too peaceful, and who (without his knowledge and contrary to his desire and intentions) prepared the present crisis.

"When the deed was done the Kaiser, who, through misinformation, believed the cause a righteous one, threw himself heart and soul into the conflict."

I asked how the militarists succeeded in convincing the empire that war was necessary; and the Abbe Wetterle said, "All the patriotic and military organizations are supported by big armament firms, who worked systematically to transform a people of thinkers and philosophers into a nation of unscrupulous conquerors.

"Soon an extremely dangerous state of mind spread all over the country, like that of world commerce and great industries, dreamed of imposing her unchallenged domination over the whole civilized universe.

"The pan-Germanists finished by getting their theories accepted, even by the democracy."

"And what are these theories?" I asked.

He replied: "That the German belonged to a race of rulers, and was alone predistined to enjoy political rights, all others being only herds or slaves.

"The pan-Germanists had redrawn the map of the world. All countries whose populations had some remote strain of German blood in their veins must sooner or later, by persuasion or violence, become part of greater Germany.

"The furious madmen of these powerful organizations found accomplices in German savants so proud of their knowledge as to believe that nothing existed before them. The merchants and manufacturers who saw in Germany's gigantic army and navy only the means of conquering the world's markets also lent a willing hand.

"It is because Germany took up this stupidly provoking attitude, because she tried by cunning and force to eliminate all her competitors, because she showed herself without pity to subject races, and because she refused elementary rights even to her allies, that she is universally detested, and that at the time when a powerful coalition is smashing her she finds no one to lend her a helping hand."

M. Helmer told me that before he and Abbe Wetterle fled Alsatians had been warned that all who sheltered them would be shot. He added that from private information he had learned that Dr. Stiefermann, another Alsatian ex-deputy of the Reichstag, had been shot, and that famine was now spreading all over Germany.

German wounded are being attended to all over central and southern France.

After being wounded in the beginning of the battle of the Marne they remained for eight days at Almont, foodless and without attention, and were finally abandoned by the fleeing Germans.

Many expressed joy at having fallen into the hands of the French, though a doctor at the hospital told me that some feared they would have their throats cut.

A number of them declared that they left Dresden in the belief that they were going to the manoeuvres, and that until they reached the banks of the Rhine they knew nothing of the war.

To Pray for Victory.

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—Next Sunday is the day appointed for prayer throughout the Empire for the success of Great Britain and her allies in the war for an early peace. The proclamation issued calls for "a day of humble prayer and intercession to Almighty God on behalf of the cause undertaken by our Empire and our allies, and of those who are offering their lives for it and for a speedy and favorable peace, that shall be founded on understanding and not hatred, to the end that peace shall endure."

Copies of the proclamation were sent to the heads of all the religious denominations, and it is expected that the day will be observed in every city and town and rural district throughout the Dominion.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30. — Adelarde Carriere, who is alleged to have been responsible for the fire that on the night of Dec. 12 destroyed La Salle College on Letourneaux street, Maisonneuve, resulting in a loss of about $250,000, appeared in the enquete court yesterday charged with arson and was remanded by Judge Leet to stand his trial.

DEFEAT IS ADMITTED BY BERLIN

Austrians Must Find New Positions, as Russians are Superior

Frence Forces are Strong in the Vosges Says Official Bureau

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—(By wireless to Sayville.) — Among the items given out for publication yesterday by the German official press bureau were the following:—

"The Russians have strengthened their forces opposing the Austrians in Galicia, and the latter, it is understood, will be compelled to make new dispositions, which will require some time. Local military experts are making attempts to picture Russia's occupation of the line of Krosno-Jaslo as being no real gain for the Russians, but, on the contrary, are weakening their position. This view, however, is considered too optimistic, and the fact must be faced that the extreme left wing of the Russians has proved itself superior to its opponents. The present action of the Russians in strengthening their forces there is due to their realization of what an encircling of their flank in Galicia would signify.

"News of importance is likely to come from the Vosges district at any time, since the French have assembled strong forces all along the line of Belfort-Epinal-Toul-Nancy. They still hold all the Vosges passes and appear to be developing new activity along an extended line against Alsace and Sundgau.

"Major Moraht, military expert of The Tageblatt, in an article discussing the English reconnaissance at Cuxhaven, declares that the landing of troops on the Holstein or North Hanover coast would be extremely difficult in winter, but says even if it were carried out the invaders would get a warm welcome.

"The German Government will permit private traffic on the Belgium Railway from Jan. 1.

"A pastoral letter from all the German Catholic archbishops and bishops calls the world war a divine judgment for human wickedness. The letter lays emphasis on the statement that Germany was not to blame for the outbreak of the war."

LONDON PRESS IS FRIENDLY

American Protest 'Must be Met in Amicable Spirit

LONDON, Dec. 31.—All the morning newspapers comment at length on the American Government's note to Great Britain concerning the treatment that is being accorded American commerce by the British fleet, and agree that the American protest should be met by the British Government in the same spirit of friendly good-will as is shown by the note. Generally, however, the newspapers are inclined to await the actual text of the note before engaging in detailed criticism of it.

In the meantime they point out how, inevitably, serious difficulties arise when violations of neutrality are involved. Moreover, they are inclined to dispute the theory that Great Britain alone is responsible for the dislocation of the world's trade, arguing that, even had she remained neutral, the fact that a number of other nations were involved in the hostilities must have had a detrimental effect on the world's commerce. In any case, they say, Great Britain was not responsible for the war.

The Times, in an editorial, says:—

"The note is dated Dec. 24, and, although the idea may seem fanciful, we cannot help imagining that it was by no accident that the eve of the great festival of peace and good-will was chosen for the despatch of this friendly communication from one of the great branches of the English-speaking communities to the other.

Proceeding to state that there are many peculiar conditions arising from the war which justify Great Britain's policy, the editorial continues:—

"The note deals throughout with unshaken faith in our sense of justice. That trust we shall assuredly do our best to preserve. It is quite inconceivable that two sensible peoples on the friendliest of terms with each other should not succeed in overcoming a difficulty of this nature."

Volunteer Killed Himself.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A verdict of suicide was handed down last night by a coroner's jury which held an inquest on the body of a man said to be Ralph K. Danforth, a medical practitioner of 110 Queen Anne street, Milwaukee, who was a member of the Canadian contingent.

The man was found dead in his room in an hotel, with a wound in his throat. Several empty bottles on a table indicated that he might also have taken poison. A photograph of a woman was in the dead man's lap.

After rallying from a sharp decline, prices closed unsettled, but ⅝c to 1c above last night. Corn gained ⅜c to 1c net, and oats ¼c to ½c. In provisions, the outcome was a drop of 2½c to 10c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 29.—Following the sharp break of yesterday prices today were comparatively steady, fluctuations being within narrow limits. Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, oats unchanged to ⅜c higher, flax unchanged to ½c lower. Many holders sold out yesterday and were buying back today which caused a firm undertone. The export trade continued active. Good sales were claimed to be worked today, and a commencement has been made with all rail shipments in both wheat and oats.

Cash trading is insignificant, only a few cars of various grains being offered, and the demand was about equal to the offerings.

Inspections on Monday totalled 256 cars, as against 348 last year, and in sight on Tuesday were 116 cars.

During the last hour heavy buying was reported in the Chicago market by Armour and Patten firms, and over 1,000,000 bushels was said to be worked for export, which caused a sharp rise in values. Winnipeg followed in sympathy.

Winnipeg futures closed 1⅛c to 1¾c higher for wheat, oats closed ⅛c to ⅜c higher, and flax ⅛c to ½c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was quiet today, there being very little demand, and advices from London stated that Argentine and India were pressing sales. There is also a good export demand for winter wheat flour and Ontario millers have advanced their price 20c per barrel, but there is no actual change on spot yet owing to business being still very quiet.

There was a good enquiry from American buyers for millfeed today, but owing to the limited supplies available here no sales were made. The local trade is fairly active at firm prices. The tone of the butter market is strong and prices have advanced ½c per pound with a good demand. Cheese is quiet but firm. Demand for eggs good.

Preparing to Strike

Allied Forces Will Take Initiative and it Will be Decisive

PARIS, Dec. 30.—Lt.-Col. Roussat devotes a long editorial in The Liberte to an analysis of the situation created by the extraordinary complex system of entrenchments on both sides. He refutes the argument often put forward that neither the Germans nor the allies can hope now for a decisive change in the near future.

"On the contrary," he says, "very soon we shall be in a position to take the initiative. The enemy run to earth both in the east and west, will be forced to abandon his present tactics. Then a battle of Napoleonic principle will prove as decisive as it proved recently in Servia, when, at the moment the Austrians believed they had a victory in hand they were overwhelmed. Yet before striking their crushing blow the Servians had retired some 100 kilometres.

"We do not need to retire. On the contrary, we are holding firm, and we are preparing, like valiant little Servia, our weapons for the decisive encounter."

A. W. T. Martin of Toronto Collapses After Making Speech

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—While walking down the aisle after making a short address, in which he became somewhat excited, at Howard Park School last night, Mr. A. W. T. Martin, known for many years as a temperance worker, fell unconscious to the floor and died within a few minutes.

Mr. Martin was speaking on behalf of Ald. F. S. Spence, Board of Control candidate, who is ill. He had referred to Mr. Spence's eleven years of service, and concluded his tribute with an emotional and impassioned peroration, praising Mr. Spence as a "good man," during which he worked himself up into a high state of excitement. During the last minute of his speech he was reminded that he had overstepped the ten-minute limit. His face was flushed, and with some dramatic effort he concluded his speech with the recitation of a few lines of poetry. Then when about to leave the hall he fell to the floor.

PROTEST FROM UNITED STATES

Indemnity Due Says Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — President Wilson, referring yesterday to the American note to Great Britain, insisting on better treatment for American commerce, declared that large damages would eventually have to be paid by England for unlawful detention of American cargoes.

The President pointed out that many protests previously had been sent in specific cases and that if the contention of the American Government were correct, as he was firmly convinced it was, plans for indemnification ultimately would have to be met by Great Britain. Supplementary to previous protests, the new note, the President explained, represented fully the position of the United States, saying that, so far as theory was concerned, there really was no debate on the point raised, because England herself in previous wars had taken exactly the American position.

President Wilson yesterday appealed to American shippers of non-contraband goods, such as cotton, not to allow their cargoes to be mixed with contraband articles. The United States Government, he announced, could deal confidentially with the difficulties which had arisen in the treatment of American commerce by Great Britain only if supported by absolutely honest manifests.

This statement followed a discussion by the President with his Cabinet yesterday of the general shipping situation and of the note despatched Monday to Great Britain, protesting at length against the British policy of prolonged detentions of cargoes and other interference with American trade.

There was a confident feeling in diplomatic quarters that steps would be taken by other leading nations of this hemisphere, as well as by some neutrals, to point out to Great Britain their acquiescence in the American point of view.

The Goat's Dream.

I dream of gates left open,
And yards where one can see
Long lines, with which they're ropes
Stretching from tree to tree.
And there—it is too clever!—
I feast without endeavor,
Plucking the fruit, unsoapen,
Some lady left for me.

First comes a dainty scallop,
Then frills of lace and lawn,
And then a gown—a wallop
Of Swiss with ribbon drawn.
To dream of such; then, waking,
Find here an empty aching,
Or, in the yard, some "doll" up
Gathering the goods at dawn!
—Judge.

WHITBY 5 OSHAWA 2

Home Team Won When Old Enemies Met—Familiar Names on Line-ups

Whitby, Dec. 30.—The O.H.A. Intermediate season opened here last night with Oshawa as the opponents of the local team. The game was very fast, although the ice was soft, and the teams played in good form. Whitby took the lead, forcing the play, and had scored within a few minutes. Oshawa soon evened up, but from then till nearly the end the locals always had the game well in hand. The score by periods was: 2 to 1, 4 to 1 and 5 to 2. The line-up:—

Oshawa — Goal, Smith; defence, Kemp and Freeman; centre, Hall; rover, Fair; wings, Jacob and Weller.

Whitby — Goal, Brown; defence, Smith and McIntyre; centre, A. Blanchard; rover, Lavery; wings, Watson and C. Blanchard.

TO DRAW SCHEDULE.

To draw up a schedule and arrange for the season's games, a meeting of the junior church hockey league is called for this evening at eight o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. parlors.

INTERMEDIATES TO PLAY PICTON NEXT

The next O.H.A. game the Intermediates will figure in will be at Picton on Tuesday, January 5th. The new entry sprung a surprise on Monday night by defeating Belleville in the railroad city so just how the Petes will fare against Picton remains to be seen. It is anticipated that Peter Spratt will be on the team by next Tuesday.

ADVICE FROM TORONTO.

The big problem the Peterborough intermediates have before them is to develop a right wing player. Of the squad, the only right-hander is Ack Hunter, who is slated for the defence. The best solution looks like moving the former Toronto Rowing Club star up to the forward line. He has played the right wing position for several seasons.—Toronto Globe.

CRANE WITH RIVERSIDES

Ken Crane, former Peterborough boy, whom the Toronto Argos were counting on for their team, has signed with the Riversides. With Crane and Dennison on the Riversides' roster, local fans' sympathy will be with the new entry.

People appreciate things they can't afford.

COMMENT
As You Like it

THE JUNIOR DISTRICT in which Peterboro will perform this season will open on New Year's night in Port Hope with Lindsay as the guests. Next Monday night Port Hope will play here. How strong Port Hope's seven are, will be known after the opening encounter with Lindsay. The locals are practising regularly and should experience very little difficulty in going through the district.

WATERLOO has discarded the black and yellow uniforms that have so long characterized a Waterloo hockey team. The Seagram colors have been passed up for the blue and white.

STILL THEY COME. Here's another one. A Boston paper under the heading "No Game—Rough Ice" says "The Medford High—Alumni game scheduled for yesterday was called off for lack of smooth ice.

LOU E. MARSH has drawn attention to the fact that "Ack" Hunter has the unique honor of being selected captain of four different teams for four years in succession. In 1911 he was captain of the Parkdale seniors and in 1912 he led the T.R. and A.A. Last year he was pilot of the Toronto Rowing Club and this year he is captain of the Peterboro Intermediates.

WEILER, the former wing man of the Oshawa Juniors is with the intermediates of that town this season. The red-haired boy will require watching.

PICTON came through with a win from Belleville in the opening game but a glance over the Belleville line-up causes us to think that the task was by no means a difficult one. Peterboro should have little trouble in vanquishing either of them.

CRYDERMAN, the little fellow who played centre for Bowmaville last season was absent Monday night. The kid is recovering from illness and will be battling with Greenfield for the job in a week or so.

LAWSON WHITEHEAD is coaching Belleville and will not be carrying the bell this season. We're quite satisfied.

THE GENERAL FEELING among the fans is that Lou Marsh handled the game very well the other night We hope to see the old warrior again this season.

THE GAME for the Salvation Army lodging home deserves patronage. The young men benefitted by the presence of the lodging home in the city would be following the hockey club had times been good.

VERY LITTLE TROUBLE was experienced at Monday night's game in keeping the fans from smoking. Congratulations are in order.

CITY LEAGUE followers have awakened from their trance and are talking organization. If some one will furnish date, time and place for a meeting a league will be opened.

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE.

A meeting will be held in the Y.M C.A. parlors tonight at 8 o'clock to organize a city league hockey team.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

HERE THEY ARE.

THE good times coming have arrived
If we will only look,
Not quite the time foretold perhaps
By childhood's story book,
But very pleasant in a way
If we will only try
To make the best of them as they
Are quickly passing by.

We used to think of them as years
Of drowsy, dreamy ease
Of floating in a silver boat
As lazy as you please,
But now as years are more mature
We see a better way
And know real happiness is found
By mixing work with play.

They do not come to cheer our lives
With things like golden fruit
And fairy fancies that would not
The taste of manhood suit,
But in the gentle comradeship
With persons of our kind
In working at some useful task,
Then rest and peace of mind.

The golden age is here, and we
May be of it a part;
May have it in our daily lives
And live it in our heart.
We cannot wait, for time will leave
Its traces on our brow,
But we by friendship's gentle aid
May live the good time now.

"No."

"What's the trouble?"

Explaining.

"What's the matter with that baby?" asked the grouchy old bachelor, his face knotted up like a secondhand clothesline because a wayward child was wailing.

"Don't you know?" asked the matronly looking young woman at his side.

"No, I don't. Do you?"

"Certainly."

"What is it, then?"

"He is crying."

"Well, it does."

TO AVOID RECOGNITION.

U. S. Will Not Pay Much Attention to German Note Regarding Consuls.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—There is no disposition on the part of Germany to hurry its request for the cancellation of exequaturs held by neutral consuls in Belgian territory under German military rule, according to State Department officials. The German note was sent by mail to the Washington Government which will consider the subject at length before making a decision.

It is generally understood that the U. S. will avoid any action which might be considered a political recognation of the German possession of Belgium.

While officials did not comment on the contents of the German communication they intimated that it contained no evidence of any desire to place the American Government or neutral nations in an embarrassing situation.

INVITATION TO SPEND NEW YEAR'S AT THE Y.M.C.A.

"Welcome" will be the slogan around the red brick building at the corner of George and Murray streets all day New Year's. The Y. M. C. A. will be open house to all, and the officers throw out the heartiest and most sincere invitation they are capable of to every boy and young man in the city to drop in and spend some time in the building. There will be something doing all the day.

In the morning the building will be thrown open to the boys of the city, the gymnasium and swimming-pool being at their complete service for games and baths. In the afternoon the school boys and employed boys including all classes in these sections will give a demonstration of gymnasium work, and the Association is especially desirous that parents should see the boys work. Parents who find an hour or two on their hands on New Year's morning or evening will find the Y. M. C. A. an interesting place to visit and inspect. There will also be a reception in the commodious Y. M. C. A. parlors from three o'clock to five, under the direction of the ladies' auxiliary.

In the evening the attraction will be a musical program and a basket ball game between an all-star team and the Veterans. The latter have won every game so far in the basketball league, and also put away another all-star aggregation. There are several former first-class basketball players back in Peterborough for the holidays, who will likely find places on the all-star team. Last evening there was a large number out to practice. Manley Peever of Queen's College, who is on vacation here, was selected captain of the All-Stars. Harold Hill of Kingston, who played centre at Queen's is also on the team. Others to pick from are Fitzgerald, Flowers, Loucks, Rew, and Panter, so with such material an aggregation should be possible that will give the Veterans a hard run and draw a large crowd.

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends in the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavor.

ACTUAL WARFARE

Seen in Pictures to be Shown at "The Grand" New Year's Day and Saturday

The European War Pictures which commence a two days' run at the Grand on New Year's Day commencing with a matinee at 2.30 were seen by over 8,000 persons on the day of their first exhibition in Chicago, and according to newspaper accounts of their exhibition, it was found necessary to call for police aid to keep the people from blocking the street in the vicinity of the Studebaker Theater, where they were shown.

The pictures are of extraordinary interest and depict the violent scenes of actual warfare, with startling realism. They were taken by special arrangement with the Belgian Government on an understanding that half of the proceeds go to the Red Cross relief fund.

The reel starts with a panorama of Antwerp, taken from the cathedral tower, a few days before the city was captured by the Germans. The kaiser's men were bombarding the outer forts of the city with heavy siege guns.

The pontoon bridge over the River Scheldt, across which thousands of women and fatherless children crossed ahead of the German army, is shown in the picture.

The battles of Termonde, Alost, Malines and Lierre are flashed on the screen. The Belgian soldiers at Alost are first seen digging trenches in the beet fields, where they later meet the German attack. The firing of cannon and the devastating explosions of the German shrapnel in the ranks of the Belgian infantry flashes on the screen with terrible reality.

The women and children of Alost, with little bundles of clothing, clocks and bird cages, are shown retreating down a railroad track as the German shells are tearing the roofs from the houses only a few feet behind them.

HOCKEY PRACTICE.

St. Andrew's Church League hockey team will practise from 6.30 to 7.30 Thursday evening at the rink. All are requested to turn out.

TWO CALLS TO THE BOYS OF CANADA

are attending it, who cannot fail to derive immense benefit from the lessons that are being instilled.

The sessions for today were commenced at nine o'clock by Rev. R. Bamforth, B.A., of Port Perry who spoke on the benefits of Bible study and who pointed out the wonderful results accomplished by prayer.

Rev. Mr. Farewell and Mr. Taylor Statten were again the main speakers to the boys each taking up different phases of the efficiency tests for boys. Mr. Farewell's subject was "Decisions of Youth." He reviewed a great many incidents that had come into his life showing how he had come to enter Christian work. Although never in the foreign field Mr. Farewell stated that he was endeavoring to be a missionary in the home field. He urged boys to take advantage of opportunities to teach and study the Bible. He believed that boys at eighteen or nineteen years of age were plenty old enough to teach others. If a young man was compelled to spend his life at home he should undertake whatever work came to hand along missionary lines with faithfulness and energy.

As a speaker who holds the attention of boys it remained for Mr. Statten, the Dominion boys' secretary for Y.M.C.A. work, to again deliver a most instructive talk. Mr. Statten speaks as one boy to another. He had gone deeply into the study of boy life and the psychology of boys and speaks with a complete knowledge of the feelings of youth.

Mr. Statten showed the results obtained from an investigation of the lives of men who had lived a Christian life showing that some decided for Christ at six years; a large number at twelve and a larger number between twelve and twenty. The physcological time for a fellow to decide to live the Christian life was between twelve and twenty. A great influence in a boy's life was his mother. At six years a mother's influence waned slightly until the boy was fourteen and he began to feel great changes in his life, his voice began to change and he was unable to control his muscles. While mother's influence was apt to be low at that age it came back again fourfold. Father's influence began to be felt and was eagerly sought. Soon however fathers lost their influences as they became absorbed in business. The next stage the boy passed through was the revolutionary period. Some students of psychology claimed that a boy lived over the history of a nation in his own life.

Mr. Statten regretted that statistics showed that five out of every seven boys left school at fourteen. In Sunday Schools in Ontario fifty per cent. of employed boys dropped out, and thirty per cent. of school boys. A great many boys were making their great decisions away from the influence of the Sunday School. He referred to the greatest influence of all that comes into the life of a boy about nine or ten years of age, the influence of his boy companions. The gang instinct came in just about that age. At this time the hero worship period was strongly developed. Seventy-five per cent. of a boy's interest was in physical things.

Mr. Statten compared getting home to Jesus Christ with getting safely home in a baseball game.

Some mothers robbed their sons of their ability to fit in with other fellows because they made their lives too easy in their youthful days.

Mr. Statten said boys should cultivate an ability to entertain.

Referring to clean speech he commended the splendid stand taken in Havelock to fight against profanity.

Adjournment took place at 10 o'clock for dinner.

Franco-Belgian Forces Press Forward and Take Village After Bitter Fighting.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—Definite and important successes were recorded by the allies in their advance from Nieuport and in their attack on Muhlhausen—the two extremes of the battle-front—in official statements issued yesterday by the French War Office.

While the Franco-Belgian contingents pressing the Germans back along the Belgian coast were occupying St. Georges, in the environs of which there had been most bitter fighting, and establishing themselves firmly in that position two miles east of Nieuport, the French forces commanded by Gen. Pau, operating in upper Alsace, were investing Steinbach, north of the line between Cernay and Thann.

The success of Gen. Pau's operations is considered highly significant as showing the approach of the long-awaited weakening of the German defensive on this line.

It was at Steinbach only a fortnight ago that the Germans, by a terrific cannonade, followed by vigorous assaults of infantry brought from Uffholz to the east, forced the French to retire and evacuate all the ground they had gained in this particular region.

The new French howitzers now have made their appearance on the French line in this field, and it was by the overwhelming fire of these batteries that the French established their artillery supremacy, which led finally to their encroachment upon the German works, resulting in the successful investment of the town.

The Germans did not fall back upon their supporting lines without first giving a good account of themselves, and the fighting that preceded the drawing of the French circle of steel about Steinbach was more terrific.

The main attack was made from the north and west. The forces facing to the eastward occupied the attention of the main German front, while the flanking column worked around the hill to the west of north of the town and took possession of the ruins of the chateau to the northwest of the village, which had been wrecked by the gun-fire of the previous engagement. Strategically, the possession of this pyle is of great advantage to the French, for it permits of the mounting of heavy cannon which have been brought up to command the main batteries defending the town.

The following bulletin was issued by the French War Office yesterday:

"No incident of note has been reported from the front this evening.

"An official German communication, dated Dec. 26, and transmitted generally to all stations where wireless telegrams are copied, refers to the fact that it often happens that the shells used by the German field artillery do not explode. At the same time the statement is made that these shells were taken by capture from the French or the Belgians.

"The Germans, who daily have excellent opportunities to observe the efficacy of the French artillery, have now discovered a new quality in our guns. This is that they are dangerous only when operated by Frenchmen.

"Let us believe that this is only one more of the romantic tales painstakingly spread abroad by the German wireless system.

"In Belgium the village of St. Georges has been occupied by our troops, who have established themselves in this location.

"From the Lys to the Somme the enemy has bombarded our positions rather violently in the vicinity of Rebelle, at St. Aublin, at Le Quesnoy and at Pouchoir, to the northwest of Roye.

"There has been calm along the front between the Somme and the Argonne.

"We have gained a little ground in the Argonne, notably in the forest of La Grurie, in the forest of Bolante and in the forest of Courte Chausses.

"On the heights of the Meuse several German counter-attacks have been repulsed in the forest of Le Bouchot, which is northeast of Troyon.

"The forces of the enemy which had occupied our trenches in the vicinity of the redoubt in the burned forest to the west of Apremont have been driven out after three successive counter-attacks.

"In upper Alsace, following a violent engagement we are to-day closely investing Seinbach, and our forces have taken possession of the ruins of the Chateau, which is located at the northwest of this village."

PRINCESS PATS NEAR THE FRONT

TORONTO, Dec. 30.— A despatch from Salisbury Plain says:—

"Information has been received here that the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry are near the fighting line in France and expect to see action soon."

A Montreal despatch yesterday said that an order had been received there to recruit 120 officers and men for the Princess Patricia's Regiment. Men in the second contingent are to be given a chance to transfer

Royal Mail Steamer Goes Down With Cargo

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—A cablegram announcing the sinking at London of the Royal Mail steamship Trent was posted at the Maritime Exchange here yesterday. It was said that the Trent went down at her dock with her inward cargo aboard. Further details were lacking.

The Trent reached London Dec. 23, and it is believed here she docked at Tilbury, fifteen miles from London.

The Trent sailed from this port for Colon and London on Nov. 21. She is 410 feet long and has a beam of 50 feet and a depth of 23 feet. She was built in 1900.

FRENCH IN STEINBACH

One Half of Town is Occupied After Hand to Hand Fighting.

FURTHER ADVANCES ARE MADE

British Observers Think Serious Allied Offensive Will be Postponed Till Contingents of Kitchener's New Army Take the Field.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 31.—(Official Statement.)—"From the sae as far as the Aisne, yesterday passed with relative calm. There were artillery exchanges at some points. Near Rheims, the enemy during the night blew up two of our trenches and then delivered an attack, which our men repulsed.

"To the north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus, we occupied certain positions on the enemy's second line of defence.

"At a point to the north of Beausejour we also occupied some trenches. The enemy delivered a counter-attack, but was driven back. We then resumed the offensive and were successful in gaining some more ground. Further to the east, certain German forces which were advancing to deliver a counter-attack against us were dispersed with artillery fire.

"In the Argonne, in the vicinity of Fontaine Madame, we exploded a mine and occupied the resultant excavation, which gave us a slight advance.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle, in the region of the forest of Mortemart, about 150 yards of German trenches fell into our hands.

"In Upper Alsace French troops have entered the village of Steinbach and have occupied with house-to-house fighting one-half of the community."

LONDON, Dec. 31. — There are increasing indications in the opinion of British observers of events on the continent that a serious allied offensive movement against the whole German line in the western arena of the war will be postponed until such time as larger contingents of Lord Kitchener's new army take the field.

The losses of the Allies, sustained up to the present time, have been heavy in proportion to gains achieved, and it is understood that the various leaders unite in the opinion that sacrifices entailed by a general advance at this time would be too great.

VIEWS EXCHANGED ON AMERICAN NOTE.

LONDON, Dec. 31. — American Ambassador Page had an extended conversation this afternoon with Sir Edward Grey on the subject of President Wilson's note of protest against the detention of American shipping by British warships. As the note had been discussed by members of the British Cabinet yesterday, the foreign secretary was able to present to the ambassador th combined views of himself and his colleagues.

INSURANCE PREMIUM CUT IN HALF.

LONDON, Dec. 31. — The premium at Lloyds to insure against the outbreak of war between United States and Britain was cut in half today. Seven guineas per cent. is now asked as against fifteen guineas per cent. quoted when the contents of the American note of protest regarding American shipping first became known in England.

CAPTURE OF ST. GEORGE'S MADE POSSIBLE BY SELF-SACRIFICE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 31.—The Matin says the capture of St. Georges from Germans was made possible by the self-sacrifice of six French bluejackets who poled a punt with a three-inch gun along the canal to the assistance of a force of Belgians who, isolated on a piece of land surrounded by water, could do nothing against the Germans when driven from their trenches, but hiding in the houses of the village. As one bluejacket fell another took the punt pole, and so they ran the gauntlet of German fire until, as the last of the six fell mortally wounded, the punt grounded on the canal bank, where a French advance guard waited.

The Germans were quickly shelled out of the houses and surrendered to the Belgians.

CONSPIRACY IS REVEALED

Gigantic Plot to Supply Germany, Found in Italy

MILAN, Dec. 31. — Through the vigilance of the Ministers of Finance and Commerce in Rome a vast Austro-Germanic conspiracy has been unmasked. It was a plot with ramifications all over Italy, particularly in Naples, Genoa, Florence and Milan. Its purpose was to corner and smuggle contraband, foodstuffs, footwear blankets and warm material, from some small port in the Adriatic aboard Austrian steamers and sailing vessels. One of the principal firms concentrating its activities on this contraband traffic turns out to be a big German concern, which has its chief establishment at Bergamo. The haul made by the customs guards at Genoa consists of a $400,000 consignment of military clothing intended for transit to the belligerents of the central Empires.

Two Men Arrested.

ROME, Dec. 31. — In connection with the German contraband scandal, Dr. Fiore and Signor Castrignano, a customs officer, have been arrested. A search of Dr. Fiore's house by the police reveals that the had been in close touch with the German embassy and that the embassy officials had been sent here to organize contraband traffic. Several of these officials have been requested to leave Italy. Compromising documents have also been found in the houses of both the arrested men, also $750,000 sent from Germany for the purchase here of rice, which is largely replacing wheat in bread-making in Germany. Signor Castrignano attempted to bribe a customs official with the object of smuggling rice through Italy and offered him $30,000, representing a commission of 18 cents per quintal. This proves that this enormous quantity of rice was intended for Germany, and that the latter was prepared to pay a high price for it.

NEW YEAR'S GIFT TO QUEEN MARY

Women of Canada Might Co-operate With Needle-work Guild

The following communication, taken from Church Life, has to do with a question that will be of interest to the ladies of Peterorough:

We have received the following letter which we commend to the generosity of the women of Canada:

"Dear Sir: Will you kindly allow me, through your valuable medium, to ask the women of Canada to unite with Queen Mary's Needlework Guild in sending a New Year's present to Queen Mary, which shall be worthy of our great Dominion, and the magnificent work the women are doing. Will each woman in Canada who is working for the soldiers and sailors, send one garment during January, through Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, for her Majesty to distribute? This can be done very easily. Thanks to Lady Williams-Taylor, the Bank of Montreal has kindly instructed any of its branches to receive parcels on account of the Guild, and such parcels will be forwarded without cost to the donor. Persons residing in a town where there is no branch of the Bank of Montreal may forward parcels to the Bank of Montreal at 212 Peel street, Montreal, at the same time sending the bank the receipt for the charges paid, the amount of which will be returned to them. It will be my pleasure to supply material for one thousand garments, to those who are willing to give their work but have not material and patterns available. This material will make flannelette dresses for infants, woolen underclothes for children from two to eight years old, men's flannel shirts, socks and children's stockings. A post card sent to Miss Weller, assistant secretary, Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, St. Catharines, saying how many garments can be made, will result in material and directions being forwarded to the sender free. Queen Mary, by her unselfish devotion to duty, and splendid example, has endeared herself to the women of the Empire at this crisis, and such a New Year's gift as I have suggested would not only prove that the women of Canada are as ready to 'serve the Queen' as are our brothers to 'serve the King,' but also give to her Majesty the great pleasure of distributing useful garments to the soldiers and sailors, the refugees, the poor and needy, the waifs and strays. Hoping that the idea of a New Year's gift to Queen Mary from the women of Canada will meet with a hearty response, believe me,

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) C. WELLAND MERRITT,
Honorary Secretary."

FOOD SAFE FOR PRESENT

Germany Promises not to Seize Belgian Relief Supplies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — Germany has informed the United States she will not make requisitions for food supplies in Belgium "while the International Commission is sending in food, and for a reasonable time after the last delivery."

This concession was obtained from Germany personally by Ambassador Gerard. In reporting the act of Germany to the State Department Ambassador Gerard says that he, "acting not officially, but as one of the chairmen of the Belgian Relief Commission," called, with the Spanish Ambassador and the Netherlands Minister, on the German Under Secretary of State, Mr. Zimmerman. That official gave the requested assurance.

Mr. Gerard's despatch was very gratifying to officials of the State Department. While Mr. Gerard has reported the facts very briefly, it is understood here his argument to the German Government was that requisitions for food upon a people who had to be sustained by foreign aid could not be made with equity.

The Department officials are especially gratified over the guarantee that Germany will not make any requisition until "a reasonable time after the last delivery" of food.

This is interpreted to mean that Germany intends to let the Belgians recuperate.

The Belgian Minister yesterday filed with the State Department a protest against the requisitioning by German military authorities in Belguim of merchandise worth about 57,000,000 francs, and which the Germans have forwarded to Germany.

TEN MILLIONS FOR PENSIONS

An annual payment of pensions amounting to not less than ten million dollars a year, is one of the things the Canadian Government expects if the war lasts another year.

A pension act will be one of the measures which will be brought down by the Government at the approaching session.

So far, the Canadian Government has contracted for military supplies to the amount of $20,000,000. The articles contracted for include clothing, arms, ammunition, horses, vehicles. The articles number 187, and the separate contracts are 5,000 in number.

CHAIRMAN OF BOARD REPLIES TO COMMENTS OF REVIEW ON COMPENSATION ACT RATES

A few days ago the Review published an editorial in regard to the assessments under the Workmen's Compensation Act. The article dealt with local data. In answer to this article we have received a letter from Mr. A. W. Wright, Vice-Chairman of the Board, which is published below. This letter is important and interesting as it sets forth a point of view very clearly and all who are concerned in this Act should read it carefully. We may have something further to say along this line shortly.

Editor, Peterborough Review.
Dear Sir,—

Upon the whole no exception can be taken to the tone and temper of your article in the Review of Dec. 21st, a marked copy of which has been sent me, in which you comment upon the assessments under The Workmen's Compensation Act, and yet, if you will pardon my saying so, it fails to put the case with absolute accuracy for the reason that all the facts are not taken into consideration. You say "It appears that there has been a higher assessment than was necessary, and especially at a time like the present when many employers have difficulty in meeting their pay rolls alone, without considering their other expenses." Now the Act requires that compensation shall be paid to employees or their dependents for all accidental injuries sustained by workmen in the course of their employment no matter what may have been the cause of the accident and regardless of who may have been to blame for it. This compensation is to be paid out of an accident fund which the law requires the Board to collect from the employers. The Board is also required "At all times to maintain the Accident Fund so that......it shall be sufficient to meet all payments......as they become payable." To make certain of this, the Act directs that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall by an inspection of the books see to it that the Board does at all times maintain a sufficient accident fund. It is therefore the bounden duty of the Board to make such assessments as in their judgment will be sufficient to provide promptly for the payment of compensation. To make lower assessments in times of business stress—"at a time like the present" as you put it—with the thought of making up deficiencies when business shall improve, as you seemingly think ought to have been done, would be to fly in the face of the Act which specifically directs that the assessments shall be sufficient in amount "to prevent the employers in future years being unduly or unfairly burdened with payments which are to be made in those years in respect of accidents which have previously happened."

CONFERENCE AT AN END

Big Gathering of Young Men Wound up With Banquet

It was most fitting that a grand farewell banquet should conclude the boys' conference which wound up last night in George Street Methodist Church. Just what healthy young lungs are capable of producing in the way of songs and yells and cheers was persistently demonstrated. The old basement of George Street Methodist Church has never before contained such an aggregation of enthusiastic animated boys and young men who united in winding up the conference in a manner which the delegates present will always like to recall. Toasts and short speeches were the order of the evening following a glorious spread, and the amount of oratorical ability and after dinner speech making powers that was revealed surprised the whole gathering.

The boys even surprised themselves. The dinner was provided by the ladies of the Methodist churches of the city who made excellent hosts and quite won the hearts of the boys by their careful attention to their inner needs. In spite of everything that was said at the convention it became apparent that after all the only way to a boy's heart is reached through his stomach.

But amidst all the festivity, gaiety and good cheer a note of more solemn vein was struck when the boys who have enlisted for active service were remembered. A brief word of prayer was offered up in their behalf and short reference made to their courage and gallantry in volunteering to assist the motherland in her hour of need.

The presence of the George Street orchestra was greatly appreciated, these instrumentalists contributing several airs that set the boys in rollicking humor. Patriotic songs such as "Rule Brittania," and "Soldiers of the King" were sung with vigor and earnestness.

Then followed several toasts including toasts to "The British Empire," "Our Hosts," "The First Boys' Conference," Rev. Mr. Peever." The Methodist ministers present of whom there were almost twelve gave one minute speeches each aptly summing up their pleasure and interest in the conference and boys' work in suitable words. It was nearly nine o'clock before Mr. Taylor Stattten took charge of the meeting and gave them a final word of farewell and encouragement.

The boys will return home filled with renewed energy in the cause of leadership and Christianity, determined to put into practice many of the things learned.

In the afternoon most of the session was wound up with round table discussions on various phases of boy life and church problems and organized Bible class work.

The first boys' Methodist conference in Canada will always be remembered as one which witnessed great success and furnished inspiration to the one hundred and ninety boys who had the opportunity of taking it in.

Witness Of Fracas

Edgar Grose is to be placed on trial on a charge of murder on Saturday morning, when he will be given a preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Dumble. The police claim to have secured a very important witness whose evidence will materially assist the prosecution, but they refuse to divulge his name. It is understood this witness saw the fracas which occurred in the bar, following which O'Brien succumbed. Grose will be defended by Gordon and Widdifield. The prisoner has not been able to secure bail, and it is unlikely that such will be granted on such a serious charge. If the prisoner is committed for trial, it is probable that his counsel will apply to the judge for bail

RESPONSIBILITY FOR CUT IN WAGES

Is Shouldered by the City Engineer Who Gives the Reason

NOT THE MAYOR'S ACT

The rumor that Mayor Buller was responsible for a cut in the wages of laborers working for the city is absolutely without foundation. The Review interviewed City Engineer Parsons, and he stated that the matter of decreasing the wages of the laborers is dealt with entirely by him. He showed the reporter the pay sheets for last week, and the decreases in question are very few. Of the twenty men working on the outfall sewer, all receive $1.98 (the usual wage per day), with the exception of one, who is receiving $1.90 per day. On the ordinary work on the streets, fifteen of the men receive $1.90 per day and two are drawing $1.75. On M. Neary's gang all are receiving $1.98, and the same can be said of the twenty men working under Foreman Derry.

The City Engineer remarked that many of the men who are asking for the work cannot do it properly, and in cases where they were inefficient the wages were cut. Englishmen are asking for the work, and last Monday he sent eleven of them to one foreman. Three days passed and all of the men save two had quit, and their places were taken by Italians who will do the work.

FINANCE COMMITTEE WILL PAY ACCOUNT

At the meeting of the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon it was decided to pay the account for $2,506.50 to the Utilities Commission, less deductions for outages as reported by the chief of the fire department.

The committee also decided to have the city clerk write police magistrate Dumble, notifying him that where two physicians are required to examine a person charged with insanity, the finance committee insists that the city physician, Dr. McPherson, be one of them.

NORTH MONAGHAN CLAIMS FOR DROWNED AND DAMAGED ROADS

Reeve Howden of North Monaghan, has received the following letter from the Dominion member in reference to the drowned road claim, which speaks for itself:

Peterborough, Dec. 28th, 1914.
W. G. Howden, Esq.,
Reeve of North Monaghan,
Peterborough.

Dear Mr. Howden:—

You asked me what would likely be the treatment given the township in the matter of their claims against the Government for drowned and damaged roads. I can say that the township will be fairly and justly treated. I understand and have understood, from those appointed to investigate that the claims are largely just. I mean by this of course, that the Government regards the claims as claims to be fairly settled on as equitable and proper basis with due regard for the rights of the township and of the public treasury. The reason these things have not been settled long before in the plaintive words of the Minister of Railways and Canals in reply to my letter which I asked him about it was "Every dollar we get is commandeered for war purposes and we can't pay our just debts or any others just now. Even necessary repairs have to wait and unfortunately people who ought to be paid will have to wait also." The reason of this financial difficulty of course is that the Government cannot borrow money except for war purposes. British financiers will not lend them any except for war purposes and as a consequence they are forced to suspend peaceful and necessary works because they can't do anything else. It is to be hoped that the people will add further to their devotion to the cause by a little extra patience. I have left nothing undone nor have you as I can testify to bring this matter constantly before the Government and I firmly believe we would have had this whole question settled satisfactorily, months ago, if it had not been for the difficulty that has arisen in getting money.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1914

THE ICE PROBLEM ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.

THE ALUMINUM COMPANY of America, with headquarters at Massena, New York, controls the St. Lawrence Power Company, which obtains its power from the River St. Lawrence. In answer to a letter of inquiry from the Review, the superintendent says that they do have trouble with needle (frazil) and anchor ice, and they find that protection is secured by allowing the water of the stream to freeze over, except at one point, from which much anchor ice is guided by means of booms through sluice gates. He says this would overcome some of the difficulties which are realized in Peterborough, but the anchor ice does not all float. The protection afforded by surface ice seems to cut down the amount of anchor ice formed. He says anchor ice causes a great number of power houses trouble, and that they experience this, along with the others.

This letter is too short and contains too little information to be of much service, beyond one or two points. One is that sluice gates are used by the St. Lawrence Power Company to carry off anchor ice (and also frazil, we presume), and thus prevent it from clogging the bars of the rack in the forebay. The other is that they have the same problem there to contend with as exists in Peterborough. Whether they have any other methods of meeting the problem, whether it is serious, or causes them much delay, the letter does not say. The letter does not alter the contention of the Ottawa engineer that the vulnerable parts of a power plant should be protected, and it also bears out the statement of the chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, that one method of relieving the situation is by creating diverting currents in the forebay.

THE TORONTO STAR AND DISRAELI.

WE ARE PLEASED to note a confession by the Toronto Star to "some inkling" of the life of Disraeli, the great English Conservative statesman, in spite of a recent criticism in the Review. The Toronto newspaper's spirited reply is, however, capable of conveying more than one impression, but we are in the habit of estimating an article by the general tone and policy of the journal in question. The Star says it is "astonished" at "the outburst" in the Review, occasioned by its "innocent editorial." Those words, "astonished," "outburst," and "innocent editorial," are well chosen. Let us say that Liberal newspapers in Canada other than the Toronto Star have been given to writing "innocent editorials" that were evidently meant to be small Black Marias, fairly well disguised with wads of padding in the shape of innocence.

Be that as it may, the Star chose the commonest point of attacking Disraeli that is adopted ad nauseam by radicals and by all those who are incapable of impartial judgment. These persons pick out this little sentence from Disraeli's letter, that the colonies were mill-stones round Britain's neck, and use it without considering the context, i. e., the life of Disraeli which alters the meaning. We have had some experience of "Liberal" opinion of Disraeli, and to say it is unfair is to make use of a mild expression. It is surprising in some ways that an identical criticism of Gladstone, to which the Star referred, has so seldom been used of that statesman, especially when it has in many respects more force. Gladstone never had any great regard for the colonies when he offered to barter away Canada so easily, but Gladstone was never an Imperialist, Disraeli changed his mind, and hence gave his opponents scope to charge him with inconsistency.

Although the Star is astonished and claims to have written an innocent editorial, it seems to be sincere in what it says. It has taken a large view of Disraeli, for, undoubtedly, he is a great figure in history. But we do not agree with the Star in that what Disraeli learned afterwards and taught afterwards, has nothing to do with the fact that sixty years ago he expressed the belief that the colonies would soon be independent. We think just the reverse of that, particularly when radical and liberal quote what Disraeli said in 1852 as criticism of what he advocated in 1874.

Perhaps the difference of opinion between the Review and the Star on this point is not really fundamental. In one sense, what Disraeli did at one time has nothing to do with what he did at another, because questions of politics are solved by British people so as to meet present needs, and hence the Star stands condemned on its own argument for saying that Disraeli was not always a prophet (referring to the colonies), when Disraeli had himself refuted that saying by his own later policy.

The fact that Gladstone was not an Imperialist, and would have bartered away Canada for other much less potentially valuable domains does not detract from his real fame as the greatest of Britain's domestic ministers. The whole argument comes back to our original contention that broad historical criticism must have perspective, and, to be fair in criticizing what a man says or does regard must be had to his whole career. That is precisely what many do not do in speaking of Disraeli, and, if the Toronto Star did not do so, it came dangerously near the border line.

THE APPEALS OF THE CANDIDATES.

WE DESIRE respectfully to call the attention of the electors to the cards of the candidates for municipal honours that are appearing in the local newspapers. One can hardly give them a glance without a smile at the humour in them. These men are well-intentioned, but did it ever strike anyone what a monopoly the municipal candidates of every town and city have on economy and low taxes? These are throughout Canada the great economists, and what is the result? There has been a steady rise in the tax rate for a number of years. The rate has steadily risen, until such ridiculously high rates as 33 mills have been reached. These long-suffering communities have received a large measure of relief by equalizing the assessment through a tax commission or through some other means, but, this relief has not meant reduced expenditure. In some places candidates have tried to take an unfair advantage of the electors by telling them how they have reduced taxes. It is true that equalization of the assessment has meant reduced taxes in some individual cases, but it has not meant the economy talked about nor reduced expenditure. Still, every year along come the troops of competing servants of the people who preach economy and low taxes, and invariably end up by assenting to ever-increasing expenditure.

We do not wish to intimate that the expenditures undertaken by the City Council of Peterborough, or of any municipality in particular, have been unwise. In a new country like Canada, that is laying the foundations for great metropolitan centres, large expenditures cannot be avoided. Pavements and sidewalks must be built, as well as schools, parks, sewers, waterworks, fire stations, lighting systems, and various other necessities. These all require large sums of money that must come from the people. The building of these improvements means a policy of expenditure and rising taxation, and the advantages that accrue in various ways from these large expenditures have fully justified them.

Where economy comes in is in spreading out these expenditures so that they will be as light a burden as possible and bring advantages, not to sections, but to the whole community. Economy means getting a dollar's worth for a dollar, not spending fifty cents when a dollar should be spent. The first municipal candidate who refuses to speak of low taxes and comes out with a policy of expenditure and sticks to it, will be worthy of the highest honour this city can confer upon him. The people of Peterborough will reward frankness, we have no doubt. They will have to face heavy expenditures, if this city is to progress; it is the duty of candidates to tell the people something definite about their policy for the coming year, and leave those threadbare catch words, low taxes and economy, in the archives of the City Hall.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT would be well for the ratepayers to remember that Mr. B. F. Ackerman has given much valuable time to the duties of school trustee in the past, and, being a heavy ratepayer, his interests are the interests of all the people. He is a safe man to return to the Board of Education again.

Italy's Position.

(London News and Leader.)

Apart from the difficulty of a winter campaign against Austria, the position of Italy at the present time is one of considerable anxiety. The strain of the African war severely taxed the resources of a nation by no means rich, and the whole course of recent Italian politics is an eloquent attestation of the difficulties and dangers which have resulted. Trent and Trieste are no doubt long-coveted goals to which the way may at last seem clear; but the risks to a people situated as the Italians are must still be accounted great. Almost in itself the prospects would be sufficient to justify the cabinet's policy, for the present, at any rate, on purely Italian grounds, and it is on purely Italian grounds that the issue will be decided, even if, when the snow is off the passes, a different decision is in the end arrived at to that which now appears probable.

Guess Who?

(Collier's.)

Bismarck said in 1891: "I pity the young man; he is like the foxhound that barks at everything, that smells at everything, that touches everything, and that ends by causing complete disorder in the room in which he is, no matter how large it may be." Without naming any more names, one may quote also Wolf Von Schierbrand: "He possesses a smattering of nearly everything in the wide domain of human knowledge, due to his quick perception and his retentive memory. If fate had not placed him on the imperial throne, he would have had the stuff for a good journalist in him. But his often fatal mistake is to assume that he knows everything; that the little he has been able to pick up about the sciences, military lore, literature, and art, is all there is worth knowing about these matters, and that he must direct and guide every subject that comes under his personal observation." The subject of this paragraph is not, however, to be dismissed as a superficial man. Risking lese-majeste, he is the most gifted anachronism of the twentieth century.

MAN WHO SUPPORTED YOU.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Much has been said in reference to which is the man to support at the mayoralty election on Monday next but in my mind the man who by sheer merit deserves that support is Mr. Wm. Buller who acted a friend to the workingman when they wanted one. It was when the street paving was about to commence. A rumour went around that a large number of Italians were to be sent to do the work. I went with others to see the mayor who went immediately to the foreman with the result that influx of Italian labor was stopped. On behalf of the deputation I thanked him through the columns of the local press. He again showed his interest in labor when he went to no endless trouble in getting the money through bonds so as to get the work completed when work was badly wanted. I have no hesitation in saying Mr. Buller has been the friend of the workingman and I do hope they will show their appreciation of his efforts on their behalf by voting for him on Monday next.

ALD. GREEN AND SHORT-TERM DEBENTURES.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—I see by your issue of today's date that Alderman G. W. Green claims credit for having originated the idea of the issue of short-term debentures, which were so useful to the city, and of such useful aid to the deserving unemployed.

Now, while I am quite willing to give Alderman Green all credit due him, I am not prepared to sit quietly and allow him to claim what is not his by any right. The bald facts regarding the issue of short-term debentures are these: Mayor Buller was the first to propose this step, and before the Council or any member of it had ever discussed the matter, Mayor Buller personally had instructed Solicitor Gordon to prepare a form of short-term debentures. This form was prepared by the city solicitor, was submitted by Mayor Buller to the Council, approved by them, and issued.

So much for the debenture issue for which Mr. Walter Green can claim no personal credit whatever.

Now for what Alderman Green did originate. Had his claim been that he was the originator of lower wages for the worker, I could have endorsed his claim most heartily, as he was the first employer of labour in Peterborough to cut the wages of his moulders, and further deserves the credit of being the only alderman to advocate that the city of Peterborough treat its labourers as he had dealt with his own. I like fair play. Let us claim credit only for what we do; not try to make capital for ourselves out of the honest work of others.

WEST WARD.

A FINE WORKINGMAN'S REPRESENTATIVE.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—In reference to the letter in last night's Review signed by "Workingman" stating that there should be one lawyer on the Board of Education, I take exception, and I should very much like to have a photograph of that workingman. What is really required on the board is someone who is not looking for a means to advertise himself at the expense of the ratepayers.

It has occurred to me that there is a question whether Mr. Gordon, while holding the position of city solicitor, can legally sit on the board of education, in case he is elected, and I should like to have the opinion of some disinterested legal gentleman on this point.

If Mr. Gordon should, by some fluke, get elected, have we any guarantee that he would not resign on the first favourable opportunity to secure some better-paying job, as he did when in the Council, and thus put the city to the expense of another election? A fine economist, I wist, he is.

Yours,
CITIZEN.

KEEP CLEAR.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—The letters in your paper endorsing G. N. Gordon and abusing the other candidates are not likely to help that gentleman. A city solicitor has no more business than a lawyer for any other corporation to run for a public place. We all know what pressure can be brought to bear, and it's entirely wrong for a city or county solicitor to put himself where maybe he will have to choose between his job and his duty as a public man.

Yours, etc.,
KEEP CLEAR.

MAKE THE TERM TWO YEARS.

Editor Review,—

It seems to me Mayor Buller's only plea for re-election is the two years' term as an elector. I would ask why he should have a second term. It has not been customary in all cases that being his only plea I think it a very lame one. If the ratepayers wish a second term why not elect him for two years instead of one. Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours,
A RATEPAYER.

WHAT ALD. DUNCAN HAS DONE.

Editor Review.

Dear Sir,—Re Alderman Duncan's letter in last night's issue of the Examiner I regret to see him disregarding his nomination speech, as to personalities being used. This is poor politics and quite unnecessary in this campaign.

Mayor Buller can more fittingly call himself the people's candidate than Alderman Duncan can tack on his label of the efficiency candidate. There is little efficiency in our Works Department, if the people would ever stop to consider what we get for the enormous expenditure. Alderman Duncan has for several terms figured as Chairman of this department, where we have a very high salaried inside staff and poorly paid workmen on the outside.

Alderman Duncan loaded an incinerator on the city which is practically worthless. Built on saw-dust and tomato cans it now, in its falling down condition, takes an enormous quantity of hard-wood to keep enough life in its shattered frame to burn the few peelings and quantity of waste-paper that is collected. We have this year gone back to paying an enormous rental for enough ground to bury, as in days of old, Dead Carcasses, Night Soil, etc., that it was guaranteed to handle.

Alderman Duncan's department is laying a sewer in the south section of the city today that is costing, I am informed, four times the estimate. These and many other things lead me to believe that he is not the efficient candidate and in thinking these things over I believe I will vote for Mayor Buller to finish out the usual term of office.

Yours truly,
"One Who Pays His Taxes in Peterborough.
Peterborough, Dec. 31, 1914.

PREFERENCE FOR FOREIGNERS.

To the Editor: Dear Sir,—The letter in your paper last night signed "Workingman Voter" is a rather mean attempt to injure me in the eyes of English ratepayers. He wrote: "As for getting value for money expended, does he mean by that to employ Italians in preference to British subjects? Rumour this summer said he stated that Italians were far better than Englishmen." The insinuation is so unfair it scarcely deserves a reply, but to set aside all doubt, you would oblige me by publishing this statement.

One of the foremen on sewer work reported to the engineer that some English and Canadian workmen would not work with Italians, and the foreman stated his opinion that they were not as good for that kind of work as the Italian labourers. I repeated this in council, and since then "rumour" has twisted it to make it appear that it was my own statement. You know that the engineer engages the men, and the foreman's duty is to see that the work is carried out. Personally I do not know the labour qualities of the men who put down the sewers, for I have never followed them as foreman, nor as city engineer. That is outside the duties of the chairman of the Board of Works.

I do know that the general opinion is that both English and Italian labourers as a class are good workmen, but I know nothing of the merits of the particular case which I related in Council. I simply told the members of the council the explanation that had been given to me.

I feel sure that as far as the number of workmen is concerned there were more English labourers employed during the past year while I was chairman of the Board of Works than there was during either of Mayor Buller's years in that position. In the first place, there was more city work going on, and, secondly, there were more Englishmen thrown out of their regular employment, and rather than be idle many of them found jobs in the city's work. I am not trying to take any particular credit to myself in this regard. Circumstances had possibly as much to do with that condition as I did. The mayors that I have been in the Council with all engaged Italian labour, but in good years the Englishmen had better employment and did not need to fall back on city work. But there have been Italians who have worked for years at sewer and water work, and there is positively no reason why any workingman should attempt to injure me now by hinting that I would discriminate against Englishmen.

Our Italian ratepayers who have their homes here and are paying taxes deserve consideration, and they have received it as far as I know, and I believe they will continue to receive the same treatment under future mayors. It is only fair to them that they should be so treated. However, I do not want an untrue rumour to spread, and that I should be blamed for a statement which I gave as an explanation coming from a sewer foreman, I am making this appeal to the common-sense of the ratepayers. This rumour is both baseless and senseless. I did not make the statement from which the rumour arose, and surely it will not be believed that I "stated that Italians were far better than Englishmen."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
GEORGE H. DUNCAN.

MAKING A MAN OF HIM

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

"Who is the ladylike young man visiting you, Mrs. Crabtree?"

"My nephew."

"He looks as if he had come in a bandbox. What's his name?"

"Albert."

"What are you going to do with him, put him in a store window to show his clothes?"

"No. I brought him here to try to make a man of him. He is my brother's son. His father died when he was a baby, and he has been brought up by a doting mother. He had a nurse till he was fourteen, then a governess. Since then his mother has not been willing to trust him with any one but herself, and she is the worst caretaker he has ever had."

"Poor fellow! I have known cases like that."

"His father was a splendid man, and Bert is as like him as possible at his age except, while the father was taught to rely on himself, the son is handicapped by a mother who wishes to make a milksop of him."

"'As the twig is bent the tree's inclined.'"

"That's it exactly. You can dwarf a man as well as a tree. Now, Bess, I wish you to help me make a change in the boy."

"I? How can I do anything about it?"

I suggested a plan by which she could make a start in Bert's reformation. He had never associated with any one but girls, and I knew that if I turned him at once over to the boys they would soon send him back to me. I proposed to initiate him through a girl who was more of a boy than boys usually are. There was something else I didn't tell Bess. In order to get Bert away from his mother I told her that I would make him my heir. But he was to remain with me so long as I lived.

I warned Bess to go slow at first with Bert, but she didn't heed the warning. She took him out in a canoe, upset it (on purpose) and was obliged to swim ashore, holding him up, for he couldn't swim a stroke. The feat was difficult, and it sobered the girl. She didn't upset him any more, but she forced him to learn to swim.

His next lesson was in horseback riding. Her first lesson in this was more gentle than her swimming lesson. At any rate, she gave it on turf where there was no danger of killing him when he took a tumble, which he did every few minutes during his first lesson. Bess was encouraged from the fact that when thrown he scrambled back on to his horse without being urged to do so.

When winter came such sports as swimming, horseback riding and the like gave place to skating and skiing. Bert put on skates, which he had never used, hobbled down to the ice, his feet went up into the air, and he went down on the back of his head. But he was true grit and, getting up, struck out, fell again and kept it up, Bess alternately laughing and encouraging him. Then she skated with him, and doubtless he found that quite pleasant.

I don't claim that Bert made a first class swimmer or skater or rider. To do these well one must begin very young. Indeed, it was not my purpose to make him proficient in any of these. What I wished was to draw him away from the feminine tastes his mother, his governess and his nurse had implanted in him. He developed a taste for manly amusements, and this drew him toward manliness generally. Bess took charge of him when he was seventeen, and when she had had him a year he would occasionally break away from her for companions of his own sex. Within two years there was not a vestige of feminism in him. Then he went to college, and since he had developed physically, coming as he did of brawny stock, he surprised us all by becoming a candidate for and winning a place on the university football team.

When his college won the championship during his senior year Bert, who was very active as well as strong, was one of the principal men on the team, and it was he who gained the points that gave them the game. I took Bess to see the game, and she was not only very much interested in it, but very proud of one whom she had converted from a Miss Nancy to a sterling man.

I had observed that this training of my nephew had been attended with that of which I by no means disapproved. It was plain that the two had become seriously attracted to each other. The day Bert was graduated from college he came to me and told me that he and Bess were engaged. Bess came to me as soon as he had left me to see for herself how I viewed the matter.

"Well, Bess," said I, "you have made a man out of a milksop and"—

"He never was a milksop!" she interrupted angrily.

"Anyway, I suppose you deserve him and something else besides—a pecuniary consideration."

"What do you mean by that?" she asked, bridling.

I told her that when Bert had come to me I had promised his mother to make him my heir. "I will do better than that," I added. "I will settle a fourth of my fortune on you and him jointly now."

Bess sprang into my arms.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson I.—First Quarter, For Jan. 3, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Judg. ii, 7-19. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, Hos. xiv, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The lessons of this year begin with five studies in the book of Judges, showing the failure of Israel, God's intervention and man's faithlessness. Every deliverer whom God raised up was in some sense suggestive of the great Deliverer, the Lord Jesus Christ, and each one wrought in the power of the Holy Spirit. Joshua tells of the entrance of Israel into the promised land and its subjugation and division among the tribes, ending with Joshua's farewell appeal to Israel to fear the Lord and serve Him in sincerity and in truth and the determination of the people so to do (Josh. xxiv, 14, 24). One of his grandest farewell words was when he reminded the people that not one thing had failed of all the good things which the Lord had spoken (Josh. xxiii, 14). See the same blessed testimony in I Kings, viii, 56, and let each one lay it to heart for his own special comfort.

The section assigned us for this day's lesson is a concise epitome of the book of Judges, telling of Israel's persistent turning away from God and of His great patience with them. David summarized the record in these words: "Many times did He deliver them, but they provoked Him with their counsel and were brought low for their iniquity. Nevertheless He regarded their affliction when He heard their cry" (Ps. cvi, 43, 44; lxxviii, 38). Paul summarized Joshua and Judges in these words: "When He had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan He divided their land to them by lot. And after that He gave unto them judges about the space of 450 years until Samuel the prophet" (Acts xiii, 19, 20).

The first chapter of Judges tells how tribe after tribe had failed to drive out the people of the land as they had been commanded, and our lesson chapter opens with the Lord's reproof for this sin, saying: "Ye have not obeyed my voice. Why have ye done this?" (Verse 2.)

Our lesson begins by telling us that while Joshua lived and also during the lifetime of the elders that outlived Joshua the people served the Lord. The Lord and even one man can lead a host of people in the right direction. Think of the worldwide testimony to the God of Daniel by the faithfulness of himself and his three friends. See II Chron. xvi, 9, and desire above all things a whole heart for Him.

The next lesson verses tell of the death and burial of Joshua, and these three verses (7-9) are identical with Josh. xxiv, 29-31. When the Spirit repeats words He thus asks special attention to them. The words that specially hold me are "Joshua the servant of the Lord" and "The people served the Lord" and make me wish to appropriate more fully the beautiful heart words "Whose I am and whom I serve" (Acts xxvii, 23). Joshua ends with the burial of two other bodies, those of Joseph after so long a time and Eleazar, the son of Aaron.

Bodies are buried, but people go on living better without them (if redeemed) until the time of the resurrection bodies. How pitiful to read of "a generation which knew not the Lord" (verse 10), and they the descendants of a people for whom the Lord wrought as He had never wrought for any other nation! They forsook the Lord God of their fathers, did evil in His sight and worshiped the idols of the nations which should have been destroyed by them, for the Lord had said, "Thou shalt make no covenant with them nor shew mercy unto them, * * * for thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God, * * * a special people unto Himself above all people that are upon the face of the earth" (Deut. vii, 2-6). Such sowing brings sad reaping according to lesson verses 14, 15; chapter iii, 5-8, 12, 13, and records in chapters following of similar turnings away from God.

A very odd thumbs and toes story of sowing and reaping is found in chapter i, 6, 7. The principle always stands, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap" (Gal. vi, 7). Nevertheless the Lord raised up judges, who delivered them, for the Lord was with the judge (verses 16, 18; chapter iii, 9, 15). We should think that the Lord would grow weary of forgiving and delivering a people whom He knew would after a time commit the same sins again, but He is the same Lord who told Peter to forgive until seventy times seven, or until the end of Daniel's seventy-sevens, which means the coming of the kingdom.

They would not hearken unto their judges; they turned quickly out of the way; they ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way (verses 17, 19). Long afterward it was written of them, "Their doings will not suffer them to turn unto their God" (Hos. v, 4, margin).

In the days of their kings they mocked the messengers of God and despised His words and misused His prophets (II Chron. xxxvi, 16), and when the Messiah came in the fullness of time they crucified Him. Yet He said: "How often would I, * * * but ye would not." "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but in Me is thine help." "I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely" (Matt. xxiii, 37; Hos. xiii, 9; xiv, 4).

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

STEAMER IS ON THE ROCKS

Ship With Supplies for France is Wrecked

YARMOUTH, N.S., Dec. 31.—The steamer Navarre, a St. John, N. B., ship, bound for France with a full cargo of hay, oats, automobiles and army supplies for the British, struck on Holmes Island, in the Bay of Fundy, Tuesday night, and probably will be a total loss.

The steamer went on the ledges during a fog and the heavy sea pounded her hard on the rocks, which pierced the hull. The engine room is full of water, and some of the holds are flooded. The Government steamer Aberdeen and tugs from Yarmouth are alongside to salvage some of the cargo. The crew was still on board when word came from the ship early last evening.

The Navarre registers 2,848 tons, and was under charter to the British Government.

Dum-dums Don't Fit Rifles.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — The sample of dum-dum bullets put in evidence by the German ambassador, Count Bernstorff, as having been used by British troops fighting in Belgium and northern France, it was learned yesterday, do not fit any British rifle. It is also declared that the sample dum-dums do not even fit the bore of any military rifle in use by either French, Belgian, Russian or the German and Austrian forces.

This Government has evidence that the German samples are sporting bullets, capable of being used only in big game rifles.

They are believed to be the product of an American manufacturer.

To Concentrate In Chatham?

CHATHAM, Dec. 31.—Part of the third contingent will probably be trained in Chatham. In response to a request from the Militia Department at Ottawa, a meeting of the Board of Trade was held yesterday afternoon and it was decided to offer every inducement in order to have the men come here. Accommodation has been asked for 500 men, and the local Board of Trade is ready to provide everything they will need.

To Shut Door of Belgium.

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 31. — (Via London.)—Commencing Jan. 1, the German administration in Belgium intends to close the Belgian borders against all comers. No more passports will be issued or recognized except the special military pass.

The cause for this unusual precaution is not known here, but it is believed to have been ordered to prevent espionage.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 30.—Trading was quiet on the grain market, a holiday feeling being around, with prices showing easier after opening, due to some profit-taking. The cash situation was unchanged, offerings were few and demand about equal. The inquiry for No. 2 C.W. oats was good.

Receipts are falling off, the inspections on Tuesday totalling 118 cars, as against 660 last year.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and, as the prices bid were higher, sales of a few loads were made at 51s for No. 1 northern and 50s for No. 2 northern, which are the highest prices paid so far on this crop. The local trade in coarse grains continues quiet, but the tone of the market is firm and prices show no change.

There continues to be steady demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, and a few sales of small lots were made. The tone of the local market is firm, but the volume of business doing is small. Demand for millfeed is good.

A fair trade is passing in butter, and the undertone of the market is strong, with prices tending towards a higher level. Cheese is quiet, but firm. Eggs active and stronger.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 354 cattle, 2166 hogs, 133 sheep and lambs and 90 calves.

The common and medium grades of cattle sold at unchanged values.

There was little or nothing doing in stockers and feeders.

Fred Armstrong was the only buyer of milkers and springers.

Veal calves sold at steady prices.

Sheep and lambs and calves were unchanged at Tuesday's values.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7.75 and $8 weighed off cars and $7 40 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—At the C. P. R. live stock market, the supply of cattle was small, but it was ample to fill all requirements, as demand was limited, as butchers had already provided for their wants for the balance of this week. There were no good cattle on the market, and the stock offered sold at from $4 to $6, cows at $3.75 to $4, and bulls at $5 to $6 per cwt.

The trade in small meats was also quiet, owing to the limited supplies offered, for which there was a fair demand, and sales of lambs were made at $7 to $8, and sheep at $4.50 to $5.00 per cwt. The quality of the calves was poor, and brought from $3 to $10 each. A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices were 25c per cwt. up, owing to the light offerings. Selected lots sold at $8 to $8.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

LOSSES IN THE EAST.

Austro-German Forces Have Had Casualties Numbering 600,000.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 31. — According to a statement in The Sviet, the process of attrition is wasting away the energy of the enemy very rapidly. The Germans and the Austrians together have lost 600,000 men since Nov. 9. It is estimated that the force with which the Russians had to deal numbered 2,500,000, of which 1,500,000 were Germans. The Germans are believed to have suffered most heavily in the battles at Strykof and on the Bzura. Some of their companies have been reduced to thirty men.

It is supposed that on the Pilica and the Bzura the Germans had twenty corps engaged. Their losses here have been between 150,000 and 200,000. Their attacks on the rivers were so reckless and abandoned that they lost more heavily than on any other front of equal length since the war began.

Port Arthur Hears Borden.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 31.—Before the largest audience ever gather in Port Arthur and with thousands turned away half an hour before the time for speaking to commence, Sir Robert Borden last evening gave an address on the war.

"We are developing the resources of the Empire," the Premier said, and as Germany has failed in her first effort to sweep her way to victory, the ultimate result is beyond doubt."

A decree was published yesterday abrogating the order issued by the French Government on September 2 transferring the Bank of France from Paris to Bordeaux.

The Foreign Office says the reports in circulation that Japanese troops have landed at Vladivostock or at any other place, on their way to Europe, are absolutely untrue.

AUSTRIAN DOUBLE ATTACK PROVED FAILURE IN GALICIA

Petrograd Now Believes the Turning Point has Been Reached in the Battle of the Polish Rivers---Russians are Regaining the Initiative and Germans in Centre Poland are Exhausted

LONDON, Dec. 31. — Since the Russian defeat of the Austrians in Galicia, which, while not irreparable, is likely to have a marked effect on the whole Austro-German campaign in the east, there has been no important development on either front.

With the defeat of the Austrians in Galicia and south Poland and the retirement of the Germans across the Bzura, Petrograd believes that the turning point has been reached in the battle of the Polish rivers. The chief fighting is now taking place on the Pilica, where the Germans are still on the offensive and have brought up big guns.

The losses in these battles have reached enormous figures in dead, wounded and prisoners, and must have been largely added to by disease, for the men fought under dreadful climatic conditions and in mud, for which Poland is notorious.

A despatch from Lemberg says:—

"The simultaneous attacks of the Austrians in western Galicia and from the Carpathians proved to be a complete failure. Unofficial reports reaching here state that the losses of the Austrians were enormous, and that the Russians have taken as many as 50,000 prisoners, including many Germans.

"Trainloads of guns and other war booty pass daily through Lemberg."

The correspondent of The Daily News at Petrograd telegraphs:—

"The destruction of the enemy's combination in the southern campaign is enabling the Russians to regain the initiative and inflict on the German-Austrian line the break which was projected of the Nida and the Vistula, just inside the southern border of Poland, in Galicia.

"All the Austrian forces below this line have been so scattered that the Hungarians alone have to face Russia's southernmost army. Columns moving across the eastern Beskiten into Hungary often are entirely without artillery, which they have lost or abandoned in the hurried retreat.

"The main German forces in central Poland are awaiting a new scheme of operations. They have evacuated Opoczno and remain comparatively passive from exhaustion. To the north of the Bzura, Field Marshal von Hindenburg is expected to try some other shock attack.

"The new line of defence works being built are equipped with heavy artillery and deep infantry trenches on the hills. This position is six miles behind the previous outer defences."

Murder Caused Insanity.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Dec. 31. — At an inquest into the death of Antonio Chipperone, husband of the woman who drowned her two children about a month ago, yesterday afternoon, by Coronto Ranney, the finding was: "That Antonio Chipperone came to his death by his own hand during a fit of temporary insanity." His wife and only remaining child will be sent back to Italy.

To Restrict Wheat Export.

DELHI, India, Dec. 31. — (Via London.)—In view of the abnormal prices of wheat the India Government decided to restrict exports to 100,000 tons of wheat, including flour, from Dec. 1 to March 31, 1915.

The exports will be confined to British possessions, in which a strong demand for the cereal exists.

CARD OF THANKS

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to thank the ratepayers of the ward for the proof of confidence implied in my re-election by acclamation.

I assure I will most earnestly try to continue to deserve your confidence and to serve you and the whole city as well to the best of my ability.

I shall be glad if the ratepayers will tell me from time to time their thought of what should be done. Bearing in mind always that the interests of the city as a whole are greater than that of a section. But I wish to know what the ward wants. No two sections of the city have the same interests. But my special care shall be those of Centre Ward.

Yours very respectfully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

To the Electors of the Township of Smith:—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Having been honoured with the nomination for Deputy Reeve of the Township of Smith, I have accepted the nomination and respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The ratepayers have always considered it wise to have a representative in each district of the Township and as at present three of the districts will be represented by the election by acclamation of three councillors, but Bridgenorth and the Communication Road, which is one of the leading roads to the city will not be represented unless you endorse this same policy and elect me your Deputy Reeve.

Hoping that my three years' service in the council has met with your approval, and wishing one and all a Happy New Year, I remain,

Your obedient servant,

J. A. JOBE.

Sentenced to Death

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 31—A Berlin private message says that the German Supreme War Tribunal has sentenced a British war prisoner, Lonsdale, to death for assaulting, it is stated, a German officer at the Doberitz concentration camp. Lonsdale in the first instance was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, but the military authorities' appeal for a sentence of capital punishment has been successful. Lonsdale, it is admitted, did not hurt the officer, and the prison guard beat him off.

An Ornithological Curiosity.

Jane Ann had called, on her afternoon out, to see her friend Matilda. The latter's mistress had just purchased a parrot, and Jane Ann was much interested in the bird. "Birds is very sensible," she said; "you kin learn them anything. I used to work for a lady that had a bird in a clock, an' when it was time to tell de time of day it used to come out an' say 'Cuckoo' jest as many times as the time was!" "Go 'long! You don't say so!" said Matilda incredulously. "Yes!" replied Jane Ann. "And the most wonderful part was that it was only a wooden bird too!"—London Globe.

Discredits Story of Treason.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31. — Silas H. Carpenter, registrar of aliens here, said yesterday morning that while he had heard stories of the railroading of Germans and Austrians out of Canada at the border, he had absolutely no proof about it, and was confident it was not being done in Montreal.

Abolish Duty on Flour.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 31.—(Via Amsterdam.)—The German administration in Belgium, to render less difficult the maintenance of the civil population, has abolished the duty on flour made from grain imported by the American commission for relief in Belgium.

This duty was the same as that imposed in normal times, and was added to the arbitrary price of flour established by the German authorities.

Candidate in North Ward

For Alderman North Ward

To the Electors of the North Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated for re-election as alderman, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. The past two years have given me a knowledge of the city's affairs and have placed me in touch with present conditions. I have endeavored, while your representative in Council, to exercise care in the expenditures of the city's money, recognizing that present conditions call for careful management, and, if re-elected, will continue this policy in the future. I have lived in this city all my life, and any interests I have are here; consequently I have a deep interest in the progress, improvement and economical management of the city's affairs.

CANDIDATE IN NORTH WARD

For Alderman North Ward

TO THE RATEPAYERS:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated as a candidate for a seat in the Council for Ward No. 4, I would solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. Having had five years' experience in the Council, and having been chairman of the Power and Property Committees, I feel that I could be of benefit to the ratepayers.

When I left the council five years ago the rate was 19½ mills and now at the present time it is 26 mills.

I am in favor of employing our own citizens on all city work; am not in favor of letting contracts of city work to outsiders. I believe in paying our own people a good fair wage. I think the affairs of the city could be managed in a more economical manner than they have been. Our taxes are becoming burdensome, and it behooves every member of the Council to economize and get the best value for the money expended, and, if elected, I will use my very best efforts to serve the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and will be as careful of the ratepayers' interests as I would be of my own.

Wishing you all a Prosperous and Happy New Year.

HUMBLE TURKEY

Porte is Told to Release British Consul at Once

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily News said yesterday:

"I am informed that at to-morrow's Cabinet Council a decision will be reached in connection with the incident at Hodeida, which is still in abeyance. The Government's patience is exhausted, and Turkey has been peremptorily notified that the British consul at Hodeida must be released immediately and that the gendarmes who broke into the Italian Consulate be punished.

"Turkey has been warned that no excuse for further delay will be accepted. A satisfactory reply is demanded within two days."

HOLDING AUSTRIA.

Germany Striving To Prevent Ally From Reprisals on Italy.

ROME, Dec. 31.—Italy's momentous move of occupying Avlona and the surrounding hill country has aroused intense irritation and discontent in Austria-Hungary. A Secolo correspondent telegraphing from the Austrian frontier says that the Germans have intervened in Vienna in an endeavor to prevent a possible Austro-Italian incident at this delicate juncture. Count Berchtold, the Austrian Chancellor, had a lengthy conference with Emperor Francis Josef on the matter, and on returning to the Foreign Office the count at once sent for the Italian ambassador, who, it is reported, was requested to procure from Rome a fresh statement of Italy's declaration in October last that the latest move was merely a police measure for the time being applied in virtue of the decisions of the London Conference.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—There is as yet no confirmation of the report that a German army corps has been sent to the Italian frontier, but it is reported from several sources.

If your neighbor is economical she is stingy, and if generous, extravagant; so what is the poor creature to do?

CHAIRMAN OF BOARD REPLIES

A Unique Act.

It is not contended that experience may not show that the present assessments are in some instances too high and in others too low. The Act is a new one; it is unique, there being no other precisely like it; its provisions and the scale of compensation it provides are more favorable to the workmen than those contained in and provided for by the Compensation Acts in operation elsewhere. The experience, therefore, of such States as have Compensation Laws gives no absolutely reliable data upon which the Board can build, though their experience does afford valuable assistance. It would be even more futile to place any dependence upon the exprience of Employers' Liability Companies for there is absolutely no similarity between the old law under which they operated and the present Act. To add to the difficulty and to make absolute accuracy of the first assessment rates something scarcely to be hoped for, there is not available in Ontario, nor yet in any Canadian Province or American State, with the possible exception of Ohio, anything really helpful in the way of carefully compiled official information as to the nature and causes and probable frequency of accidents in the various industrial employments. The most the Board could do was to consider duly and carefully all the information available, including such as might be gathered from the experience of States operating compensation laws, apply this information as intelligently as they could to industrial conditions in Ontario and then fix assessments which in their judgment will, as nearly as may be, provide the Accident Fund which the Acts commands them to collect, and this they have conscientiously tried to do.

Your belief that the assessment is too high is frankly based upon a comparison of what employers are called upon to pay under the new law with the sums they formerly paid by way of premiums to Employers' Liability Companies. Instancing your own case, you say your assessment "is practically double what it cost under the Employers' Liability Scheme." Evidently, you give no consideration to the compensation which the new law provides as compared with the liability against which the liability companies insured you. Insurance under the Employers' liability scheme covered only the liability of employers under the old law. There was no liability unless the injured workman or his dependants could prove that the accident was due to the employer's negligence; none if it could be shown that it was due wholly or in part to the workman's own neglect; none if the act of some fellow workman had contributed to the accident. If it could be shown that the injury was due to the ordinary hazard of the employment, the old law presumed that the workman had voluntarily assumed the risk, and there was no liability. The new law takes away all these defenses, and compensation must be paid for all injuries unless solely due to the workman's own serious and wilful misconduct, and must be paid even in such case if the injury results in serious disablement or death. Do not leave out of consideration, either, the fact that the liability companies, besides the defenses which the old law placed in their hands, had another very effective guarantee against having to pay the losses against which they had insured their clients, at least against having to pay in full. Very few workmen could afford the risk and expense of law suits and the settlement of claims for ridiculously small amounts was the rule rather than the exception. Besides all this the liability companies only insured up to $1500. There is no such limit under the new Act—indeed a case could arise in which an injured workman would be entitled to receive $1,100 per year during the balance of his life. To say that an assessment necessary to meet the requirements of the new law is too high or a "hold up" as you quote one of your informants as saying because that assessment is two or three times as high as the rates of the liability companies under the old law, is like saying that a tailor is extortinate because he charges two or three times as much for a suit and overcoat as a rival charges for a waistcoat.

Rates Compared.

It may not be amiss nor without some local interest in your town if I give a few figures in connection with the assessment. Take your own business, our rate is 50; in Ohio, Washington, Michigan and New York it is respectively .20, .22, .55 and .78. Peterborough has a world wide reputation for its canoes. The Ontario rate is .50. In Ohio, Michigan, Washington and New York it is .55, 1.10, 1.42 and 1.61 respectively. Peterborough also has an enviable reputation for the excellence of its oatmeal On this wholesome cereal, the Ontario rate is one-tenth of one per cent. higher than the Washington rate; it is slightly lower than the Ohio rate; it is four-tenths of one per cent. lower than the Michigan rate and just a little more than one-third of the New York rate.

Let me repeat, it is not contended that the Board has succeeded in fixing rates that will in all cases be found to be exactly what they ought to be—no more and no less—but at least an honest effort has been made to do so. When we shall have had the experience of a year or so, to guide us, any mistakes can and will be rectified and future assessments will be raised or lowered until, as nearly as may be, the assessments and the claims for compensation shall balance.

FOE IN FLANDERS GIVES GROUND BEFORE ALLIES

Sharp Artillery Actions Occur All Along the Line in France and Belgium and in Flanders, Duke of Wuttemburg Has to Yield.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Sharp advances against both flanks of the German marines and infantry under Grand Duke Albrecht of Wurtemburg in the rapidly developing offensive of the allies in Flanders were reported in official statements issued yesterday, while from Alsace it is announced that the French gunners have silenced a German battery which was bombarding Upper Aspach.

On the remainder of the battlefront, all of which is still enveloped in a sweeping gale, sharp artillery actions were fought, the German attempts being everywhere abortive.

The allies' salient in front of Ypres, held against the most vigorous counter-attacks of the Germans for weeks, has been turned into a wedge which, with the capture reported yesterday of an important point of German support to the southeast of Zonnebeke, on the road from Becelaere to Passchendaele, has been thrust forward a distance of five miles, threatening the left flank of the Wurtemburgers. This capture is all the more important because the position commands the military highway, a highly-valued acquisition in this region, where the grove over which the armies have been fighting has been turned into a veritable bog.

To the north, where the Franco-Belgian forces are operating against the left flank of the Grand Duke's army, more ground was gained among the sand dunes to the north of Lombaertzyde and northeast of Nieuport, while the allies occupying St. Georges, two miles south of Nieuport, on the Yser, were compelled to withstand a furious bombardment by the Germans, who attempted unsuccessfully to retake the town captured in a surprise attack two days ago.

In the Vosges district the Germans made a sharp attack on Tete de Faux, but they were repulsed with heavy losses.

On the line from Steinbach, which the French have successfully invested, past Cernay to Aspach, the French are strengthening their positions against the possibility of renewed German counter-attacks and heavy artillery engagements have been fought along all this front.

"There are no important incidents to report, except bombardments in the region of Arras and on the heights of the Meuse, and some progress in Champagne, which seems to have been quite pronounced.

"The bad weather persists along the greater part of the front.

"In Belgium we have won a little territory in the region of Nieuport, opposite Polders, and to the north of Lombaertzyde. The enemy subjected St. Georges to a violent bombardment. This is the position we are putting in a state of defence.

"We have captured a German point of support located to the southeast of Zonnebeke, on the road between Becelaere and Paschendaele.

"From the Lys to the Oise there is nothing to report.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in Champagne the enemy has manifested another burst of activity, which has taken the form particularly of a violent artillery fire, to which our heavy artillery has replied effectively.

"In the Argonne we have made slight progress in the region of Four de Paris.

"Between the Argonne and the Moselle there has been cannonading along all the front, but particularly severe along the heights of the Meuse.

"In the Vosges, the enemy delivered an attack against our positions at La Tete de Faux; this was repulsed.

"In upper Alsace, we are consolidating our positions. Our heavy artillery reduced to silence the German howitzers which were bombarding upper Aspach."

Red Cross Forwards Comforts.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Canadian Red Cross officials here have within the last few days sent over 2,000 mufflers and pairs of socks to Salisbury camp. Thirty thousand cigarettes and many thousand packages of tobacco were distributed among the invalids in camp hospitals. Red Cross officials here, while giving due regard to present necessities of the troops at Salisbury, are prudently looking ahead to the time when the men will be at the front, and are endeavoring accordingly to conserve their resources until that time.

Lt.-Col. H. T. Hughes returned from Salisbury Plain and has gone to Ottawa, where it is understood that he will take command of the Canadian Engineers who are mobilizing there and going over with the Second Contingent C. E. F.

Farm Life Remodels Men

One lesson which the Provincial Secretary of Ontario maintains is to be learned from the operation of the Fort William industrial farm is the folly of short-term sentences, and the fact that indeterminate periods spent under the new method have proven vastly superior, from standpoints both of lay observance and the development of the prisoners. The provision of healthy outdoor employment for the hundreds of persons committed to this institution since its opening has worked a revolution in the morale of the men incarcerated.

COMMENT As You Like it

The game in Toronto on Friday night between the Peterborough team and Toronto Rowing Club should put the locals in good shape for the game with Picton next Tuesday night. The players who will make the trip to the Queen City are Dwyer, Janes, Hunter, Pethick, Spratt, Halpin, Park, Kelly, Kennealley and probably Long.

At a meeting of the players of the Lindsay junior O.H.A. team held last night, following a stiff workout, R. Sandercock was elected captain. The choice is an excellent one as "Sandy" is not only a speedy player, but experienced in the science. He should round a good team into shape. —Lindsay Warder.

The meeting called for the Y. M. C. A. last evening in an effort to organize a city league hockey team did not materialize. About two enthusiasts put in their appearance.

CHANCE BLAMES BAN JOHNSON FOR SUCCESS OF FEDERAL LEAGUE

Chicago, Dec. 31.—Frank Chance former manager of the Chicago Cubs, latterly with the New York Americans, stopped orange growing long enough recently to fire a broadside into Ban Johnson, president of the American Baseball League. Johnson recently referred to Chance as the "biggest failure in baseball history." Here is the reply which Chance pumped through the columns of a Chicago newspaper at the Czar of the American game:

"When it comes right down to brass tacks the Federal League would never have existed had it not been for Ban Johnson. He was so busy attending to other affairs that he regarded the Federal League as a joke and refused to heed any warnings until it was too late. If Johnson had been attending to business instead of expanding his girth at the expense of other magnates, baseball would not have reached the muddle that it is now in.

"Johnson says that I did not develop any players for the Yankees. Well, I developed Maisel, the leading base-stealer of the American League; Boone, whom many regard as the coming second sacker; Peckinpaugh, the most useful shortstop; Cook, Nunamaker, Keating and several others. I will bet Ban Johnson $5,000 that the Yankees do not finish any higher next year than they did last season. I quit the Yankees because they were owned by a syndicate of penurious tight-wads, who refused to invest a few thousand to strengthen the team."

Chance is said to have been negotiating with the Federal Leaguers, but this matter he refused to discuss, adding that he was out of baseball for all time.

COTTON FOR GERMANY.

Steamer Reaches Holland After Probe By British Warships.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 31. — (Via London.)—The American steamer A. A. Raven, which arrived at Rotterdam Dec. 24, from Wilmington, N.C., with 6,600 bales of cotton, was the first vessel since the outbreak of the war to reach a Dutch port with a cotton consignment for Germany.

The steamer was held up in the English Channel by British warships for an examination of her papers, which delayed her 24 hours.

The freight charges for the Raven's cargo was $10 per bale, which is five times the normal rate. This increase was due to the great war risks attending imports destined for Germany.

Since the war started the German imports of cotton are said to have amounted to 60,000 bales, most of it going by way of Gothenberg, Sweden, to which port 16 vessels are now steaming. They are due to reach Gothenburg inside of two weeks. Their cargoes aggregate about 75,000 bales.

Jack White Writes for Job With Hams

Wants Another Chance to Make Good as Manager

Jack White, the most popular ball-player who ever performed in Hamilton colors, and one of the applicants for the position of manager of the club for next season, in a letter to the Herald, again expresses the hope that the local directors see fit to give him another chance as leader of the club.

He says: I had a copy of the "Herald" sent me a few days ago and see that there are quite a number after the position of manager. I also noted that my chances do not appear very bright.

As you know, I would like nothing better than a chance to again pilot the club, with the opportunity to take hold now and work up a team before the season opens. Last year I had to make the best of what was left me, and do not consider that I had a real chance to assert myself.

I will not forget the fair treatment I received from the fans of Hamilton during all the time I was with the club, both as a player and as manager. They certainly were with me all the time, and if I could get back I would do my utmost to provide them with what they deserve—a winner.

FIFTEEN ARE KILLED BY AIR RAIDERS

Bombs at Dunkirk Cause Death of Women and Children

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Four German aeroplanes flew several times over the City of Dunkirk Wednesday, dropping bombs as they went, according to the Dunkirk correspondent of The Daily Mail. Soldiers in the streets fired on the machines, and one taube seemed to be hit, but all got safely away.

The official return of the casualties shows that 15 persons were killed and 32 wounded. The bombs were filled with shrapnel.

Two bombs also were dropped on Furnes.

The attack on Furnes was evidently an effort to wipe out the Belgian headquarters, where King Albert is at present. No damage was done there.

Dunkirk, which is on the eastern side of the English Channel, almost opposite Dover, has been the target of German aviators for a long time, but not before of an aerial expedition on so large a scale.

It is probable that the German attack was made to discourage a movement of British troops from England to the battlefront. Dunkirk is one of the chief ports used for disembarking reinforcements.

Furnes is on the Belgian coast near the French border.

HOW GARIBALDI DIED.

Patriot's Grandson Cried "Long Live Italy and England."

ROME, Dec. 31.—No further details have been received in Rome of the death in France of Lieut. Bruno Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian hero. The difficulties of telegraphic communication with France are to blame.

From the first despatches received it appears that Lieut. Garibaldi commanded a company which charged a German position at the point of the bayonet and dislodged their antagonists from their trenches. Garibaldi was wounded when the fighting was heavy. He was given first aid and then returned to the lead of his soldiers. While urging the men in their pursuit of the Germans the young Italian was struck a second time. He had only time to cry: "Leave me and go ahead, boys. Long live Italy and England." Then he died.

The Miners' Union Hall of Porcupine was destroyed by fire.

THIS CITY BETTER OFF THAN MANY OTHER POINTS

Travellers Give Their Verdict in Favor of Peterborough

MERCHANTS ASSISTED

It is very interesting to note that commercial travelers passing through this city on their regular beats are unanimous in the opinion that Peterborough's unemployed is being well cared for, and considerable money is in circulation. The efforts of the Mayor and the Council in caring for the unemployed have placed the city away above comparison with other Canadian cities. Exchanges state that the unemployed of other centres are appealing to their mayors for assistance, but the mayors are unable to provide work owing to the scarcity of money. When the hand of depression was first felt, Mayor Buller and his colleagues conceived the idea of issuing the short-term debentures, thus money was available to progress with the city's work and give employment to many.

The fact that a great many men are being provided with work has greatly assisted Peterborough's merchants, who, it is stated, fared much better during the Christmas season than merchants in other cities.

ALDERMAN GREEN A STAUNCH FRIEND OF THE WORKINGMAN

By His Shrewdness and Sagacity the Public Works of the City Were Revived and the Workingmen Kept Employed.

Alderman G. Walter Green, who offers his services again as alderman for 1915, has proved himself to be a true friend of the workingman.

It was Alderman Green who came to the assistance of the city during those dark days of August last when the war first broke out, and the banks refused further assistance to the city. As a consequence our public works were summarily stopped without calling the Council together, creating a panic among the workingmen, whose means of livelihood had been withdrawn.

At the very first meeting of the Board of Works, following this action, when everything looked blue and down-hearted, Alderman Green took strong objections to the stoppage of the public works. He was sagacious and hopeful enough to believe there was a remedy to offset this peremptory action of the banks in closing down on the city's credit. He brought forward a scheme which he believed would safeguard both the city's interests and the interests of the workingmen and afford continued work for the unemployed as well.

It was Alderman Green's shrewdness that suggested that short term notes or debentures should be issued, giving our citizens a chance to invest their money in the banks, which was realising only three per cent. interest, and lending it out to the city at six per cent. on two years' debentures.

Alderman Green's suggestion was hailed with satisfaction; the debentures were quickly bought up, and money was thus provided to continue the prosecution of our public works. It was a shrewd business man's idea that the funds the bank refused the city could be secured from our own public-spirited citizens with but scarcely any cost. The result was that our public works have been proceeded with without delay, and the anxious workingmen kept employed.

The citizens have another opportunity of retaining Alderman Green's valuable services for next year.

Its strength is impregnable; its profits to policyholders are unexcelled. WHY? The average rate of interest earned last year was over 8 per cent., being THE HIGHEST of any company in Canada; its death rate being only 27 per cent. of that expected by actuarial tables—the LIGHTEST of any company in Canada; above all else, the chief sources of PROFIT to policyholders are derived from these two points.

Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I am a candidate for the Board of Education and seek election on the ground that a different kind of administration should be inaugurated. The Board of Education now owes to their bankers, $17,000, although they had approximately $95,000.00 to spend this year and were granted something like $85,000 for the building of the East and West Ward schools. The rate this year was 9.75 mills on the dollar, which is almost the largest rate of any of the City Municipalities in Ontario.

I contend that the meetings of the Board of Education should not be held in the back room of any Corporation's offices, but should be held in the City Hall Buildings where the public and the press can see how money by the thousands of dollars is being spent and used. If I am elected I will see that no private gain goes into the pockets of the members of the Board and that no members of the Board deal with the Board of Education in a business way.

Time and again the press has been excluded from meetings of Committees of the Board of Education, and these meetings are held behind three doors where it is practically impossible for the public to find out the location of them and to ascertain what business is being done.

A certain ring has existed for years, which it has been almost impossible to break up and I am out to smash this ring if I can.

In a canvas, an attempt has been made to injure me, on the ground that I went into the City Council seeking a position. I never sought any position, but when Mr. Hall resigned the City Solicitorship, then I was appointed Solicitor for the City Council, and I have never met any person who did not agree that I have carefully and energetically performed my services as City Solicitor.

A certain pot hunter who may be injured financially if I am elected, has circulated the story that I am seeking the Solicitorship for the Board of Education, which I do not want and would not take, as the interests of the Board of Education and the City may be in conflict and my view is, that one man should not act for both.

If I am elected I will see that no straw men are put up to sell supplies to the City without tender, when the profit goes to the principal. I will also see that expensive deputations do not go out of town on the people's money, with the suggested object of improving the knowledge of the deputation in educational matters, when the benefit to these members is nil. My platform is for strict economy, purchase by tender, no profits on contracts or business transactions to go to any member of the Board which has the right to make contracts.

It has been suggested that I am after the scalp of some appointees of the Board of Education. This is absolutely untrue. I simply seek an administration along business methods, which the people of Peterborough are entitled to as never before.

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

TREAT ALL ALIKE.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir, — Pardon me begging your valuable space to answer, or rather, classify the suggestive list of questions, hurled at your poor editor by "Workingman Voter" in last night's Examiner. No wonder you left them unanswered. The first four questions all deal with Ald. Duncan's efficiency. Dear me what a question? Ald. Duncan was born and raised here, and efficient enough to build up a successful business here. Efficient enough to be an alderman for eight years here. Efficient enough to own considerable property and ambitious enough to run for and be mayor, and in fact so efficient and honest that he would sign his own name to any statement he made. But, of course, Mr. Workingman Voter" makes no accusations, simply writes a list of insinuating questions ending up with the popular war news word "Rumour." And come to think of it he is efficient, so efficient, in fact, that he very properly classifies his own letter by his pseudonym, which, according to Webster signifies counterfeit—false.

I know Geo. H. Duncan, this is no rumour, and it is a fact that he does not prefer an Italian to an Englishman. It is also a fact that Englishmen get the preference in his own business, look over his present men as I have and be convinced. But as a public servant he claims and rightly so that Italian, Russian, Englishman or Greek should be treated with common (and equal) courtesy all things being equal. But if there really should be a little preference, and even aldermen are human, is it likely that an Anglo-Saxon like Ald. Duncan would prefer an Italian to an Englishman? Why it's too childish and ridiculous to even consider. Even the Italian himself would lose respect for a man like that. The Italian does not give the Briton the preference in Italy, and he does not expect the preference here nor does he get it.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN STONE,

THINGS TOO SMOOTH.

Editor Review,

Sir,—

I am a workingman of the city of Peterborough and am interested in seeing an economical administration of the affairs of the city.

I intend to vote for Mr. Gordon for the Board of Education because I believe he will insist upon business methods being used by the Board of Education. I have been informed that supplies have been bought without tender, which I believe is not a proper way for a body of the people's representatives to purchase.

I understand that the rate of taxation for educational purposes in this city is the highest nearly of any city in Ontario, and I think that this is unjustified and can be controlled.

I heard today the members of the Board of Education seek to prevent Mr. Gordon being elected by stating that he is an undesirable, and that he is attempting to be elected for the sole purpose of making trouble and stirring things up.

My view is that things have gone along on the Board of Education too smoothly, and that there has not been enough criticism of public affairs, and that the high tax rate is caused by failure to properly investigate everything which comes before the Board. I have found it hard enough to get along, with the rent I have to pay, and I am satisfied that high rents are caused by increased taxes, and that a thorough business management of the Board of Education should be started for 1915.

Yours truly,

EDWARD NAVEY.

GROSE IS COMMITTED ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Counsel's Plea That Charge be Reduced to Manslaughter was Denied by Magistrate

Looking pale and drawn, Edgar Grose, charged with murdering William O'Brien on the night previous to Christmas, entered the dock today in police court for his preliminary hearing. Grose was plainly suffering pain, his counsel stating he was afflicted with a painful disease. Throughout the tedious progress of the trial, Grose sat motionless, seeming to betray little interest in what was transpiring. A particular effort was taken by Mr. Gordon, counsel for Grose, to obtain medical testimony as to what caused O'Brien's death.

Grose was committed for trial before the next court of competent jurisdiction, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Prisoner's counsel endeavored to show that there was insufficient evidence produced by the crown to warrant this action. He tried to influence His Worship to alter the charge to one of manslaughter contending that there was nothing shown in any of the evidence that indicated that his client caused the injuries that resulted in O'Brien's death. Magistrate Dumble however flatly refused to assume the responsibility for changing the charge and stated that if he did he would be assuming that the violence which medical evidence said had caused a hemorrhage was not attributed to the prisoner.

Unless bail can be secured, which Mr. Gordon said would take time and expense, his client will have to remain in gaol. Grose is very ill judging by his actions and appeared to find it difficult to walk to and from the police docket.

Detective Meagher was called this afternoon by Mr. Gordon and in reply to a question said Grose had asked him how he thought he would come out and the officer replied that he could not say anything about that. The detective only went so far as F. Roy's studio with him. Detective Newhall remained with him.

To Mr. Gordon, Detective Newhall said he saw Grose the morning after he gave himself up.

Grose said something about O'Brien tackling him on several occasions. He had told him O'Brien had crossed his path and that he had acted himself in self-defence.

While going up to the gaol he mentioned about O'Brien tackling him a few nights before in the market arcade.

P. C. Kidd's Evidence.

P. C. Kidd told of the prisoner and his brother coming into the police station. Grose said: "I believe you're looking for me." He took him into the guard room and charged him with murdering William O'Brien at the hotel on Thursday, December 24th. Grose was about to make a statement when he cautioned him that anything he might say would be used in evidence against him. He was sober and said "I didn't think it would be murder I would be charged with."

"I'll tell you how it happened," said Grose. "I was in a side room having a drink and went out into the passage way. O'Brien was there and said something. At the same time he raised either his knee or his foot. I can't tell just which it was now and made as if to strike me. I put up my hands to defend myself and struck him twice but you could hardly call them striking. It was more of a push as I never shut my fist. Mr. Graham then came and separated us and I left the hotel."

Sergeant Brown was present when the latter part of this statement was made.

John O'Brien, father of the victim, took the witness stand first. He told of receiving a call to the hotel about 11 o'clock Christmas eve, and there finding his son dead in the kitchen. He informed the court that his son had always been in a perfect state of health. When he left home at one-thirty that afternoon he was apparently in his usual health, as far as his father could say. He had never heard him complain of ill-health.

C. G. Graham said he was in the office of the hotel at the time of the trouble. He had known Grose for fifteen or twenty years. He had not seen the victim there until he went into the bar, attracted by the noise of shuffling feet, and there saw Grose and O'Brien in a clinch, holding each other by the arms. He was at the telephone when his attention was

CHAIRMAN OF BOARD OF EDUCATION REPLIES TO G. N. GORDON'S LETTER

Editor Review,

Sir,—In your issue of Thursday last Mr. G. N. Gordon addresses you in a letter setting forth now, in his opinion, the Board of Education should conduct its affairs, but primarily the letter appears to be a laborious attempt to square away the general opinion that he became identified with the City Council when a plum called the City Solicitorship was one of the possibilities.

Mr. Gordon makes some extraordinary statements which, while only savoring of venom, leaves a doubt as to whether this luminary of business Acumen is as qualified to introduce "Business Methods" and "practice economy," which according to him have been an unknown quantity in the Board's operations for some time.

With a happy disregard of that case in making a statement, found in certain politicians, Mr. Gordon says that our school rate of 9.75 mills on the dollar is "almost the highest rate of any of the city municipalities in the province." What are the facts sir? From the Provincial Blue Book we find the average yearly cost per city pupil attending the collegiates in the province is $96.54. Peterborough's cost $80, average yearly cost per city pupil attending public schools in the province $27.48, Peterborough's cost $27.51. This is sufficient to show that Peterborough with its unexcelled school equipment, is being economically run.

The overdraft referred to was used altogether in purchasing sites completing, furnishing, etc., of the two new schools and Mr. Gordon can satisfy himself of the value received for every dollar spent on these schools by enquiring from any reputable contractor, when he will learn that these schools were built at a very low figure and small profit to the contractors. Mr. Gordon takes exception to the Board holding its meetings in the Board Room of the Toronto Savings & Loan Company; this has been discussed more than once in the Board and if they cared to go to the expense of office and vault accommodation which for the purpose would be considerable, meetings could be held in the Collegiate building. That the Loan Company has accorded these privileges free for years is a matter for gratitude rather than objection, when the convenience of the location is considered.

The press is always present at the meetings of the Board and report the proceedings fully, together with all reports of committee meetings, and the public are welcome and have a perfect right to attend at these meetings, but the board meets for business not gallery play.

Mr. Gordon objects to what he calls "expensive deputations" going out of the town at the people's expense—quite right Mr. Gordon. During 1914 a deputation at Toronto for two or three days at a cost of $49 and later the Chairman of the Industrial Classes attended the meeting of the Technical Institute giving his time, etc., at the enormous cost of $6.00, a total for the year of $55.

In conclusion Mr. Editor let me say. I have been on the Board for nine years, the last two years as Chairman and am now retiring from its ranks, during that time I have applied myself to and have had intimate knowledge of its working, and I can honestly say that the men serving the city on the board are above availing themselves of the petty advantages of which Mr. Gordon's letter speaks. All supplies, etc., are bought by tender and I have yet to learn of any member profiting by his being a member of the Board. I have found no "rings to smash" but have found that the men put the affairs of the schools before self and by their business ability have saved the ratepayers thousands of dollars and built up an educational system that the people are proud of, and the equal of any in the province.

Yours sincerely,
M. A. MORRISON,
Chairman Board of Education.

MAYOR BULLER INSTRUMENTAL IN ACCOMPLISHING MUCH GOOD WORK

When the conscientious voter is alone with his mayoralty ballot on Monday, he will do well to place the customary hieroglyphic after the name of William Buller. By conscientious voter is meant the voter who is reciprocal and believes in the golden rule of "one good turn deserves another." Mayor Buller has been a resident of Peterborough all his life, and has during the past eight years figured in the City Council in some capacity or another. During 1914 he served the city as Chief Magistrate. By virtue of his splendid record as a councillor, his indefatigable work as Mayor, and the usual custom for mayors to serve two years, William Buller decided to make a bid for the mayoralty for 1915. He has been opposed, and thus an election is necessary. It remains with the ratepayers to see that Mr. Buller is returned to office for a second term and thus permitted to continue the good work he has so ably begun.

For four years Mayor Buller was elected to the City Council by a general vote. For the three years following, he represented the South Ward on the vote of the ward in accordance to the ward system. Last year he entered a field of three for the mayoralty honors, and succeeded in winning. He has yet to be defeated when the people are asked to decide. The confidence the electors had in Mayor Buller and the fact that he was returned each year with a good majority, left him indebted to them, and it is pleasing to note that His Worship has always striven to perform the duties thrust upon him.

Some Good Progress.

A glance over the various branches of city work will bring to mind the fact that they have progressed wonderfully during the regime of William Buller, both as an alderman and as mayor. The sidewalks and sewers have been extended, and the great extension now going on in the sewage system, known as the outfall sewer, has had the support of His Worship since it was first brought up. He was likewise closely allied with the big step the city took when the Peterborough Light and Power Company was expropriated and Hydro-Electric ushered in. When the problem of securing a test track for the Canadian General Electric Co. came before the Council, Mayor Buller, realizing to what extent the city's welfare depends upon manufacturing, put forth every effort, and the result was—success. He and Ald. Duffus worked incessantly on the problem, and finally made arrangements with the Grand Trunk Railway System whereby the test track was secured for the C. G. E. and the city not made liable to any yearly cost.

Chairman of Committees.

During his term as councillor it fell to Mayor Buller's lot to act as chairman on nearly all the committees. The Property Committee, Legal and Reception Committee, Manufacturers' Committee, Fire, Water and Light Committee and Board of Works. It is hardly necessary to recall to the workingman the manufacturing concerns brought to Peterborough while Mayor Buller was chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee. The depression had been felt, and as a silver lining to the dark cloud, the De Laval, Vermont Marble Co., Bonner-Worth Co., and Henry Hope Co. were brought to the city. Mayor Buller was on the job 24 hours every day till the smoke began to curl from the chimneys of these factories. When the factories were forced to lay off their employees, through causes which could not be regulated by the City Council, Mayor Buller took his usual stand for the workingman and was instrumental in having city work gone on with, and the City Engineer states that a great deal of this work will be continued all winter.

Although Mayor Buller had "work, not charity," for his motto, he firmly believed that those unable to work or those whose breadwinner had left to fight our battles at the front, must be cared for. When the idea of starting a campaign to raise $50,000.00 for the patriotic fund was unearthed, he was at the back of it. He set aside his personal affairs and business for three days, and the result has placed Peterborough well up in comparison with other Canadian cities. When the committee applied to the Council for the $10,000 grant, Mayor Buller arose and said he was with them, and he "stuck to the ship" till he overcame all opposition and the grant of $10,000 was made. It was brought to His Worship's attention that some men would start a small business to enable them to exist during the depression, but the license fee of $100 was too big an obstacle to overcome. Mayor Buller immediately applied to the Retail Merchants' Association, and it was decided that if a prospective merchant would appear before the association and state his case, the association would use their own good judgment as to whether he would or would not be exempt from paying the license fee.

Has Worked for the People.

The work Mayor Buller had done for the city of Peterborough has been but lightly touched upon. Suffice is to state that he has during his term as councillor and mayor always had the interest of the people at heart, and another year with him at the head of the council of ten, means another year of advancement and progress. There is an abundance of work partially underway, such as the paving of the streets and the construction of the outfall sewer and disposal plant. The proposed drainage system for the city, which Mayor Buller has been agitating, will be begun in the spring, and it will be but fit and proper to have him return as Mayor of Peterborough for 1915 to exercise the same good [illegible] and judgment he has demonstrated when other problems were met.

Vote for William Buller—the people's candidate.

THE E. B. EDDY COMPANY HAVE SOLVED THE DIFFICULTY.

DESIRING to get some first-hand information from Ottawa on methods employed there to overcome the difficulties arising from frazil and anchor ice, we wrote to the E. B. Eddy Company and to the Ottawa Electric Railway Company, and received replies some days ago.

The Eddy Company say that in their fifty years' experience at the Chaudiere Falls with anchor and frazil ice, they have tried many different schemes for doing away with this trouble, and, in building their new power plant, it occurred to them that if the fore-bay and racks were covered in and the hot air and steam taken from the Paper Mill and blown underneath this behind the racks, it would do away with the trouble, "and we must say it has more than come up to our expectations."

> "We have been running for a year now, and have not had one minute's delay at our Plant on this account, while our neighbours, whose Plant closely adjoins ours, have had as many as twenty men on their Racks trying to keep their plant running, but have failed."

This scheme, the company claims, cannot be used at all plants. For instance, if the power plant takes its water directly from the open river. it would be rather a hard matter to cover it over sufficiently to have the desired effect, but where it can be used, a hundred horse-power boiler would generate sufficient heat to overcome the trouble. Mr. G. H. Millen, one of the managers, says the company would be pleased to show the arrangement to any of the citizens of Peterborough who care to go to Hull and see it. No doubt, an acceptance of this kind offer by some of the authorities of Peterborough would be a splendid object lesson of a successful method of overcoming some of the most serious problems in the operation of an electric power plant. Owing to the nature of the fore-bay at Auburn, we see no reason why a similar method could not be adopted here.

The Ottawa Electric Railway merely referred us to Mr. John Murphy, the electrical engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals. whose suggestions have already been discussed in the Review. The reference seems to strengthen substantially Mr. Murphy's suggestions that frazil and anchor ice, which upset so seriously the power and water plants of Peterborough a few weeks ago, need cause no disarrangement of a properly equipped plant.

AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR.

A GENTLEMAN who lately returned from Europe has related an incident of the great European War that shows what a colossal tragedy it is. Three British soldiers, who were out on scout duty, suddenly came upon two Germans, and, levelling their rifles, commanded them to surrender. The Germans threw up their hands, and, being officers, and very fine appearing men, handsome and of strong physique, the British did not bind them, but trusted to them to proceed quietly as prisoners to the British lines. They were pleasant and chatted easily with the British men. At an unexpected moment, they suddenly leaped on two of their captors, and began a terrific struggle to overcome them. Since the two British soldiers were smaller men, it might have gone hard with them, had there not been a third man. He, however, could not use his firearms at any distance from the scuffle, but, approaching close to the struggling men, he managed to place the muzzle of his gun close to one of the Germans, and fired. The other German was similarly dealt with, and both of them died very shortly. As their spirits fled, a beautiful smile came over their handsome faces, just like the smile they had returned to their mother when as babes they had stretched out their tiny hands to her loving face. In the pockets of each was a photograph of a beautiful woman, but whether it represented wife or sweetheart could not be ascertained. Leaving their smiling victims in the dead grass of the field, the British returned to their lines, bearing the trophies of their flight, and doubtless related, in a modest, perhaps off-hand, manner, the details of that frightful tragedy. For, mark you, had they not killed these Germans, they would likely have been killed by them, and the Germans would no doubt have boasted to their fellows how they had killed three British soldiers, and broken three women's hearts. Making widows and breaking hearts is, forsooth, such a pleasant business! These men had no quarrel, but they fought, and the mother, or mothers, of two handsome men (how she must have been proud of them) will look in vain for their home-coming. Another woman, beautiful to look upon, will see them never more. Yet such things must be before Germany is defeated and the British Empire safe. It is, indeed, true that our liberties are bought at a great price—at a tremendous sacrifice.

KEEPING THE CANADIAN DOLLAR AT HOME

KEEPING the Canadian dollar at home is very much a matter of the wholesale dealer who buys in carload lots.

No matter what retailers and individual customers may decide to do as a national self-interest campaign, the jobber is the man who very often controls the situation. The wholesale dealer has a wide-angle vision. He has customers far and wide; not in one province, but in many. His parish is often as large as that of the manufacturer. His business has a national scope. To the wholesaler the general welfare of Canada is of more direct importance than it is to the retailer or the individual.

Naturally this country looks to the wholesaler to help along the Made-in-Canada movement, because it is going to be in his best interests to offer the retailer the goods his customers are demanding, and, in his position of buying in carload lots, he can do a great deal to help or hinder people in carrying out the Made-in-Canada sentiment.

The wholesaler who buys his goods from a foreign country is letting the reservior leak without pumping into it. Every carload of goods bought outside of Canada means the value of a carload taken away from the purchasing power of the Canadian people, which depends directly on the business done by Canadian factories quite as much as on the proceeds of Canadian farms and mines and fisheries.

We all realize the insanity of killing the goose that lays the golden egg. The golden egg in this case is the ability of the Canadian people to buy goods, and the ability of the Canadian manufacturer to supply them, as well, if not better, as cheaply, if not more cheaply, than any other nation now competing for business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A COPY of the 1915 edition of the Canadian Almanac has just been received by the Review. This book has been published continuously since 1848, and is a very valuable reference book for every Canadian engaged in professional or business life. It is indispensable in offices and libraries, and contains accurate information regarding banks and stocks; a synopsis of the new Workman's Compensation Act; Life Insurance data; Postal, Legal and Judicial information, and many other subjects of reference. The price of one dollar is moderate for so well-bound and valuable a book. It is published by the Copp-Clark Company.

FORMER PRESIDENT TAFT, says Collier's, has again shown his ability to get out of touch with popular sentiment by declaring that we could not object to a German invasion of Canada. To him this is a somewhat technical and legal proposition, but his fellow-countrymen will hardly be able to divorce it from the notion of submarines and battleships on the Great Lakes and forty-two centimetre guns within range of the Niagara power houses. We much prefer the present unarmed condition of those regions. Yes, the Kaiser may invade Canada; but it is our guess that if he does he will hear from the people of the United States, and it will not be applause, either.

It is refreshing to note that some real advertising was done by the candidates in the Toronto municipal elections. Dr. Morley Wickett announced a definite platform in his election card, so that the electors knew where to place him. Controller Church published recommendations of himself by prominent citizens in his campaign for the mayoralty. John O'Neil published a lengthy exposition of his policy. That augers well for the municipal politics of Ontario's largest city.

War, the Destroyer.

(Grand Rapids News.)

Who go to war and are slaughtered?

The flower of the nation's manhood. The men from whose loins are to spring the next generation. The men physically and mentally fit.

Who are not allowed to go to war?

The invalids, the cripples, the criminals, the degenerates, the insane, the deformed, the dependent.

"One hundred thousand killed," blithely sings the headline in your newspaper. One hundred thousand young men—men as near physical perfection as is possible. Artisans, strong-limbed labourers, healthy and vigorous artists, scientists, musicians, playwrights, mechanics, inventors, actors, opera singers, professors, doctors, lawyers, bankers, brokers, electricians, civil engineers, architects.

Every day famous men are killed. All that may be gained by the victor in this war will not be worth the life of one of these men, some of whom have brought great joy to millions of human hearts, and who have added more of heaven to this earthly life than have four European kings combined.

It is reported that Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, was wounded while serving in the Austrian army. Fighting as a common soldier was this remarkable man, who can transform his violin into a human voice and express to enraptured thousands the best that man has ever expressed in music. It seems only yesterday since he held an audience at Powers' theatre all but spellbound. Kreisler's right hand holding the violin bow is worth more to the world than the right hand of any monarch grasping the sword.

Gustav Huberdeau and Armande Crabbe were killed in battle the same day. Both were famed singers, members of the Chicago opera company that could not be organised for this coming winter because its members were drafted into European armies. One wore a private's uniform in the French army, the other was a private with the Belgian troops.

The death of these men comes home to us with particular appeal. Huberdeau, Crabbe, Kreisler, as well as those hosts of other singers and artists and poets who were drafted as soldiers, were not French or Belgian or Austrian or German or Russian. They were citizens of the world. Art, music, letters, knows no country. And yet these citizens of the world are fighting and dying in the insane battles of a senseless war.

War does not rid a nation of its scum. It robs a nation of its very life blood—the life blood of labour, of art and of science. Left behind to live on are the less fit—all that are undesirable, those who are men in name only. It is thus that war makes an impression upon a race that lasts for generations or until the race cleanses itself again by the due processes of time. The Napoleonic wars reduced the stature of the men of Europe by a full inch.

The race must be perpetuated by poor mental and physical wrecks who are not available for army service.

Of all the horrors of war, there is none more lasting than this.

The present war is a war of extermination. Who are to be exterminated? The strong men, the trained men, the clean men.

Who are left to breed a new race to populate the devastated country? The beggars, the lame, the blind, those who are afflicted with the awful blood diseases, the unclean, the palsied, the criminals, the degenerates, the lowest type of men.

MR. GORDON'S POSITION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, is being boomed by "admiring" friends and, not to omit, himself for the Board of Education on the ground that the Board is a poor lot of stuff without him. Well what do you know about that! Now I am like a lot of others right down on men who are solicitors for cities, towns, counties and villages putting themselves into other positions where they can be of service to what? To the public? Well now it is likely that when a man's bread and butter depend on doing what he is told that he's going to be of such great benefit to the people as a whole. Scarcely. There are six running. Four to be elected and there is no necessity for George N. Gordon running himself to death to serve the people here, there and everywhere. Let him attend to his duties as solicitor for the city and let the Board of School Trustees do their duty without being under the thumb of any other corporation's agent or employe where they often are sure to conflict.

RIGHTO-O.

SHOULD PROVE CHARGES.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—It is up to Mr. Gordon to substantiate his charges made against such citizens as Mr. Vincent Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank, B. F. Ackerman, and other members of our Educational Board.

Why should these meen need to seek an inner room to hide from the press and public?

If Mr. Gordon's charges are so serious, the people of this city should demand an investigation at once, and not trifle with the matter until Mr. Gordon gets on the board.

CITIZEN.

THOSE INSINUATIONS.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—

Mr. Gordon's letter of insinuations which appeared in Thursday's paper does the "gentleman" no credit. It is full of peculiar statements which are hard to make "jibe." For instance, he says: "As the interests of the Board of Education and the city may be in conflict, my view is that one man should not act for both." How, then, could Mr. Gordon act for the city and at the same time be loyal to the Board of Education if he was a member of that body? He surely thinks the people are "fools."

Yours,

JUSTICE.

MR. GORDON EXPLAINS.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—In the press on Thursday evening, an attack was launched against me by a member of the School Board, who did not have the decency or manliness to place his name to the letter, but attempted to lead others to think that it was the work of anoher person. His effort to furnish a certificate of character of the three candidates seeking re-election, may not help them.

I have never stated that Messrs. Eastwood, Ackerman and Turner were not highly respectable citizens and that their services had not been appreciated. I do say that the Board of Education as at present constituted, needs a shaking up, and many things should see the light of day which do not reach the public in the manner they should.

It is part of my platform to try to correct this and see a different system maintained.

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

A REPLY TO WEST ENDER.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Fair-minded ratepayers will not expect me to take much notice of the anonymous scribbler who signed himself "West Ender" in your Thursday's issue. A man who is afraid to sign his name to his statements, and has to hide his identity is not entitled to much notice—certainly is not gifted with much of that "fair play" which he professes so much to admire. When a man talks in an unknown tongue we are apt to place little weight in what he says.

Let me just suggest, however, that if any ratepayer wants to take the trouble to ascertain for himself who originated the idea of the short-term debentures for carrying on our public work and keeping our workmen employed, all he has to do is to verify the same by calling on the city clerk, who will produce the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Works at which this matter was brought up.

What "West Ender" says the Mayor did, and what the city solicitor did, regarding this matter, after I had made the suggestion, is quite true. They simply carried out and legalised what I had proposed, as it was their official duty to do.

Had "West Ender" asked any union moulder, he would have learned that G. Walter Green Co.'s foundry is a "union" shop paying the union scale of wages and sometimes more. Our men would tell him that there have been occasions when we had been so pressed with work that our men were paid higher wages than the union scale called for in order to rush the work out, and that when the rush was over they had gone back again to the union scale. Was that cutting the labourer's wages? In the Council, too, I took the position that the city could not have a uniform scale of wages for its labourers, because we had to pay a higher scale to some than to others, and that ability and proficiency ought to be the test. Was that cutting the labourer's wages?

I would advise "West Ender" to put himself right with the records next time he rushes into print; and then, when he is "sure he is right, to go ahead," like a man, not like an ostrich.

Yours truly,

G. WALTER GREEN.

INDIA TO RESTRICT EXPORT OF WHEAT

The following news item in recent despatches ought to attract the attention of those farmers who think India is not a rival. It has been shown what she is preparing to do industrially.

Delhi, India, via London, Dec. 30.—In view of the anormal prices of wheat, the Indian government decided to restrict exports to 100,000 tons of wheat, including flour, from Dec. 1, 1914, to March 31, 1915.

The exports will be confined to British possessions, in which a strong demand for the coreal exists.

A PACKAGE OF LETTERS

By RYLAND BELL

One cold, blustering day in November I took my winter overcoat out of the bag where it had been placed the autumn before to put it in commission for the winter. I rammed my right hand down into the pockets—why I know not—and felt kid. Taking it out, I found a pair of No. 6 lady's gloves. There was a slight odor of perfume about them that the odor of moth balls had not entirely destroyed. But perhaps this was imagination.

Thinking that I might have some one else's coat, I looked at the maker's name. It was that of my tailor. There was no such mistake. Perhaps there might be something else in the coat. I put my hand into the other pocket and pulled out a bunch of letters. They were not in envelopes, so I got no address.

I put on my thinking cap to try to call up some reason for these articles being in my overcoat pocket. Where had I been when spring was coming on? I had gone on a trip to the Panama canal. I had taken the overcoat with me, using it for the first few days.

During the homeward voyage I had noticed a young lady traveling with her mother and a young man who was attentive to her. The girl I admired; to the man I took a dislike. On the evening before our arrival at New York I was seated near this couple. The wind was chilly, and I wore my overcoat. Wishing to smoke, I went below for a cigar, leaving my coat on a steamer chair. Meeting a friend, I consented to go with him to the smoking room. I remained there till all had turned in, then, remembering my overcoat, went on deck for it and found it in the chair where I had left it.

My solution was this: The girl near whom I had been sitting, feeling chilly, had put on my coat or thrown it over her. The fellow was a lover and had been dismissed. The girl's letters had been returned, and she had slipped them temporarily in the coat pocket. Having the gloves in her hand, she slipped them in the other pocket.

There were doubtless defects in this hypothesis, but it was the best I could form. It was supported by the fact that I had seen the lady go ashore and the man was not with her.

I had envied him on the ship and wished that I was in his place, for there was something in the girl's appearance that appealed to me. I felt that it would be very easy for me to fall in love with her. Now that I had property of hers in my possession, if I could find her, its return would serve for an introduction. But I was between two stools. I could only hope to find a clew to her whereabouts by reading the letters, which I had no right to do. If I did not read them I must remain ignorant as to who she was. I read a few of them; but, gaining nothing, I refrained from proceeding further.

A year passed, during which I thought a great deal about the girl of the gloves, as I called her, but did not meet her. Then one winter while at St. Augustine, Fla., strolling past a group on the beach, in one of them I recognized her. She did not notice me, and I walked on, but remained on the beach till her party left it and I saw them go to a hotel. The same evening I betook myself to the same hostelry. I watched for an opportunity to catch her alone and was rewarded one morning by seeing her sitting on the hotel porch. Approaching her uncovered, I addressed her:

"I beg your pardon, but did you not visit the Panama canal about a year ago?"

"I did," she replied, looking at me as she would at any intruder who was trying to force an acquaintance.

"And did you not one evening temporarily appropriate an overcoat lying on a steamer chair beside you to protect you from the night air?"

"I did."

"Then I presume these gloves belong to you."

I handed her her gloves. She took them and examined them, then said. "I have no remembrance of these gloves."

"That is not remarkable, since it is a year and a half since you put them in my overcoat pocket. Perhaps this package"—holding up the letters—"may stimulate your memory."

"What is it?" she asked coldly. I withdrew into my shell.

"I think I must have made a mistake in the person," I said, putting the package into my pocket, and was about to walk away when she called to me:

"Excuse me, but I mislaid a package of letters about that time."

"Love letters?"

"Have you read them?"

"Only two or three in order to discover a clew to the ownership that I might return them."

Her manner changed. She remembered appropriating my coat, but it had never occurred to her that she might have slipped the letters into the pocket temporarily.

The ice was broken. I learned from her in time that she had been on the eve of an engagement to the recipient of the letters when she learned something to his discredit and wrote him for them. He had followed her on her trip to the canal, taking the letters with him, and she had succeeded in getting them the night before she reached New York.

The next love letter she wrote was to me.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 2. — Emperor Nicholas visited the army front on Thursday. At the quarters of the commander-in-chief he received reports concerning the war operations. Afterwards he received the line of troops, distributing insignia of honor among the soldiers who had distinguished themselves the most in the fighting and thanking the various units of the army for their service in the war.

After having received the report of Gen. Ruzsky, commanding the [illegible] of the northwest, the Emperor departed from the army front.

New Year Quiet In Berlin.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—(Via London.)—Berlin at the passing of the old year showed strikingly for the first time since the outbreak of the war that life of the city is not proceeding in its normal channels. The customary celebrations to welcome the advent of the New Year were almost entirely lacking.

No horns were blown and no bells were rung, nor could any other noise making contrivances be heard.

Pointers For Housekeepers

Soak Raisins and Currants

To improve the flavor of currants and sultanas which are to be used for cakes, place them in a bowl, pour boiling water over them, and leave to soak all night. The fruit swells to twice its former size, but should be drained from the water and dried in the oven before being added to the other ingredients.

Dip Doughnuts in Water

When frying doughnuts, it is a splendid scheme to have a dish of boiling water on the stove. As each cake is done, lift it out with a fork and dash it quickly into the boiling water and out again.

To make the gas burn brightly, a little salt should be sprinkled over the top of the mantle. This should be done when the gas is burning.

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st. 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SIX HUNDRED MEN LOST

were rising 30 feet high. After 30 minutes labor, however, all were safely rescued. One lad of 19 was so exhausted by exposure that he required immediate treatment to save his life. When all had left the cutter her rope was cut, as she was full of water, having a hole under her hull which had been stuffed with a pair of trousers of which one man had divested himself for the purpose.

Some of the rescued men had no trousers and these were cared for in the warm engine room. The naval men had been in the cutter for nearly twelve hours. The crew of the trawler distributed hot coffee, food and tobacco among the benumbed sailors. When they landed, the residents brought blankets, clothing and boots for the survivors and housed them in comfortable quarters.

The plight of these survivors from the Formidable is almost indescribable. For hours before being rescued they had been battling against the storm, hoping against hope, until the brown sails of the Providence hove in sight.

During the height of the storm they were almost continuously engulfed in great waves.

CHURCH MAYOR OF QUEEN CITY

Had Majority of Over 6000 in Contest With McCarthy

TORONTO, Jan. 2. — Toronto was treated to the biggest surprise in many years yesterday when Controller Church was elected mayor by 6,468 majority over Controller J. O. McCarthy.

The surprises in the contest for the Board of Control are the election of ex-Controller Foster, and the defeat of Controller James Simpson. The election of Controller John O'Neill at the head of the list was generally conceded during the day; his poll of 20,791 is the biggest vote ever given a controller in the city of Toronto.

Walters Wins In Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Jan. 2.—Ald. Chester S. Walters was elected mayor yesterday, defeating Controller Gardner by 1,803 majority. Although Ald. Walters had but one year's experience in municipal affairs he made a name for himself by the civic inquiry in which considerable dishonesty and graft was shown. Controllers Morris, Cooper and Jutten were all re-elected to the Board of Control, the new man being Ald. Robson, who was chairman of the Civic Investigating Committee.

Stevenson In London.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 2.—Dr. H. A. Stevenson was elected mayor of London yesterday by a splendid majority.

While several things contributed to the mayoralty change, there is no doubt that the issue raised in connection with the agitation against Mr. H. J. Glaubitz as general manager of the Public Utilities on account of his nationality was the chief factor.

Dr. Hett Berlin's Mayor.

BERLIN, Ont., Jan. 2.—The surprise in the municipal elections of this city was experienced here last night, when Dr. J. E. Hett defeated Mr. A. L. Breithaupt, a well-known manufacturer, by a majority of 748, the successful candidate securing 1,699 votes against his opponent's 951.

"At dawn of Dec. 30 we bombarded the village of Verkhni, near Sarikamysch, which the Turks had defended obstinatey for three days. Afterwards our volunteers set fire to a house in an advanced position in the village, while two companies of a Caucasian regiment made a bayonet charge. In this fighting the Turks lost heavily in killed, among their dead being a general. We captured more than 20 officers and 1,300 soldiers.

HE HIT A WARSHIP.

Commander Hewlett Is Sure Bomb Did the Work.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The experience of Flight Commander Francis Hewlett during the recent aerial raid on the German naval base at Cuxhaven are described in an interview with the aviator, transmitted to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Amsterdam. Commander Hewlett, who was believed to have lost his life until it was learned yesterday that he had been picked up by a steam trawler and landed at Muiden, Holland, says he believes that he hit a German warship with one of the bombs which he dropped. Describing his escape Commander Hewlett said:

"I was unable to find the British fleet. My motor was running hot and I was compelled to descend. I was picked up by a Dutch trawler, but destroyed my motor and sank the hydroplane before I boarded the trawler at 10 o'clock on Christmas morning. I stayed aboard the trawler six days during a terrible storm."

SIX HUNDRED MEN LOST WHEN FORMIDABLE SINKS

Battleship Launched in 1898 Has Been Either Mined or Torpedoed According to an Announcement From the Admiralty—Cruiser and Trawler Rescue 150 Men.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 2. — A report here concerning the British battleship Formidable is that she was torpedoed off Portsmouth by a German submarine. This position of the catastrophe agrees better with the statement that members of the crew were rescued by a Tor Bay trawler than does the station off the Belgian coast.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The destruction of the British battleship Formidable in the English Channel yesterday by a mine or a submarine boat, which, although it is one of those events Britons now realize must be expected so long as the British navy is compelled to keep to the seas, has caused widespread grief.

"This is due not so much to the loss of the ship, which was about fifteen years old, and cost $5,000,000. It is believed about 600 men went down with her. Thus far only 150 men of the Formidable's crew of 750 are known to have been rescued. A light cruiser picked up 80 and a Tor Bay trawler 70. Among the rescued are eight officers and six midshipmen.

They were rescued by the trawler during a terrific storm yesterday morning.

The Daily Chronicle states that survivors of the battleship Formidable report that the vessel was torpedoed both fore and aft early Friday morning, and sank almost immediately, giving the crew hardly time to escape. This version is not confirmed.

The British Admiralty has not given the locality where the disaster occurred, and declares that it is unable to say whether the ship struck a mine or was torpedoed.

The official information bureau issued a statement as follows: "The battleship Formidable was sunk yesterday morning in the Channel, but whether by a mine or submarine is not yet certain. Eighty survivors have been picked up by a British light cruiser, and it is possible that others may have been rescued by other vessels."

The fact that the disaster occurred in the English Channel recalls the circumstance that British ships have been engaged in bombarding the German positions on the Belgian coast and that German submarines on several occasions in the past have attemped to torpedo them.

As in previous disasters to British ships, the casualty list in this case includes many midshipmen, no fewer than sixteen having been on board the Formidable.

The British battleship Formidable was a pre-Dreadnought of 15,000 tons, launched at Portsmouth in 1898, and compleated in 1901. She was 430 feet long, and was heavily armored. It cost £1,022,745. The vessel carried four 12-inch guns, whereas the Dreadnought has ten, In adidtion the Formidable had twelve 6-inch guns, eighteen 12-pounders, eight 3-pounders, and smaller guns, and four submerged torpedo tubes. She was a sister ship to the Irresistible, the Implacable and Bulwark, blown up a few weeks ago off Sheerness.

The Formidable had assigned to her, according to the British navy list for December, various fleet officers, and consequently she undoubtedly was acting as a flagship at the time of her destruction. Her captain was Arthur N. Loxley, and her commander, Charles E. Ballard. Captain John C. Deed was in command of the marines on board, while the fleet surgeon was Godfrey Taylor, and the fleet paymaster, P. J. Ling. The chaplain is given as the Rev. Geo. B. Robinson.

The rescue was effected under dangerous and exciting circumstances. The crew of the trawler were amazed while running before the gale for shelter to find a small open boat drifting under their lee through mountainous seas with an oar heisted, bearing a sailor's scarf. After strenuous efforts those on the trawler succeeded in getting a rope to the cutter and brought her with great skill to berth at their stern.

The naval men began to jump aboard, but even then there was danger of losing men, as the seas

A Substantial Surplus in the Fire, Water and Light Dept.

No Overdrafts This Year—Alderman Green's Committee Winds Up the Year with a Clean Sheet and a Surplus of Over $300

Within recent years it is not often that any of the committees of the Board of Aldermen have been able to report a surplus at the end of the municipal year. As a rule, the reverse has been the case, and the chairmen have frequently been compelled to petition for additional grants in order to pay their way.

The Department of Fire, Water and Light, which has passed through many trying vicissitudes during the past few years, has been efficiently harmonised and strengthened this year, thanks to the wise tactics of Alderman Green, chairman. Better still, it has apparently been managed with such judicious care that the expenditures have been kept well within the appropriation.

The excellence of our fire service is recognized by all our citizens. The recommendations of the Chief have been generally based on a regard for the welfare of the city, as well as the efficiency of the brigade. We have heard of no friction this year between the Council or the Brigade, or the chairman of the committee; and from all accounts a most harmonious feeling has reigned throughout the year. Plans for the betterment of certain things have been thought out; a spirit of willing co-operation has been infused into the department; and the amount and character of the work transacted this year may be gathered from the business system inaugurated and reports of the Chief to the committee.

That the painstaking efforts of the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Alderman Green, were mainly instrumental in bringing about such a satisfactory condition of affairs, has been frequently admitted. He has devoted much personal attention to this work, and although a busy manufacturer himself, with many other important business affairs to attend to, he has never neglected his duties as chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee. Additional satisfaction will be given the ratepayers when it is learned that this committee will be able to wind up this year's business with a substantial surplus of over $300, instead of an overdraft, an amount which can go to the credit of next year's Council for the Charity Board or any other contingency.

The city may, therefore, be congratulated on the general efficiency of its Fire, Water and Light Committee for 1914; and if wise, the electors will see to it that its chairman will receive the hearty endorsement of the ratepayers of the West Ward by his re-election for 1915.

TO THE ELECTORS

North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

For the sixth time I appeal to you for your votes and influence to again place me in the Reeve's chair, having been solicited by many ratepayers to again stand. My record is before you and the splendid condition the township finances are in leads me to believe that my judgment and that of the council are responsible for the same. I therefore appeal to you to allow me to continue the good work and I shall use every endeavor, as in the past, if you elect me, to do the very best in my power for my native township.

Wishing you a Happy New Year, I am,

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen, — Having been nominated for School Trustee for the year 1915, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in my behalf. If elected I promise to support and advocate only such measures as would assure the strictest economy commensurate with the educational requirements of the city.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year, believe me to remain

Yours truly,

ROLAND DENNE

To the Electors of the Township of Smith:—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Having been honoured with the nomination for Deputy Reeve of the Township of Smith, I have accepted the nomination and respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The ratepayers have always considered it wise to have a representative in each district of the Township and as at present three of the districts will be represented by the election by acclamation of three councillors, but Bridgenorth and the Communication Road, which is one of the leading roads to the city will not be represented unless you endorse this same policy and elect me your Deputy Reeve.

Hoping that my three years' service in the council has met with your approval, and wishing one and all a Happy New Year, I remain,

Your obedient servant,

To the Electors of the West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have had the honor of being your representative in the City Council during the past two years. If my actions have been such as to meet with your approval, I will be pleased to have your endorsement of same by re-electing me for 1915.

Thanking you for the confidence you have already reposed in me and wishing one and all the compliments of the season, I am.

Your obedient servant,

G. WALTER GREEN

Candidate in North Ward

For Alderman North Ward

To the Electors of the North Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated for re-election as alderman, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. The past two years have given me a knowledge of the city's affairs and have placed me in touch with present conditions. I have endeavored, while your representative in Council, to exercise care in the expenditures of the city's money, recognizing that present conditions call for careful management, and, if re-elected, will continue this policy in the future. I have lived in this city all my life, and any interests I have are here; consequently I have a deep interest in the progress, improvement and economical management of the city's affairs.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

Board of Education

The ratepayers are entitled to know why the Board of Education, which had nearly $100,000.00 to spend in 1914, and had $85,000.00 raised for it to pay for the East and West Ward Schools, has today $17,000.00 overdraft in its bank account. Whose mistake of judgment this was that this indebtedness is created, is something which should be explained.

A VOTE for G. N. Gordon will probably bring this to light.

WM. H. BULLER

The People's Candidate,
Respectfully Solicits Your Vote and Influence for a Second Term as Mayor.

Wishing One and All a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

COMMITTEE ROOMS:
173½ Simcoe St.

To the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Just a last word. I have made only one promise—that I would try to make the Council efficient. I realize that I need the co-operation of the Alderman, but every Mayor expects and also receives that support.

The committee work I have had charge of in the past received the attention I would have given my own business. With the work of the Board of Works last year and with the Property Committee while I was at its head I challenge criticism. I don't say I made no mistake, but I do say that I gave conscientious service, and I made no serious mistake. I did try to make the committees allotted to me efficient, and I do claim that those committees attained a fair measure of efficiency.

I can honestly lay claim to the details of arranging for the collection of garbage, the erection of the incinerator, a valuable asset to the city, as every fair-minded citizen knows, the securing of King Edward Park which should be ready this year in the south ward, the erection of the Queen Mary Hospital and the erection of the Protestant Home.

While the Hydro is no longer an election issue I know the electorate are deeply interested in their lighting bills. I supported Hydro-electric on all occasions, and I believe it can be brought to a most satisfactory state. This is one definite promise I can make, namely, to see that the city's Hydro system is reduced to the promised basis and that satisfaction is secured.

The financial conditions are unsettled and this war promises to curtail things during the present year. In that event it would be folly to make promises of elaborate work. However, I will promise sensible economy, close attention to all the work, a square deal to everybody, and an attentive ear to suggestions from the citizens.

Many have promised to support me, and I ask them to hold firm especially in the face of rumours that may be spread at the last minute.

Yours very sincerely,

GEO. H. DUNCAN

CANDIDATE IN NORTH WARD

For Alderman North Ward

TO THE RATEPAYERS:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated as a candidate for a seat in the Council for Ward No. 4, I would solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. Having had five years' experience in the Council, and having been chairman of the Power and Property Committees, I feel that I could be of benefit to the ratepayers.

When I left the council five years ago the rate was 19½ mills and now at the present time it is 26 mills,

I am in favor of employing our own citizens on all city work; am not in favor of letting contracts of city work to outsiders. I believe in paying our own people a good fair wage. I think the affairs of the city could be managed in a more economical manner than they have been. Our taxes are becoming burdensome, and it behooves every member of the Council to economize and get the best value for the money expended, and, if elected, I will use my very best efforts to serve the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and will be as careful of the ratepayers' interests as I would be of my own.

Wishing you all a Prosperous and Happy New Year,

MISS KATHERINE WALLIS IS IN CANADIAN HOSPITAL AT PARIS

An interesting letter has been received from Miss Katherine Wallis, who is well known in Peterborough and who is now nursing in the "Canadian Hospital" in Paris. She writes:

"There are about 44 here with frozen feet. In one ward there are eight patients — two English soldiers with frozen feet, a little Frenchman who had been shot in the thigh; three Arabs, who are nice enough, but a bit wild. Then there are two lieutenants. One had ben shot in the foot by a dum-dum bullet. You never saw such a foot! Most surgeons would have amputated, but Dr. Favre says he is going to have him walk again. He suffers a good deal. The other lieutenant is splendid. He had his arm shot in the morning, and held it up all day, and kept his place. In the evening he got the most awful wound in his thigh, and his foot broken, and was jolted in a wagon over the fields. He was four days without having his wounds dressed. He is getting on splendidly, and never a word out of him. They say the authorities are pleased to have a Canadian nurse. Everyone has been so nice to me, and the English boys are happy to have me. Everyone except the English boys, who call me Sister), calls me "Mees."

MUCH GROUND IS COVERED BY NEW BUILDINGS

The number of building permits issued in Peterborough during 1914 has been 304 for construction costing $436,320 which is a trifle below the figures for 1913 which were 311 permits for $458,540.60. The year 1913 had an increase over 1912 but the depression prevalent during a great portion of 1914 has undoubtedly caused the small slump. Taking all things into consideration the past year has been a very active one for building in the city. The month of May led with 75 permits for $105,260 and April is a good second so far as the number of permits are concerned as 70 were taken out. The total however was but $98,015. During June 44 permits were issued for work costing $113,950. During the month of December 4 permits were issued for an amount of $3,200. During the same month in 1913 the number of permits was 12 for $47,605. The building permits for the year compared with 1913 were as follows:

MYSTERY IS SOLVED

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—The murder mystery of Mount Pleasant Cemetery has apparently been cleared up. The dead Macedonian who was found with crushed skull half covered in snow, near the old Belt Line tracks, late Tuesday night, has been identified as Bogoira Trendo, 24, laborer, married, 131 Niagara street. Under arrest are two Russian Poles: John Ziolko, 23, 693 West Richmond street, and Thomas Scichocki, 21, 111 Elizabeth street. They will face a charge of murder in the police court this morning. The former is rumored to have made a statement tantamount to a confession, in which he admits having induced the victim to go out with him and Scichocki, having seen Scichocki striking the blows that killed Trendo, and having helped hide the body.

The alleged theft of a shovel, and Ziolko's dismissal, the alleged tattling of Trendo and rumors of the size of his savings—which had accumulated in order to bring his bride from his home in Zegiova, Macedonia—are said to have been the beginnings of the affair.

GROSE IS COMMITTED

first drawn to the noise. He dropped the telephone, and ran down the hall to where he saw them clinched. O'Brien's back was to the east wall of the hall. His impression, from the first glance, was that they were holding each other's arms. He hurried to them at once and grabbed Grose, pushing him into the first room to his left. O'Brien remained there standing. He turned to remove O'Brien, and found him toppling over down beside the wall. He seemed to be smothering. Assisted by some others who were there, he helped him up. They turned him over on his back on the floor to give him air, tearing off his collar and tie. He gave him ice water, holding it to his mouth, as O'Brien was by this time unconscious. No stimulants were given him just then, so they took him out into the alley-way to give more air. He phoned for a physician, and finally Dr. Gallivan responded. They tried to give him brandy and then applied artificial respiration. They did not suspect he was dead, but judged him to be merely unconscious.

Mr. Graham said he phoned to the fireball for the pulmotor and this was soon brought. Dr. Gallivan had arrived by this time, and the deceased was brought into the kitchen. The doctors pronounced him dead after working on him. Twenty-five minutes had elapsed before the physicians pronounced him dead.

Ordered Grose Away.

Mr. Graham told Grose to get away a few minutes after they started to work on O'Brien, as he anticipated that O'Brien would soon recover and start trouble for him. He told him to get out at once as "he might have killed that fellow." Grose left with several companions.

The police were notified, and the coroner.

To Mr. Gordon witness said that O'Brien's neck appeared to be swollen. Mr. Graham said that Grose said to him, "O'Brien had it in for me."

Dr. Gallivan was called and told of getting a telephone message at 10.15 or 10.30 Christmas eve to come to the hotel. He found deceased, William O'Brien, lying on the kitchen floor. He was dead. An examination was made. Artificial respiration and the pulmotor failed to revive him. A post-mortem examination was made by himself and Dr. Eastwood sixteen hours after death. No signs of external violence were discovered. A hemorrhage at the base of the brain had occurred. Instantaneous death would occur. Undue force at the particular point would cause the hemorrhage. This undue force might be caused internally or externally. O'Brien seemed to have been fairly healthy. He had an enlargement of the thyroid gland in the neck, which is commonly called a goitre neck. It was possible that his death could be caused by the excitement. It could probably be caused by a blow.

Mr. Gordon subjected Dr. Gallivan to a stiff examination in an endeavor to ascertain cause of death.

Dr. Eastwood corroborated his fellow-practitioner's statement that hemorrhage at the base of the brain would cause death, and that death would come almost immediately.

"What would cause the hemorrhage?" asked the prosecution.

Dr. Eastwood—"Increased blood pressure."

Crown—"What would cause this increased pressure?"

Witness—"External violence; excitement; extreme muscular exertion."

Crown—"Would a blow cause it?"

Witness—"A blow might cause it of sufficient force, or the excitement of the altercation might cause it."

Mr. Gordon—"Internal force might have caused death?"

Witness—"Yes."

Mr. Gordon—"Would the muscular effort used in preventing a fall have been sufficient?"

Witness—"Yes."

Look out for roorbacks against Mayor Buller in tonight's press.

ICE FROM THE CANAL

Board of Health Want Volume of Water Increased

At the meeting of the Board of Health, held on Thursday morning, the chairman, Dr. Amys, reported that the water has been lowered in the canal from Nassau to the Lift Lock, and thus the city is being deprived of one of the sections where pure ice is obtained. It was decided to have Dr. Amys interview Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., on the matter, and ascertain if some steps cannot be taken to have the volume of the water in the section of the canal in question, increased.

The Review is informed that the water in the canal reach at Nassau has been lowered by order of the engineers, who decline to be responsible for the enclosed banks if ice is allowed to rise and fall so as to corrode and disturb the rip-rapping. The loss for repairs might be considerable if ice-shoves were encouraged simply because the city wishes to cut ice in the canal instead of in the river. Ice-shoves in case of rain or floods and subsequent freezing may easily become very dangerous to canal banks. If the city will guarantee the Government against damage, the Government will be only too pleased to open the reach between the Warsaw road and Nassau. This matter has been thoroughly gone into, and leaves no room for doubt.

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

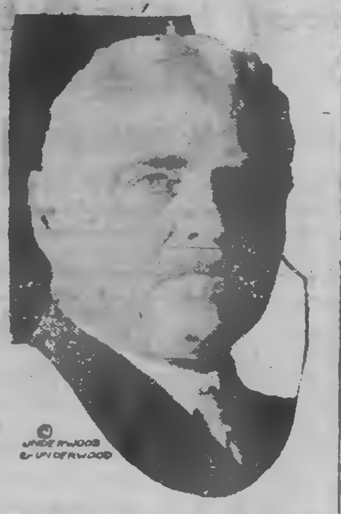
Six New Armies

LONDON, Jan. 2.—An army order issued last night announced that the present organisation of the army will be further increased by the creation of six armies, each of which will consist generally of three army corps. The first army will be commanded by Lt.-Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, who headed the first army corps of the expeditionary force; the second by Gen. Sir Horace L. Smith-Dorien; the third by Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter; the fourth by Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton; the fifth by Gen. Sir Leslie Rundle, and the sixth by Gen. Sir Bruce M. Hamilton.

Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles C. Monro, Lt.-Gen. Sir Charles Ferguson and Lt.-Gen. Sir H. C. O. Plumer have been given command of the first, second and third army corps respectively.

This organization follows on the absorption of Lord Kitchener's army into the regular ramy.

A "war tax" for Americans for a war in which they are not engaged will be an anomaly. That it may be necessary throws light on the interdependence of nations under modern conditions.



Britain Resents Action of This American Officer.

Colonel Goethals whose action in dismantling the wireless apparatus of British colliers in the Panama Canal zone is the subject of an enquiry by the British Government of the Washington authorities. Goethals, it is said, has admitted that the charges made against the captains of the colliers were baseless.

POINCARE'S PREDICTION

Says This Year Will See a Beneficient Peace

PARIS, Jan. 2. — The belief that the year now beginning will see the ending of the war was expressed by President Poincare in an address yesterday to members of the diplomatic corps who went to the palace of the Elysee to present New Year's congratulations to the President.

"I do not doubt that next year at this traditional reception we shall celebrate together the establishment of a beneficent peace which solidly based on rectitude and respect or international treaties, will give necessary security to the nations," said the President.

The British Ambassador, Sir Francis Bertie, as dean of the diplomatic corps, presented the congratulations of his colleagues and himself.

Germany's Latest Prisoner List.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—(By wireless to London.)—The total number of prisoners of war held in Germany at the end of the year amounts to 8,138 officers and 577,375 men.

This is shown in a summary issued from headquarters yesterday, which points out that the list does not include civilians interned in Germany, nor the prisoners taken during the pursuit in Russian Poland, or those in transport.

Of the above total the French contribute 3,459 officers, including seven generals, and 215,905 men; the Russians 3,575 officers, of whom 18 are generals and 306,290 men; the Belgians, 612 officers, including three generals and 36,852 men, and the British, 492 officers and 18,283 men.

ANOTHER NOTE FROM THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—State Department officials who conduct the legal affairs of the Department are busily engaged in the preparation of the new communication to Great Britain on the subject of contraband. Also they are fortifying themselves for the American rejoinder to Sir Edward Grey's reply to the American note already forwarded, if the British answer shall call for further discussion. It is anticipated that it will.

The American note on contraband, it is said, will lead to discussion not only by Great Britain, but by France and Russia, as each of these nations has its own list of contraband and conditional contraband.

Fifty Million for France.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—It is announced that arrangements have been concluded to issue publicly on the London market $50,000,000 in French five per cent. treasury bills. The official announcement of this is expected to be issued within a few days.

Another Aerial Raid.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Dunkirk, on the northern coast of France, was again bombarded by four German aeroplanes Thursday, according to reports which reached Paris during the night.

GERMANS ARE NOW CUT OFF

Allies Achieve Success in the Nieuport Region

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Consistent gains by the allies in the centre, spectacular night aerial attacks against Metz and Arnavile on the German frontier, brilliant artillery successes coupled with hard-won advances in the reduction of Steinbach in Alsace, and desperate but abortive attempts by the Germans to retrieve St. Georges, were the outstanding features of the French official statements issued yesterday.

Before Nieuport the Germans are caught between the allies and the sea. In this lies the reason for the furious character of their artillery attacks upon St. Georges, which lies two miles slightly east of south of Nieuport, on the Yser Canal.

With the capture of St. Georges by the allies the Germans are now holding Westende between two fires. The British ships are bombarding it from the sea, and the Franco-Belgian marines and infantry, supported by French artillery, are attacking their advanced positions on land from the direction of Nieuport.

Should the allies make a further advance from St. Georges the advanced positions of the enemy, which extend along the coast as far as the northern harbor-head of Nieuport, would be endangered. Accordingly, the Germans set great store by the reoccupation of St. Georges. So far, however, the allies not only have been able to withstand the German bombardment, but have succeeded in strengthening their position.

Following the battlefront southward and then east along the Aisne and on to Alsace, the next point of activity mentioned in the day's reports is the region south of Dixmude, where the Germans violently bombarded the bridge-head position captured by the Belgians and now being strengthened. Owing to the inundated condition of the ground in front of this position the Germans were compelled to fire from such a long range as to make their shelling ineffective.

The entire front in the forest of La Grurie was assailed by repeated attacks. At several points the Germans were able to advance a distance of fifty yards, but the French met them each time with a counter-attack.

The following official communication was issued last night:

"There is nothing new as yet to report of the operations of to-day.

"From the sea to Rheims there was yesterday hardly anything more than artillery engagements. The enemy bombarded without result the village of St. Georges and the head of the bridge position organized by the Belgians at a point south of Dixmude.

"Spirited cannonading resulted advantageously for us between La Bassee and Carency; between Albert and Roye; in the region of Vernsetil, and in the neighborhood of Blanc Sablon, which is near Caronne. At the last mentioned point we also demolished certain German earthworks.

"In the region of Perthes and of Beausejour we have held the gains made by us on Dec. 30. During all the day of Dec. 31 the activity of the opposing artillery forces was interrupted.

"In the Argonne the enemy attacked violently almost the entire front in the forest of Lagrurie. At certain points he advanced for a distance of fifty yards, but counter-attacks were at once delivered.

"In the region of Verdun there have been violent artillery engagements.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the northwest of Fliry, the Germans delivered during the night of Dec. 30, 31 and on the morning of the 31st, no less than six violent counter-attacks for the purpose of retaking the trenches captured by us on Dec. 30. Each of these attacks was brilliantly repulsed.

"Our aviations have bombarded at night the railroad stations at Metz and at Aranville.

"We continue to make progress foot by foot in Steinbach. Here the artillery of the enemy showed great activity during the morning of Dec. 31, but in the afternoon of this day our batteries won a distinctive advantage."

Baligrod Taken By Storm.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent at Petrograd in a cable says: A semi-official communication states that Baligrod was taken by storm late on the evening of the 29th. Entire companies of the Austrian troops were destroyed with the bayonet.

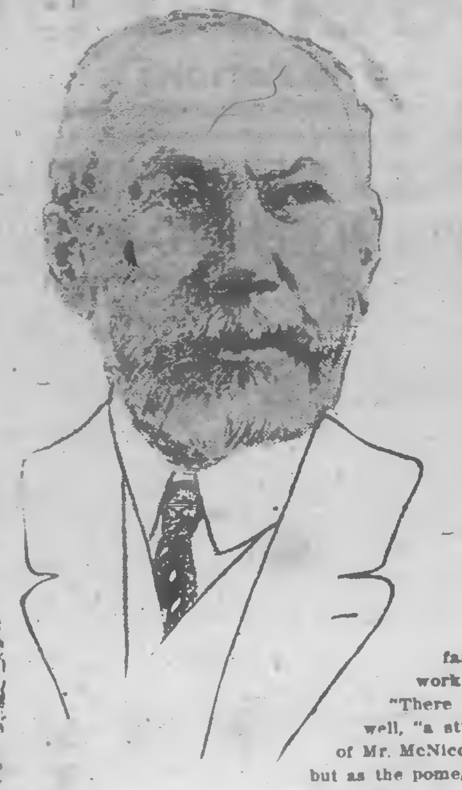
During assaults between the 21st and the 29th the Russians captured in the Lisko zone one regimental commander, 84 other officers, 8,500 men and ten machine guns. The Austrians have lost so heavily that in several regiments only fifty men remain.

During the repulse of sorties from Przemysl the Russians occupied some of the hills around the fortress. The correspondent of Utro Russii says that the troops are being continually drawn tighter round the fortress. Deserters state that provisions are running short. The slackening of artillery fire shows that ammunition is also being carefully husbanded.

The garrison is suffering much through lack of warm clothing and fuel. Among the prisoners are many who have lost legs and arms through frostbite.

On the return from fruitless sorties the garrison devastated the country, firing villages and massacring many of the inhabitants. Thousands of half-clad and half-starving peasants, deprived of the means of subsistence, are coming into the Russian lines every day. The number of deserters from the forts is increasing. They come through to the Russian positions hungry, exhausted and half-frozen. According to their stories, the officers of the garrison now wink at desertion, especially if committed by the weak and sickly.

It is stated here that six German corps (about 240,000 men) have suddenly disappeared from this front, and speculation is rife as to whether they have been diverted for a concentrated movement on the Russian left or have been withdrawn for operations in the west.



David McNicoll

WEIGHTY in counsel, reticent but observant, David McNicoll is one of those "men of vision" whose name will always be associated with the fortunes of the C.P.R. The announcement of his retirement from active executive work was not altogether a surprise. He had rendered long and signal service; he had advanced from one dignity to another; he had seen the system grow from the proverbial grain of mustard seed until it had covered a continent; he had a large share in the shaping of those high policies which gave character and prestige to the company, and it was only fair that after forty years hard work he should have a holiday.

"There is," writes one who knows him well, "a strong individuality in the manner of Mr. McNicoll. He might seem to bluff you; but as the pomegranate cut in the middle shows the red vein of life and vitality, so if you could get beneath the surface you always found in Mr. McNicoll no small share of humanities. He does not wear his heart on his sleeve. He never utters the thoughtless word. He goes over plans and diagrams and details with a wonderful mastery. He grasps things, not with exuberance but with steadiness.

"He has the Scotch seriousness; but also the Scotch humor—dry, pawky, cropping out spontaneously and unexpectedly. It scorched sometimes, but mostly it is playful. Though of serious bearing and quiet dignity, the good story with a point in it finds him eager. He gave to his duties undivided attention, working early and late. From step to step he rose until he was associated with the system in its most influential period and policies, and through it all Mr. McNicoll remained the incarnation of simplicity. Even in his younger days he gave himself to the cultivation of simplicity of life and habit, speech and manner. One recalls him in his shirt sleeves, in the old offices opposite Place D'Armes Square busy and eager at the moment when the company was commencing its career. If he could make a coup he would not announce it in any startling way; he loved to work on, unnoticed by the public. If a moment of confidence were given in respect of any large policy, there must not be a word said about it.

"From Place D'Armes Square Mr. McNicoll went down to the old Albert Buildings on Victoria Square as passenger agent. In the Windsor Street offices the system began to show life and strength; and larger honors were awarded. The vision extended; a nebulous system took form and coherency; all the young men set themselves with zest in the saddle and the C.P.R. went forward by leaps and bounds. Mr. McNicoll has the coolest of temperaments. No one ever saw him excited. In the debates which took place in the various passenger associations, which he attended as representing the C.P.R., he spoke with a sort of grim quietness, but he gained his point. The officers of the C.P.R. will recall his keenness; the Board of Directors his quiet attentiveness to which the pointed remark gave emphasis; while the general public will always associate the growth and influence of the system with the name of David McNicoll."

There were no casualties and there was no conflict with Bulgarian guards.'"

PETES WON FROM THE TORONTO ROWING CLUB

Locals Defeated Senior O.H.A. Representatives by 8 to 7 — Grover Halpin Made a Hit With His Back-checking

Toronto, Jan. 2. — Peterborough won two victories last night. As a representative of Peterborough they won from Toronto Rowing Club 8 to 7 in an exhibition game at the Arena. As a representative of the O.H.A. intermediate series they won from the senior representatives. It was not a good hockey game, but the rough-and-ready style of play adopted by the teams kept the interest at high pitch throughout.

It was the first game for the locals, and they showed it. The players wandered from their positions, and there was an utter lack of combination. They lacked condition, and their back-checking was weak. Manager Breen has, however, good material, and it should be a much improved team which takes the ice against St. Michael's next Friday.

Peterborough has a good team. The defence is strong both on the offensive and the defensive, and both have wicked shots. Hunter's ability is known, through his play with local senior teams in recent years. He has, however, little on his partner, Pethick. This fellow, while he lacks Hunter's weight, is much faster. He shoots hard and is quick to take advantage of an opening.

Halpin and Park are the best of the forwards. The former is not very big, but he is a regular "hornet." He broke up many plays by his effective back-checking. Park is a goal-getter. Kelly did not play left wing, but his substitute, Cavanah, played well. Although the team has not had much chance to practice, they showed considerable team play. The teams:—

Peterborough—Goal, Janes (Dwyer); defence, Hunter and Pethick; rover, Halpin; centre, Park; forwards, Cavanah and Knapman.

Toronto Rowing Club — Goal, John (McCrudden); defence, McLean and Sidley; rover, Burrill; centre, Farr; forwards, O'Gorman and Reynolds.

Referee, Con. Corbean.

LEAGUE GAME FOR JUNIORS

Conquerors of Lindsay Youngsters Open Series Here

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team opens the season here on Monday evening with Port Hope as visitors. Given confidence by their victory over the Old Boys on Thursday night, the Blue and White intend to send the lakeshore septette back with a defeat. Port Hope won from Lindsay last night, and by a dash in the last period demonstrated that they have condition and speed. The Petes are also in good condition, so a lively sixty minutes of hockey is anticipated.

Legros, Long and Morrow will in all probability form the rear guard, While Jackson and Knapman are almost sure to be at centre ice. Who the wing men will be has not yet been decided. Lornie Rose and Richardson may be on, and if they are, the wing men of the visitors will step fast all evening.

WHITBY DEFEATED AT BOWMANVILLE

Rubber Town Seven Won Yesterday's Game by 6-3

Bowmanville, Jan. 2.—In the O. H. A. intermediate game played here yesterday between Bowmanville and Whitby, the home team won by a score of 6 to 3. The line-up:—

Bowmanville — Goal, Spry; right defence, Jones; left defence, Davey; rover, R. Williams; centre, Greenfield; right wing, Higginbotham; left wing, Hooper.

Whitby—Goal, Brown; right defence, McIntyre; left defence, Smith; rover, Lavery; centre, Rice; right wing, Watron; left wing, C. Blanchard.

Referee, R. Marsh, Toronto.

STRONG FINISH BY PORT HOPE

Home Team Handed 8-2 Defeat to Lindsay

Port Hope, Jan. 2.—Lindsay met defeat in an O.H.A. junior game here last night by a score of 8 to 2. In the first period Lindsay scored the only goal, but at the end of the second the score stood 4 to 2 in Port Hope's favor, and in the last the locals piled up four more goals, making the final score 8 to 2.

Dougan played a star game for the visitors, while Edmunds, Emmerson and Lowe did good work for the home team. The line-up:—

Lindsay—Goal, O'Laughlin; point, Sanderson; cover, Haugh; rover, Scott; centre, McIlroy; wings, Griffis and Dougan.

Port Hope—Goal, Edmunds; point, Darch; cover, Thompson; rover, Emmerson; centre, Hills; wings, Lowe and Rowden.

Referee—W. A. McCord, Toronto.

BASKETBALL

Last night at the Y. M. C. A. one of the fastest basketball games so far played, was put on, when the Veterans upheld their supremacy by defeating a team of All-Stars to the tune of 35-30. The score indicates how fast and close the play was, every man working like a Trojan. The All-Stars looked as if they would trim the Old Boys, and at half-time the score was 18-14 in their favor. However, the veterans came back and made a strong finish. For the losers, Flowers deserves particular mention, Scoring eleven baskets for his team. Dobbin and Cressman got most of the baskets for the Veterans.

JUNIORS SHOW UP WELL IN GAME WITH OLD BOYS

Youngsters Were in Better Condition and Able to go at Top Speed Throughout

SCORE WAS 9 TO 6

The Peterborough Juniors made a very good impression on the handful of fans who were present at the game Thursday night in aid of the Salvation Army Lodging Home by defeating the Peterborough Old Boys by 9-6. The game was featured by dashes of fast work by both teams and they were times when the fans were given an opportunity to applaud, as some of the Juniors would best a heavier opponent. The Old Boys sent out a very strong line-up with "Gamey" Stratton and Jerry Coughlin on the forward line. Both men are keen on individual rushes and it greatly pleased the followers of the local squad to see the defence stop the speed merchants. Leo Derocher had a very busy night in the nets for the visitors and found considerable difficulty in handling shots from the kids. O'Connell registered on a couple of occasions and the Ottawa man could hardly see the rubber coming. Orme Cavanah who played on the defence for the Old Boys went strong part of the time but showed signs of poor condition.

The Juniors had it on the Old Boys in condition and therein lies the secret of their success. They were on the defensive for the first few minutes of each period but always went strong in the latter ten minutes. Knapman and Jackson were the most prominent of the forwards with O'Connell chasing them well for the honors. The right wing boy has none too much speed but he carries a shot like a cannon. On the defence Long ad Smythe played good hockey and rushed well. Legros in goal was cool at all times and will undoubtedly have a big season in O.H.A. company.

Mr. Fred Kelly of the Intermediates refereed to the satisfaction of all.

The teams:—

"I believe he was one of the first to land, and his duty was to examine culverts and bridges for mines, etc. It happened in the dark. He was surrounded in the bush and put up a splendid fight. He seized a rifle himself, and with a few others whom he had collected on the spot, made a counter-attack and drove them back. He was found shot through the head."

GOODFELLOW—McGHIE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at 406 Park St., the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McGhie, late of Glasgow, Scotland, on Dec. 31st, when their eldest daughter Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. R. J. Goodfellow, of Belleville. The bride was charmingly attired in white silk with over-dress of shadow lace and net and was given away by her father. Miss Mabel Johnson of Fraserville was bridesmaid and wore white embroidered voile with sky trimmings. The groom was assisted by Mr. Jas. McGhie, brother of the bride. The bride's present from the groom was a pretty gold pendant set with emeralds, while he presented Miss Johnson with a handsome manicure set.

After the ceremony guests to the number of twenty-five repaired to the dining-room where a sumptuous wedding supper was served.

The bride received many handsome presents, including a miscellaneous shower from the young ladies of the Bell Telephone Company with whom she was recently employed.

After a short stay in Peterborough Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow will leave for their future home in Belleville where they will be at home to their many friends.

A goodly number of presents testified to the esteem in which the bride is held. Luncheon was served about 11 o'clock, and the table was presided over by Mrs. Warren, the Misses Chase and the Misses Ellis, assisted by Messrs. Harris, Ketchen, Chase and Warren. About midnight, the happy assembly departed, singing songs of remembrance and good fellowship. CHAPLAIN INGLES DEAD.

Toronto Clergyman Dies in England of Meningitis.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Capt. Leycester Ingles, chaplain of the Quen's Own Rifles of Toronto, who was attached to Bulford Hospital, died Thursday night at Netheravon Hospital. He was taken ill over a week ago and on examination was found to have contracted cerebro-spinal meningitis, to which disease he succumbed.

After his graduation he was Master for two years at Trinity College School. Then he took a three-years' divinity course in the General Theological Seminary, New York. Ordained deacon in 1913, he was at Coldwater for a few months, going in September to be curate at St. George's Church, Toronto, assisting Rev. R. J. Moore. He left for Salisbury Plain as chaplain of the 3rd Battalion, 1st Brigade.

MANY NEW YEAR'S CALLERS ENTERTAINED AT Y.M.C.A.

Various Departments Thrown Open to the Boys and Their Elders

Six hundred people, approximately, visited the Y. M. C. A. on New Year's Day, notwithstanding numerous counter attractions. The freedom of the whole building was extended all day, and large numbers of boys and their parents, and friends of the institution availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing the facilities contained there for the betterment of the young men and boys of the city. The Y. M. C. A. was beautifully decorated for the occasion with evergreens, flags, holly and pennants, and made a most inviting place wherein to spend a few hours.

In the morning the boys had things to themselves, the members being permitted to bring another boy. Regular gymnasium classes were held, after which the boys made for the baths and swimming pool, where they disported themselves to their hearts' content.

The bowling alleys were crowded, while the parlor games were extremely well patronized.

Afternoon Program.

Something slightly different but none the less interesting made up the afternoon program, when the ladies' auxiliary of the institution were hostesses to all visitors, serving coffee and refreshments. Over four hundred were thus treated in the hours between three and five. Music was supplied while this was in progress by Messrs. Asa Huycke and Charles Seymour on the piano and violin. Quite a charming animated scene was presented, and everyone seemed to radiate the spirit of New Year's and good cheer. The hostesses were Mrs. J. C. Shook, president of the auxiliary, Miss Nina Davidson, Mrs. W. C. Austin, Miss Clegg, Mrs. C. N. Meserve, Mrs. G. C. Carruthers, and Miss J. James.

After supper, the evenig session of amusement started, the first part being a musical program of solos, readings and instrumental numbers. The contributing artists were Mr. Asa Huycke, Douglas Carlisle, J. John, Miss Etta Kemp, Miss Gumpricht, and Mr. James Brown. The accompanists were Messrs. J. H. Renwick, Asa Huycke and Miss Kemp. Mr. C. N. Meserve, general secretary of the association, presided, and at the conclusion of the proram made a few remarks, welcoming those present, and expressing the pleasure that it afforded the officers of the Y. M. C. A. to see them out. He hoped they would take an interest in the work and activities of the institution, as it was a source of encouragement to the staff to see the people taking an interest in the progress of the "Y."

Good Time at Y. W. C. A.

All the girls and young ladies who took advantage of open house at the Y. W. C. A. had a most enjoyable time. No attraction, recreation or amusement that the building contains was withheld from visitors yesterday. While there was no program arranged or special attraction of any kind, everyone who attended was pleased with their reception.

THE BROWNING CLUB

The Browning Club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. on Monday next, January 4th, 8 p.m. Owing to Thursday proving an inconvenient night for many of the members, Monday has been fixed for the weekly meeting from now on. The subject for the first meetings of 1915 is "Cleon," the comparison poem to "Karshish," on the effect of Christian doctrine in the pagan world. Karshish was an Arabian scientist contemporary of Lazarus; Cleon is a Greek poet and artist contemporary of St. Paul. In the interests of English Poetry and its lovers, the management committee offer a cordial welcome to guests and visitors at the weekly meetings.

A Successful School

The Peterborough Business College has fairly established its reputation as a fair training school for business. Hundreds of its former students are today filling responsible and lucrative positions in Canada and the United States. In selecting a business school to attend, young men and women should exercise great care. Nothing but the best should satisfy. In judging any institution, one should consider facilities, faculty, and results. Those interested in a business education would do well to consult E. E. Logan, who has been in charge of the Peterborough Business College for the past four years, and who has bad years of experience in Commercial work.

France Opens Commercial War.

PARIS, Dec. 2[illegible].—France is going to make an effort to obtain her share of the world's trade which was formerly in the hands of Germans.

Minister of Commerce Gaston Thomas presided yesterday at a large meeting of merchants and ministers and members of the Paris Chamber of Commerce. He told the business men that this was the time for them to reach out for trade in all countries where Germany previously had been a large purveyor.

Before the meeting adjourned, a committee representing the principal industrial and financial institutions of France had been chosen to organise this work of expansion.

MANY CHILDREN WERE MADE HAPPY

"I wish it was war time always," said one little boy after he had received a nice gift and enjoyed himself to his heart's content in the armouries Wednesday afternoon when the Women's War Fund Committee entertained over one hundred and fifty persons mostly the wives and children of the soldiers who have enlisted for the war. The children had a real Christmas tree loaded down with presents and the fact that it was after Christmas made little difference in the feelings of the children.

Fire Chief Howard whose geniality makes him popular at such affairs officiated in the role of Santa Claus handing out the presents which consisted of bags of candy, toys, and articles of clothing such as dresses, coats, etc. A supper was served about four o'clock in the recreation room after the children had played musical games and romped around the building playing hide and seek and other children's games.

AT THE MOVIES

Hundreds of citizens sought entertainment at the moving picture houses yesterday and were not disappointed. The management of the Grand Opera House featured their bill with war scenes, which were well up to advance notices. The pictures will be shown again today.

Henri, the famous skater as the headliner at the Royal performed before capacity houses, his work being the best seen here in a long time. The pictures also were good. A straight program of pictures was given at the Red Mill.

So great was the patronage at the Empire Theatre that seats were at a premium during the afternoon and evening. The pictures sustained the splendid reputation earned by this theatre, the main film being, The Man of the Street.

ALLEGED MURDERER WHO WAS ARRESTED HERE TO BE TRIED NEXT MONTH

He Sought Lodging at Police Station and Police Recognized Him as Man Wanted in Springfield

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 4.—Albert Brodeur, alias Blanchard, charged with the murder of Mrs. Matilda E. Chase, will be placed on trial for his life early in February. Brodeur was arrested at Peterborough, Ontario, in the latter part of January of last year.

Mrs. Matilda E. Case, 34 years old, wife of Arthur Case, was murdered in her home, 53 Wilcox Street, at 11.35 o'clock the evening of Sept. 20, 1913. Louis Scarnici, who lived with his family in the lower tenement of the house, heard two shots fired and saw a man rush out of the front door and down toward Main Street. Mr. Scarnici ran upstairs and found Mrs. Case lying on the floor with a bullet wound in her heart and in the room was a 32-caliber revolver with two of the five chambers discharged.

The police were notified, but when they arrived the murderer had made his escape. Inquiries were made and the police identified the man who ran out of the house as Albert Brodeur, alias Blanchard, who had been a frequent visitor at the Case home without the knowledge of Mrs. Case's husband, who was employed nights in the Fisk Rubber Company's plant in Chicopee Falls. A few days after the murder the police learned that Mrs. Case had been warned of her fate and that she communicated the threats which had been made against the life of herself and her husband to the members of the Scarnici household.

Brodeur Identified.

At the time the murder was committed the theory was advanced that Mrs. Case was murdered upon her refusal to elope. As soon as Brodeur had been positively identified as the man seen leaving the Case home, the police began a search for him. All nearby towns and cities were notified, but the police were handicapped by the lack of a photograph. A few days after the murder a photograph was found and with this to work on the police sent out descriptions broadcast throughout the country. Later photographs were received from the War Department, as Brodeur had been arrested a few years earlier as a deserter from the army and had served time for this offense.

In the course of their investigation the police found that the night of the murder Brodeur stayed in the house of his father, 468 Chestnut Street, and was seen leaving the premises early the next morning. No further trace of him was found for several months and it was thought in some quarters that he had committed suicide, but this theory was not seriously entertained by the police.

In December, 1913, Brodeur was indicted for murder in the first degree. On Jan. 29, 1914, he walked into the police station in Peterborough, Ont., and asked for shelter. He gave the name of Arthur H. Birchwood, but the constable who had received the circulars with Brodeur's picture and description, recognised him and Brodeur later admitted his identity. The local police were notified and Capt. Boyle and Inspector Frank W. Quilty went to Canada and brought him back to this city. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder when arraigned. Judge Dubuque appointed Atty. Richard J. Morrissey to represent him at the trial.

ALBERT BRODEUR

Who next month will stand trial for the murder of Mrs. Matilda Chase of Springfield. Brodeur walked into the local police station on the night of Thursday, January 29, 1914, and applied for lodging. The police had a circular, bearing his photograph and on being questioned he admitted his identity.

MISSION OF ENVOY TO VATICAN

Representative of Britain was Supposed to Offset Influence of Enemies

London, Jan. 4.—The publication as a Parliamentary paper of the instructions given his mission to the Vatican entirely justifies the despatch sent some weeks ago to the effect that the aim of the appointment was to counterbalance the inimical influences around the Holy See. The message in question was censored heavily.

The official paper shows that the envoy was instructed to inform the Pope that the British Government were anxious to put themselves into direct communication with him for the purpose of demonstrating the motives which governed their attitude since the moment normal relations between the Great Powers of Europe were disturbed. The Daily News comments as follows:

"Even if a personal approach to the Pope were necessary, it is not clear why the allies could not have made use of the Belgian Minister to the Vatican."

The Rome correspondent of the Tablet points out that it is impossible to discover any word, whisper, or indication that the Pontiff or any person representing the mind of the Vatican favored one side or the other.

THE CITY OF HAMILTON receives a large supply of power from the Dominion Power and Transmission Company, which is building an auxiliary steam plant of 80,0000 horse-power costing probably six million dollars. That is the kind of proposition Peterborough is facing in its local power and water situation. A discussion of the problem at Decew Falls appears on page 2, column 1, and should be read by all those desirous of seeing this city overcome the difficulty it faced a short time ago, due to frazil and anchor ice.

RAILWAY COMPANIES CUT EMPLOYES WAGES

Men Say They Will Not Submit to Reduction and Have Been Advised to Resist.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—Over 14,000 employes of the Grand Trunk have been notified by Howard Kelley, first vice-president, that on account of a falling off in business owing to the war, they will be asked to accept a reduction in wages, dating from April 1st next.

Thousands of employes on the Grand Trunk Pacific have likewise been informed by Morley Donaldson, general manager, that they will receive a cut in pay dating from the first of this year.

In both cases, the reduction is to be based on results of the operation for the half year ending Dec. 31st last.

The men through their representatives have notified Mr. Kelly and Mr. Donaldson that on no account will they accept a cut in pay. They have been advised by their international presidents to oppose the proposed action of the companies to the last ditch. Failing in a satisfactory agreement through consideration, a strike or lockout will probably follow.

TRAINS TO BE CUT OFF

Twenty Trains to be Taken Off Ontario Division

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Jan. 4. — The Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific will reduce expenses by cutting off twenty trains in the Ontario division, eight of them at the Toronto terminus.

The fact that traffic is extremely light on the G.T.R. "flyer" which leaves for Toronto via Lindsay at 7.10 a.m. and arrives in return at 10.10 p.m. has given rise to the belief that it will in all probability be discontinued when the holiday rush is over. As yet the local G.T.R. officials have received no notification.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Jan. 4. — John Masters, working for the Shortreed Co., at Kearney, Ont., is the first case under the new Workmen's Compensation Act. While driving a team in the woods Friday morning he injured his hand and the statement of his claim was immediately mailed to the commissioners.

ADDRESSES GIVEN BY MISS QUINN

Well Known Missionary is Returning to China

Miss M. Quinn, missionary from China, left Peterborough today for her home in Listowel. She expects to return to China to resume her missionary work about February 1, but such action depends upon whether the mission board considers her health sufficient for a resumption of her work.

Miss Quinn has been engaged in the Chinese mission fields for fifteen years, and this is her second time to be home on furlough.

She is well known to Peterborough people, owing to the number of times she has addressed local audiences.

Last night she gave a very illuminating address in the Bethany Tabernacle, speaking on the needs of China and the immensity of the task yet to be surmounted. She said some people asked why not let the Chinese alone to work out their own salvation according to their religious beliefs. That, however, would not be fulfilling the teachings of the Scriptures.

Miss Quinn's mission is situated at the foot of one of the three holy mountains in China, up which thousands of worshippers pass yearly to prostrate themselves.

Miss Quinn will visit Ottawa after being in Listowel.

REV. J. A. McKENZIE WELL THOUGHT OF BY CONGREGATION AT LACHUTE

The Lachute News has the following:—

"Rev. J. A. McKenzie, B.A., B.D., having received a call from Knox Church, Peterborough, Ontario, has accepted the same and will shortly remove to his new sphere of labor. It is a hopeful congregation of 550 members, and will call both the talents and energies of its minister into full exercise. As assistant to Rev. J. L. George, M.A., for the past few years he has done excellent work, and carries with him the confidence and respect of all the people and their good wishes and earnest prayers that God would bless him even more abundantly in the future than in the past."

ONLY SLIGHT DECREASE IN RAIL TRAFFIC

Majority of Holiday Travellers Took Fare and a Third Ticket

One of the surprises in connection with the Christmas holidays this year was the volume of railway passenger business, which showed very little decrease over the amount that was recorded last year. There appeared to be no retrenchment, so far as Christmas travelling entered into the order of things calling for economy of expenditure, and one pasenger agent informed a reporter today that in spite of this condition, their business was not five per cent. below that of last Christmas and New Year's.

They had been anticipating a material falling-off.

A peculiar fact in connection with the situation is that, while there was a three-day single fare time limit rate available this year, fewer people took advantage of it, but purchased the fare and a third rate, thus apparently having more money to spend. While there were fewer passengers, there were longer distance tickets bought, which accounted for the receipts maintaining a good figure this year.

ENDED LIFE IN JAIL CELL

Toronto Man Suicided After Arrest for Drunkenness

SILK TIE WAS USED

Toronto, Jan. 4. — Robert Fryer, 43 McGill street, a prisoner at the Agnes street police station, committed suicide in a cell there on Saturday night by strangling himself. The body was removed to the morgue, where an inquest will be held today.

Fryer used a knitted silk tie to end his life. One end of the tie he tied to one of the upright iron bars of the cell door and the other end he tied around his neck. He then apparently threw his feet from under him. While the jerk did not break his neck, it dislocated it, and Fryer apparently strangled to death while unconscious.

Fryer was arrested on Saturday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock at the request of his mother. He had come home under the influence of liquor and smashed every piece of furniture in his room. His mother telephoned for the police and he was locked up on a charge of drunkenness. He was first placed in the corridor of the cells, but about 8 o'clock he began to quarrel with the other prisoners and Station Duty Officer Thompson placed him in one of the individual cells. These cells are about seven feet long, five feet wide and fifteen feet high. They are fitted with electric light, the fixture being on the ceiling to prevent prisoners from attempting to hang themselves. The door of the cell is of solid wood to the height of three feet nine inches from the floor. From that point iron bars reach to the top sash.

Thompson visited the cells several times between 8 and 9 o'clock and on each occasion was asked by Fryer for cigarettes. He was in the cell and saw Fryer at 9.15. The prisoner was then quite peaceful. When he went in again at 9.30 Fryer was dead. Although there were sixteen prisoners in the corridors, none of them saw or heard Fryer do the deed. This leads the police to believe Fryer crouched behind the wooden portion of the door when he tied the tie to the bar and his neck.

Fryer was 26 years of age. He was a Canadian, and a painter by trade.

Two Japanese aviators while flying in an aeroplane between Kyoto and Osaka fell to the ground and were killed.

GETTING FURTHER INTO STEINBACK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 4. — This afternoon's official statement says: "From the sea to the Oise the day passed in almost complete calm. In front of Noulettes, our heavy artillery reduced German batteries to silence.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne our batteries showed their superiority, and brought under their fire reserve forces of the enemy.

"We became possessed of several points of support held by Germans in the region of Perthes and of Mesnil-les-Hurlus.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse and on the heights of the Meuse, there was intermittent cannonading.

"An effort made yesterday morning by our troops to occupy Boureuilles did not succeed. Our advance continued in the forest of Le Pretrie, which is to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

"In Upper Alsace we occupied an important height to the west of Cernay. A counter attack by the enemy was repulsed.

"In Steinbach we have taken possession of the vicinity of the church and of the cemetery."

LONDON, Jan. 4. — Reports from Lemberg say that pestilence is spreading in Przemysl, where provisions are almost gone, and the resistance of the garrison has become noticeably weaker.

STOCK EXCHANGE OPENS WITH CHEERS AND SINGING OF NATIONAL ANTHEM

LONDON, Jan. 4. — The first session of the London Stock Exchange since July 30th opened this morning with three rousing cheers and the singing of the National Anthem. Business is strictly for cash, and limited also in other respects.

FEAR BRITISH SPIES AT ANTWERP PRISONS CROWDED WITH SUSPECTS

LONDON, Jan. 4. — Fear of British spies has become a mania with the German staff in Antwerp, and the prisons are overcrowded with suspects. Trench-digging there is employing thousands of men, and it is believed that this is part of the plan for the wholesale mining of the defence of Antwerp, for the purpose of delaying its capture by the Allies.

PETERBOROUGH POULTRY SHOW OPENS TUESDAY

New Forces to be Raised at Once

Toronto, Jan. 4.—Military headquarters received orders to raise three battalions of infantry of unstated strength and two squadrons of mounted infantry, one at Hamilton and the other at Toronto, one hundred and fifty men each and to prosecute the enlistment actively.

Election Vote Not Very Heavy

Indications thus far point to a rather small vote being polled today. The interest is not of the same degree as in former years and the fact that aldermanic contests occur only in the north and west wards tended to keep the number of voters down. According to the general feeling on George Street it looks like William Buller for Mayor, Ald. Green in the west ward, Ald. Langford in the north ward, and some new faces on the Board of Education.

ICE TROUBLES AT DECEW FALLS.

ONE OF THE LARGEST distributors of power in Ontario is the Dominion Power and Transmission Company of Hamilton, a company formerly known as the Cataract Power Company. This company supplies power to the city of Hamilton and to various towns and villages in the locality, and operates street and suburban railways. Of recent years it has had to compete with the Hydro-Electric system, but appears to be still a strong, progressive and paying industrial concern. It draws its power from Decew Falls, which is supplemented by water from the Welland Canal. It is thus in the same district in which the Hydro-Electric obtains power.

An item in the Hamilton Spectator of December 15th, 1914, stated:

> "The Dominion Power and Transmission Company today experienced some of its old trouble with needle ice at the Decew Falls plant. The big flumes began choking during the night, and while the power was not completely cut off, it was so weak that the company was unable to operate its street cars on the radial lines. A couple of cars managed to get around the west end route early this morning, but the company found it impossible to put the service in operation until 11 o'clock. George E. Waller, general superintendent, explained at noontime that word had been received from the generating plant that a good coating of ice had formed over the water, and that the chances are there will be no further trouble this year. For years the company has been trying to overcome the difficulties caused by the needle ice plugging the flumes, without avail. This trouble has not only greatly inconvenienced citizens, but it has cost the company a lot of money. When the weather turns suddenly cold, as was the case yesterday, and stays that way, the power tie-up does not last very long.
>
> With its old auxiliary plant, the company was able to furnish some of the east end industries with power and light this morning until the regular service was in operation again, but a number of plants had to remain closed. It is probable that by next year the big steam plant which the company has started work on in the far east end will be completed. This will take care of the company's business at any time when there may be a break in the Decew Falls service.
>
> Many grumbling people faced the chilly blasts today, some of them having to walk from the extreme west to the far east end. People with autos were lucky, and one east end firm carted its employees to work in big motor trucks. People residing in Dundas and Burlington, or along the beach, whose business brings them to the city, had to take a morning off. The Brantford and Grimsby lines were also tied up."

In reply to a letter from the Review, the Dominion Power and Transmission Company informed us that the question of frazil ice is rather a complicated one, and that the phenomena vary widely in their manifestations, according to the conditions under which they appear. Mr. E. P. Coleman, the general manager, says he understands Mr. John Murphy, the Ottawa engineer, has been very successful in stopping the formation of frazil ice on racks, under the conditions existing in Ottawa, where the water is taken from a running stream, by heating the upper end of the racks, but that they have tried the same method without success. Their supply is taken from large still reservoirs, and the difficulty they experience occurs only when their ponds are prevented from freezing by a strong southwest wind, and is never of long duration. When the ponds are frozen over, the tendency to the formation of frazil ice ceases, and they have no further trouble. The only precautions which they are able to take, or that show any signs of being effective, are those which tend to assist the formation of surface ice, such as covering their lower ponds with booms.

As to an auxiliary steam plant, the manager says:

> "We are building an auxiliary steam plant of considerable magnitude in Hamilton, which is intended for an ultimate capacity of about 80,000 horse-power, which will, of course, be of great assistance to us when the frazil ice conditions obtain, but this was not the primary object of building the plant, which is designed to work in conjunction with our water power, with a view to increased capacity and efficiency."

Now, the evidence of this news item and this letter needs to be considered carefully. It shows that ice troubles have been serious, especially in their indirect effect, such as preventing citizens of that locality from getting to their places of employment. It shows also that each power plant is, so far as its operation is concerned, an individual problem, that, in most cases, must be solved with a view to local conditions. When similar conditions prevail elsewhere, and the ice problem is overcome, there is sound reason for saying it can be met in this city. The evidence shows also that rack heating, of at least one kind, will not alone answer the problem. The manager's letter does not say precisely what kind of rack heating was employed, nor how it was applied, and, to make a fair and accurate estimate of the methods used at Decew Falls, one would have to have a description of the plant there, particularly of the fore-bays and racks. A point also worthy of note is that the auxiliary plant was not built primarily to overcome the difficulty arising from frazil ice, but to increase the capacity of the plant. Figuring the cost of the plant at seventy-five dollars per horse-power, the Hamilton plant would cost, very roughly, $6,000,000. A 3,000-horse-power plant would cost probably $85 or $90 per horse-power, and a 10,000-horse-power plant might have a ten per cent. reduction on this estimate. These figures are very rough estimates, and would vary with the quality of the plant, such as the use of mechanical stokers, but, at any rate, they are not encouraging as a solution of ice problems alone. Again, the evidence does not show that any other precaution was taken than the one mentioned. Nevertheless, the evidence is interesting, and, while it serves to show the magnitude of the problem that is facing the Utilities Commissioners and the citizens of Peterborough, it has not seriously shaken the recommendations of the chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, of Mr. John Murphy, or of Dr. H. T. Barnes.

MADE IN AMERICA DOES NOT INCLUDE CANADA.

FOR BLAND, unadulterated assurance on the motto, "Business is business," let us place on record a letter recently sent by a United States manufacturing house to its customers in Canada. The firm has a German name. Since the war broke out, the name began to look unpopular. The Wurzburger-Frankenstein Company (this is not the actual name) hasten to assure their Canadian customers that their goods are manufactured by American labour in America, paying American dividends, wages, etc., etc. And therefore—entitled to consideration at the hands of Canadian people in a time of war. On the lower left-hand corner of the letter is a nice little poster stamp blazoned "Made in America." That settled it, to their mind. Of course, they thought we might have some constitutional objections to buying things labelled Made in Germany or Austria, but "Made in America,"—are we not part of little old America, and is there not something more in the map of America besides the United States?

To be sure, we are not at war with the United States. We are not objecting to the axiom that "Business is business." In fact, we hugely admire the self-assertion and complacency of this U. S. firm with the German name in hastening to assure Canadians that it is not the name but the goods and where the goods are made that count. If we people in Canada could just imbibe the faith that would inspire us to blazon "Made in Canada" everywhere and always, in face of everything, we could overcome in this country even a German name. The firm of Wurzburger-Frankenstein are right. The name is only a pretext. It is the goods that count. But where the firm of W.-F. went entirely astray was in supposing that "Made in America" would be just as acceptable a slogan to the people of this country as "Made in Canada."

German View—British Navy.

(Captain Persius in Berliner Tageblatt.)

With the exception of a few small and old ships, the whole English navy long ago withdrew to the protection of its ports—much to the disappointment of our submarines, which deserve sympathy because they find no more valuable targets for their well-aimed torpedoes. It would be a mistake to criticise the British navy on this account. It will, perhaps, be said that in view of its enormous superiority, its tactics are feeble. But England never pursued a policy of sentiment, and there can be no doubt that the tactics which have been followed are technically right. The moment for throwing in battleships and battle-cruisers has not come. The situation is similar for us. Let us refrain from making unjust criticisms, and let us not forget that, notwithstanding the proud successes of our cruisers and submarines, there can thus far be no questioning of a considerable weakening of English sea power. Our navy is only at the beginning of its task, and this task is so gigantic that a sense for realities and possibilities is absolutely indispensable.

Prosperity for Grain Growers.

(Industrial Canada.)

A year of great prosperity for the Grain Growers' Grain Company has just been recorded, according to the following Canadian Press despatch from Winnipeg:

"A net profit of $151,080 on the year's operations of the Grain Growers' Grain Company, being approximately twenty per cent., was announced at the annual meeting by President Crearer. Ten per cent. dividend was declared, and the balance placed in the reserve fund."

Twenty per cent. is a big dividend in these hard times, and we do not notice any manufacturers' showing such profits.

Congratulations are due the grain growers for their successful management of a business which is closely connected with "the great industry."

Harmonious Allies.

(London Times.)

The French, under Napoleon, used to fight for glory, glory of the nation, if not of the individual; but glory, even more than ambition, is the last infirmity of a noble mind, and it may mislead a people to shed its blood for a shadow. There is some egotism in the pursuit, even, of national glory; but there is none in the spirit with which the French and all the allied armies are waging the war. And that is clear from the brotherhood that exists and increases between their troops and ours. There never has been a war in which allies have worked together so harmoniously for a common cause, in which they had so completely lost sight of their peculiar national interests for the sake of the common victory.

Great Britain and the United States.

(Montreal Evening News.)

Great Britain has the sympathy and good wishes of the United States without the asking in this war. It is a war on militarism, and the American people favour such an endeavour. It is a war for justice to smaller nations, and the American people favour that. Even Mr. Roosevelt, who disclaims all intention to take sides, cannot resist accusing Germany of a crime against Belgium.

No Nickel for the Germans.

(Guelph Herald.)

Assurance is given that Canadian nickel is not reaching Germany. The news is welcome. But the Government should assure itself that the news is beyond question.

BLOOD INDIANS NOW GROW GRAIN

The Indians on the Blood Reserve, situated between the Belly and St. Mary's Rivers in Southern Alberta, are coming to the front as growers of grain and raisers of cattle. The gaudy Indian warrior has discarded the war paint and the war path to guide the plow. The reserve is the largest in Canada, containing some 354,000 acres of good agricultural land, and the wards of the Government who inhabit it are said to be worth over $5,000 per capita. If they continue to show the interest in agriculture that has produced for them such abundant harvests, they will before long easily double their per capita wealth. It is now about seven years since farming was taken up as an occupation, but in that time the Indians have been able to prove their ability to grow grain that compares favorably with that of their white neighbors along the reserve.

In addition to grain the Indians have gone in for cattle raising, no bulls but pure-breds of the beef strains being used. All the beef needed for rations among the Indians is raised on the reserve. The cattle are handled as range stock in one large herd with a stockman in charge and Indians to assist him. A few individual Indians own their own cattle and take good care of them.

The Bloods have a sufficient number of horses for their own use, and from time to time the agent issues permits to sell ponies. Their horses are improving through the use of stallions provided by the Indian Department.

Tramp-Inventor's Romance

NATHAN A. KURMAN

From a tramp in Canada and the United States to chief electrician to the King of Siam, Chulalongkorn, in five short years, is a small fragment in the adventurous life of Nathan A. Kurman.

Kurman ran away from England and became a tramp. The wanderlust carried him to South Africa during the Boer war, into the land of cannibals on a trading exposition, to Burmah, India, Siam, French China and the Philippines, where he became assistant engineer of the telephone company.

The young adventurer and soldier of fortune invented the callophone, an instrument which magnifies the human voice from four to six times, picking it out of the air.

BACTERIA IN MILK

Twenty degrees of temperature make a great deal of difference in the rapidity with which bacteria multiply in milk. There is a certain temperature which is most favorable for the growth of these tiny organisms. Below this temperature the growth is retarded; the lower the temperature the slower is the growth. Bacteria that increase rapidly at 70 degrees F. grow much more slowly at 50 degrees, and at 40 degrees grow hardly at all. Some kinds, however, tend to increase even at the freezing point.

Many of the bacteria commonly found in milk produce no apparent change in the milk. Others may change the flavor without changing the appearance, while some of the most common types of bacteria cause marked changes in both appearance and flavor. In this class are included the bacteria which sour the milk by converting the sugar into lactic acid and those which form a sweet curd. Another type destroys the casein and albumen in the milk and causes putrefaction and bad odors.

The number of bacteria in milk depends, first, on the number of bacteria in the udder; second, on the amount of contamination from outside sources; and third, on the rapidity of the bacterial growth. The rate of growth depends on the temperature at which the milk is held.

THE DEADLY COCKROACH

A Carrier of Disease Germs in Same Category as Fly

Cockroaches carry diseases. They are almost as dangerous as the house fly, to which medical research has traced the spread of germ diseases and through a campaign of publicity has educated the public to wage merciless war upon.

Now science is camping upon the trail of the roach, having pronounced it a death-dealing agent. Kill him at sight. He is a menace to your life and the lives of your children.

Evidence as to roaches spreading other diseases is less direct, but there is no doubt they play an important part in the dissemination of diphtheria, tonsilitis and tuberculosis, carrying the organisms on their feet and in the intestinal canals.

Cockroaches over-run kitchens, pantries, garbage heaps and decaying matter, picking up particles with their feet, or feelers, and dropping them later in another place. When hundreds and thousands of cockroaches do this, the amount of matter they carry from place to place is larger than the average housewife considers possible.

Flourid of sodium will exterminate the cockroach. It is a dry, white powder, and costs but 15 cents a pound.

It should be so distributed that the roaches will walk in it. A small quantity adheres to their feet or antenæ and the insect cleanses them with its mouth. It should be spread in thin layers in runways where it will remain dry and powdery. With a blower it should be forced into cracks, pipe holes, spaces behind moulding, pantry shelves, cupboards and wherever cockroaches are noticed traveling about. In small quantities the powder is not dangerous, although when it is used in pantries it is always best to scald dishes and pans before using them to wash off any particles of the powder which might make one sick.

Instead of imagining trouble why not imagine joy?

Widower Judd's Housekeeper

She Was a Surprise for Two Designing Widows

By ANNIE HEILMAN

Mrs. Platt sat on her front porch, busy in braiding a mat. She was one of those women one likes to have about. There was a certain comforting presence in her large figure and comely face. Although the face when at rest was somewhat sad, yet it was one of those beaming faces that seem full of love for the whole world—that is, for all whom she admitted into her world. For those outside of its bounds she had no use. Just now her thoughts were busy with her neighbor, in whose direction she sent her glances.

"Peter's getting his supper early," she mused. "It's pretty lonely for him, but I hope he won't be inveigled into taking Serena Lamb for a housekeeper. I never was one to promote gossip, but all Clifton knows that her reputation for dressing far outdoes her skill in housekeeping. If I thought"— Just then she turned her head and caught sight of Mrs. Lamb walking up the path.

"Too bad to see that nice home going to sack and ruin," Mrs. Lamb began after settling herself in the rocker. "I hear it's fairly swarming with mice. Peter only uses two rooms. Isn't it a wonder he ain't picked out a housekeeper afore this?"

"I've an idea," said Mrs. Platt, endeavoring to speak unconcernedly, "that he'll probably ask you"—

"Me!" interrupted Mrs. Lamb in an astonished tone. "Me! And with such a famous cook as you next door! Trust a man to get a cook when he's free to pick and choose. Sarah wasn't much on the cooking, and I guess he'll want a change."

"David and I spent twenty-five happy years in this house," sighed Mrs. Platt. "It'd come hard for me to leave it."

"And I couldn't possibly leave my place," protested Mrs. Lamb. "And the garden doing so nicely too. You'd oughter see my strawberries, Emeline. Peter says they are the finest he ever saw. I'd bring you over a saucerful, but as Peter was going on so about your getting so stout I thought I wouldn't encourage your appetite any. Well," looking keenly at her friend to assure herself that the blow had struck home, "I must be getting on."

Neither lady had deceived the other. Each knew the other, from widely different motives, stood ready at a moment's notice to respond to Peter Judd's call for a housekeeper. Each knew that Clifton was wondering which of the two widows who lived on either side of Peter would be called eventually to fill the departed Sarah's place, for the custom prevailed in Clifton when a man was, in the wisdom of Providence, bereaved, to hunt out some widow respected by the community to undertake the duties of housekeeper, and generally, after a decent period of mourning, the twain became one.

"If Serena makes up her mind to have Peter he'll have to give in," philosophized Mrs. Platt. "She's already married two that didn't in the least want her. She's comfortably off, too, and don't need to leave her home. I wouldn't be so set against it if I didn't know 'twas her that interfered between him and Floretta Young more'n twenty years ago. Peter up and married Sarah out of pure spite, and Floretta took that good for nothing Cy Blakey. If ever two people were cut out for one another, Peter and Floretta were. Well, as he's held out against Serena for over a year he may escape for good. I'll not worry any more."

But she did. The chance and apparently careless remarks that Serena let fall, as if an understanding existed between herself and Peter Judd, fretted Emeline's spirit. In the depths of her honest soul she believed that Peter was a regular caller at the Lamb home. She waited for the announcement of Serena's engagement as for a blow that was sure to fall.

Still, when it came she was not prepared for it. One afternoon she had just taken her accustomed seat on the porch when the gate opened, and Mrs. Lamb swept up the path with an unusual air of importance.

"Land, ain't it hot!" she exclaimed. "Such a muss as I've got into!" carefully arranging the folds of her new organdie skirt before sitting down. Her tone rang with triumph. Mrs. Platt felt the change in the atmosphere, and all her world darkened.

"There's all that house of Peter's to be gone over this hot weather. Not a mite of cleaning since Sarah died. Such a looking place! And it must be all rid up by the middle of September. I just ran in to ask if your paint and whitewash brushes were in good order. Peter said as how you mentioned having a supply of 'em when you offered to keep house for him months ago. My, how red your face is, Emeline! You hadn't ought to wear pink. Now, if I do say it, I've a complexion that'll stand any color."

"I didn't exactly offer"— stammered Mrs. Platt, tears of mortification smarting her eyes.

"Oh, well, it is all past and done with," interrupted Serena airily. "I just had to give in. He wouldn't take a 'no.' Well, if you'll lend the brushes I'll be goin'."

Armed with the brushes, Serena departed, every movement of the organdie proclaiming victory.

In the days that followed Mrs. Platt gave much time to sitting on the front porch watching her friend's progress in the house cleaning line. Serena called seldom now, and the time passed slowly.

"I just ran in to ask your opinion of these samples," began Serena one day in September. "We're going to have new carpets for the double parlors. Don't you prefer the green?"

Serena wore her best dress. "I shall need a new one soon," she said complacently, smoothing down its silken folds.

"I suppose the affair 'll come off soon," ventured Mrs. Platt after the merits of greens and reds in carpets had been duly canvassed, but Serena only smiled consciously as she gathered up the samples and departed.

"I suppose it'll come off after harvest," mused Mrs. Platt despondently, meaning Peter's wedding.

One afternoon as Mrs. Platt was setting her table for tea she was surprised by a call from Peter Judd.

"Coming to invite me to the wedding," she surmised as he sauntered up the path. "Well, if it's foreordained he should marry Serena I'll not be spiteful about it. Sit down and have a cup of tea, Peter," she urged, cutting a great, fat, shaking, four storied jelly cake into generous slices.

Peter Judd, a large man with a pleasant, florid face, seated himself and absorbed tea and cake with much satisfaction.

"You always were a master hand at cake, Emeline," he commented affably. "I never saw your beat. It's something in that line that I called to see you about."

Was it possible that he was going to ask her to initiate Serena in the difficult art? Mrs. Platt's face clouded. "Well?" she asked in a strained voice.

"I want that you should do a little baking for me. Could you?"

"Do some baking for you?" she gasped. "For the land's sakes! When?"

Peter reached for another piece of cake. "For the next Tuesday and the balance of the week. You'll know what's needed."

The wedding was to take place Tuesday, then. Emeline's world was a temporary blank. "Serena wouldn't like it," she faltered.

"What if she don't?" exploded Mr. Judd. "She can't cook. And I want something decent in the house when I get back from Minooka."

"Back from Minooka?" Emeline asked in a dazed fashion. "Are you going away?"

"Why, of course! Going to Minooka to get married. Don't you know that Floretta lives there?"

"Floretta! Are you—is she"—

"Her man's dead, if that's what you're trying to get at. Drank himself to death, I reckon. I thought you knew all along."

Mrs. Platt poured more tea with a shaking hand. A sudden burst of sunshine illuminated her world. "Does Mis' Lamb know?"

"Not she," returned Peter, beginning another attack on the cake. "'Tain't none of her business anyway. I got her to clean up before Floretta comes. That's all I wanted of her. Will you do them things, Emeline—the cakes and such?"

"Yes, yes!" cried Mrs. Platt. Her voice was joyful, her face aglow. All the gloom of the past few weeks vanished as if by magic. "I'll do more'n that, Peter. I'm so tickled to have Floretta for a neighbor again that I'll invite a lot of her old friends here for Tuesday. And I'll have the best dinner spread out that you ever sat down to."

"My husband has gone to the war." Signs with these or similar words are displayed in many store windows in Berlin. They are a silent appeal to the customers to assist the wife of the soldier in continuing the business, and it seems that these appeals find ready response.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Measles.

Measles is a dangerous disease. Recent investigations show that 1 per cent of all deaths may be traced to measles, and from 1 to 6 per cent of all cases of measles are fatal. The disease chooses its victims especially from children under ten years of age, but occasionally attacks an adult. It shows no preference of sex, locality, race or climate. Records from fifteen American cities show epidemics of measles recurring with quite a degree of regularity at intervals of from three to five years. The death rate from measles is greatest during the spring months, although the percentage rises again in November. One reason why measles is so difficult to control is the fact that medical science as yet has only an incomplete knowledge of the virus by which the infection is carried. Other reasons are found in the high contagiousness of the disease and the fact that a patient is capable of infecting others before the characteristic eruption has made its appearance on his own body. It is the height of folly to regard measles as harmless. It is a disease that is serious both in itself and in its frequent complications and after effects.

BRING SUNSHINE AT BREAKFAST

Smiling Faces and Pleasant Words Make Happy Day

Bring sunshine into the dining room. Insist on the family being pleasant and happy at meal time. It is easy to leave "the grouch" outside if we but think so. Simulate the sunbeams as far as you can.

If possible have your breakfast table set in an orderly manner every day, even if you are such an overworked housekeeper that an extra piece of laundry looks like the "last straw."

You can give a dainty appearance to your breakfast table by the use of Japanese napkins. Use them placed about the table as you would doilies. Put one in the centre and one at each place.

In one "of the best regulated families" the old time greeting, "How do you feel?" has given place to "How well you are looking this morning." This puts an entirely new duty upon the family, for it feels it must at least try and feel as well as it is looking.

Look for sunshine and you will find it.

Forget to scowl and grumble. Do your best to start the day right for yourself as well as for others.

If the members of the family arise at different hours, serve each breakfast on a tray. This simplifies the work and the breakfast may be made to look more inviting.

Keep a color scheme; all blue dishes or all white. Do not mix them. This does not take any more time, only a little more thought.

Change once in a while and serve the breakfast with the "very best company" dishes and see what exclamations of joy this will bring forth.

Rejected a Beauty Title

ANNE MEREDITH

"The worst affliction ever visited on me was when a press agent got me into the papers as a 'stage beauty.'" So says Anne Meredith, who won fame playing in "The Rule of Three." "I don't want the distinction.' The records show that stage beauties never are given any credit for the quality of their acting, nor the do they save any money. They can't; it costs too much to live up to their title.

KITCHEN WRINKLES

Keep butter in stone or glass jars with tight fitting covers.

Bread will keep better in a wooden box than in tin.

In case grease is dropped on the kitchen floor, scatter soda on it and pour boiling water over it.

A new medicine dropper should be used for measuring extracts in the kitchen.

When cutting new bread dip the knife in hot water, and the bread can then be cut as smoothly as stale.

In laying a table the sharp edges of all knives should be turned toward the plate.

A little borax water boiled in the coffee pot once in two weeks will keep it sweet and bright inside.

To clean window-glass use warm water and borax, no soap. Wipe dry and polish with newspaper.

When anything has been spilled on the stove, or milk has boiled over and a suffocating smoke arises, cover the spot with salt.

After frying onions, pour a little vinegar into the frying pan; let it get hot, and it will remove all smell from the pan.

Life is one continuous hurdle race to the people who acquire the habit of jumping at conclusions.

GROWTH OF BABIES

A Physician's Figures as to Weight at Various Ages

A baby should weigh seven and a half pounds at birth. It should lose from four to eight ounces the first week of its life and gain, each week during its first year. During the first six months it should gain from four to eight ounces a week and during the second six months two to four. When it is three months old it should weigh from 10 to 13 pounds; five months, double its weight at birth; six months, 15 to 16 pounds; nine months, 17 to 18 pounds. And at twelve months, three times its weight at birth. Every week until it is a year old the baby should be weighed and every two weeks when between two and three years old.

If a mother cannot nurse her baby she must look about for some food which is wholesome and nutritious. Of the artificial foods, cow's milk, properly diluted, is the best. But it must be clean, young and have been kept cold. The best of all milk is that which comes from a healthy cow which is kept under sanitary conditions. Such milk should be consumed before it is twelve hours old. If this cannot be secured, certified milk is next best and then pasteurized milk. No mother should feed any milk to her baby which has not been investigated.

To Make a Cake Level

When filling a cake tin remember that the center of the cake is the part which will usually be the highest, so spread the batter as much to the sides as possible, leaving a depression in the center; then the cake, when baked, will be level and much more convenient for icing.

FOR IRONING DAY

Some Little Tricks That Have Been Found Worth Trying

A brick, preferably a new and solid one from the brickyard, makes an excellent ironstand. It's a non-conductor of heat and for that reason is more satisfactory than a stand bought in the store.

Irons that are heated on the top of the range or fire should be stood upon a piece of polished tin. They heat more quickly and are kept quite clean. The lid of a biscuit tin does admirably for this.

If you blacklead and polish very thoroughly the base and handle of your iron it will keep hot much longer for the polish keeps the heat from radiating off.

The ironing board should be covered with a cloth on which there are no seams or patches as these would mark fine linen, etc. The best board covering is flannel, tacked down and then a removable cotton cover.

If your elbow when ironing is bent away from your body at an upward and outward angle that shows that the table is too high and nothing is more tiring. Have a little platform made and notice the difference.

BATTLEFIELD ETIQUETTE

Soldiers Have Many Rules Governing Their Behavior.

The etiquette of the field of battle is quite as important as that of the home.

For instance, the Germans violated the etiquette of war by disregarding their promise to preserve the neutrality of Belgium, and by invading France before making a formal declaration of war.

At the outset of the war it was falsely reported that a French doctor had infected the water supply of the German fortress of Metz with cholera germs. Had the report been true, the doctor would have been guilty of an act of barbarism, opposed to all the usages of war.

The rules of war allow the cutting off of an enemy's water or food supplies, but not the poisoning of water!

It is not etiquette to try and kill the enemy's commander-in-chief. He may be captured, but if killed in the process that is but the "fortune of war."

An enemy has a perfect right to bombard a town which refuses to surrender, but to deliberately destroy unprotected places and national institutions is an act of vandalism; that is, unless the buildings are used for military purposes against the enemy.

The reason so many towns in Belgium were evacuated on the approach of the enemy was because the Belgians trusted in the good faith of the Germans to adhere to the rules of war etiquette. Louvain with all its glories would still be intact but for this breach of good faith.

The rules in regard to prisoners of war are clear enough. Anyone wearing the uniform of a recognized military force must if captured be treated as prisoner of war, provided, of course, that he can show that he is not a civilian masquerading in uniform. If a soldier in uniform is caught trying to gain information within the enemy's lines he must not be treated as a spy, but as a prisoner of war. Secrecy and disguise make the spy who, of course, has no rights whatever.

A prisoner of war cannot be compelled to give his parole. Should he, not being on parole, attempt to escape he may be shot while in the act of escaping, but if captured he is not to be punished beyond being placed in more rigorous confinement.

A prisoner of war cannot be forced to aid in operations against his own side, or to disclose information about them, but he may be made to earn his keep by working at his trade or doing non-military work.

A general is entitled to make full use of traitros and deserters, but he should not tempt men to be false to their allegiance.

A commander is entitled to disseminate false news; indeed, much of the art of war lies in hoodwinking your opponent. There are, however, limits to the way in which deceit may be practiced.

Thus it would be most unsportsmanlike of a general to tell an officer or soldier to go over to the enemy, and pretending to be a traitor or deserter, to give false information and then make his escape.

On the other hand, if a soldier is tempted to turn traitor he is justified in pretending to listen to the tempter, and in this way gaining any information he can which in due course is conveyed to his commanding officer, and then laid before the commander-in-chief of the army, who may benefit thereby materially and by a change in his plans bring success to his troops.

New Burglar Protection.

Safe-blowers will have a new protective device to combat in the near future in the form of a chemical compound, designed to produce blindness. A glass container holding one pound of the gas producing chemicals is suspended between the outer and the inner doors or walls of the safe. When the casing of the safe is blown or drilled the glass receptacle is broken, and when the door is opened the powerful fumes at once render the burglar sightless, and if he fails to find his way out of the room he becomes unconscious for several hours. The flask is held between a number of felt surfaces to prevent accidental breakage when the safe is being closed.

Wrong Diagnosis.

"I like your face, sir," said the inquisitive stranger. "It is a cheery face, a face with a mission; it is the face of a man who believes in reducing the burden and annoyances of his fellow men. You're the sort of man who believes in banishing the shadows," the inquisitive man went on.

"Nope," replied the little man, with a vigorous shake of his head. "You've lost me this time. I'm the man who puts up the awnings."

Progression.

Grocer—You gave that woman a potato too many when you measured out that quarter peck, my son.

Boy—What's one potato, I'd like to know?

Grocer—One potato in a quarter peck! Four potatoes in a peck! Sixteen potatoes in a bushel! Sixteen hundred potatoes in a hundred bushels! Why, my boy, you'll ruin me if you keep on.

HUGE COLONIES OF EUROPE

Tremendous Issues That Hang on Present Conflict.

The capture of German Togoland by British forces is a reminder that no part of the world is without the very real possibility of conflict between the nationals of the contending powers.

Almost exactly half the land surface of the earth is held, directly or as dependencies, by the group of nations engaged in the present war. Roughly, there are about 56,000,000 square miles of world's land area with a total population of 1,623,300,000.

The warring nations of to-day hold away over 29,000,000 square miles with a population of 898,440,000, representing considerably more than half of the world's population.

Germany has secured a foothold in Africa, where she controls about a million square miles in the southern part of the continent, German East Africa and German West Africa. Between these provinces, which are about equal in size, lies the great South African British Empire. With Germany eliminated, Africa would be far on the way to becoming an English and French continent.

France at present holds more African territory than any other nation, aggregating more than four million square miles, or a greater area than that of the United States with Alaska and the insular possessions. This includes most of the Sahara Desert, but also Algeria in the north, and a vast fertile area of the valleys of the Nile and Niger.

Egypt is still nominally a dependency of the Turkish empire, but for all practical purposes, both upper Egypt and lower Egypt are British. The Soudan provinces of Britain now join the British territories in East Africa, which includes a frontage of about 400 miles on the Indian Ocean.

In the very heart of tropical Africa lies the Congo Free State, with nearly a million miles area, nominally a Belgian dependency, touching British South Africa and also British Soudan holdings. It requires no bold stretch of imagination to conceive that when the powers sit down around Europe's council board at the end of this war, Britain may ask, in payment for her services in sending an army to rescue Belgium, that the sovereignty of the Congo Free State be intrusted to her.

France might be expected to assent, because her African holdings would likely be consolidated and considerably extended as the result of her participation in the war. With the Congo state in her possession Great Britain would possess a great strip, running almost due north and south from the Cape to the Mediterranean littoral of Egypt. She would control the interior lake region of the continent whose vast bodies of navigable fresh water are fairly comparable to the Great Lakes chain of Canada; the Congo valley, the gold and diamond reefs of South Africa, and practically every mile of the immense and rich valley of the Nile.

Holland, Germany and Great Britain are about equal partners in the ownership of New Guinea, the second largest island in the world, lying immediately north of Australia.

In addition to the African holdings, Britain has vast colonies and rich protectorates the world over, including the great empire of India; France has colonies and protectorates in India, China, South America, the West Indies, the North Atlantic, and Indian and Pacific Oceans; Germany has colonial possessions in China and the Pacific Ocean; Russian despotism hangs like a dark shadow over the two continents of Europe and Asia and presents a long coast line on the northern Pacific.

This very rough outline of elements which will have to be weighed when the world's peace is restored will suggest the tremendous issues that hang on the contest.

Almost Hurt Him.

Two negro men were employed in tearing down a three storey brick building. One negro was on top of the building taking off the bricks and sliding them down a narrow wooden chute to the ground, some thirty feet below, where the other was picking them up and piling them. When this latter negro was stooping over to pick up a brick the former accidentally let one fall, striking him directly on the head. Instead of its killing him, he merely looked up, without rising, and said: "What you doin' thar, nigger? You make me bite my tongue."

Destructive Power of Shrapnel.

The shrapnel is really a flying cannon which shoots its charge while in flight or explodes on contact. Its speed of 500,000 feet per second is produced by a pressure of from 30,000 to 35,000 pounds per square inch from the powder that expels it from the gun. Its bursting charge exerts a pressure of from 30,000 to 35,000 pounds per square inch. The metal of its case has a tensile strength of 135,000 pounds to the square inch and an elastic limit of 110,000 pounds per square inch.

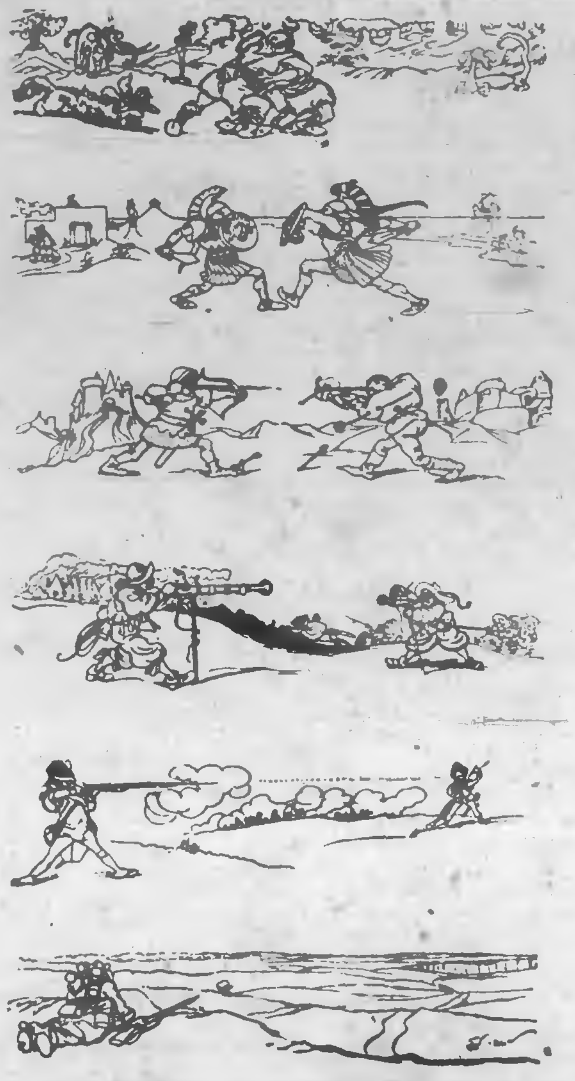
The Only Perfect One.

Willie was doing penance in the corner. Presently he thought aloud pensively.

"I can't help it if I'm not perfect," he sighed. "I never heard of but one perfect boy anyway."

"Who was that?" asked his mother, thinking to point a moral.

"Papa," came the silencing reply, "when he was little."



THE EVOLUTION OF WAR—By Caran D'Ache.

The late Caran D'Ache was one of the most famous cartoonists ever produced by France. He was the originator of the newspaper "strip comic" in which a story is told in a series of pictures, but he always avoided vulgarity and horseplay in his productions.

DAM THAT FORCED THE COLORADO BACK TO ITS BED

It Was Built in Record Time and Saved Some 600,000 Acres of New Farms from Destruction.

Word came to Tucson in the still of the winter of 1907 that the Colorado river was keeping an old threat and was sweeping into the dry Salton sink of Lower California at the rate of 44,000 cubic feet to the second. Already there was a lake fifty miles in length, fifteen miles wide, 100 feet deep in the center.

Washington was alarmed. It looked as if the entire imperial valley—a Holland in America, below the level of the sea and one of the richest farming spots in all the west—was to be inundated.

Theodore Roosevelt buried his pride and asked E. H. Harriman for help. Harriman did not have to bury any pride when he turned to Randolph and ordered him to do the job.

Randolph was having one of his "bad turns" at that time. But he is enough of a soldier to obey orders, and he went to the Salton sink flat on his back in his private car.

From that bed Epes Randolph built one of the world's great dams. In this day, when there are many huge impoundings, that may seem a broad statement. Men may think of the dams across the Nile or the Mississippi, the mighty structures of Panama and of the New York city waterworks, but not one of these was built under pressure.

Epes Randolph's dam was built under a stop watch and in fourteen days and twenty-one hours. In fourteen days and twenty-one hours he had placed 230,000 cubic feet of rock and gravel in the gap, all at a cost of something like $1,600,000. But the Colorado had been stopped and, like a naughty child, forced back into its old bed.

Once during the work Roosevelt by wire had asked Harriman how the job was getting on. The railroader replied that if the dam was not completed within five more days it never would be and 600,000 acres of fine, new farms would be forever lost. And when the president of the United States asked the then president of the Southern Pacific if the work would be done within five days Harriman replied that he had Epes Randolph on the job and that Epes Randolph had not yet known failure.

Epes Randolph was indeed on the job. He lay on his bed at the edge of the muddy flood and gave orders—thousands and thousands of orders in a single day. In the first place, the rock and gravel had to be brought a long way, and it was Epes Randolph who gave the directions under which the hundreds of gravel trains moved.

They closed the main line of the Southern Pacific and all its branches to travelers; they took the engines off freight trains up and down the lines wherever they could find them. They sent north to San Francisco and east to Houston and New Orleans for more engines and for flat cars by the mile. This flood tide of gravel traffic a master mind operated with his left hand; with his right he built the dam.

Before his car moved back to Tucson again he got out of bed and went out upon the work. Out toward the end of the embankment, steadily advancing across the path of the truant river, a group of men were struggling with a fine new steel car that had become derailed at the end of the temporary track.

"How long have you been trying to save that car?" asked Randolph.

"Twelve minutes," replied the foreman.

"Let it go," came the order from the chief. "Twelve minutes' time on this job is worth more than a hundred cars."

And so the car went down under some thousands of tons of rock and gravel that went to hold back the mighty Colorado from the haven that it coveted.—Metropolitan Magazine.

NOTABLE ADVANCE MADE BY FRENCH TROOPS IN ALSACE

Germans Have Been Outflanked and Town of Altkirch is Now Being Bombarded as Result of Biggest Success Since Deadlock on Western Front---Germans Were Forced to Call for Reinforcements.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The French troops operating in Alsace have outflanked the Germans and are now bombarding Altkirch. At other points on the 300-mile battlefront they have ripped through the German lines, making gains of a third of a mile at one point and a fifth of a mile at another, hurling the Germans back upon their rearmost trenches.

This is the district in which the operations are in the hands of Gen. Paul Pau, the one-armed veteran of the Franco-Prussian war.

The strategical victory won before Altkirch is the greatest recorded on the western battlefront since the fighting reached a deadlock with the assumption by the Germans of their rigid defensive along the Yser.

For the past fortnight the French have been hammering heavily at the German strongholds which constitute the advance posts protecting Muhlhausen. Thann has been gained, Asbach captured. Cernay bombarded and Steinbach invested, — all are within a small area about eight miles from Muhlhausen; and from the vigor of the French attack, both with artillery and infantry, the Germans were led into believing this was the objective upon which the French were centering their forces, to the exclusion of any other part of the line. Indeed, so terrific was the demonstration made on this frontier that the German were forced to call for reinforcements to stem the tide of the French advance.

Just when the French were fighting for Steinbach as if their national existence depended upon the taking of this town, when house-to-house fighting was the rule and ground was gained only foot by foot, a considerable flanking force was diverted to the southward, assailing the line of railway from Belfort, through Carsbach and Diersbach, to Altkirch.

After destroying the German line of communication by tearing up the railway between Carsbach and Diersbach, to the southwest of Altkirch, the French advanced along the line of the railway until they brought Altkirck itself within range. Here they bombarded a German train in which troops were being loaded. The train was standing in the railway station of Altkirch, and considerabel damage was done, besides throwing the German troops into panic, the attack coming as a complete surprise. This brings the French back on the line which they occupied in August, and is a most important gain.

Meanwhile the French offensive before Muhlhausen was maintained with great vigor, all the previous gains in the region of Thann being maintained.

The French War Office communique yesterday was as follows:—

According to the latest advices received here there has been no alteration in the situation. The weather continues to be very bad on almost the whole front.

"During the day of Jan. 2 we strengthened the position to the north of the Lys gained during the preceding days. The enemy has shown activity only in the region of Zonnebeke, which he has violently bombarded. From the Lys to Arras there is almost complete quiet.

"There was an artillery engagement in the region of Albert and Roye, and our infantry advanced some 500 metres near La Boisselle.

"From the Oise to the Meuse and on the plateau of Touvent our heavy artillery has demolished several fortifications, from which the enemy was harassing our sappers.

"Spirited artillery duels have taken place to the west and to the east of Craonne. Near Perthes-les-Hurlus, we have progressed about 300 metres. Near Beausejour there has been infantry fighting in which we have inflicted serious losses on the enemy.

"The Germans have launched two attacks without success in the forest of La Grurie. On all this portion of the front the artillery has shown everywhere great activity.

"In the region of Verdun and on the heights of the Meuse there was an artillery duel. We have again gained a little ground in the forest of Bouchon, northwest of Troyon and in the forest of Le Pretre (northwest of Pont-a-Mousson).

"In the Vosges we have occupied one of the enemy's trenches. Artillery engagements have taken place in the Ban de Sapt and in the valley of the Save.

"In Upper Alsace our former gains in the region of Thann have been maintained. We have bombarded a German train in the railway station of Altkirch and caused some damage on the railway between Sarapach and Dierspach to the southwest of Altkirch.

"In general the perceptible abatement which can be noted in our active offensive should be attributed to the incessant rains, which soak the ground and make operations everywhere impossible."

Hotel Clerk Murdered.

UTICA, N.Y., Jan. 4.—John Morrison, aged 40, once a noted hockey skater of Canada, shot and killed Ezra Albert, 22 years old, clerk in the Franklin Hotel at Tupper Lake Junction Saturday night and turned his rifle on himself and inflicted a wound from which he may die. He is in a Malone hospital in a critical condition. The motive is unknown and Morrison is unable to talk. The shooting occurred in the hotel office.

GERMANS WITH BOGUS PASSPORTS ARRESTED

Many Involved In Plot of German Officers to Make Their Way Home.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Through a series of arrests in this city and one in Philadelphia on Saturday, there has been brought to light what the Department of Justice alleges was a well organized conspiracy to enable German army officers and reservists to return to Germany on fraudulently obtained American passports.

Most important of the arrests, in the belief of Government officials, is the one made in Philadelphia, the prisoner there being Maurice Deiches, prominent as a lawyer and politician in this city.

That still more important developments might follow, however, was intimated by Government authorities, as it was said that others in high positions were associated with the attorney in his alleged activities in behalf of Germans anxious to return to their native land to join the army of the empire.

Four of the men made prisoners were Germans taken off the outgoing steamer Bergensfjord, bound for Norway, and alleged to have had fraudulent passports in their possession. One of them was an army officer, Lieut. Wilhelm Arthur Sachse. He was paroled. The other three were German reservists who were held under bond. Others arrested were Carl Ruroede, a former steamship agent, charged with the others with conspiracy to defraud the Government through the use of American passports. Ruroede's 17-year-old son, John Arthur, alleged associate of Ruroede, and four men are detained as material witnesses.

The Bishop of Calcutta recently pointed out in an appeal for the evangelization of the Mohammedan world that Mohammedans form one-eighth of the world's population.

THE WHOLE WORLD SUFFERS

Even the Nomads of Syria Affected by the War.

Belated reports from the outposts of the network of missions established throughout the world by the Presbyterian Church tell of world-wide conditions unparalleled in the history of the church. There is no spot under the sun, according to these reports, where the war has failed to strike a staggering blow at commerce, no inhabitants of the civilised world, even to the half-savage Indians of Chile and the wandering tribes of Syria, have failed to feel its effects.

"I thought I had seen the country restless before, but never have I imagined any thing like the present distress and hopelessness," writes a missionary from Tripoli.

"Riding across three districts, I did not see a single camel or mule or horse and only a few weak donkeys and very few men. All were hiding from the army draft, and there was no talk anywhere except of means to evade the encroachments of the officials.

"The draft calls for practically all the able-bodied men. The list of pack mules calls for all that are on the official lists made only a few months ago. Camels are impressed wherever found. Cattle and sheep are demanded as well as the grain still on the thrashing floors. The cruelty of the officials trying to enforce the orders means beating and abuse for the men and destruction of household effects in the villages."

Describing conditions at Beirut, a missionary writes:

"Orders were announced from the Ottoman Government for mobilization and the calling of all eligible for military conscription from the age of 19 to 45; also the abolition of all exceptional privileges ordinarily granted to certain classes of professional men. This resulted in a stampede of young and old from Beirut to Lebanon, when thousands of both Moslems and Christians fled with and without their families.

"At the same moment came orders to commandeer all horses and mules fit for transport service. Hundreds of horses and muleteers were caught in the khans and caravansaries of Beirut, while thousands of others escaped by devious paths in every direction and still more by methods of bribery. At such a time the hungry officials, with salaries in arrears and the certainty of delayed payments in the future, are ready enough to turn an honest or a dishonest penny. So within a period of five days our city and country were transferred from comparative regularity and quietness to confusion, fear, panic, and utter stagnation."

In West Africa, the board announces, the situation is critical. The announcement continues:

"The West Africa Mission, with an exception of a single station at Benito, is located in Kamerun, German territory. Reports indicate that already fighting is going on between the Germans and the British. The board has received word from England that a large shipment of milk and quinine cannot be delivered at Kamerun. Letters mailed to West Africa have been returned marked 'Cannot be delivered.'"

Three letters from missionaries in Chile recite conditions there, according to the board, as follows:

"Chile depends almost exclusively on her nitrate exports. Germany and France are the principal buyers in times of peace, but no freight can be delivered at present, and trade with Europe is suppressed.

"The big houses are closing down, the saltpeter fields have stopped work, thousands of men are finding themselves out of employment, prices are soaring, bankruptcies are frequent, and business is practically at a standstill."

Pipes, Coffee and the Orient.

In the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," which are said to be such faithful pictures of oriental manners, there is no mention of the pipe. Neither is coffee to be met with in those tales, as delightful to all ages. We with difficulty imagine an oriental without his chibouk, and yet it is certain they knew nothing of this luxury before the sixteenth century. At present, such is the almost imperious necessity felt by the Turk for smoking and coffee that as soon as the gun announces the setting of the sun during the fast of the Ramadan, before he thinks of satisfying his craving stomach with any solid food, he takes his cup of coffee and lights his pipe.

Precocious.

INTERCESSORY SERVICES IN ALL CITY CHURCHES

In every church in Peterborough yesterday, sermons bearing on the war were delivered and prayer offered up on behalf of those actively engaged in battle, and for a speedy termination of hostilities.

At 8.30 last night, the week of prayer services, conducted by the Ministerial Association, were opened in St. Paul's and St. John's churches. Tonight at Knox Church Canon Davidson will be in charge of the service, and Rev. R. G. Peever will speak on "The Cross of Christ."

Charlotte Street Church.

At the morning service at Charlotte Street Methodist Church the sacred cantata given for the Christmas service was repeated. At the evening service, Rev. J. P. Wilson, the pastor, took his text from the Book of Esther, and made a reference to the plight of Belgium and the stand Britain has taken in this war. The Book of Esther is a kind of tragedy — an un-Christian book, because the name of God is not found in it. The story is an indication of a nation working out its salvation. The superman has no right to destroy the weak. History repeats itself in the case of Belgium, and there is no such plot as the Kaiser's since the time of Haman. The story brings out a eulogy on womanly courage. Haman was zealous, but failed. Esther was a godly, noble, patriotic woman, and saved her people. Esther pleaded for three days — Earl Grey for ten. Christianity is not on trial, but the Christian people. We believe God is not only in heaven, but on the earth. The spirit of Christ is not in our people as it should be. Brotherhood has not the place it should have. We send the Bible to foreign lands, but we also send rum. We raise twenty million for missions, and France alone has spent two hundred million for war. He predicted the utter crushing of Germany as the outcome of the present struggle, and wound up his address by asking the congregation to join in silent prayer for the boys who had gone to the front in their behalf and in their place. Special prayer was offered up for the Empire, the King and Queen, the physicians, nurses and those on the firing line, and those who were ready to take their part in the great fight. Divine exhortation was also made for the success of all the allied troops, and that righteousness might triumph in the end.

GERMAN OUTRAGES IN BELGIUM ORDERED BY THE HIGH OFFICERS

Belgian Commission Supports Its Charges With Quotations From the Published Proclamations of German Commanding Officers.

Gen. Von Buelow Took Credit for Wanton Brutality at Liege.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — Recent findings of the Belgian commission investigating alleged violations of the usages of war by the German army have been presented to Secretary Bryan and were made public here last night by Emmanuel Havenith, the Belgian Minister. The report asserts: "That Belgian civilians have been wantonly shot and Belgian towns ruthlessly destroyed, systematically, and by order of the German commanding officers."

Proclamations issued by high officers of the German army are quoted in support of the findings. One of those reproduced, said to have been issued at Liege by Gen. von Buelow, after stating that the inhabitants of Ardenne had made a surprise attack upon German troops, announced:

"It is with my consent that the commander-in-chief has ordered the whole town to be burned, and that about 100 people have been shot. I bring this fact to the knowledge of the city of Liege, so that the citizens may realize the fate with which they are menaced if they adopt a similar resistance."

Summing up its report, the commission says:

"After such proclamations, who will be surprised at the murders, arson, pillage and destruction committed by the German army wherever they met with resistance?

"If a German army corps or patrolling party is received at the entrance to a village by a volley from soldiers of the enemy troops who are afterwards forced to retire, the whole population is held responsible. The civilians are accused of having fired or having co-operated with the defence, and without authority the place is given over to pillage and flames; a part of the inhabitants are massacred.

GEN. KARL VON BUELOW.

"The odious acts which have been committed in all parts of the country have a general character, throwing the responsibility upon the whole German army. It is simply the application of a preconceived system, the carrying out of instructions, which have made the enemy's troops in Belgium a 'horde of barbarians and a band of incendiaries'."

The Industrious Bee.

The bee has two distinct stomachs. In the first it stores away the honey it so industriously gathers from the flowers until such time as it is ready to yield it up, while the other stomach is used simply and solely for digestion purposes. Thus the food and the honey are never mixed. When the bee returns to the hive and is ready to deposit the honey it has gathered it contracts the muscles of the stomach, in which act the honey is ejected through the mouth. As to bee food, it is various in kind, consisting largely of the honey it so patiently makes for others.

FOE HAVE UTTERLY FAILED IN BATTLE OF THE FOUR RIVERS

Long Conflict in Poland on the Banks of the Bzura, Rawka, Pilicia and Nida Comes to an End With the Enemy Repulsed at Every Point ---Every Effort Made to Hold Cracow Front.

LONDON, Jan. 4. — A Petrograd despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co says:

"In the opinion of experts here the battle of the four rivers, as the long series of engagements on the banks of Bzura, Rawka, Pilica and Nida is popularly known, may be considered ended, for not only have the Germans and Austrians failed to advance on the Russian north and south line, roughly lying from the Vistula to Warsaw, Kielce and Pinczsow, but everywhere they have been repulsed with heavy losses, and the attacks now proceeding may be construed as an effort to gain time, pending new operations. By the occupation of Kremenz Zeteten, Sereth and Radautz, in Bukowina, on the Roumanian frontier, Russia not only holds the strategical railway line connecting Bukowina with western Galicia and Hungary, but is within 100 miles of Hungary over the passes of the wooded Carpathians.

"The Bourse Gazette's Moscow correspondent asserts that the Austrians are evacuating Bukowina and that more than 30,000 panic-stricken inhabitants of Bukowina and Transylvania have fled into Roumania.

"Three Austrian aeroplanes have dropped ten bombs on Kielce. The damage is not known."

Having fortified themselves along the line through Sochaczow, Skierniewice, Rawa and Opoczno, Russian Poland, the Germans have again renewed their stubborn attacks simultaneously to the south and west of Warsaw, and have endeavored to cross the Vistula river near Czerwinsk, evidently with the intention of directing a movement against Nowo Georgiewsk. This is the information contained in despatches received in Petrograd from the eastern war theatre.

In the south, near Groitzy, the Germans are attempting an advance towards the Vistula in the region midway between Warsaw and Ivangorod, it is said. The German plan, according to the despatches, seems to be to have the Austro-German forces which are now near Konskie and moving in the general direction of Radom and Ivangorod, join the German forces around Groitzy in besieging Ivangorod.

Military men in the Russian capital express the opinion that it is now apparent that Field Marshal von Hindenburg's real goal is not so much Warsaw, whose capture would give him only a moral advantage, as Mowo Georgiewsk and Ivangorod, for the Germans in order to keep western Poland must possess the latter two places. It is asserted, however, that the Germans are still 60 or 70 miles from Ivangorod and that every day the probability of taking these places is lessened. The general opinion expressed in Petrograd is that neither Ivangorod nor Mowo Georgiewsk can be taken. The Russians, however, do not depreciate the perfection of the German technique and fierceness of attack and the effect of the Germans' heavy artillery now in action in Poland.

The Daily Mail's Petrograd correspondent says:

"Two fresh developments have appeared in the German plan of campaign. They have sent Prussian and Bavarian troops to aid the Austrians, who have been ordered at all costs to hold the front protecting Cracow.

"They also are making efforts to cross to the north of the Vistula, hoping that with assistance from the east Prussian army Gen. Francois might threaten Warsaw from this direction. The threat of the Austrians to blow up the city and the Cathedral of Cracow if they are unable to hold the fortress so disturbed the Poles that they have sent a deputation headed by Count Tarnoffski to Rome to implore the Pope to avert such a disaster."

A Petrograd despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says:

"It is officially estimated that 27 German army corps (about 1,500,000 men), against Russia, in addition to the Austrian forces. Four hundred thousand Germans and Austrians have already been taken prisoners and their killed and wounded are three or four times heavier. This would make the Austro-German losses in the east about two million men.

"The Germans," the despatch adds, "have not only not crossed the Bzura, but the Russians are even on the left bank of that river. Warsaw is in no danger."

Situation Is Worse.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The situation in Albania is much worse. The insurgents are said to have occupied Berat and to be marching on Divra. This statement is made by the Athens correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Berat is 30 miles northeast of Avlona, now occupied by the Italians. Divra is 65 miles northeast of Berat, near the southern spur of the Schar Mountains, on the border of Monastir.

Combustibles In Hay

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. — Combustibles were found in hay on board the British steamer Rembrandt, which recently sailed from Baltimore and caught fire, according to a statement made here yesterday by A. Edlin, her captain. The ship sailed from Baltimore loaded with horses for the allies, but was forced to turn back into Newport News because of the fire.

CONSCRIPTION FELT TO BE POSSIBLE IN ENGLAND

Compulsory Service is Hinted at by Member of British Government.

LONDON, Jan. 4. — A hint that the British Government contemplated the introduction of conscription for increasing the army and navy was dropped by Thomas J. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, while speaking at the Browning Settlement yesterday afternoon.

Referring to the fact that there were many thousands of young men in the United Kingdom without dependents who had not answered the call to the colors, Mr. Macnamara said:—

"If they think they are going to enjoy a life of freedom at the other fellow's expense they won't enjoy it much longer."

The recruiting boom which commenced after the holidays continues. As the result of six open air meetings at Cardiff, addressed by wounded soldiers, there was an extraordinary rush to the recruiting offices Saturday evening and the recruiting officers were kept busy until an early hour Sunday morning.

Kaiser To Have Operation?

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 4. — It is rumored in Berlin that the Kaiser was brought hastily back to that city in a special train on the last day of the year, suffering from an exaggeration of his throat trouble, says a private despatch received from the German capital.

The despatch declares that the Kaiser will be kept at the capital until he is able to stand an operation, which has been found necessary.

Roman Ruins In Switzerland.

Near Basel Augst, in Switzerland, is the site of the old Roman colony of Augusta Raurica, with remains of a theatre, and at the nearby town of Rheinfalden are walls and towers partly preserved, for this was one of the outposts of the Holy Roman Empire. It has belonged to Switzerland only since 1802 and is picturesque, like the majority of the towns on the Rhine.

Instead of resting it he went about his duties as usual, with the result that sinovitis set in.

To a deputation which asked him to reconsider his resignation, Lord Aberdeen Saturday replied that this was impossible.

The change in the Lord Lieutenancy will be welcomed in social and sporting circles of Ireland, while Lord and Lady Aberdeen devoted much of their time to charity, it is expected that the new occupant and his wife will revive the social glories of Dublin Castle and give their patronage to racing and other sports. Baron Wimborne took the victorious polo team to New York last summer.

Chief Liberal Whip Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 4. — Percy Holden Illingworth, chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, and Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury, died yesterday of typhoid fever. He was born at Bradford in 1869.

In August, 1912, Mr. Illingworth was appointed chief Liberal whip, succeeding Lord Murray of Elibank, whose purchase of Marconi shares as an investment of the funds of the Liberal party was the subject of much discussion when a Parliamentary committee in June, 1913, investigated the scandals connected with Government wireless contracts.

PRAYED FOR THE ALLIES

Churches in Britain Offered Prayers for Success of Troops

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Large congregations crowded the London churches yesterday for the observance of intercession day and offered a special prayer for the success of the allied arm and in remembrance of those who have fallen on the battlefield

Four services were held at St. Paul's Cathedral, the first beginning at eight o'clock in the morning and being conducted by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Ingram, the Bishop of London. The great cathedral was thronged throughout the day. Westminster Abbey also had a large attendance, the sermon being preached by Archdeacon Wilberforce.

At all the Church of England's places of worship a special form of service sanctioned by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York was used. At Westminster Cathedral, a large congregation assembled to take part in the special mass provided by the Missal to be used in time of war.

Similar services were held throughout the British Isles and in the overseas dominion.

FIFTY MORE AMONG SAVED

Total Survivors of Ill-fated Battleship Now Number 201

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Another cutter from the British battleship Formidable, which was sunk in the English Channel Friday, has reached Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire, with 50 men making a total of 201 survivors out of a crew of 780.

When the cutter left the Formidable she had 80 or more men aboard all but 50 succumbed to exposure having been in an open boat for some 24 hours in a violent storm.

All the survivors were in a state of exhaustion after their terrible experience. They declare that there is little hope of any further survivors as the tremendous sea which was running at the time would make it impossible for men to live long enough to be picked up by passing vessels while many of those clinging to the wreckage were undoubtedly killed when the second explosion occurred.

The Admiralty has not issued any statement in reference to the cause of the disaster or where it occurred.

The British Admiralty on Saturday issued a list containing the names of Captain Arthur N. Loxley and thirty-four other officers of the Formidable, who, it says, must be presumed to have been lost in the disaster, as they have not been reported among the saved. The list includes nine midshipmen.

Gunner Horrigan and Boatswain Taylor are among the surviving officers.

Fred Ames, a brother of Thomas F. Ames, of London, Ont., was a petty officer on the Formidable, and it is believed that he went down with the ship. Another brother, Horace Ames, figured in the naval battle off the Falkland Islands.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Holiday time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB?

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself a New Year's present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

OSTEND IN PERIL

Allies are Making Irresistible Progress Along the Coast.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 4.—The latest news from the operations in the vicinity of Ostend clearly indicates that, although the Germans are making terrific efforts to retain the last of the sand dunes and the rougher land in the immediate vicinity of Westende and Lombaertzyde, there is every reason to believe that their hold is weakening owing to the tremendous attack on their strong positions in the dunes. Also a threatening advance is being steadily but slowly carried out by the allies.

The German position in the dunes has been made tremendously strong, the enemy fully realizing that they must hold on at all costs or be compelled to fight in the lower lying land that stretches eastward to Ostend itself, or beat a hasty retreat to Ostend.

They have been fighting with wonderful energy and courage to prevent the definite abandonment of their attempt to reach Calais.

It is fairly evident, then, that the evacuation of St. Georges is recognized as final on their part, as they are now concentrating a very heavy fire on that place to prevent its occupation, as that would very seriously threaten their position on the coast.

The allies, however, are taking a firm hold and are advancing on Lombaertzyde.

ELLIOT'S

HOUSE TO MEET FEBRUARY 4

War Business Will Take up Session at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Jan. 4. — The second war session of Parliament has been called for Thursday, Feb. 4th.

This date has frequently been forecasted unofficially but the formal proclamation was issued at a Cabinet council at noon Saturday.

The Prime Minister, in announcing this date, said there was no announcement to be made in regard to the bye-elections.

The program as outlined previously, will consist almost exclusively of business connected with the war, the provision of supply for the forces, and tariff changes to overcome revenue deficiencies.

The fact that the House is to meet on a Thursday, disposes of the rumor that there is to be a new Speaker. Otherwise it would assemble on Wednesday, with the formal opening a day later.

Literacy Test Bill Passes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The immigration bill containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens, which has been the obstacle in immigration reform legislation for the greater part of two national administrations, passed the Senate late Saturday by a vote of 50 to 7. The overwhelming majority was recorded despite the fact that President Wilson had indicated he would veto the measure, as did former President Taft, if it should come to him with the educational test included.

The vote in the Senate indicated that the bill could be repassed by more than the required two-thirds majority should the President reject the measure.

Explosion in B. C. Mine.

FERNIE, B.C., Jan. 4.—One man was killed and two were injured by a terrific explosion in the Coal Creek Mine, just before the men went down on Saturday morning. The dead man is Government Mine Inspector Evans, who went below immediately after the explosion and was overcome by gas, as were his companions, Supt. Caufield and Robert Adamson. Caufield and Adamson were revived by the use of oxygen apparatus, but Inspector Evans was beyond recovery.

The average "cash in hand" of these aliens amounts to $70.

MR. BOWSER, HE SPORTS

He is Let in on a Sure Thing at the Races

By M. QUAD

It was so unusual for Mr. Bowser to return home at noon that Mrs. Bowser met him with considerable anxiety and asked if any calamity had happened.

"Not a calamity, my dear," he blandly replied. "I've just come to ask if you want to go up to the races this afternoon."

"You don't mean horse races?" she gasped.

"Of course I do. I'll give you half an hour to get ready."

"But I can't go. I've agreed to go shopping with Mrs. Greene this afternoon. What on earth has got into you that you are now going to do something you haven't done in ten years?"

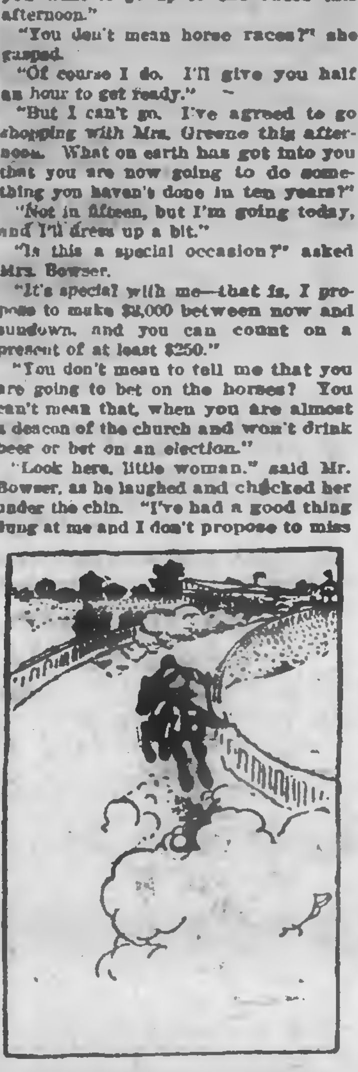
"Not in fifteen, but I'm going today, and I'll dress up a bit."

"Is this a special occasion?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"It's special with me—that is, I propose to make $3,000 between now and sundown, and you can count on a present of at least $250."

"You don't mean to tell me that you are going to bet on the horses? You can't mean that, when you are almost a deacon of the church and won't drink beer or bet on an election."

"Look here, little woman," said Mr. Bowser, as he laughed and chucked her under the chin. "I've had a good thing flung at me and I don't propose to miss it. I'm no gambler, but there's nothing out of the way in taking a little flyer on a horse race once in a while. If I can make $3,000 out of $100, I'd be a fool not to do it."



STILL LINGERING AT THE TURN.

"But how on earth can you do it?" she demanded.

"That's what I'm going to tell you, if you'll cool down a little. You have read or heard that the best horse does not always win the race. In other words, there's jockeying going on. A horse which seems to have no show at all will often come in ahead. When such an event has been planned for a few individuals get the tip. You know what a tip is, don't you?"

"They are told about it."

"That's it. They are told about it, and they quietly invest their money on the horse. The horse which is going to win today is a 60 to 1 shot."

"How strangely you talk!" she whispered.

"It's the old sport in me coming to the surface," he explained. "Thirty to one means that if I put $100 on the horse and he wins I get $3,000. One hasn't got to be an old sport to see what a haul it is."

"It's a highway robbery!"

"It's nothing of the sort. It's all in the racing. I've got $100 to spare, and I'm going to play the tip."

"A hundred dollars! You'll lose it as sure as your name is Bowser, and you'll deserve to! If they fix for any horse to win it's underhand business. The idea of your lending yourself to any such scheme! I wouldn't have believed it if fifty people had come and told me!"

"Woman, I don't want to be talked to in that manner!" shouted Mr. Bowser, as he began to saw the air with his arm, and the cat flew under the bed with a yeowl. "I'm going to do what thousands of others do. It's no worse than Wall street or a grab bag at a church affair. You know nothing of the world, and your objections don't count for a cent. I am going to take advantage of the tip. It was given to only two of us outsiders."

"Very well," said Mrs. Bowser in tones of resignation. "I don't know anything about tips or 30 to 1, or jockeying, but you'll come home $100 out of pocket instead of $3,000 in. You may think yourself an old sport, but you'll discover your mistake. That's all, and don't blame me."

"Blame you for what? Because I win $3,000?"

"Because you lose your $100!"

"Oh, I lose, will I? Bet you 50 to 1 I don't. It's no use your getting your back up for nothing. It's my first flier for fifteen years, and it won't make me a fool. I probably shan't play another race for ten years. Have dinner an hour late."

Nothing further was said. When Mr. Bowser reached the corner he picked up the other man who had been tipped, and they boarded the car for the race track. When they reached it, he quickly took a seat in the grand stand and let the other man place the bets. It was two hours before that particular race was run. Mr. Bowser heard men scoffing at the 30 to 1 horse and declaring that he couldn't gallop forty rods, but he smiled in a knowing way and pitied their ignorance. In one instance he was about to give a man the tip and enable him to carry home $1,000 to his needy family, but the man spoiled it all by growling:

"So you think you are an old sport and know all about horses, eh? Well, I don't believe you can tell a horse from a mule!"

It really hurt Mr. Bowser's feelings to be doubted as an old sport. Would anybody but an old sport have put up a clean $100 on a horse race! Didn't that bet mark him as a dead game? Hadn't he studied the program till he could name every horse in the race, and give the colors worn by the jockeys? Instead of giving the man the tip he put on an air of dignified reserve and had nothing further to say. He hadn't thought of taking a drink in connection with the races, but as all the other old sports appeared to be nipping, he defiantly called for and drank a bottle of pop scented with lemon.

When the 30 to 1 race was called Mr. Bowser and his friend were quiet and bland and complacent. They smiled at each other as the horses came out. They poked each other in the ribs as several false starts were made. When the horses finally got off, the two stood up and clapped each other on the back and hurrahed their loudest. The horse which came in first amid a cloud of dust was not the 30 to 1; neither was the second nor the third, nor the fourth. When nine horses had galloped in their tip was still lingering down at the turn and evidently delayed by circumstances over which he had no control.

Mr. Bowser had lost $100. He was stunned for a moment. Then he began to shout "Cheat!" and "Fake!" and declared that it was a skin game. He was given about a minute, and then the police got hold of him. Under such circumstances they hustle a man. Mr. Bowser was hustled. He lost his hat, had his collar and necktie pulled off and his coat ripped, and as he reached the gate he was given a highland fling that rolled him through the burdocks into a ditch. It was an hour after dark when he reached home. He had walked five miles in order to have room to swear. He had left the house an old sport in his Sunday clothes. He returned to it a dilapidated victim of misplaced confidence. The cat and Mrs. Bowser were in the hall to welcome him, but he desired no welcome. He looked at the cat in a way to make her legs wabble, and he looked at Mrs. Bowser as an Indian with a scalping knife regards his victim.

"Well, you are home," she finally said.

"Yes—I—am—home!" he slowly and huskily replied, nodding his head at every word.

"And you'll have dinner?"

No answer.

"It's waiting."

No answer.

"Did you fall off the car coming home?"

"Up—go up!" shouted Mr. Bowser, as he pointed up the stairs.

Mrs. Bowser and the cat ascended. Then they heard him pick up the hall tree and slam it down, breaking two umbrellas by pounding on the wall, and after smashing the stand and jardiniere and kicking the palm sky high he passed into the back parlor and flung himself down on the lounge. The old sport had been beaten.

Obvious.

"Where have you been? Haven't seen you for a long time."

"In the country."

"What doing?"

"Following the simple life."

"Too bad! I didn't know that your creditors were that pressing."

In Chicago.

"I am so worked up all the time."

"I know it."

"I wish I could be more quiet."

"Well, why will you marry so much?"

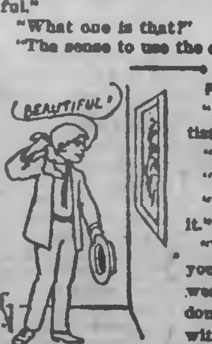
"The sense to use the other five."



Red Headed.

"He is very artistic."

"What—he?"

"Yes."

"Never noticed it."

"Why, bless you, he never wears socks that don't harmonise with his hair."

Doubtful.

"Don't you want to go to heaven, Johnnie?"

"Thank you, I have just had an invitation to go to a picnic."

Busy.

"Does she take much exercise?"

"Exercise? I should say so."

"What is the nature of it?"

"Goes to the matinee."

Top Notch.

"Is she beautiful?"

"Beautiful? I should say so. She is as pretty as the girl on the magazine cover."

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—There was a fair demand from overseas buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and the prices bid in some cases showed an advance of 2c per bushel, but as exporters were not disposed to sell, business was quiet. Iodine.

Iodine is obtained from the half fused ash of dried seaweeds. The weed is burned, the saline residue is dissolved with water, and the solution thus obtained is concentrated in order to precipitate sodium chloride and potassium sulphate and chloride. This is effected by a current of chlorine gas, which is turned off as soon as the bromine begins to be precipitated. The substance thus obtained is distilled in earthen retorts and condensed in cold earthen vessels.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

IT is time for a man to sit up and look himself over carefully when his wife's relations begin to take an undue interest in him.

As far as superior merit is concerned you will always find that the first person singular can always give you fine examples.

Next to not being a fool comes recognizing the condition in yourself at its first appearance.

After a man has burned all his money he is sure to notice a coldness in the atmosphere.

The joys of yesteryear are often responsible for the harassing troubles of the present.

It is queer how nervous some people get when a little bit of unusual work looms up looking for somebody to do it.

Charity too often tries to run upon its reputation.

Hot words are not congenial to warm friendship.

One of the dangers of a large income to a man is the fact that he is likely to annex a fashionable wife with it.

A man who can do anything you tell him to do generally averages things by refusing to do anything.

The Changes.

Old Tubal Cain was a man of might
  In the days when the earth was new,
For the blacksmith then was the prince of men,
  And his swords were strong and true,
But he wouldn't stand ace high today
  In his little two bit shop,
With his iron products made by hand,
  Since the steel trust has the drop.

Under the spreading chestnut tree
  The village smithy stood,
And the smith all day in his busy way
  Sang a song as he sawed wood,
But the smith has gone to his long reward,
  And his shop is but a dream.
In constructing tools he is but a joke
  Since they're making things by steam.

It is much that way in every line
  For the man who once made shoes.
Should he try it now he would find somehow
  He was bound in the end to lose.
The big machine with its human touch
  In the workshop up to date
Can turn out ten where he made one;
  Can construct them while you wait.

And there's no use kicking against the bricks
  Nor bemoaning the rosy past.
The iron is hot, but the blacksmith is not,
  And the shoeman has lost his last.
It may be for better, it may be for worse,
  But it isn't the same old way,
And whether we like or lump the fact
  The trust has come to stay.

Her Amiable Disposition.

"I thought you said that you don't care for the attention of men?"

"I don't."

"But here you are trying your best to attract them."

"Certainly."

"Kindly explain."

"It makes the other women so mad."

TORONTO SPORT WRITERS FAVORABLY IMPRESSED BY PETERBOROUGH'S SEPTETTE

The Petes Have a Strong Team and Should go a Long Way in the Intermediate Series Says Sporting Editor of Daily News

To all appearances the Peterborough Intermediate team made quite an impression on the Toronto sport writers. The fact that an intermediate septette should humble representatives of the senior company caused the dopesters to sit up and take notice, the result was considerable comment in Saturday evening issues of the Toronto papers.

The Star says:—

Torontos ran in two goals in short order on Janes, who had stage fright, and he was derricked in favor of "Sandy" Dwyer. The red-headed youth proceeded to give a proper exhibition of just how to keep goal and with him behind, Captain Hunter sent his men in to do or die. They broke the tie with five minutes to go and then the battle became a merry one indeed.

Referee Corbeau took a hand in the fracas and tried to check the free-for-all, but the Rowing Club were thoroughly aroused by this time and there was no stopping them. First Sidley was fenced for a bad trip and then Reynolds followed for a raw hook. Right on top of this Farr was boosted for slamming some one and the Rowing Club finished with four men against seven and at that they were in on top of the Peterborough nets and came close to tying it up.

A Sweet Victory.

It was an exciting game and a victory was doubly sweet to the Petes, because Captain Hunter was playing against his old Rowing Club team mates. The Peterborough squad on their showing last night should win their district.

In Dwyer, Hunter and Pethick, the Petes have a rattling good defence, and Park at centre is as handy a youngster as has been seen around here with an outside team in a season or two. Halpin behind him is another busy boy, and the two juniors on the wings, Cavanah and Knapman, are an excellent pair of lads. With Kelly and Pete Spratt on, the Petes look good enough for senior company.

Charlie Good, sporting editor of Toronto News, commented as follows:—

Condition more than anything else was responsible for the Rowing Club's defeat by Peterborough last night. The Oarsmen had the better of the play as long as they lasted, and would probably have won in any event but for the fact that they were called upon to play two or three short for the greater part of the last period. The Petes have a strong team and should go a long way in the intermediate series. With a good right wing the T.R.C. have a bang up aggregation, one that would make a first-class showing. Coach Breen is not discouraged over the defeat. "We will be there or thereabouts when the real work commences."

Charlie Querrie, also on the News staff, had the following in his columns:—

Peterborough looks like a good intermediate team, and would be right at home in senior company. "Ack" Hunter, the popular local player, is on the defence, and is going just as well as ever. In Park, the centre player, Peterborough have a man good enough for any company. He is a clever stick handler, a good shot and has the size to carry him through.

Peterborough were without the services of Peter Spratt and Kelly, the good wing player. With Spratt on the defence with Hunter they have a great septette, and one that should be near the top in the intermediate.

LONDON CLUB TO NAME MANAGER IN TWO WEEKS

London, Jan. 4. — The London Baseball Club directors held a meeting Friday night, and after closing up the 1914 affairs of the club, adjourned for two weeks, when a meeting will be held to pick out a manager for 1915.

Little mention of a manager for next season's team was made at the meeting. There are six applications in for the position, but so far no selection has been made. Cy. Reidy, Heinie Steiger, Bill Cristall and several others have applied for the job. "Doc." Reisling has not been heard from for some time. He sent a Christmas card to President Stevely, but so far has refrained from negotiating with the club for his services next season.

COBOURG PRACTISING.

Cobourg Sentinel-Star: About 20 are out practising every evening for a place on the Cobourg O. H. A. junior team. There are a number of good prospects in the lot, and Manager Lavis should manage to get a good team to face Peterborough in their first game here on January 7. Cobourg's team are all youngsters, but they are fast and hard workers.

Y.M.C.A. BOWLING LEAGUE.

A meeting of the executive committee of the league will be held this evening at 7.30 sharp. It is important that a representative of each team in the league be present.

Team to Practice.

There will be a practice of the Charlotte Street Church senior hockey team tomorrow night from 6 to 7. The following are asked to be out: Mulhern, Soden, R. Smyth, E. Smyth, H. Austin, A. Huycke, F. Jobbit, H. Grey, R. Neill, J. Murray, W. Heaslip, R. Cherrit, N. Staples and H. Skuce.

LINEUPS FOR GAME TO-NIGHT

Peterborough—		Port Hope.
Legros	goal	Edmunds
Smythe	l. def.	Darch
Long	r. def.	Thompson
Knapman	rover	Emmerson
Jackson	centre	Hills
O'Connell	r. wing	Lowe
Richardson	l. wing	Bowden

*The above will be the lineups for to*night's game between the Peterborough juniors and the Port Hope juniors. It will be the first game for the locals, and as Port Hope vanquished Lindsay the other evening, it is up to the blue and white to win tonight if they wish to make a bid for the honors. The Petes will be without the services of Morrow, the big defence man, but Smythe is an able substitute. It is practically the same lineup which defeated the Old Boys on Thursday evening.

The forward line of the Port Hope septette is particularly fast. Jackson will have a merry old session keeping Hills, the little centre man, in check. The kid from the Port is a regular demon on skates.

The game will be called at 8.15, and, as was the case at the game with Bowmanville, the management of the club requests the fans not to smoke.

COMMENT

As You Like it

A HIGH-HANDED ACT is the term used by the sporting editor of the Mail and Empire in reference to the ruling of the O.H.A. by which no players playing in the T. and D. last fall would be allowed to play in the O.H.A. this season. The ruling affects Pete Reesor of the Toronto Riversides who according to the A.A.U. is a simon-pure. We are with the Mail and Empire in calling such step a "high-handed act" and further believe that the Ontario Hockey Association has been contributing similar acts a little too frequently of late for the good of the association and for the good of amateur sport in the province.

WITH ALL RESPECT for the age and strength of the big hockey association it must be admitted that of late the governing powers have become a little too Czar-like. It is true that the association has done much for the game but the "absolute monarchy system" will never meet the approval of Canadian fans or admirers. The Peterborough team has been greatly affected by the O.H.A. refusing Cyril Giroux a certificate and the said association lost a host of friends and backers in this city when the minutes of the last executive meeting were made known. Every one who claims to be imbued with sporting blood grants that rough playing should be wiped out entirely but it is not proper to put the stiff ban on one or more players by way of setting an example for future reference. Cyril Giroux' offence was not what could be called a major offence. In the heat of a strenuous battle he pushed Lawson Whitehead away from him with a few uncomplimentary remarks. We have admitted that Giroux deserved a reprimand but to keep him out of amateur hockey and amateur sports for ever is too much. He is a player who was born and raised in this city, holds a responsible position and will undoubtedly remain here. Had he been a rambler, drifting from town to town according to the size of inducements, the O.H.A. might be pardoned for using an iron hand but when he is a home-brew in every particular he deserves at least a fair shake if not consideration.

WE CANNOT HELP but recall the case of Riordan the former Oshawa player now with Waterloo. We are not taking Billie Eaton's word or that of any other for Riordan's conduct in games. We have watched him for a couple of years and could relate incidents in his career on the ice that were never equalled by "Bad Joe" Hall. It's not our purpose to holler against Riordan. We simply feel disgusted at the O.H.A. machine and it's some consolation to know that we are not alone in our opinion. The Northern or Ottawa Valley League cannot expand too quickly for Peterborough.

BATTLE WAGED IN CLEVELAND

Ottawa College Hockey Team and C.A.C. Came to Blows

Cleveland, O., Jan. 4. — Rough playing, which had its inception on Thursday night at the start of the three-game series between Cleveland and Ottawa College, reached a climax Saturday night, when the players of both teams, and many of the spectators, mixed in a free-for-all on the ice. The fight raged five minutes. Four were injured, two seriously, while Goalkeeper Vincent Doran of the Ottawa seven was arrested by the police of the eleventh precinct on a charge of assault with intent to kill. The score was 3-3.

Armed with hockey sticks, chairs and water bottles, the belligerents fought fiercely until officers and spectators, working strenuously, succeeded in disarming the players and forcing them to go to their dressing-rooms.

There were two, however, who could not rise when the riot ended. They were Elmer Irving, one of Cleveland's veteran players, and Redmond Quain, a member of the Ottawa seven. Irving was felled by a blow from a hockey stick, and is in a hospital with a partially fractured skull. His condition yesterday was improved.

While the battle raged hundreds of women rose to their feet and screamed; while others fainted as the ice became spattered with blood.

It was after the battle that Sergt. Cregan of the eleventh precinct station placed Goalkeeper Doran under arrest. Police escorted the Canadians to the police station, where they took their testimony, together with that of some of the Cleveland player.

Not So Very Wrong.

"Spell ferment and give its definition," requested the schoolteacher.

"F-e-r-m-e-n-t, ferment, to work," responded a diminutive maiden.

"Now place it in a sentence so that I may be sure you understand its meaning," said the teacher.

"In summer I would rather play out of doors than ferment in the schoolhouse," returned the small pupil with such doleful frankness and unconscious rumor that the teacher found it hard to suppress a smile.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ELLIOTT—THOMPSON.

Melita, Man., Jan. 4.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Thompson was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, December 30th, when their daughter, Nellie Asenath was united in marriage to James Payson Elliott, of this place. Promptly on time, and accompanied by the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Maude Rooks, cousin of the bride, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father, looking lovely in her wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with embroidered net, and carrying a large bouquet of white carnations. Little Miss Myrtle Thompson was flower girl, and carried a basket of lovely carnations.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Forbes Robertson, of Melita Presbyterian Church, and after the happy couple had received the congratulations of their friends, all partook of a daintily prepared luncheon.

The bride, who is one of the popular young ladies of this district, and formerly of the teaching staff of the Melita public school, was the recipient of many beautiful gifts from her hosts of friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a brooch set with pearls, to the pianist a gold bar pin set with amethyst, and to the flower girl a string of pearl beads.

The happy couple left for a short honeymoon via the Canadian Pacific Railway to points east as far as Winnipeg. For the journey the bride donned a travelling costume of brown velvet, with picture hat trimmed with large white plume. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will make their home on their farm, south of Melita.

The groom was formerly a resident of Cavan township, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Elliott, and brother of Mr. Bruce Elliott, of Cavan.

HUBEL—KERR.

A quiet wedding was solemnized by Rev. W. H. Webber of Bobcaygeon at the home of Mr. James Kerr, Verulam, when his eldest daughter, Elsie Josephine, was united in marriage to Ernest Harper Hubel, of Peterborough. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a gown of white silk and carried a bouquet of white roses. At the conclusion of the ceremony hearty congratulations were offered to the young couple. The guests then adjourned to the dining-room, where a dainty repast was served. The bride and groom left immediately after for Peterborough at 2 p.m. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hubel wil reside at 193 Romaine street, Peterborough.

G. N. Gordon's Reply to Dr. Morrison

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Dr. Morrison tries by 1913 figures to prove the Board of Education rate of 9.75 for 1914 not high. This is 1915. The communications from various town and city clerks, which I have, show Peterborough school rate for 1914 is extraordinarily high and nearly the highest in Ontario.

I repeat that the Board meets in an inner room behind three sets of doors in the Toronto Loan & Savings Co.'s office. There is no accommodation for the public there except standing room and very little of that. There is no accommodation for the press except a discarded desk large enough for one man to use chucked off in a corner. There is not five per cent. of the public know how to work a passage into this little back room.

Dr. Morrison says the Board does not meet for gallery play—it certainly does not. The Board apparently does not look for a place in the sun. The Board should not accept free from any such wealthy and influential corporation any concessions; let its meetings be announced to be held in its own buildings and let the ratepayers know what is going on.

Re deputations—Dr. Morrison says the cost was small. Why should public men who desire to fit themselves for office, charge the obtaining of such information to the ratepayers? If these deputations were for obtaining some material benefit for the ratepayers there would be no objection but it is for the trustees' own benefit and to improve their positions.

Re supplies—My dictionary states the meaning of supply is "the act of supplying; that which is supplied or supplies a want," so I presume that is a fairing meaning to attach to the word. Dr. Morrison says all supplies were bought by tender. Will he state that the blinds for the East and West Ward schools were bought by tender? Will he deny that local merchants rried to submit prices and could not because a favorite was to get the supplying? Will he state that the same blinds could not have been purchased from one local merchant for at least $50.00 less than the Board paid? Will he say no member of the Board was directly or indirectly interested in this contract?

Will he say that tenders were asked for the insurance supplied the Board for its building and that no member has profited by it?

Will he say that at committee meetings reporters have not been told, time and again, to wait outside this inner room and that they would be admitted later? Did he not go to the Review and try to stifle the reporter's report of a recent meeting when the reporter told the truth? Will he say that a certain teacher was not invited to state her case and before the same meeting a typewritten resolution had already been prepared to put through and which went through?

Have not Trustee Smith and a couple of other members done their best to prevent such things but were overcome by the "regular" majority?

In conclusion, this time, let me say that if Dr. Morrison desired to vindicate the action of his friends he should have stayed in the fight and not sought shelter by retirement. He slings a little mud at me as a politician—well Dr. Morrison, I never tried to railroad a political resolution past a church board under the guise of religious conviction as was at one time attempted at the Charlotte Street Methodist Church by a gentleman with whom you are very intimately acquainted.

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

TRAVELS IN MANY PARTS OF THE GLOBE

Exciting Adventures and Interesting Experiences, the Lot of Miss Margaret Kennedy

Girls, how would you like to travel thousands of miles alone, visit strange, foreign countries, have exciting adventures, funny experiences and be dependent solely on yourself. That is what Miss Margaret Kennedy, a pretty English girl has done for the last ten years and who is now the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cortez Fessenden for some weeks.

Hearing of her presence in the city a reporter arranged for a little chat with this interesting young lady, feeling certain she would have many interesting things to say. He was not disappointed. He was introduced to a girl still in her twenties, pleasant faced, self-reliant in appearance, with a simple dignity that immediately placed the newspaperman at ease. She seemed to consider the desire for an interview quite interesting never having submitted, to such an operation before, she said.

Travelled Ten Years.

"I have been travelling now for ten years," she said, once the ball was started rolling. "My home is in London, Eng., and I have been all around the world I believe and have travelled more miles than I could even estimate."

"Why was I travelling?" she said, in answer to a query. "Oh I was teaching music in a college in Constantinople for five and half years altogether, nine months in each year. In between these periods I decided I would see all there was to see in Europe and so I started to travel. I spent two years in India, visiting Cawnpore, Lucknow and all the places mentioned in history in connection with the Indian mutiny.

"How did you get along without being able to speak the languages of these countries," she was asked. "Oh I manage to speak five languages," she said, "German, Turkish, Italian, French and English, with a smattering of some others. In this way, I have little difficulty in making myself understood."

Was in the Balkan War Zone.

"What do you consider the most exciting or interesting experience you ever had on these travels?

Miss Kennedy thought for a moment and then mentioned the fact quite casually that she was in Turkey while the Balkan war was on.

"I was teaching in the college of music at the time of the outbreak of the trouble. The head of the college closed it up and ordered all the girls attending it to leave, but I, with a couple of other teachers, decided we would stay and see it out. We were only forty miles away from the scene of the battle of Tchatalga and heard the roaring of the big guns quite distinctly. Our habitation was guarded by marines all the time as there were fourteen or fifteen cruisers and battleships of all nations anchored in the harbor."

Miss Kennedy was in Germany last June and she declared that she then saw no signs portending the great struggle which is now on. She considered the Germans to be very nice people, although there was a wide difference between the Prussians in the south and the people in the north.

As most of her time while abroad had been spent in Constantinople, Miss Kennedy was able to talk quite familiarly on the customs and character of the Turks. Contrary to general opinion she says that the Turks—that is the real Turks—are one of the most polite races living. It is the Kurds who have won the Turks, the name of being cruel and inhuman. She said that the Turkish people themselves are kind and helpful and courteous.

During her travels Miss Kennedy has often been in queer and somewhat perplexing situations for a young lady, but she always managed to find her way out without great difficulty. In Russia she found it awkward travelling as one had to reserve railway passage sometimes a week or more in advance. Passports had to be shown all the time.

Miss Kennedy is an accomplished pianist and found the accomplishment of material assistance to her during her travels around the world. She intends to remain in Peterborough for some time yet.

ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PETER'S T.A.S.

Next Sunday will be the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society and will be a very important day in the history of temperance work in this city and vicinity. As was recently announced a plan is under way whereby the three total abstinence societies in connection with the three Catholic churches of Peterborough will become amalgamated and this step will be the principle item of business to be taken up at a general meeting of all the members of the three societies to be held next Sunday afternoon in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., will speak.

In the morning the three societies will receive Holy Communion in their respective churches.

Simple Glue For Home Use.

An excellent glue that is harmless, colorless and odorless is made of tapioca. Cover the desired quantity with cold water, put it over the fire and stir, adding more water as it boils to make a good paste. It can be used to glue wood, leather or paper. For scrap books or photographs it may be necessary to add a little water.

ADANAC QUARTETTE TO GIVE RECITAL

Mr. John Allan has great pleasure in announcing to the musical people of Peterborough that he has been successful in engaging the famous Adanac Quartette of Toronto for a high-class vocal recital in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday evening, January 19th. The quartette consists of the four best male singers in Canada, namely: 1st Tenor, Mr. Redferne Hollinshead; 2nd tenor, Mr. George Dixon; baritone, Mr. Arthur Blight; bass, Mr. Ruthven Macdonald. Mr. Allan had the pleasure of hearing this quartette in Toronto last week, where their splendid work created the utmost enthusiasm, the blend of the voices being well-nigh perfect. Among other splendid items, the quartette will sing Walford Davis' "Hymn Before Action," and the famous "Pilgrims' Chorus" from "Tanhauser." All the members of the quartette will also be heard in solo and duet, and the whole program is of such a character as to ensure its being the finest musical recital ever given in this city. In addition to the quartette, Mr. Allan has engaged the famous Russian virtuoso, Edouard Hesselberg, as solo pianist.

It is reported in London that Viscount Haldane, British Lord High Chancellor, will resign shortly.

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

Mr. A. E. Kochaly spoke on Sunday afternoon to the Life Problem Club at the Y. M. C. A. He told the members something of his life in Persia up till the time he left it for Canada. Until then he had never been ten miles from his home. He told of the dangers of travel in Persia, and how the Mohammedans attacked and persecuted the Christians, he himself having had an experience of the kind. He related how he had lifted himself out of his former uneducated condition because of his conviction that conditions in Persia warranted him in preparing to spend his life in missionary work at home.

The Y. M. C. A. intends to resume its regular Monday evening Bible Club study. There are two classes in this club, one composed of Collegiate boys and the other of senior men. Mr. Joseph Wearing and Mr. C. N. Meserve are instructors.

WENT DOWN ON BRIDGE.

Captain of the Formidable Stuck to Ship To the Last.

BRIXHAM, Devon., Jan. 4.—Survivors of the British battleship Formidable, which went down in the English Channel Friday, after having struck a mine or been torpedoed by a German submarine, have been brought ashore here. They relate that the ship was struck abaft the magazine. The explosion was terrific, but the magazine was not reached. Had this also blown up, the ship would have foundered without there being time to save anybody.

As the water rushed in the men on the Formidable hurried to the decks. They found that the vessel already had a heavy list to the starboard. The small boats were sent out. A cutter foundered and the men in her were drowned. A launch and a pinnace succeeded in getting away. Almost all the oars were broken in trying to prevent the small boats from being dashed to pieces against the side of the ship by the tremendous sea running. Captain Loxley and his signal men were still on the bridge when the battleship keeled over and went to the bottom.

The Earl of Bradford died on Sunday.

The New Transcontinental

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, although only opened for through traffic to the Pacific Coast during the last few months, has already established an enviable reputation for the excellence of its transcontinental service and the grandeur of its mountain scenery.

Each day brings the officials of the line a budget of letters from travellers telling of their high appreciation of this new trail through the Yellowhead Pass to Prince Rupert. Mr. Philip Orr, one of Western Canada's best known business men, wrote the other day: "It affords me great pleasure to tell you very candidly that I enjoyed my return trip from the Coast over the G.T.P. far more than I can express, and I do not have to make any allowance or reduction for the service. I had elegant weather, fine service, and we made splendid time. I could not make any suggestions that would improve the comfort of the travelling public at the present time."

Mr. J. A. Hodgson, Toronto, after a trip westward to Prince Rupert and thence down the Coast, through the "Norway of America," to Vancouver on the S.S. "Prince George," said he had been many times across the Alps and had crossed America on other Transcontinental Railways, but had never had finer service than he received on the Grand Trunk Pacific. The view of Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, from the train, was one of the finest pieces of scenery he knew of and was alone worth a trip from the East.

REEVES of N. Monaghan and Smith Townships Defeated

MAJORITY FOR MAYOR BULLER IN TWENTY-ONE DIVISIONS

No. 1, Division Gave Ald. Duncan His Only Win in Mayoralty Contest

GREEN AND McINTYRE

Won in West and North Wards and G. N. Gordon Headed the School Trustees

The people have spoken again and Mayor Buller has been accorded a second term as chief magistrate, by the splendid majority of 555. His candidature was given a majority in twenty-one of the twenty-three polling sub-divisons which is doubtless very satisfactory to his worship. He obtained his largest majority in the west ward where he headed Ald. Duncan his opponent by 190.

In No. 1 polling sub-division, Ald. Duncan was eleven votes to the good but this was his only win. His next best showing was made at Lee's shop in the North Ward, where he was four votes behind.

In the vote for aldermen, Ald. Wm. Langford went down to defeat by forty-four votes. Ex-Ald. A. A. McIntyre, the successful candidate, had substantial majorities in three of the five divisions.

Ald. Green weathered the storm in the west ward, having a majority in each sub-division, a total of 122. He had sturdy opposition in the person of H. P. Morgan.

G. N. Gordon, who conducted an energetic campaign, as a candidate for board of education, headed the poll with a total vote of 1191. He did well in every ward. He and R. Denne, the new members were the big vote getters, the latter being but eleven votes in the rear of Mr. Gordon. Next came Mr. Eastwood and Mr. Ackerman fourth. J. M. Greene received a very encouraging vote and although unsuccessful in getting within the charmed circle, he has every reason to be pleased with the result. Regret is expressed at the defeat of Mr. Turner, who did not get the vote, many of his friends expected.

ALD.-ELECT JOHN EDGAR.

Who is among the new men in this year's Board of Aldermen, and who will represent the important South Ward, has had considerable municipal experience, having been a member of the Burks Falls town council, chairman of the Board of Education, and Treasurer of the town. No doubt his experience in the smaller field will be of use to the people here, for Burks Falls is known as one of the most progressive places of Northern Ontario. Ald. Edgar is a brother of the postmaster of Peterborough, and of the member of the Legislature for Parry Sound.

W. H. Crough Won in Ennismore

In Ennismore yesterday interest was centred in the contest for reeveship, the councillors having been elected by acclamation.

W. H. Crough was elected reeve by a majority of 18 over John Young, the returns being 104 for Crough and 86 for Young.

R. DENNE

Successful candidate for Board of Education, with 1,073 votes.

After The Battle

Grit and Tory alike were bumped, both in the city and county.

G. N. Gordon did not go to Toronto to place an order for a supply of brooms.

Speaking as usual:
Good morning, George.
Good morning, Mr. Mayor.

Neither did Ald. Duncan paint the town red last night.

"He was a comer, and would have made a good alderman," is one comment in favor of ex-Ald. Langford.

Now, look out for explosions in the Board of Education.

R. Denne was a popular candidate. He polled 1,073 votes.

Ald. Green was out to win. He used a liberal quantity of printer's ink and his statements were more than mere words.

The Grit organ and the P.B.F. dodge at the last moment was successfully repulsed.

G. N. Gordon, ex-alderman, city solicitor, school trustee, short story writer — and the man with the punch. It pays to advertise.

But Ex-Ald. Duncan will have more time to enjoy himself at Mayor Buller's free skating rink.

Hopes to Promote the Interests of all Classes

The fact that William Buller had been elected Mayor of Peterborough for 1915 had hardly been made known, when the 57th Regimental Band serenaded him at his committee rooms. His Worship, Ald. Johnston, Ald.-Elect Edgar, Ald.-Elect McIntyre, and J. S. Knapman, Mayor Buller's campaign captain, took their places in an open cab, led by the band, and followed by hundreds of people, they paraded the business section of the city to the strains of "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." The joyous procession stopped at the Review office, and from a window Mayor Buller, Ald. Johnston and Ald.-Elect Edgar made speeches. The Mayor thanked the electors of Peterborough for the great honor conferred upon him by being elected as mayor of this city for another year. During the past year he had endeavored to perform his duties as becomes a chief magistrate who has the interests of the people at heart, and he fully intended to continue along the same

ALL INDICATIONS POINT TO SUICIDE BY DROWNING

Garments Worn by Wm. Whittaker Found on Bank of River Just South of Hunter Street Bridge are Identified by Son

There is every reason to believe that William A. Whittaker, of 226 Euclid avenue, took his life last night, by jumping into the swift, icy waters of the Otonabee, just below the Hunter street bridge. Clothes, which have been identified as belonging to him, were found lying on the west bank this morning at 8 o'clock. The body has not yet been recovered, owing to the river being frozen over, save at the spot where it is believed he entered. His overcoat, undercoat, and cap and several other articles were identified this morning by his son. A small memorandum book was among these, in which was written instructions to notify W. A. Whittaker in case of accident. No motive for the supposed rash act can be ascribed, although it was generally known that he had had trouble.

Points to Suicide.

Everything pointed to deliberate suicide. Where it is believed Whittaker entered the water it is swift and deep, having been dredged out. There is an open space about ten yards wide, and a body would be rapidly carried out of sight beneath the ice, which covers the whole river further down. If the body is under the ice, the authorities state that it will likely be spring before any hope of recovering it can be entertained.

Where Whittaker is believed to have jumped in is the same spot where Courtland Miller, a young lad, was rescued from the water last summer when Charles Dugan rescued him by jumping in, fully dressed. There is a particularly swift current at the point.

Son Identified Clothes.

The police took charge of the clothes and other articles found with them. They were viewed this morning by a son of Mr. Whittaker, who positively identified everything.

No note or word of any kind was left giving reasons for the rash act.

Mr. Whittaker was about 50 years of age, and had been employed by the corporation for some time. At one time he lived across from the fire hall. Surviving him are his widow, three sons and four daughters, all living in Peterborough.

No Inquest.

Coroner Dr. Greer was notified of the circumstances, but deemed no investigation necessary. No search is being made for the body, owing to the condition of the river.

It is evident that the rash act took place last night, as his garments were covered with frost. The chief and members of the fire department were first informed of the case this morning, and the clothes were turned over to the police, who continued the investigation.

Soldier Takes Life While on Leave

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GANANOQUE, Jan. 5. — Corporal Harold Nelson, a member of the 21st Battalion, took his own life while staying at the house of his father, George Nelson, Wellington street, last night. He was on leave over Sunday. He lay on the bed and fired a revolver shot through his heart, dying almost instantly. He was only 23,

With less than 60 miles of rails to lay, Canadian Northern officials believe their line will be completed to the Pacific coast three weeks from today.

CHANGES IN MONAGHAN

Reeve Howden Defeated by Mr. McIntosh

FORSTER IS DEPUTY

Bell, Robson and Rye Get Council Seats

Yesterday was a bad day for the reeve and council of North Monaghan, the reeve and two councillors being defeated in the landslide, contributed by the ratepayers. It is said the people of North Monaghan were dissatisfied with the business methods of the council and were out to make a machine. It was the most exciting election in years. Another issue was a demand for a better system of road building, giving better results for money expended. Hereafter, the pay sheets will all come before council.

In the vote for deputy reeve, for which three candidates were running, Mr. Forster was returned. Had there been but one opponent it is felt that Mr. Forster's majority would have been much larger.

Wm. Stevens, the labor candidate for council secured 146 votes but not enough to win a seat. Mr. Vass was low man with 105.

PROGRESS IN FRONT OF NIEUPORT ADVANCES IN ST. GEORGE'S REGION FOE'S SAPPING ACTIVITY STOPPED

PARIS STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 5. — The official announcement this afternoon states:

"In Belgium our infantry made progress in the sand dunes in front of Nieuport.

"In the region of St. Georges our men advanced at different places, occupying houses and some trenches. At several points Belgian artillery silenced the artillery of the Germans.

"From the Lys to the Oise, in the region of Notre Dame de Delorette, to the west of Lebs, we were successful, thanks to our mortars and our hand grenades, in completely stopping the sapping labors of the enemy.

"In the vicinity of the Lille Highway, Germans blew up one of our trenches and then took possession of it, but an immediate counter attack again put us in possession.

"From the Oise to the Vosges no infantry activity has been reported.

"In the region of Craonne, and in the vicinity of Rheims, there have been artillery engagements. Our batteries effectively bombarded positions of the enemy in the town of Asuippe, as well as in the region of Perthes and in the vicinity of Beausejors.

"There was similar activity in the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse.

"In Alsace, to the southeast of Mount Dubonhomme we have entered the hamlet of Creux d'Argent, two kilometres west of Ordey, where we are organizing our positions. Gains realized by us on the road from Thann to Cernay have been maintained at a distance of one kilometre to the east of Old Thann. Furthermore, the fire of our heavy artillery at a point two kilometres east of Purnhauptle has silenced the artillery of the enemy."

CREWS LANDED.

LAS PALMAS, CANARY ISLAND, Jan. 5.—A German steamer has landed here one hundred sailors, composing the crews of one British steamer, one French steamer and two French sailing vessels sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Von Prince Wilhelm, between Sept. 7 and Dec. 4.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 5.—Russian forces have occupied eight Hungarian townships and several divisions of the Austrian armies are surrounded in the Carpathians.

TURKEY'S FORCES.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 5. — The situation in the Caucuses is now assuming importance second only to the German invasion of Poland. It is estimated that Turkey has three-quarters of a million men, of whom a quarter million are here defending her own frontiers and Constantinople.

Three hundred thousand are operating against us in the Caucasus, and the remainder are either not mobilized or are in Mediterranean garrisons and concentrating at Syria for an attack on Egypt.

WHAT ANOTHER AUTHORITY SAYS

DR. HOWARD T. BARNES, Professor of Physics, McGill University, has given the phenomena of ice formation and its consequent problems a great deal of investigation for a number of years. In 1906 he published a book on the subject, which is a text in the electrical engineering departments of several Canadian universities.

The author has developed a theory of river ice formation based on sound scientific principles and precise measurement. The helpfulness of the book can be realized when it is stated that the views and suggestions expressed have already been productive of remedial methods for handling the ice problem successfully in several large hydraulic works.

The book has been largely translated into Russian, and the new ideas advanced have been accepted by engineers there having similar problems to meet as in our own country.

Some additional data has been brought out since the publication of this book, but it is still an authoritative and suggestive work. On Page 2, Column 1, we give today a consideration of Dr. Barnes' conclusions for overcoming the difficulties arising from frazil and anchor ice.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1915

METHODS OF OVECOMING THE ICE POBLEM.

WE HAVE ALREADY referred to Dr. H. T. Barnes, of McGill University, as an authority on the problem due to frazil and anchor ice. We were referred to his book, "Ice Formation," and, being unable to get a copy in Peterborough, have bought one, and give below Dr. Barnes' conclusions regarding this problem. We may say that we also wrote to the Science Departments of Queen's University and of Toronto University, both of which referred us to Dr. Barnes as the best-known authority on this matter. Dr. Barnes says:

> "It is generally not a difficult matter to find out precisely the nature of the ice troubles in the case of most of the big hydraulic works, for, as a rule, they are affected in well-defined spots. I believe that by a careful study of the problem, it will be possible so to temper the effects of the ice, that little or no difficulty need be encountered, but the need of all the evidence available is obvious."

Professor Barnes gives nine suggestions for meeting this difficulty.

(1) It is generally recognized that the first requisite is a sheet of surface ice covering the water of the intake of a power house. This should be facilitated wherever possible, but, as frazil sometimes causes difficulty before the surface sheet forms, other methods must be used. Moreover, if the intake is below a rapids having long stretches of open water above it, the surface sheet will be a detriment, as the frazil will cling to it and may clog the whole channel. This contingency needs to be considered carefully in the location of a power plant.

(2) When such a plant is located at the foot of a rapids or at the head of a rapids with a stretch of open water above, means should be taken to construct a head race of sufficient magnitude to serve as a settling-basin for the ice drawn in.

(3) The construction of booms or cribwork at the intake of such a channel is a good device to deflect much of the ice. A large power company near Montreal, situated at Lachine Rapids, has successfully employed this construction.

(4) When frazil forms before the surface sheet does, means must be taken to handle it at the power house, and to pass the frazil through after rendering it harmless by artificial heat, either in the racks or directly in the turbines, or in both.

> "This expedient, although at first sight seeming impossible on account of the large amount of energy required to warm water, is, I thoroughly believe, a practical one, and one which I have long wanted to see put in practice. When we remember that a thousandth of a degree is often sufficient to stop the formation of ice and prevent its adherence to surrounding objects, a simple calculation will show that an artificial heating plant is quite within the realm of possibility. We do not need to warm the entire volume of water which passes through the wheelhouse, that would be an absurd notion; nor could we cope with Nature in such a way; but we can apply the heat where it is needed, and by so doing prevent the first ice-crystals from gaining a foothold. It does not take long for the crystals to build up an impenetrable barrier when once the first layer of ice has adhered to the gates, racks, or metal surfaces of the wheels."

The most vulnerable spots in a power house are the gates, the rack used for removing logs or wood from the water, and the wheel itself. Freezing of the gates may prevent them from being closed when necessary, and often causes the loss of a unit which runs away on the refusal of the gates to close.

(5) Usually salt is applied to the frozen parts, or they are left alone until they remedy themselves when conditions change and the water rises slightly in temperature, perhaps only two or three thousandths of a degree.

(6) The greatest agency in thawing out a frozen gate is the direct action of the sun, whose influence may be seen to be that of the absorption of the heat-rays in the water, thus acting around the affected part. Probably it raises the temperature of the metal surfaces the necessary amount to cause the loosely adhering masses of frazil to break away.

(7) The racks continually cause trouble. Usually they are metal bars passing into the water and exposed to the cold air. Such construction is to be avoided under all circumstances, unless the ends of the rack are artificially heated or protrude under cover in a warm atmosphere. Removing the frazil by means of rakes is very ineffectual. The racks may be heated by running steam or hot water pipes in front of them, and then a short space in front of the steam pipes, is placed an insulation of grooved and tongued lumber covered with tar paper. This insulation projects into the water and prevents ice sticking to or getting into the rack.

(8) Another method of preventing trouble is that of Mr. W. L. Bird, mechanical superintendent of the Lachine Hydraulic Works. During the winter the iron racks are removed, and the housing completely closed around the wheel-pits, and free access of heat allowed from the generator rooms. The result is that no ice forms there, and ice drawn in may be passed directly through without agglomerating.

(9) Another successful method is that used by Mr. John Murphy, which is a system of steam injection in the turbines, and which accomplishes in a few minutes the same thing as when a fire is built around the wheel-case.

THE PRESENT WAR NOT SO REMARKABLE.

MANY PEOPLE have stood amazed at the terrible loss of life and money that is occasioned by the present war. Comparative statements, however, are interesting, and show that the present war is not so extraordinary as one might suppose.

Someone, says the Calgary Herald, has been delving into the records with respect to wars and with surprising results. For instance, it is astonishing to learn that since the beginning of the Christian era very many more than half of the Christmas seasons, which are celebrations of the birth of the Christ and a commemoration of his message of peace on earth, good-will to men, have seen wars.

From the beginning of the Christian era, 1914 years ago, until the present time, there have been fewer than 240 warless years. In the 1674 other years there has been war on some portion of the globe. In most of these years, war has extended over the Christmas season.

Up to the middle of the nineteenth century it was figured that nearly 7,000,000,000 men had died in battle or as a result of wounds received in battle since the beginning of recorded history. This number is equal to five times the present population of the globe.

But, however prevalent war may be, it is something to which the world never becomes accustomed. War is an institution which is out of step with progress and civilization. The presence of the primitive instinct of battle in the human race is shown by the comparatively few peaceful years that the world has enjoyed.

And, as one writer says, the world has staggered through thousands of wars since the Christian religion was born, and it will stagger through this one.

A CASE THAT SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED.

A CITIZEN informed us that a girl of this city was obliged to get relief from the relief officer of Peterborough because she received only two dollars a week wages in a local factory. How anyone can expect a girl to pay her board and lodging on two dollars a week and be honourable is a mystery to us. There are occasions when such a low wage is perhaps legitimate. If the girl was just of the employing age and living at home, it would be another matter, but when she is not, and obliged to support herself by her own work alone, there is something brutal and Germanic about the contract that allows her only two dollars a week wages. However, we think two dollars a week is too low, in any event. If she is worth anything at all, she is worth more than that.

MR. ROWELL DOES NOT SAY HOW.

THE KINGSTON WHIG, the exponent of the Liberal party in Kingston, points out a weakness that is very general in Mr. Rowell's policies when it says:

> "Mr. Rowell, the leader of the Opposition in Ontario, has denounced the ineffectual and inefficient methods of provincial and federal labour conditions. Mr. Rowell does not say how the conditions might be improved, but he is understood to have been a student of the British labour system, and the uses to which it may be put in promoting industry among the people."

What Guelph Did Last Year.

(Guelph Evening Mercury.)

Guelph has every reason to give a hearty negative answer to the query, 'Are We Downhearted?' In the year 1913, a fairly good one, building permits amounted to $357,325. Last year, 1914, considered by all as a poor, lean one, full of unusual conditions, Guelphs' permits totalled $521,784, an increase of $164,449.

Nearly all of this work represents the building of houses, two of which were in the $10,000 class. Guelph is building many homes between $2,500 and $3,000. It's a good healthy sign, too. A city of homes is a title that any municipality can well envy.

Congratulations.

(St. Thomas Times.)

Editor O'Beirne of the Stratford Beacon was presented with $500 in gold by his personal associates on the occasion of the diamond jubilee of that paper. Mr. O'Beirne has not been connected with the Beacon for sixty years, but he has been there long enough to make a name for himself and to add to the fine traditions of Perth county's leading Liberal paper. Should the habit of presenting editors with showers of gold grow, the life of newspaper men will eventually be worth living.

An Item for Poultrymen.

The excuse of a chicken show exhibitor found guilty of having painted the feathers of one of his show birds is that the foolish hen ran up against some wet paint. Which is quite as reasonable as the protest of the disfigured drunk that the pavement rose up in the air and smote him.

MR. GORDON'S VICTORY.

Editor Review,

Sir,—As an elector and a voter I want to say that I was proud that G. N. Gordon headed the poll. He was at work in court all day and left on the train for Toronto so it was the People with a big P that put him in and left some of the four-flushers to home. Next year more of them will get their's and if there had been one less in the field I know another one who would have been left at home. Business is business is the motto now you bet.

Glad Ald. Green got in.

Yours truly,

VOTER.

WANT ANOTHER SENATOR.

Editor Review,

Sir,—The people of Lindsay must be as fond of reading about anything to eat as we are here. The newspapers of that enterprising if silly town are actually asking that an additional senator be appointed for Lindsay. This would make two for Victoria—and the people there take to the idea like a dog to a bone. Their motto is "Anything so long as it comes our way." There are peculiar men and peculiar places and Lindsay must be one of them.

Yours,

TUT! TUT!

FACTS ABOUT BACON HOG

With the desire of placing an up-to-date handbook on swine-raising within the reach of every farmer in the Province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture requested Prof. G. E. Day, of the Agricultural College, Guelph, one of Canada's leading authorities on live stock, to prepare such a work, which has been issued in the form of Bulletin No. 225, entitled "Swine," containing 80 pages, profusely illustrated.

It is a most practical and complete statement, covering every point helpful in the selection, housing, feeding and general handling of the bacon hog. The bulletin opens with the place of the pig on the farm, Prof. Day very plainly showing the why as well as the how. The various types of swine are then described, with photo-engravings of prize-winners at some of the leading live stock shows.

The author goes fully into methods of feeding, prescribes the best rations, gives the causes of soft bacon, and shows how to avoid that and other drawbacks to a perfect carcass. His hints on pasturing and soiling crops in hog raising, especially where he compares rape with clover and alfalfa, are particularly suggestive. He also gives valuable directions as to the feeding of roots, potatoes, pumpkins, apples, and dairy products.

Prof. Day places great emphasis on the selection of both sire and dam, and his counsel in this regard is much needed. Every feature pertaining to mating is thoroughly dealt with, the description of the breeding pen being especially helpful. The management of the sow during and after gestation is thoroughly handled and will likely save many a litter to the swine-raiser who will read this bulletin.

The advice on raising young pigs is intensely practical. Hints on dealing with rupture and other troubles are also given, together with excellent counsel regarding exercise.

The chapter dealing with the curing of pork is worth much to those who put up their own meat. An excellent method of try-out lard is also described.

Prof. Day bestows much attention upon the question of buildings, and gives plans of both stationary and portable pens that he can heartily recommend. He also pays considerable heed to sanitation, giving the latest suggestions regarding disinfection, ventilation, etc.

A valuable chapter is that devoted to the common diseases of swine. Many of these are described and their treatment is covered in so full and practical a manner as to make every hog-raiser practically his own veterinary.

Any farmer desiring a copy of this latest bulletin on "Swine" will receive one free by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Individuals do Not Count

Units, individuals cannot count in this war, for remember we are writing a new page of history said an extract from the letter of a young British officer, since killed at the front.

Future generations cannot be allowed to read the decline of the British Empire and attribute it to us! We live our little lives and die. To some is given the chance of proving themselves men, and to others no chance comes! Whatever our individual faults, virtues or qualities may be it matters not, but when we are up against big things, let us forget individuals, and let us act as one great British unit—united and fearless! Some will live and many will die, but count the loss naught! It is better far to go out with honor than to survive with shame!

There are times when the Nobel peace prize takes on the semblance of a hollow mockery.

KILLED IN ACTION

He sleeps. The young brave heart is stilled,
Its dreams and longings unfulfilled.
The young eyes, closed in bitter pain,
No glad new morn will greet again.

And in deep reverence I bow
As swift the thoughts come thronging now
That thrill the heart and dim the eyes—
Of choice sublime and sacrifice.

The boundless hopes, the luring path
Of Love and Life thy true heart hath
These calmly in the balance weighed,
And faced Death's darkness undismayed!

Oh, Thou whose pity reaches down
To all Thy works, this young life crown
With love, till in that welcome sweet
He find the joy of life complete.

Conquering Disease

That the condition of sanitation and increased medical vigilance is reversing the former rule of warfare casualties which resulted in more men dying from disease than from wounds, was proved by Dr. John A. Amyot, in his address, "Sanitation and War," before the Royal Canadian Institute, at Toronto.

Dr. Amyot quoted statistics showing that whereas in all wars previous to 1870 eight men died from disease to one from wounds, in the South African war the conditions had improved so that the ratio was four to one, while in the Russo-Japanese war the cause of hygiene had so progressed that the South African record was completely reversed, and four men died from wounds to one from disease. The Russians had almost as good a record as the Japs, having a proportion of three to one. The statistics of the present conflict will show a much greater proportion of men saved from the ravages of disease than ever before.

The three chief foes of the soldier, the doctor said, were typhoid, dysentery, and Asiatic cholera, and greater precautions were being taken against them by the vaccination of the troops and a vigilant medical supervision of the food and water supply.

Tins For the Cupboard

If tins are used for storing food, they should be constantly cleaned out, washed with hot water, and thoroughly dried before further use.

A neatly labelled row of tins in the cupboard answers quite as well as china jars, provided that they are constantly attended to.

Jastom Joslin's Luck

A Fortunate Blunder

By REINETTE LOVEWELL

Sadie Kiernan sat staring vacantly out of the window.

Before her on the table lay a small yellow envelope with the figure 7, a period and two zero marks inscribed in one corner. This had been buried there ten minutes before by the president of the Acme Knife company and was in final settlement of her account with his house.

Sadie had lost her job.

She paid $4 a week to Mrs. Tierney for her board, and the Saturday before, by special dispensation, she had been permitted to delay for seven days the remittance of this amount.

Hence there was now due Mrs. Tierney, payable on demand, the sum of $8, and the contents of the envelope, augmented by 41 cents in her tarnished mesh purse, would lack 59 cents of the board bill.

Agitated by the thought of confronting Mrs. Tierney in explanation of her breach of promise, Sadie permitted a large and disfiguring drop of ink to fall upon a ledger in which she was making a few final entries prior to her leave taking.

All the while the Acme Knife company sat at its desk with a frown on its face. The Acme Knife company was Mr. Arthur Lawton.

He was a young man of mild manners and had never before experienced the pain of firing a stenographer. As he heard a stifled little sniff from the typewriter table where Sadie sat he grabbed his hat and left the office to seek diversion.

His stenographer usually received from Mr. Lawton's lips four or five short letters each day. She knew her shorthand system as a Mohammedan knows the Koran, and she had never yet made a crook or a hook that she could not decipher. The marks she made stood for the words Mr. Lawton said, and she never got them wrong.

It was only when she started to spell them that she encountered difficulty.

Fortunately for his stenographer, the president was out soliciting orders most of the eight hours Sadie was on duty, and there wasn't much to do, so she had abundant opportunity for orthographic research.

Her "Handy Dictionary and Encyclopedia of Useful Information" was worn very thin and shabby, for Sadie faithfully found in its columns about ninety of every hundred words she wrote upon the machine.

But today there was no dictionary in the office. With dark suspicion she recalled that Annie Flynn, who worked in a real estate office down the hall, had looked enviously upon that trusty friend many a time.

The address of the letter she was to write was plainly printed on the letterhead Mr. Lawson had given her, so that much was smooth sailing. There seemed to be nothing she could do about the body of the letter except to spell the words as they sounded. This method was much quicker and simpler and required far less concentration than the process of dictionary research.

Sadie was a touch operator, and there were never any errors in her typewriting. Once written she did not find it necessary to read it over.

Her work ended, Sadie dreamed.

Mr. Lawton usually came in a little before closing time to read and sign his correspondence, however limited it might be, but at ten minutes of 5 on this eventful day he had not appeared. At two minutes of the hour the telephone rang sharply, and Sadie took down the receiver and recognized her employer's voice.

"Miss Kiernan," he called, "I shall have to ask you to sign that letter to Andrews & Andrews. I can't get back, and I want it to go."

She signed for the Acme Knife company, by its president, hastily, troubled by a sense of doubt about the spelling, and she stuck down the flap with a feeling of relief that Mr. Lawton would not see it and a firm determination to get a dictionary from somewhere before morning.

The carbon she hurried to file, pushing it far down in the folder, so that no casual examination would reveal any defects to persons who were sure of their spelling.

There it had remained until Friday, when, quite without warning, Mr. Lawton had appeared with the pay envelope and the hidden carbon.

There was a wild look in his eye, and his face was flushed.

He laid the yellow sheet out before her:

> Andrews and Andrews,
> Attorneys at Law,
> Bushnell Building,
> Rochester, N. Y.
>
> Attention, Mr. G. Andrews:
>
> Dear Sir—Replying to your favur of the 6th ult. I beg to stait that I have nothing ferthur to say in the mater of which you speke. It seems to me unnecessary to make a trip to Patterson on this account, and I will send Mr. Jastom Joslin on in a few days to take up the mater with you in purson. Yours truly,
>
> ACME KNIFE CO.,
> A. Lawton, President.

Mr. Lawton pointed a stern finger at the name "Jastom Joslin."

"Who in thunderation is that?" he cried. "How did that name get there? I told you to say John Mason, and I watched you write it out in longhand myself. What do you mean by putting any such fool name as that in my letter? And look at the spelling! Are you crazy? I wouldn't have had my name signed to a letter like that for a thousand dollars—a thousand dollars, do you hear?"

Sadie heard and grew faint and sick and white as she realized that in her ecstatic state of mind she had written into the letter the name to which she one day hoped to affix Mrs. and claim as her own.

Lawton was pacing the floor deliriously.

"There's your money!" he cried. "At 5 o'clock you can go—and stay!"

When she left the store it was arranged that Jastom should meet her in the park at 7, and she walked about the streets until he joined her.

On an iron bench in the scented darkness she poured out the awful story of her discharge from the employ of the Acme Knife company.

"It was just because I was thinking about yo-ur" she said shakily at the ending.

"Don't you fret, girlie," he comforted. "You can get another job, all right."

"I'll go down to the typewriter agency in the morning," Sadie said more hopefully.

* * * * * * *

Sadie was returning from an unfruitful pilgrimage to the typewriter agency one afternoon the following week. She was getting discouraged, for the agency folks seemed to have no desire to get her away from the hard benches upon which the applicants for positions sat stoically waiting a summons to duty.

As she glanced across the street she saw her erstwhile employer, Mr. Lawton, hastening toward her.

"Miss Kiernan!" he called. "Wait a minute!"

Sadie paused reluctantly, swallowing back some tears.

"Where did you get that name you wrote in my letter to Andrews?" he asked. "How did you happen to write it? Tell me, quick!"

"It was somebody I know," she faltered painfully. "I was—thinking about—him, and I suppose I"—

"Well, who was it?" Mr. Lawton broke out with entire lack of delicacy.

A stubborn little frown came to Sadie's face, and she made no reply.

They were in front of the building where the Acme Knife company had its office, and Mr. Lawton spoke more gently:

"Will you come upstairs, please, Miss Kiernan? Mr. Andrews is there, and he wants to ask you something about that letter. There is a very strange circumstance connected with it."

Sadie quakingly went once again into the familiar room.

"Miss Kiernan, this is Mr. Andrews, to whom you wrote last week," Lawton said.

"I was much interested in the name you wrote into Mr. Lawton's letter to me by—er—mistake," he began.

Sadie's baby skin went red.

"Those things so often occur in the rush of getting out the mail," he went on kindly. "But will you permit me to ask if that particular name belonged to some one you know?"

"Yes," she faltered faintly. "He works in a grocery store."

"Would you be good enough to direct me there?" Andrews asked, with the air of deference which so impressed Sadie.

"I'll go with you," she said.

Jastom, loading a delivery wagon, looked up in surprise as Sadie and her strange escort approached him.

"Mr. Joslin, I believe?" Mr. Andrews said, regarding the boy's clear eyes approvingly.

"May I speak with you privately just a minute?"

They walked down the block, and Sadie leaned against the fence, uncertain whether to go or stay. She wanted to see Jastom and was exceedingly curious to know what it was all about, for was not Jastom's business her business and all that concerned him of vital interest to her?

She found a piece of gum in her pocket only partially chewed and put it in her mouth. Gum chewing is in itself an occupation and oftentimes imparts a sense of self confidence.

She could see the two men talking together, the younger apparently answering questions, and from time to time the elder placed a hand on his shoulder. After a time they turned and came toward her slowly, and Mr. Andrews spoke.

"Thanks to you, Miss Kiernan," he said, smiling upon her, "I have been able to convey some very good news to your friend here."

He laid a hand on Jastom's arm.

"This young man," he went on, "is, without doubt, an heir to a very large fortune, the estate of his uncles for whom he was named. It was, you see, the peculiarity of the name which attracted me in Mr. Lawton's letter. His mother, I understand, wished to name her son for her two brothers, James and Thomas, whose heir he is, and formed the name Jastom from their abbreviation. I had advertised very widely for him, but without result. Both he and I have you to thank."

The lawyer bowed gallantly. Then he extended his hand to Jastom.

"I shall hope to see you at my hotel at 7 this evening. We must make some plans for your future."

He regarded the boy's dazed face with a smile and moved his hands toward the grocery window.

"After you leave here, Mr. Joslin," he said curiously, "what will you wish to do first of all?"

Jastom had the appearance of one aroused from a dream. He moved toward the jobless Sadie and gripped her arm loyally. Then he spoke with unhesitating decision.

"Get married!" he said briskly. [illegible]

FACTS ABOUT MILK

The pure milk has a slightly yellowish white color, a very slight odor, if any, and should have a sweet, pure taste.

The cream of pure milk should rise naturally, and if the separation is thoroughly effected the cream should form one-eighth to one-fifth of the total volume.

There should not be any sediment in the bottom of the jar or bottle.

When good milk is poured from a tumbler it should cling to the glass a little instead of running off perfectly clear like water.

Skimmed or watered milk is thinner than the whole milk. It is bluish-white.

The yellow shade in milk is due to the fat. But it is not safe to judge by the color alone, as the yellowest milk is not necessarily richest.

Artificial colors are sometimes added.

SOME SALAD RECIPES

Mayonnaise Dressing

Put into a double boiler a piece of butter size of egg. Melt and add one tablespoon of flour and blend until perfectly smooth. Add one cup of milk and allow to come to boil. Stir to avoid lumps. Beat three eggs until very light. Mix with one tablespoon of sugar, an even teaspoon of dry mustard and one even teaspoon of salt. Pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly and add one cup of vinegar. Stir into the other ingredients in double boiler; let boil a few minutes and set aside to cool.

French Fruit Salad

Peel 2 oranges and remove pulp from each section, peel 2 bananas and cut into slices. Seed ½ cup of broken walnut meats, 1 head of lettuce. Arrange on salad plate. Mix fruit and nuts, place on lettuce and serve with French dressing.

Bean Salad

String fresh young beans, cut in inch length and boil in salt and water until tender, drain well, and to each quart of beans add 1 small onion chopped fine. To 4 tablespoons of peanut oil add 2 of strong vinegar. Sprinkle a little cayenne over beans. When ready to serve beat the oil and vinegar to thick cream. Turn over beans and serve at once.

Originator of "Kewpies"

ROSE CECIL O'NEILL WILSON

With dozens of little kewpie dolls as her companions, Miss Rose Cecile O'Neill (Mrs. Leon Wilson), author, and designer of the droll kewpies, spends several months each year at her country place, "Bonniebrook" in southern Missouri. After a look at her merry face one can easily understand the comical antics of the little fellows that were the product of her imagination.

Pressing "Wrinkles"

Blue percale makes a very satisfactory pressing cloth. It is possible to use a much hotter iron with percale than with cheese cloth and it leaves no lint.

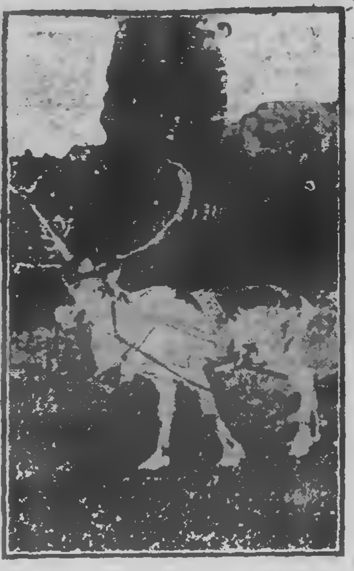
When taking spots out with gasoline put a piece of blotting paper under the cloth and no circle will remain after the material has been cleaned and pressed.

Press fancy work, lace or embroidery on the wrong side and iron through a piece of soft old linen. If colored silk articles are to be pressed use very moderate iron, cover article with cloth and use plenty of elbow grease.

This is the close season for title-hunting by American heiresses.

For the Children

How the Reindeer Looks in Harness.



To the people of Lapland the reindeer serves as a substitute for the horse, cow, sheep and goat. It is extensively employed as a beast of draft, being broken to draw sledges or carry packages on its back. A full grown animal can draw a weight of 800 pounds and travel at the rate of 100 miles a day, its broad, deeply cleft hoofs fitting it admirably for traveling over the broken snow. In winter the herds feed in the woods on the lichens that hang upon the trees or grow upon the ground, to secure which the broad antlers and hoofs are employed to scrape away the snow. Some years ago a herd of reindeer was introduced into Alaska for the benefit of the Eskimos. The experiment proved a great success, and now thousands of the animals are owned by the natives. Whether alive or dead, every product of the reindeer serves a useful purpose. The reindeer here pictured is equipped with a Lapland harness. The sled is drawn by means of a single trace, which passes between the hind legs of the animal.

A Smart Bird.

In the house of the consul in Bangkok is a bird that keeps up an incessant chatter that might almost be called conversation, so clever is it. The voice of this bird is much like a human voice, far more so than the parrot's. The bird is called the mineur or minor. It learns much more readily than the parrot and is as clever at imitating as the American mocking bird. It whistles in exact imitation of its master and sings whole songs through without making a mistake.

The master of this songster always summons his servant to him by calling "Boy!" The mineur learned to do the same thing, with the result that the servant was sent on a fool's errand many times. None could tell whether the master called or the mineur. This greatly annoyed the servant, whose owner told him that he need not come unless he heard the call, "Boy, boy!" repeated twice. In three days' time the mineur had learned his trick and was doing the same thing. Then it was arranged that the master should strike on the table or clap his hands, as they do in Turkey or Siam. This was too much for the mineur, who found that his fun was over.

An Egg Race.

To play this game two empty eggshells and a couple of strips of white tape, each two yards long, are required. There is also a little fan, which is of use in the game.

To play this mark out two goals by pinning down the pieces of tape at opposite sides of the room, leaving plenty of space behind each for a child to crouch down at the outset of the race.

Place an empty eggshell in the center of each line of tape and choose a boy and girl to play against each other. Give the girl the fan and place her behind her barrier with directions to fan her egg over her barrier and across her opponent's boundary as quickly as possible. The boy player meantime has to rely on his lungs to make his egg travel, and the player whose egg first crosses the tape of the enemy wins the game.

Misquotations.

Bishop Berkeley wrote "Westward the course of empire takes its way." Yet his line is misquoted daily, "Westward the star of empire takes its way."

Pope's fine line, "Welcome the coming, speed the going guest," is spoiled in the misquotation, "Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest."

A Chinese Tragedy.

A Chinaman stood
On the edge of the sea
Singing "Ching a ling ling,
Oh, ching a ling lee!"

There came up a typhoon,
But Ching a Ling Lee
Kept ching a ling linging
—His song to the sea.

"Enough," cried the Wind,
"Of these ching a ling lees!"
And he jerked the gay Chinaman
Out of his shoes.

His silk coat swelled out
Like a gaudy balloon,
And he flew like a bird
'Fore the awful typhoon.

But he still sang his song,
"Oh, ching a ling lee!"
Till he fell ching a long,
Ching a lunk—in the sea.

Thanksgiving Frolic.

A plan for a frolic on Thanksgiving eve is a turkey party. Begin the fun with a turkey search, which can be very easily arranged and requires no preparation but a simple prize, for which one of the pasteboard gobblers filled with candy which all the shops have in stock at this time of year will be just the thing.

Cut a quantity of pasteboard into small tickets or slips or use ordinary wrapping or pad paper in the same way. On each slip write one of the letters which go to make up the word "turkey," having each slip fit into a set completing the word. Fold the slips, and, after seating all the players around a table, play the game after the rules of "authors," the end and aim of each player being to complete the word "turkey" as often as possible. To begin the game deal an equal number of slips to each person and the same to the pool. If any player with the slips dealt to him can complete the word "turkey" he is privileged to place the letters lacking on the table in front of him. Each set completing the word counts points toward the game.

When all have matched and discarded the matching letters, as described, each, in turn, beginning with the player at the left of the dealer, draws from the pool and matches in turn. When the pool is exhausted the players have the privilege of asking each other for the letters they desire, each asking in turn and for but one letter at a time. If the person who is asked for a certain letter is found with it in his hand he is required by the rules of the game to give it up, even though necessary for a word he is building at the time. The game ends when all the players are out of slips and is won by the person who oftenest completes the term "turkey."

A Simpler Game.

The same game played with tickets or paper slips can be played by hiding the slips around the room and letting the players search for them. In this game the rule is that each slip must be sought in the sequence in which it comes in the word—thus, U only after T has been captured, and so on, as this adds to the excitement of the turkey chase. The person winning most words receives the prize, as before.

In the case of young children, for whom the spelling test would be too difficult, cut a number of turkeys out of white or manila paper and hide these, to be searched for instead of the letters. The party giver who is not able to design these shapes herself may easily find a pattern for her turkeys by scanning the advertisements in papers and other periodicals at turkey time.

Refreshments for a turkey party should have the flavor of the Thanksgiving delicacy in one course at least. Hot roast turkey sandwiches (a slice of the breast served with plenty of rich gravy between the slices of bread or toast) are a change from the familiar cold sandwich. With these, if you do not care for coffee, mulled sweet cider, prepared like mulled wine, will be a novelty perhaps. Maple parfait in tall glasses makes a tasty iced tidbit to follow.

A household hint says that books can be protected from mildew by sprinkling oil of lavender on the shelves. An easier way, though, would be to read 'em occasionally.

Kill or Be Killed

It is a grim, eerie reflection in these times of higher civilization that battles are sometimes waged so fiercely that no quarter is asked or given, and, what is even more distressing, quarter is on other occasions asked but sternly refused. This applies to no Army in particular, but equally to any, whether British, German, French, or Russian. Despite the deadly range of modern weapons, it has happened, and will happen again, that a fight degenerates into a hand-to-hand struggle in which antagonists get close enough to see tho blood-lust in each other's eyes. It is kill or be killed, and the very thought of quarter never comes into the reckoning at all. A sudden qualm of pity, a check on his strong right arm, may cost a man his own life.

The Law of Self-Preservation.

There is another very grim aspect of this same subject, and it is met with in nearly every battle which ends in a pronounced victory. Infantry are winding up a brilliant day's work with a final charge all along the line, clearing out of their trenches the remnants of a weakened, discomfited enemy, who after a vain attempt to form into a fighting rearguard, scatter for dear life. Early next morning when the stretcher-bearers visit the field of battle they discover many soldiers lying dead, shot in the back. These men succumbed not in fighting but in running away, and they fled unarmed, for their rifles had been thrown away in their frenzied attempt to escape death.

How came it, it might be asked, that the lives of these men were not spared? Alas! it is the inexorable law of self-preservation again, which demands the life or disablement of every uncaptured opponent. Chances cannot be taken. It is for the beaten man to prove that his powers of aggression have ceased and this he directly disproves by running away.

Human but Treacherous.

It is only human nature, though an unpleasant form of it, for even a beaten, panic-stricken foe, to shoot the victor who has generously spared him, whenever a safe-looking chance presents itself. Take, for instance, the experience of some of our brave fellows in the present war. A squadron of heavy dragoons, near Cambrai, charged down on an isolated body of Uhlans, taking them at so signal a disadvantage that up went the hands of every German, as if by common consent, as if in token of surrender.

Willing to avoid needles bloodshed on such terms, the dragoons swung their steeds sharply round to avoid a crash, when, with a lightning-like move, the enemy sought his holsters, and immediately several British saddles were emptied. The prompt outcome was an obliterating fight to the death. But, ere the war is over, there may be still another sequel, and it is this—Should quarter ever again by chance be asked, and perhaps sincerely asked, from these survivors of Uhlan treachery, who shall blame them if they put self-preservation before humanity and "mak siccar," as Scotsmen say?

Out to Kill.

There have been British battles even in which the outspoken intention of our men at the commencement was to take no prisoners. This was the case with many, if not every, battle, we fought in the Indian Mutiny. Our soldiers, their passions inflamed by the ghastly infamy of the enemy, were out to kill, nor did they seek to disguise the fact. In some of the punitive wars we have had with bloodthirsty, fanatical foes, for our soldiers to spare and pass by some stricken warrior because of his seemingly helples condition was too often to take an exceedingly grave risk.

In a grim litle battle of the Ashanti campaign a British infantryman, dashing ahead with the bayonet, his blood aflame with the riot of war, was about to run an Ashanti through the body, when he noticed that he was already in extremis. "Poor beggar, let him die his own way," said Tommy to himself. His humanity cost him his life. A moment later the dying man rose on an elbow in a last rally of strength, and obsessed with fanatical hate, hurled a small javelin, which caught the British soldier right between his shoulder blades, both men being found lying stark and stiff in a hideous grapple.

Totals	321	280	222	413

Majority for Jobe 41; for McKee 191.

After the elections had been determined, a meeting was held in the Foresters' Hall where speeches were made. All the members of the council were present.

APPOINT CHAIRMEN FOR COUNCIL COMMITTEES THE NEXT BIG TASK

The item of worry among the close followers of the Council of Ten today is, who will be the chairmen of the various committees. Ald. Johnston will likely retain the leadership of the Finance Committee. Ald. Green may fill Ald. Duncan's place as chairman of the Board of Works. Ald. Saunders will likely succeed Ald. Green as chairman of the Fire, Water and Light. Ald. J. J. Duffus, who has shown ability in dealing with matters pertaining to manufacturers, will likely remain chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee. Ald. Stratton may possibly come in for the chairman's duties in connection with the Property Committee, thus succeeding Ald. Langford. Ald. Dobbin will probably succeed Ald. Stratton as chairman of the Reception and Legal Committee.

BAND PLAYED FOR BULLER

lines during the coming twelve months.

Mayor Buller remarked that he had gone into the campaign with a determination to conduct it gentlemanly-like. As far as he or his co-workers were concerned, there was absolutely no "mud-throwing." He was for peace and harmony among all classes of people at all times, but particularly now that the Mother Country was at war. He hoped that during the year 1915, harmony between all classes in Peterborough would but become more evident.

The crowd, now increased to nearly five hundred, vigorously applauded the remarks of Mayor Buller, and before dispersing, rent the air with three lusty cheers for "Billy Buller—the People's Mayor."

Interviewed by a Review reporter this morning, Mayor Buller desired that his gratitude to the electors of Peterborough be made known through these columns. He was thankful to all classes, particularly the workingmen. During the coming year be would strive to do all he could for the people and to perform the municipal duties in as economical and conscientious way as possible. He would endeavor to promulgate peace and harmony among the citizens, that, being united in every respect, the city would flourish far beyond all previous records.

A REPLY WILL SOON BE MADE

Britain's Answer to American Note This Week

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The British Government's reply to the American note concerning contraband probably will be sent before the end of this week. An outline of the reply has been submitted to France, which is greatly interested because of the activity of French ships in searching Mediterranean cargoes.

Probably there will be a statement issued shortly, showing that Italy and England and the other allies have arrived at an understanding concerning contraband satisfactory to all the countries affected.

It can be authoritatively stated that only five cargoes destined for Italy have been stopped at Gibraltar since Nov. 15. Two of these were released within three days, and the others as soon as the alleged contraband in their cargoes could be removed. Since Dec. 4 no cargoes destined for Italy have been intercepted by the allies.

Recruiting has become very active in Ottawa with the beginning of the new year. Many are volunteering for both the infantry and mounted regiments and the great majority are men who were born in this district.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGNS

Five Municipalties go Dry and Ten By-laws Fail

LAKEFIELD HOLDS HARD

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Local option contests were held in thirty-one municipalities in Ontario yesterday with the result that five new places are added to the dry list. The net result of the voting was as follows:—

Municipalities in Ontario	84
Now without bars	53
Contests, including repeal contests	31
Local option bylaws carried	5
Bylaws sustained in repeal contests	[illegible]
Bylaws failed to carry	1
Still to hear from	7

The results in the various contests and the number of bars involved were:

Local option, carried — Holland Landing (1), Jarvis (2), Newbury (1), West Lorne (0), Harwich Township (0)—Total, 5.

Previous local option bylaw sustained—Durham, Midland, Newmarket, Thornbury, Lakefield, Shallow Lake, Tara, Teeswater, Percy.—Total, 9.

Bylaw failed to get three-fifths' vote — Picton (6), Ridgetown (3), Caledonia (3), Hagersville (3), Levant Township (1), Rolph Township (1), Hepworth Township—Total, 7.

Bylaw defeated on straight majority—Bala (1), Simcoe (5), Bradford (2).—Total, 3.

Arnprior doubled the license fee.

Results of Municipal Contests at Many Points, Show Changes.

TORONTO, Jan. 5. — Municipal elections throughout Ontario yesterday were, on the whole, quietly conducted, no momentous issues being before the electors. In a few cases purely local issues loomed large, and extremely spirited contests were waged. The disruption in Ottawa of the McVeity administration was possibly the feature of the day in the city voting. Throughout the province the votes on enabling or monetary Hydro-electric bylaws were, with the exception of Newmarket, in favor of a wider distribution of Niagara power.

The referendum on giving the franchise to married women was submitted to the electors in some score of municipalities, and the proposal received splendid support, in many places being carried by large majorities.

The following mayors were elected in cities and towns in Ontario yesterday. The names of those chosen by acclamation have already been published:—Alliston, J. H. Mitchell; Amherstburg, Dr. Fred. FRENCH ARMY IN UPPER ALSACE MAKES BIG GAIN

Rainy Weather Paralyzes Operations on Lines From the North Sea to the Oise, But Heavy Cannonading Marks the Day at Other Points—Steinbach Battle Was a Desperate Struggle.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The capture by the French of the Alsatian Village of Steinbach, Upper Alsace, for which a long house to house conflict has been waged, is admitted to-day in an official German report, which claims further that the Germans regained by a bayonet charge the heights near the village, which the French had also captured. Fighting is continuing for the possession of Steinbach.

The most ardent enthusiasm prevails among the French at the progress of the forces at Steinbach.

A despatch to The Journal of Paris describes the fighting there. The Germans were prepared to present the utmost resistance to the French attacks on the village. Redoubts were constructed in houses, in gardens and in the streets, and machine guns were posted everywhere. Deadly French 75 millimetre guns, however, forced the enemy to evacucate, leaving 2,300 dead or wounded in the streets. The French can already see flags flying in Muhlhausen, says The Journal.

Rainy weather brought calm Sunday to the battle lines from the North Sea to the Oise river. At other points of the hostile lines in France there was heavy cannonading and the Paris official report claims the French artillery showed superiority. Several German points of support in the Champagne district were taken, but the effort to occupy a position in the Meuse country failed. In Upper Alsace the statement reports merely a further gain at Steinbach, and the capture of an important height.

The following official communication was issued by the War Office last night:

"The only reports which have been received up to the present have reference to upper Alsace, where engagements of a very violent nature continue in the region of Cernay.

"Last night our troops lost, then regained, the territory around the church at Steinbach. This morning they occupied the entire village.

"The German works to the west of Cernay captured by us yesterday were lost for a brief period following a very violent counter-attack, but the Germans were not able to maintain it, and this position remains in our hands."

The French War Office gave out the following official statement yesterday afternoon:

"From the sea to the Oise the day passed in almost complete calm. The weather was rainy. There were artillery exchanges at some points of the front. In front of Noulettes our heavy artillery reduced the German batteries to silence.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne the cannonading was particularly violent. Our batteries showed their superiority and brought under their fire reserve forces of the enemy. We became possessed of several points of support held by the Germans in the region of Perthes and of Mesnil-les-Hurlus.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse, as well as on the heights of the Meuse, there was intermittent cannonading. An effort made yesterday morning by our troops to occupy Boureuilles did not succeed.

"Our advance continued in the forest of Le Pretre, which is to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

"In Upper Alsace we occupied an important height to the west of Cernay. A counter-attack by the enemy was repulsed.

"In Steinbach we have taken possession of the vicinity of the church and of the cemetery."

GERMANS MAKE HEAVY SACRIFICES IN VAIN

CANNOT CROSS THE BZURA

After Capture of Bolimow Germans Have Tried to Push on to Warsaw But Have Been Stopped With Large Losses—Austrians Are Retiring in Disorder Before Victorious Russian Army.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Violent fighting is in progress along the eastern battlefront, leading at some points to desperate hand-to-hand encounters. The official Russian statement shows that after capturing Polimow, the Germans attempted to push on to the northeast, in the direction of Warsaw. Their advance is asserted by the Russians to have been repulsed with large losses. The Berlin official report says the German attacks are still being pushed east of the Rawka river.

A Petrograd cable says it is learned authoritatively that the fighting of Sunday on Baura river front resulted in important success for the Russians.

The Austrians in Galicia are retreating in disorder, and whole regiments are surrendering.

The Muscovite steam-roller is crushing out the dying embers of the last Austrian advance through Galicia. The victorious troops of the Grand Duke Nicholas are following up the retreating Austrians down to the plains of Hungary, and as far east as the Austro-Roumanian frontier. Bukowina has been swept by the Russian left wing. Some of the Austrian corps co-operating with the Germans on the Vistula are being driven southward along the valley of the Nida.

The partiality shown by the Russian soldier for the bayonet is one of the features of the recent fighting on the Bzura. Again and again the Russians allowed the Germans to advance within a few yards of their trenches and then dashed upon the astonished enemy with the cold steel.

The Germans are still trying to force a passage of the Bzura river and are sacrificing men by the hundreds in the attempt. Night assaults rule, but up to the present have failed at every point. The most severe fighting is in the neighborhood of Koszoliff and Biakoupi.

The official statement of the Russian General Staff of the Caucasus says the Russians on Jan. 1 and 2 captured more than 5,000 Turks in a battle near Sari Kamysh, also mountain artillery and machine guns. One entire infantry regiment was captured. The battle was going on when the statement was issued.

The Turkish official report says the Turkish army in Caucausia is continuing its march toward Kars, and that a victory was won at Sari Kamysh. Two thousand Russian prisoners were taken, with cannon and machine guns, and two military trains destroyed on the road leading to Kars.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Electors of North Monaghan.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to thank the ratepayers for the proof of confidence implied in my return at the polls for Council of 1915. I wish to assure you that I will earnestly try to return that confidence and serve you and the whole of the township to the best of my ability, fully realizing that the various sections of the township have different interests. But my endeavor will be to work for the best interests of the whole, rather than any one section to the exclusion of the others. Again thanking you, and especially those by whose untiring efforts I was returned

Yours respectfully,

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

I desire to thank all of you who worked and used your influence in my behalf, and, while I was not elected, I appreciate the services rendered me, and have no regrets on entering the field.

I have a deep interest in Peterborough, and an abiding faith in its citizens, ourselves, and the new Board of Education will have my hearty wish for a prosperous municipal year.

Yours very truly,

GEORGE H. DUNCAN.

ELECTORS, NORTH WARD.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As it is impossible for me to thank, personally, all those who voted for me on Monday, I take this means of doing so. During the past two years I have given the city's business a great deal of attention and the large vote I received shows that my efforts have been appreciated by a large number of people. It is, indeed, a pleasure for me to know that there are so many friends, and I can only wish that you may one and all have a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Yours respectfully,

WM. LANGFORD, JR.

I wish to thank the electors who gave me their support as a member of the Board of Education. While not obtaining a sufficient number of votes to elect me to the position, I appreciate the support given, which is very satisfactory, in view of the fact that no personal canvass was made.

Again thanking you, I am,

Yours sincerely,

J. J. TURNER, JR.

Smith, Jan. 5th, 1915.

To the Electors of the Municipality of Smith:

Ladies and gentlemen:—

Allow me to return to you my sincerest thanks and appreciation for the very liberal support given by your hands at the polls on Monday which resulted in placing me in the highest position in the township officials and I can assure you my aim will always be to advance the best interests of the township.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

Yours sincerely,

FRED McKEE.

James Garvey, of North Oxford, a well known farmer living three miles from Ingersoll, dropped dead from heart failure.

TO THE RATEPAYERS OF PETERBOROUGH

I thank the ratepayers for the overwhelming vote in my favour, and I assure them that there will be business methods offered the Board of Education in 1915.

I thank particularly the ladies who canvassed and worked so faithfully for me.

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

Electors of South Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to return thanks to the electors for placing me in the Board of Aldermen to represent the important South Ward for 1915. Your desires will receive my best support, and, while I wish to do justice to the whole city, the wants of the South Ward shall receive my special attention. I will always be at your service, I hope, in the interests of Peterborough.

Wishing you a Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours,

JOHN EDGAR.

CARD OF THANKS—North Ward

TO THE ELECTORS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I desire to thank you for electing me, as Alderman for the North Ward after an absence in the council of five years.

I feel that the city's affairs require very careful attention at the present time, and I will endeavor to give the best service I possibly can.

Thanking all those who supported my candidature and trusting that my work in the council will merit the appreciation of all, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

A. A. McINTYRE.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Electors of the West Ward.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I take this opportunity of tendering my sincere thanks for the renewal of confidence which you have given me by re-electing me for another term on the Board of Aldermen.

I may just repeat my promise that I will put forth every effort to faithfully represent the City as a whole and the West Ward in particular.

I beg to compliment my opponent on the clean, plucky fight which he put up, and believe that he left no stone unturned to be elected.

Yours sincerely,

G. WALTER GREEN.

TO THE VOTERS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I desire to return my sincere thanks to the people for the splendid vote accorded me in the election for the Board of Education on Monday. While a few votes short of election, I realise that all could not be returned and I have every confidence that the gentlemen elected will give the people the best service they can. Possibly at some future time, I may have an opportunity of again appealing for your support and that my candidature will meet with your approval. I am,

Yours truly,

J. M. GREENE.

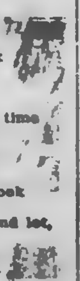
SOARING PRICES



I went into a butcher shop
To get a piece of steak.
The butcher handed me a look
That made my pocket ache.
I tried to get him to relent
And cut the price a bit.
But just to charge me for this time
He added more to it.

Oh, everything is on the jump
Since flying is in style.
The butcher gives a pleasant look
And charges for his smile.
You have to mortgage house and lot,
Your auto and your mule.
To get enough to fix the lunch
The kids must take to school.

I went into a baker shop
To get a loaf of bread.
I listened to the baker's charge,
And on the spot fell dead.
And as I slowly came to life
He said: "I'll charge you more.
Your bill must be increased because
You fainted in the store."

Oh, everything is on the fly,
The prices in the air:
Arise and sail around the moon,
And you must meet them there.
You draw your little bank account,
The grocer says, "Oh, gee,
That only pays for part of it,
The rest goes C. O. D."

German and Irish American Organizations Press for Embargo on Arms.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Hearings on pending resolutions to restrict the export of arms and munitions to the belligerent nations of Europe began yesterday before the House foreign affairs committee. Delegations from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Baltimore, representing German-American and Irish-American organizations, appeared before the committee. All urged immediate action on the resolution of Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, which would empower the President to prohibit the exportation of war supplies. They insisted that at present the United States was not observing strict neutrality because Great Britain was able to secure supplies in this country and was able to prevent Germany and Austria from drawing from the same source.

To-days sessions wil conclude the hearings. The witnesses will include a delegation from St. Louis, headed by Father Joseph F. Lubeley and ex-Representative Metz of New York, and Lebeck of Nebraska.

GLAD TO SURRENDER.

German Soldiers Captured In France Miserable and Hungry.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Daily News correspondent telegraphs from northern France:

"Again violent storms burst over the dreary, desolate area of the Yser yesterday. On both sides the fighting was a half-hearted amphibian warfare with water-logged guns, water-logged transports, and spirits drowned in the trenches.

"Sixty German prisoners brought in Sunday night were in a desperate state of filth and utterly worn out. I never saw such despondent men in my life. They swallowed the hot soup served them with the greed of starved wolves. They said they had been living in mudholes hardly fit for swine for weeks, frozen and soaked, turn-and-turn about."

His Intentions.

A young man who had been calling rather frequently of late on a Richmond girl was waiting for her in her father's library the other evening when that stern parent entered the room.

"Young man," said the S. P., "I want to know your intentions."

"Why," was the answer, "my present intentions are to go home."

And he did.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE BRITISH SOLDIERS ARE RIGHTLY TRAINED

Experiences in the Field Has Proven That Methods of Peace-time Were Correct

It is natural that those responsible for the training of Britain's new armies look carefully at the record on the continent to see whether the methods of training which have been developed and practised in the last ten years are correct. The result is to be found in certain publications designed to guide officers in their work at home.

The general effect of these records of the experience of the first part of the war is that the training of the British army has been conducted on sound and correct lines. Those who would fit themselves to face the enemy must study the text books in use when the war broke out. Of course, certain wrinkles are learned from practical experience.

For example, an officer of high rank after remarking on the effectiveness of the German artillery fire, says:

"The German infantry is inferior to our own in developing fire effect. A short field of fire (500 yards or even less) has been found sufficient to check a German infantry attack. Tactically, therefore, in occupying ground for defence, every effort should be made to combine the fire of our own guns and rifles against the enemy's infantry, while denying to the enemy the use of his artillery by the siting of trenches in positions which it is intended to hold on to, behind rather than on the crest line or forward slopes."

Discipline on the March

The same officer makes a remark upon a subject the importance of which civilians are apt to under-rate.

"Men who have not been with the colors do not understand the necessity for good march discipline. It should be impressed upon all ranks and should be resolutely insisted upon at all training previous to arrival in the theatre of war. It is most necessary to tighten up the march discipline and to prevent undue opening out and straggling.

"Horsed wagons should not be parked on the road.

"Wagons should never be halted when passing through a village.

"When a halt is necessary it should be made before reaching or after passing a village.

"Men accompanying trains should carry their rifles and should march in formed bodies.

"Each unit should detail an officer with a small party of selected non-commissioned officers and men to march in rear of the unit in order to enforce orders against straggling, leaving the ranks for water and so forth."

Warfare in the Air

Two new features of this war has been the use of aircraft and machine guns. Upon these subjects this authority says:

"The enemy's aircraft are numerous and efficient and it is clear that he obtained by this or other means excellent information as to our movements. It has been found impossible to conceal movements of large bodies of troops when on the march from this observation, and the position or large bivouacs can always be observed from the air. But much can be done to conceal artillery positions and trenches, and the use of overhead cover, as we know from our own experience, makes it difficult to ascertain from the air whether trenches and gun emplacements are occupied or not. Troops should therefore be taught to understand the necessity for concealment from aircraft whenever the conditions admit of it."

Trench fighting has been a feature of the use of infantry. This officer says: "Owing to the accuracy of the enemy's artillery fire, it is desirable that ground which is to be held defensively or to assist further advance should be entrenched. Trenches should be commenced at once with the light entrenching tool and improved later as opportunity occurs. They should be deep and narrow and should show above the ground level as little as possible.

Cavalry Uses Rifle

During the past ten years the British cavalry has been training with great diligence. Ignoring the advice of extremists, its leaders have taught the men to be expert with sword and lance and with the rifle. The result is that both the cold steel and the rifle have been used effectively. Certain highly placed observers thus are quoted:

"The training of the cavalry with the rifle has been invaluable, and has given them great advantage over the enemy."

In distinction to the German method of handling infantry in masses, these officers say that an infantry advance "should not be made in rigid lines, but with clouds of skirmishers—5 or 6 yards apart—thrown forward according to the ground and available cover."

"The essential thing," says one general at the front, "is to pay attention to the sound principles on which our training has been based."

This is a proud thing to be able to say.

The modern high powered gun is about as deadly as the ancient short sword. Distance is nothing in comparison with reach of weapons.

VICE-ADMIRAL SIR CECIL BURNEY commander of the Second and Third British fleets.

OPINIONS OF PRESS ON VARIOUS PHASES OF WAR

Tommy Atkins as a Fighter

Trace Tommy Atkins back until there was no regular British army and then trace the English soldier back nearly a thousand years to the time of William the Conqueror, and the record reveals him almost constantly fighting and gripping and holding territory. He is unequalled for those combined three qualities. Soldiers of other nations have fought nobly and valiantly and often, but the results of the English soldier's fighting is that his country's drum-beat circles the world and the sun never sets on her dominions.—New York Herald.

Militarism Must Go

Militarism cannot live with social justice, social freedom, social progress. If it survives they must die. Not only does it drain the resources of the people, it destroys their independence. It makes impossible their self-government, and it perverts their moral vision. Militarism everywhere is a tribal cult, a class arrogance, a constant menace to all civilian government. Militarism must go.—Toronto Globe.

The Hour of Doom

The puncturing of the German wind-bag, the exposure of the German military bogey-man, are, in themselves, almost worth the cost of this war. The German nation has always been a disturber of the peace of its neighbors. Ever since it gained paramount power by means of deliberate spoliation of weaker states, it has been a menace to civilization and a terror to the world at large, in which it justly has not now a single friend, save the unspeakable Turk. But the hour of its doom has struck, and it has sounded not a moment too soon for the general welfare of mankind.—Halifax Chronicle.

Allies Startled

We must not follow the example of German ruthlessness. On the other hand, it were well if the responsible authorities in Great Britain would strive to imitate the German thoroughness which has also become conspicuous in this war. Let it be admitted at once that we have been startled, as our allies have been startled, by the extraordinarily minute and complete preparations which the Germans have made to overwhelm her opponents.—Glasgow News.

Valor of the French

The French army has always enjoyed an incomparable reputation for intrepidity in attack. Since this war began it has earned fresh and even greater fame for its unshaken tenacity and its indomitable doggedness. The British nation watch with the profoundest admiration the ceaseless struggle which the French army is maintaining with so much skill and success. It retains entire confidence in the strategy of General Joffre, and is proud to know that the British army is fighting under his direction, side by side with his brave troops.—London Times.

Cup Custard

Break 1 egg into coffee cup, add 2 teaspoons of sugar, a pinch of salt, beat all together until very light and foamy. Fill cup with milk. Grate a little nutmeg over top. Butter another cup, turn custard into it. Set in a pan of water reaching almost to top of cup. Set in the oven and cook till custard is set. Put long pin in custard and if it comes out clean custard is done. Remove from oven and pan of water. Cool slowly.

Served with spoon of whipped cream is dainty and beneficial for an invalid.

This is the happiest country in the world today.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 4.—Prices opened unusually strong on the first market day of the year, wheat being 2⅝c to 3⅛c, oats ⅝c, and flax 2⅝c, all higher, as compared with Thursday's closing figures. The demand for export wheat was the contributing cause of the advance, and reports of the Russian crops suffering owing to drought during the fall.

There was a good enquiry for all cash grains, but not enough offerings to make a market. Exporting houses were heavy buyers of futures against export sales, and bids from foreigners continue on the up-trend.

Winnipeg wheat futures compared with Thursday closed today 3⅜c to 4⅛c higher; cash closed 4⅛c higher, oats ⅝c higher, and flax 3c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—There was considerable enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today at an advance in prices of 6d to 1s per quarter, but even at the higher level they were out of line in most cases, and the volume of business done was small.

There was also a good demand for Manitoba barley, and a sale of 10,000 quarters was made to London of feed grade at 29s. There was an active enquiry for spring wheat flour for export account, and sales of 5000 sacks of export patent were made for shipment to Glasgow at 36s 9d, while 36s 3d was refused for a number of round lots.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 1586 cattle, 339 hogs, 177 sheep and lambs and 49 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice steers sold at $8 to $8.25, but only one load at latter price, sold by Rice and Whaley, and only one load at $8 sold by Dunn and Levack; good to choice steers and heifers, $7.50 to $7.75; medium to good at $6 to $7.25; good cows, $5.75 to $6.50; medium cows, $4.50 to $5.25; canners, $3.75 to $4.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.75, and one or two at $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

Very little is doing on the stocker and feeder market and the highest price being paid for good steers is about $6 to $6.25; stockers, $4.50 to $5.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Prices ranged from $50 to $85, Fred Armstrong having bought 16 at these values.

Veal Calves.

The run of calves was light and prices remained steady at $4.75 to $9.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were light. Ewes sold from $5 to $7; rams at $4 to $4.50; culls, $2.50 to $3; lambs, good quality, at $7.75 to $8.35; heavy lambs, $7 to $7.50; culls at $6.

Hogs.

Selected hogs were quoted at $7.50 fed and watered, and $7.75 weighed off cars, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, a feature of the day's trade was the stronger feeling for butchers' cattle, prices for such advancing 25c per cwt. Demand was much better than expected, consequently a fair trade was done, with sales of a few odd loads of good steers at $7.25, and picked lots at $7.50; but, as the supply of this class of stock was limited, the bulk of the business was done in cattle, ranging in prices from $5.75 to $6.75 per cwt.

Small meats were quiet and prices firm. Hogs stronger, and prices show an advance of 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The trade was fairly active in selected lots at $8.25 to $8.50; sows at $6.25 to $6.50, and stags at $4 to $4.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.75 to $8; do. medium, $6.00 to $7.50; do. common, $4.25 to $6; canners, $4 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $6.70; do. medium, $5.75 to $5.35; do. bulls, $4.50 to $7. milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75; do. common and medium, each, $60 to $65; springers, $58 to $55.

AN IMMENSE UNDERTAKING

The Tunnelling of the Selkirks a Modern Wonder

In in the vast amphitheatre formed by the eternal snow-crowned mountains of the Selkirk range of the Canadian Rockies, more than 600 men are working night and day to complete the longest and greatest tunnel in America.

When it is finished, it will be the most stupendous engineering project of its kind on the North American continent.

The tunnel measures from east to west five miles, with an approach of 1,700 feet on the west side, and a quarter of a mile approach on the east. It is being bored through Mount Macdonald, which soars to the dizzy height of 9,860 feet above sea level.

Before the work was finally begun on Jan. 1 last, more than two years were spent in preliminaries — the selection of the proper place to drive the bore, the surveying and the excavation necessary before the real tunnelling could be begun.

Officially the project is known as the Rogers Pass Tunnel. It is now calculated that it will cost $10,000,000, but it is likely that when completed the cost will exceed that sum.

When one gazes up the rugged sides of Mount Macdonald from the Illecillewaet valley, the course to be followed by the big bore can be plainly discerned. Up to the timber line a space has been cleared between the trees, and posts planted to mark the path to be taken inside the mountain. A centre line has been mapped out by the engineers right up to the top of the peak, on which flies a signal flag.

Mount Macdonald can only be climbed from the west side, as it drops down practically sheer on the eastern slope. When the signal flag was being planted on the extreme summit, the staffs of engineers at the eastern and western camps sighted instruments from both valley, and checked up their previous calculations in order to obtain perfect accuracy in projecting their respective bores. The pole at the summit indicates the alignment of the tunnel, while a route surveyed around the slopes of the mountain gives the basis for the triangulation.

The highest point reached by the tunnel will be 3,795 feet above sea level, or 4,065 feet from the extreme height of the peak. The passage through the mountain will have a gradual rise of one per cent. to the "interior summit."

Before Rogers Pass could be tunnelled, the excavation for the approaches and sidings had to be done on either side of the mountains, camps had to be established, trails and roads had to be built, and all the details of assemblying men and equipment carried out. The new location from the line under the Selkirks branches off from the present route near Camble.

From the passing train one can see a sign announcing that this point in the line has been reached. The shrill whistles and the reverberating echo of heavy blasts may be heard at intervals, but the actual work cannot be seen unless the traveler leaves the train and the beaten path. The western entrance to the tunnel is located about 1,700 feet below, and a short distance west of Glacier. The main shaft will have room for double tracks. The tunnel will be fully 29 feet wide and 23 high. The inside of the tunnel will be timbered and reinforced with concrete where required. It is estimated that over 20,000 yards of it will be required to enclose the tunnel. The exact material to be used in the heart of the mountain will only be determined upon as the boring proceeds.

The tunnel will follow a straight line under Mount Macdonald emerging in the Beaver valley at a point about 1,000 feet below the present line of the railroad. The eastern entrance is situated almost immediately below Hermit, a flag station east of Rogers Pass, and nearly 47 miles west of Golden.

Brains and brawn, backed by modern machinery, modern methods, and scientific organization, are combined to overcome the physical obstacles, which for many years baffled the world's greatest engineers, when this tunnel was considered. And all this is being done to cut four miles from the Canadian Pacific Railroad route to the Pacific, to obviate the present necessity of using two long spiral "loops" on the western slope and many miles of snow sheds, doing away with some big grades, and above all else making possible the abandonment of one of the most costly sections of railway, from an operating standpoint.

The engineer who had charge of the tunnel undertaking spent two years seeking favorable location for the tunnel through the Selkirks. He discovered a route six and a quarter miles long, and later improved first plans and developed the present scheme—a bore five miles long.

Coal Barons Plan Fight.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 5.—That eastern Ohio coal operators at an adjourned meeting to-day will decide to formally break off all negotiations with the United Mine Workers' Union; will plan to evict striking miners because they have paid no rent since the strike was called the first of April last and will decide to make overtures to the miners as individuals to work "open shop" under the scale rejected by the miners' organization, was the belief expressed last night by those in touch with the situation.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

POOR HOCKEY IN OPENING OF SERIES WITH PORT HOPE

Petes Did not Come up to Expectations and Visitors Won by 9 to 5

The Peterborough Juniors proved a big disappointment in the opening game last night with Port Hope. The visitors had little difficulty in walking away with a 9-5 victory and had they played any kind of hockey the score would have been a great deal larger. It was truly a sorry exhibition and to bring the affair to a suitable climax, a free-for-all in which many fans took an active part, occurred within half a minute of full time. The fact that nineteen penalties were handed out bespeaks of roughness, but a great deal of it was the direct result of poor hockey. Team play was absent. Back-checking was absent. Speedy individual rushes were absent. In short everything that tends to make up a good game was absent.

The attendance was fairly good and the fans deserved a little better goods for their money. Money is none too plentiful this winter and when a fellow severs a two-bit piece from his purse, he wants a full 25 cents worth. Of last evening's entertainment it cannot be said that the fans and followers of the game received their money's worth. Both teams lacked condition but such is to be expected so early in the season and the fact would be overlooked had the boys made any effort whatever to play the game properly. It was slashing, tripping, cross-checking, bodying into the boards, loafing off-side, etc., for the complete sixty minutes. Some were inclined to blame it on the referee who was "Shorty" Tackaberry of the Toronto Star staff. His size was against him and he found it very difficult to keep the players from mixing it. He was strict on off-sides and the various offences but like all the other officials, he missed a few and the "few" happened to take place when the Petes were "breaking away for a score." Tackaberry has had considerable experience in handling games and possesses ability, but ability as an official could not be shown in last night's game. Fans who hollered on the referee's work did not stop to consider that the blue and white were putting up a very poor game. They found it easier to blame the man with the bell than to blame the team.

Legros in goal for the locals did show class and gave every promise of making all previous reports of his ability come true, but the other six men had an off night. Long and Richardson who composed the defence were decidedly off color both playing away below form. Richardson occasionally came through with a little rush but Long never did. He played the worst game of his career. On the forward line Knapman of whom much was expected fell down mainly because he had not recovered from the effects of the game in Toronto on New Year's night. Jackson did make an effort but he had no one to combine with and he fell to roaming all over the ice. It is not customary for the centre man to do much checking back but with the rest of the forwards coming back as though they were part of a funeral cortege, the little centre man did most of the back-checking. O'Connell on right wing is big but he's terribly slow. It will take considerable hockey to make him at all finished. He carries a beautiful shot, yet what is the use of having a Winchester and no ammunition? Smythe the other wing man went well at times but he is not quite fast enough for O.H.A. company. The big boy is willing and is a hard worker but somehow or other accomplished very little.

As already stated the Port Hope team did not play good hockey by any means or else they would have run up a much bigger score. Their goaler Edmunds is far from a star and showed lack of experience. Darch and Thompson their defence did not make a hit with their playing as both were inclined to be "Ruf Neks." Darch might play good hockey if he would go after the puck instead of the man. Emmerson, their rover, was not brilliant, yet he played a very steady game and back-checked well. He combined with the wings on several rushes that left the impression that Port Hope will go much better after a few more games. Hills, the little speed merchant at centre, played away below standard and never showed anything of his last year class. The wing men, Rowden and Lowe, practically won the game for the Lake shore squad. They were the only real hockey players on the ice and never let up a minute. Both boys, particularly Lowe, are very fast and could overtake the Petes' forward line every time.

Petes Scored First.

Knapman commenced the scoring for the Petes after four minutes of play and it was seven minutes before Port Hope tied it up, Rowden doing the trick. A rush by Long and Jackson a minute later gave Peterborough number 2 but the red and white tied it up again in five minutes by a shot from Emmerson's rock elm. A few seconds before the gong for the close of the first period sounded Rowden put his team in the lead with a pretty shot from the side. After the rest Long scored on a nice shot from outside the defence but Emmerson, Thompson and Hills all registered before the Petes found the nets again. Knapman did the trick and the second period ended with the score 6-4 in favor of the Port Hopers. Hills and Lowe both scored a few minutes after play was resumed making the total 8-4. Jackson counted another for the Petes making it 8-5. There was very little time left and both teams gave way to rough work. Jackson and Darch fell near the Port Hope net and both took a pass at one another with their sticks. They stood up and clinched and then the other players and about three hundred fans took a hand in the scuffle. In the meantime Rowden had scored the final goal for Port Hope on a shot from the side, although very few saw it as everyone had been looking at the fight. The crowd was driven back to their seats and the remaining thirty seconds played without scoring.

The teams:—

Peterborough—Legros, goal; Long and Richardson, defence; Knapman, rover; Jackson, centre; O'Connell and Smythe, wings.

Port Hope—Edmunds, goal; Darch and Thompson, defence; Emmerson, rover; Hills, centre; Lowe and Rowden, wings.

Penalties:—

Peterborough — O'Connell (3), Knapman (3), Long (2), Richardson, Smythe. Total 10.

Port Hope (3), Darch (2), Emmerson (2), Lowe (2). Total 9.

MOTOR LEAGUE TO CONSIDER THE NEW AUTOMOBILE TAX

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Mr. W. W. Digby, who conducted the membership campaign in 1913, has been nominated president of the Ontario Motor League by the board of directors and will be endorsed by the league at its annual meeting at the King Edward Hotel on January 18th. The other new officers for 1915 are: Mr. L. B. Howland, vice-president; Mr. W. T. Marlatt, of Oakville, second vice-president, and Dr. M. G. McElhinney, of Ottawa, third vice-president.

The meeting of the league on the 18th will be an exciting one as a good deal of discussion will probably develop on the new automobile tax which the Government has imposed and which will go into force February 1. The new tax is on the horse-power basis, and it is expected that the opposition to it will be in proportion to the age and horse-power of the protestants' cars. The tax rate is from $6 up, and it is pointed out by Mr. W. G. Roberston, secretary of the league, that an old 50-h.p. car which may be worth only $500 will have to pay $55 tax, while a new low power car which may be worth much more, will pay a much lower tax. The old tax was a flat rate of $4, which means that all owners of large power cars will pay a greatly increased tax.

PRINCE OF WALES WIRY AND STRONG

The Prince of Wales, although he has the appearance of being very frail physically, and photographs taken of the giant Grenadier Guards, tended to emphasize his small stature, is said to be much stronger than he looks. His lack of avoirdupois is more than counterbalanced by his steel-like muscles and nerves. Add to this a whole-hearted love of athletics, for which the Prince trains systematically, and you have the secret of his Royal Highness's remarkable physical powers. For they are really remarkable, and have even astounded the critics at Oxford, who are accustomed to seeing men, whose deceptive appearance led us to regard them as weaklings, perform at times remarkable feats of athletic prowess.

It seems almost impossible to tire him out. A ten or fifteen mile walk is easy exercise for him.

At college during the march of the Oxford University Officers' Training Corps, in which the Prince was a private, his Royal Highness walked twenty-two miles, and while the other members of the corps were resting their crippled feet and tired limbs the Prince, although, of course, by no means fresh, had a smoke and a bath, and motored to a friend's house to dinner.

If his Royal Highness had not been heir to the Throne he might have qualified as one of the finest long-distance runners and "stayers" in England. He delights to spend the day in one long round of open-air exercise.

The L. McBrine Company of London has received an order through the Canadian Government for 1,300 saddles at $72.50 each for the Russian Government. Leather for the saddles will be furnished in London.

The British War Office has asked for re-inforcements, to the number of 500 men, for the Princess Patricia's Regiment. They will be sent at once. It is not known yet in Canada whether the regiment has been in action or not.

Humor and Philosophy

BEARING UP.

BECAUSE I am a married man,
  With this fact as a starter,
I do not thank the gushing friend
  Who marks me as a martyr.
Because I have a wife and kids
  And just that many bosses
Don't think that I have burned behind
  The bridge at which hope crosses.

Don't think because I cannot call
  My soul my own a minute
That I am fate's unlucky child,
  For there is nothing in it.
Don't think that when the past I scan
  It makes my pulses tingle
As I recall the bygone days
  When I was young and single.

You pity me and think perhaps
  It is a hardship maybe
That I should have to leave my book
  To go and tend the baby.
Well, think that if does you good,
  But keep, I pray, your pity.
I wouldn't trade my nursing job
  For any in the city.

No, on the square, if you must know,
  There are some compensations
To have to furnish shoes for four
  And buy their clothes and rations,
So keep your pity to yourself,
  It just excites my laughter,
I'll bet you're mad because you missed
  The girl that you were after.

Not Restful.

"You look tired."

"I am tired."

"What have you been doing?"

"Reading fiction."

"That shouldn't be tiresome."

"Well, it is when it consists of reasons why people don't pay what they owe you."

Much Worse.

"I wonder if there is anything worse than not knowing when to stop."

"I should say so."

"What is it?"

"Not knowing when to begin."

Some Difference.

"Do you like to have people fuss over you?"

"Depends on who it is."

"Oh, I suppose so."

"Now, a prizefighter can keep his affections to himself."

Getting Pointers.

"Johnny, what are you going to be when you get to be a man?"

"A prizefighter."

"Had any training?"

"Just watching paw and maw scrap."

More Practical.

"What are you writing?"

"Just a light summer story."

"One that will live, I suppose."

"If it lets me live for a while that is all I will ask of it."

Throwing the Shoe.

The peasants of southern France have the credit of originating the familiar custom of throwing an old shoe after the newly wedded pair. It was, moreover, the rejected suitor who first made it popular. The peasant bride is conducted by her friends to her new home, while the young husband is made to halt a couple of hundred yards from the house. If there is a rejected suitor he then arms himself with an old wooden shoe and flings it, with his best aim, at the bridegroom as he makes a dash for the house. When the shoe is thrown it is understood that the last feeling of ill will has been flung away with it.

Gorgeous Gorgets.

There's nothing warlike about the brilliantly colored gorget, even if he does wear on his breast a copper colored armor that looks exactly like the gorget or breastplate worn by soldiers who went to the crusades centuries and centuries ago. But aside from giving him his curious name the armor has no use whatever except as an ornament. If you were to see a plain black crow, just the ordinary variety of cornfield crow, and a gorget together you'd never guess unless you were a naturalist that the shabby old crow, with not a glint of color in his sober coat, and the splendid gorget were cousins. But they are, although very distant.

UNITED SERVICE AT KNOX CHURCH

Meeting Tonight Will be at Charlotte Street

The first gathering in connection with the week of prayer was a decidedly encouraging one. A large number were present at Knox Church and the service began promptly at 8 o'clock. Rev. Canon Davidson conducted the meeting and Rev. R. G. Peever gave a searching address on the subject "The Cross of Christ." The service occupied but one hour and the people left the building with the consciousness that the Divine promise had been fulfilled. Tonight at Charlotte St. Church Rev. J. R. Webb will be the preacher while Rev. R. Pogue will have charge of the service. The subject is "Personal and National Repentance."

MOBILIZATION BUT NOT IN PETERBOROUGH

Change Has Been Made in Plans by the Military Authorities

The city was astonished to hear that the Government had changed its plan in regard to mobilization centres and that Lindsay, Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg and several other centres were to be merged at Ottawa, Belleville, and perhaps Kingston. What caused the minister to change his mind is not known as yet, but the Federal member who is in touch with Ottawa by telephone and telegraph, was unable to find out more, than that the change was necessary in the interest of organization. The plans of the government's former scheme had gone so far that bills were out here calling for tenders for supplies and various telegraphic instructions have been received even up till 12 o'clock yesterday. The officials were looking forward to the carrying out of the former plans.

In an hour or so all was changed and wires came to that effect. No doubt in a day or two it will appear why the various centres were merged into a few as is to occur throughout Canada. Probably the government found it too expensive and not consistent with organization and efficiency and in the interests of the country.

We may rest assured that the minister would do everything in his power for his home town and this disappointment must be borne patriotically by all concerned.

However, Mr. Burnham has notified the deputy minister that the city would go down tonight and lay before the department (the minister being in the hospital) its offer and advantages and if the city has an attractive bargain it might possibly make arrangements. It cannot be denied that if the government carries on its business in this way, it is more of a bargain hunter than an administrator.

CERTIFY AS TO CONTENTS OF CARGOES

Washington Authorities Will do This Before Ships Leave Ports

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 5.—The British Government was informed today that Washington authorities would certify American cargoes as to the exact contents before they leave American ports. It is felt here this will assist in solving the difficulties concerning British interference with American shipping.

Washington.—Chairman Flood of the foreign affairs committee, told representatives who are champions of the proposal to prohibit exports in war materials, that the German Government had made it plain, it did not expect the United States to stop such exports. This statement was made to representative Bartholdt.

Bartholdt said that it made no difference to him. He opposed the export of arms on grounds of "international immorality."

Bartholdt said he had heard United States neutrality had been broken by the shipment of Canadian troops through Maine on their way to the war zone. It was only a matter of rumor but he would endeavor to investigate it.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5. — The Washington story that Canadian troops going to the war passed through Maine is probably founded on the fact that two or three Nova Scotia officers coming west to attend instruction schools inadvertently took passage by a Canadian Pacific short line which runs through Maine. Otherwise extreme care has been taken that no Canadian troops should pass through United States.

CAPT. FEE HOME FROM KINGSTON

Captain C. P. Fee, 22nd Battery, C. F. A., E. F., is home from Kingston on a five day visit. He reports the battery to be up to full strength, and the boys taking the drill and hard work splendidly. They realize, he says, that it is no child's play which they have undertaken, and are prepared to put forth every effort to measure up to the standard required.

Captain Fee, when asked, said he expected to get away with the first troops leaving Canada for overseas service. He did not care to predict when this would be, for the simple reason that no one really knows. Captain Fee is a popular member of the Belmont Club. He formerly was with the Canadian General Electric Company and the 24th Battery, 10th Brigade, C. F. A.

TO TERRIFY THE BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The Morning Post correspondent at Berne wires:

"I learn that the death sentence of William Lonsdale, the British prisoner of war condemned at Doberitz, will not be carried out and that it was passed with the object of terrifying prisoners of war who, according to the Germans, are often not very amenable. According to my information this is because they are deliberately underfed. This ill-treatment and death sentence on Lonsdale are all parts of a plan to deter the British from entering the army."

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent transmits a despatch received there from Vienna which says that a newspaper editor, Joseph Kotel of Prossnitz, Moravia, was condemned to death by court-martial for a seditious speech, and was executed two hours after sentence was passed upon him.

ROOSTERS ARE ALSO CROWING

Many Birds Arrive for the Poultry Show Now Open

One did not need to be told that the big poultry show was on today. An indescribable chorus from the feathered beauties greeted the ear as one passed down the street. Between 1,000 and 1,100 birds are on exhibition in the Market Hall awaiting inspection. The secretary is one of the busiest men in the building, but between times he managed to inform the reporter that the show was considered to compare well with other exhibitions in regard to the number of birds being shown. There were exhibitors from Belleville, Napanee, Galt, Port Hope, Oshawa, Lindsay, Cannington, Orillia and several other points. Many of them were prize-winning birds, having annexed trophies and medals at other exhibitions. There are thirty silver cups and gold medals donated this year to prize-winning birds.

As this is the opening day most of the time was consumed in getting the birds arranged and carded. Judging was commenced, however, this afternoon by Mr. Joe Bennet of Toronto and J. H. Minshall, two of the most skilled judges of fowl in Canada.

Miss Yates is on hand again with her demonstrations of plucking, dressing and carving fowl and preparing them for marketing. She will give a demonstration tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening. The public are invited to patronize the show, which will continue until ten o'clock Thursday night.

FEW OFFICERS OBTAINED LEAVE

SALISBURY PLAIN, Jan. 5. — A general order was issued which stated that no general Christmas leave at all would be granted the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The next line went on to say that commanding officers were empowered to grant it to the extent of 20 per cent. of the men under their command. Seven days could be allowed for men wishing to proceed to Ireland, six for those going to Scotland and so on in descending proportion, according to the distance which the recipients of such leave proposed to travel. Finally there was an injunction that this was to be kept "secret."

There are officers who have learned the drill book from cover to cover and who know "everything else" about tactics and strategy, and yet they found themselves up a tough proposition when they were required to grant leave to one-fifth of their men and to keep the fact secret from the rest!

DAR-ES-SALAAM SHELLED.

British Warships Bombard Capital of German East Africa.

NAIROBI, British East Africa, Jan. 5.—(Via London.)—The British battleship Goliath and light cruiser Fox have carried out successful operations against Dar-Es-Salaam, capital of German East Africa. The warships bombarded the town inflicting considerable damage. All the German vessels in the harbor were disabled. Fourteen Europeans and twenty natives were taken prisoners.

The British loss was one killed and 12 wounded.

Dar-Es-Salaam, the best built town on the coast of German East Africa, is a military station with an excellent harbor, situated 40 miles south of Zanzibar. It is the terminus of an important caravan route, the residence of a governor and has large commercial interests. The white population in 1909 was estimated at 100, the total population more than 20,000.

LONDON, Jan. 5. — Interesting Ministerial changes are likely to follow the death of Percy Holden Illingworth, chief Liberal whip, according to The Daily News, which says it is probable that Augustine Burrill will retire as Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and be succeeded by Herbert L. Samuel, Postmaster-General.

German Lawyer On Bail.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. — Maurice Deiches, a New York lawyer, who was arrested in Philadelphia Saturday night, was arraigned here yesterday on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government in connection with the issuance of fraudulent passports, to enable German reservists to return to Germany. He was released in $5,000 bail for a hearing on Jan. 11.

United States an Easy Prey.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Capt. M. E. Hanna, U. S. military expert, who is writing a series of articles for The New York Sun, declares that the United States could not repel an invasion. An enemy could easily land 100,000 invaders on the coast, as proved by the mock war waged two years ago.

SAYS UNITED STATES SHOULD HAVE ACTED

Roosevelt Blames Wilson and Bryan for "Tame Asquiescence"

New York, Jan. 5.—In an article written for the current issue of the Independent, Col. Roosevelt says, under the caption Utopia or Hell:

"To violate these conventions, to violate neutrality treaties, as Germany has done in the case of Belgium, is a dreadful thing. It represents the gravest kind of international wrong-doing, but it is really not quite so contemptible, it does not show timid inefficiency and above all such selfish indifference to the cause of permanent and righteous peace as has been shown by the United States (thanks to President Wilson and Secretary Bryan) in refusing to fulfil its solemn obligations by taking whatever action was necessary in order to clear our skirts from the guilt of tame acquiescence in a wrong which we had solemnly undertaken to oppose.

"Hague Obligation Only a Pious Wish."

"If I had for one moment supposed that signing those Hague conventions meant literally nothing whatever beyond the expression of a pious wish which any power was at liberty to disregard with impunity, in accordance with the dictation of self-interest, I would certainly not have permitted the United States to be a party to such a mischievous farce. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, however, take the view that when the United States assumes obligations in order to secure small and unoffending neutral nations against a hideous wrong, its action is not predicated on any intention to make the guarantee effective.

"The Cult of Cowardice."

"They take the view that when we are asked to redeem in the concrete promises made in the abstract, our duty is to disregard our obligations and to preserve ignoble peace for ourselves by regarding with cold-blooded and timid indifference the most frightful ravages of war committed at the expense of a peaceful and unoffending country. This is the cult of cowardice. That President Wilson and Mr. Bryan profess it and put it in action would be of small consequence if only they themselves were concerned. The importance of their action is that it commits the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt's article points only to Germany as the wrong-doer whose acts warranted an interference by the United States.

Warship Sunk By Submarine.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(Via wireless to Sayville.)—An official announcement made public through the official press bureau yesterday says:

"The submarine was pursued by British destroyers but escaped undamaged."

"MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH"

"Oh, Lord, whatever happens, keep me from gettin' sour." This is one of the many optimistic and prayerful expressions of that dear, cheerful soul "Mrs. Wiggs, of the Cabbage Patch," who forms the central figure of that quaint character play, dramatized from the book of the same name, which appears at The Grand Saturday, January 9th, matinee and night. Here is, indeed, an every-day gospel of contentment, a rebuke for grumblers and an inspiration to everyone who is striving to exemplify, in his own character and conduct, the true American spirit of "never say die." And it is the cheerful Christian philosophy of this bright-faced little woman, who seeks sunshine always behind the darkest cloud, which grips the heart, challenges the admiration, and charms the audiences at every point in this play of humble Kentucky life. The flesh-and-blood portrayal of this unique but familiar character and of her fellow-dwellers on the Cabbage Patch is perfect. In fact, they are the footlight incarnations of those intensely interesting characters of fiction, which have won the interest and admiration of readers everywhere. The wholesome humor of this play is as graceful as it is pure, besides being intensely funny. From the moment the curtain raises on the domestic scene at the Wiggs homestead, otherwise the Cabbage Patch, with that bright, cheery, optimistic woman ironing out the kinky curls of one of her household cherubs, until the return of Hiram Stubbings from his enforced pilgrimage, and the reconciliation of Mr. and Mrs. Haxy, there is not a dull moment or a tiresome situation, every incident inevitably tending to attract the attention and stir the risibilities of an audience. The play will be presented here by the United Play Company.

VETERAN OF THE COUNCIL OF TEN

Ald. Johnston Has Seen the Longest Service

Another year of municipal activity has been ushered in and though new blood has been injected into the council there are few aldermen in its personnel who have served the city longer or more conscientiously than Alderman W. J. Johnston, better known as "Hydro Bill." While we may reasonably expect, and hope that the new men will acquit themselves creditably, it is the old timers, the veterans in municipal harness, from whom a council gets ballast and steadiness in a good many instances. "Hydro Bill" is one of these veterans and during the ensuing year he has determined to concentrate himself and his best efforts towards the advancement of the city's interests as he has invariably done in the past.

DR. MORRISON DEALS WITH PRE-ELECTION STATEMENTS

Method Taken by Board of Education to Secure Some Supplies for Schools

LETTERS SENT OUT TO THE MERCHANTS

Insurance Was Placed With Straight Line Co's. Represented Here, He Says

After the main business of the Board of Education last evening was conducted, Mr. W. H. Hill made a short speech regretting the departure of the two retiring members. He referred to Dr. Morrison's nine years of service on the board during which time he had always done his duty and a tremendous amount of work. Mr. Turner had also done yeoman service in his two years and his service and counsel had been of great importance. His remarks received warm applause.

Dr. Morrison complimented and congratulated the old members on being returned through the turmoil of another election.

He regretted Mr. Turner had been unable to make the harbor but they would have the privilege of looking on this year in the capacity of ratepayers.

He also referred to the new member, Mr. Roland Denne, in kind terms.

"With regard to Mr. Gordon I would like to say a few words and make some explanations, although I am not fond of notoriety or writing letters to the press."

Vague Statements.

On December 31st Mr. Gordon made some vague statements regarding expenditures of money on supplies in which a suggestion was made that some member of the board received a profit from the tenders. Mr. Gordon had insinuated that the supplies had not been secured by tender. I am prepared to stand by what I said in reply to this, and if Mr. Gordon had taken the trouble to find out the exact truth he would have seen differently. The supervision committee of this board has always been most careful about calling for tenders and making the successful tenderer live up to his contract.

Mr. Gordon I understand spent considerable time delving into the books of the board looking up transactions which of course he had a perfect right to do, as they are open for inspection. He was able to find out that some supplies had been bought for the East and West ward schools without tenders being called. I will tell the truth and exactly what happened. When the board called for tenders they sent letters to the merchants in the line of business handling such supplies instead of advertising in the press. Mr. Robert Fair said that for window blinds he was prepared to supply them at wholesale prices, plus a five per cent. commission. The committee decided that was as good a price as they could get if they called for tenders. The wholesale invoices with freight bills were submitted to the building committee together with Mr. Fair's bill for five per cent. commission, and Mr. Fair received the sum of $27 by the transaction. When Mr. Gordon says they could have been purchased by tender cheaper he must not have understood because no firm knowing its business would supply anything at less than cost.

About Insurance.

Dr. Morrison then referred to Mr. Gordon's insinuation about insurance not being let by tender and that some member of the board had profited by it. "It is the first time I ever heard of insurance being let by tender," he said. "I always understood that insurance for such purposes was handled by what are known as straight line companies whose tariff of rates were the same. The said insurance I understand was placed by the board with several firms throughout the city whom the committee felt were best able to take care of it and who represented these straight line companies.

In concluding Dr. Morrison said that while he regretted leaving the board and its nine years' pleasant associations, he had come to the conclusion that nine years of service there and three in the city council was quite long enough for any citizen. Other instances he felt demanded more of his time now.

"The only thanks I expect is the satisfaction that I have tried to do my duty while I have held a seat on this board."

As he resumed his chair he was given a round of hearty applause by the whole board.

Mr. J. J. Turner followed him with a few words of appreciation of the kind things said about him by Mr. Hill, and the chairman. His two years had been happy ones and he had learned much from the dignity and despatch with which the board had conducted its meetings. His only regret was that he was not permitted a longer time in which to give his services to it. He imagined that what they would see would open the eyes of the new comers to the board.

WHAT THE BOARD OF EDUCATION DID

Moved the adoption of report calling for expenditures of $84,000 for school purposes in 1915.

Adopted resolution asking city council to pass a by-law for borrowing money by the issue of debentures, for $18,000 to meet overdraft incurred in the erection of two new schools.

Reappointed Mr. W. G. Morrow to the Public Library Board.

Adopted statement of receipts and expenditures of the board for the year ending December 31st, 1914.

Appointed Miss Denne, substitute domestic science teacher during the illness of Miss Ferguson.

Left the matter of skating rinks at the Central, King Edward and South Central schools in the hands of the property committee to take action.

Endorsed explanations of the chairman to certain questions and insinuations made by Mr. G. N. Gordon, regarding the letting of contracts for school supplies.

Discussed question of vault accommodation and larger quarters for holding meetings and decided to leave matter with property committee who will bring in a report.

DAIRYMEN GATHER IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Sessions are Being Held at Grand Opera House — Citizens' Meeting To-night

With fully seventy-five farmers and dairymen in attendance, the 38th annual convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario opened in the Opera House this morning at ten o'clock. It will be on for two days. Leading dairymen from all over Eastern Ontario are present. Live questions of vital interest to dairymen and farmers are to be discussed, with instructive lectures by experts on the various subjects down on the program.

J. A. Sanderson of Oxford Station president of the Association, delivered an opening address, in which he reviewed the dairying operations of Eastern Ontario during the past year, and appealed to the farmers to assist the old country at the present time, if not in men, by increased production.

Better Milk Production.

Mr. G. C. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, led a general discussion on the production of milk and cream. As far as he could see, the chief failing in connection with the industry lay with the farmer himself in not providing a proper and sufficient supply of fodder all the year round. He felt that eighty per cent. of the cows in the country were capable of doubling their production if an abundant supply of suitable food material was supplied. Dairy instruction and dairy literature has been freely circulated for a great number of years, but the same old defects existed. Possibly fifty per cent. of the dairymen of this country were delivering their milk in such a condition as enabled the cheese makers to produce fancy butter and cheese. Why should not the other fifty per cent. be made to fall in line?

Better sanitary conditions were primarily needed Milk now cannot be left in the can from night till morning and be delivered in good condition. Once cows were milked in the open, but now this was done in sanitary stables. Clean conditions in connection with the production of milk and cream insured better keeping condition. Farmers already doing the proper thing should appeal to their fellow-farmers to do likewise.

The benefits to be derived from improved conditions were well de-

SKATING RINKS AT THE SCHOOLS

School Trustee Smith Would Spend $100

LARGER ROOMS

And Vault Accommodation for Board is Considered

Regarding skating rinks for the schools this winter it was felt that something should be done, and Mr. Smith at the Board of Education meeting last night advocated spending $100 on them. He was in favor of getting rinks started at the old Collegiate, the King Edward school, and the South Central. The matter was left in the hands of the property committee.

Mr. John Crane introduced the question of larger rooms for their meetings and vault accommodation. He asked why provision was not made for the latter in the estimates brought down by Mr. Eastwood, chairman of the finance committee. The latter said that such would have to be met by a debenture issue. Mr. Crane took exception to this. However, he agreed to it being left with the property committee who will bring in a report on the construction of a vault and larger board rooms. The Collegiate auditorium was suggested but this is unsuitable owing to lack of vault accommodation. While on this question Mr. Hill objected to any expense being incurred this year unless absolutely required. Mr. Eastwood also said that the majority of ratepayers would be in favor of keeping down all expenses of unnecessary character this year. He did not think it mattered much what criticism was directed at the board as long as expenses were kept down.

ONE HUNDRED PERSONS OVERCOME OR INJURED IN SUBWAY TRAIN FIRE

Blaze Broke oat Following Explosion, During Early Morning Rush But Only One Known Death is Recorded — Wild Scenes as Hundreds of Passengers Made Rush for Exits

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 — More than one hundred persons were overcome by smoke, cut by flying glass, bruised and otherwise injured in a fire aboard a train in a subway, at the height of the rush hour this morning. In the panic and confusion which ensued, police headquarters issued a report that twelve persons had lost their lives, but this proved later to be unfounded, and only one known death was recorded.

The fact that scores were unconscious led to an early report that many had been killed. A surgeon attached to the Polyclinic Hospital reported that one injured woman died in an ambulance on her way to the hospital.

A Wild Rush.

The fire started in a train between Fiftieth and Fifty-ninth street stations. Some of the hundreds of passengers, wedged tight in cars, said afterwards that it started with an explosion and that the train came almost immediately to a standstill. Aboard the train there was a frantic rush for the end cars. Through open doors at each end there fell and poured a stream of men and women, who struggled through the smoke, apparently oblivious of the danger of a third rail. Platforms at these stations were jammed, and in the wildr ush for exits some persons were thrown down and trampled on. As fast as unconscious victims were removed from the tbbe, they were laid on sidewalks and carried to nearby stores and offices and given first aid treatment by squads of firemen and surgeons.

Three Alarms Rung.

For the first time in the history of the fire department, a special alarm called out the firemen and battalion chiefs without apparatus to fight the flames and care for the injured. A tie-up started at eight o'clock, the beginning of the rush hour. An hour and a half later the slow express service was started, only to be halted by the discovery of fire. Three alarms were turned in; eight amulances were sent to the scene, and more were called for immediately.

From trains stalled between the stations, firemen emerged bearing unconscious victims. Every available fireman that could be spared was called on to help. Unprecedented congestion prevailed at almost every subway station. At Brooklyn Bridge the Manhattan entrance was choked by tens of thousands. For fifty minutes detachments of police reserves struggled with crowds there before order could be restored.

Sixty persons were taken in an unconscious condition from the scene of the fire to the Flower Hospital. Other hospitals received many victims as well. Fire Commissioner Adams received reports from battalion chiefs to the effect that the fire was confined to two subway cars, that several persons had been killed and a great many injured and overcome.

WILL INSPECT BOARD'S BOOKS AND VOUCHERS

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon said today that he is making arrangements to go through all the books and vouchers of the Board of Education in an effort to ascertain what opportunity was given to local merchants to tender on purchases of the Board. Mr. Gordon has been informed that no opportunity was given Peterborough merchants in at least one instance, and for that reason, he will take the above steps. Citizens will await with interest the result of Mr. Gordon's search.

CANADIANS TO TRAIN IN FRANCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 6. — The artillerymen and the cavalry in the first Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plain have been sent to the south of France to complete their training, according to a letter received here yesterday from an officer with the troops. The rain and mud at Salisbury, it is claimed, make it almost impossible to carry on manoeuvres, and horses as well as men are suffering.

ALLIES GAIN NEAR RHEIMS

Small Advance Made Says Paris Statement --- Trenches of Enemy Are Blown up and Partly Occupied

DEVELOPMENTS OF IMPORTANCE ARE IMMINENT IN ROUMANIA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 6. — Bad weather delayed a compilation of the afternoon official announcement. It says troops are contending with fog and mud. Except two unsuccessful attacks by the Germans in the vicinity of St. Georges, there was little worth recording in Belgium.

A small advance for the Allies is recorded near Rheims. Near the ravine of Courte Chausee we blew up eight hundred yards of German trenches and subsequently occupied part of them.

Violent German attacks in this region were repulsed.

At Courte Chaussee, Garibaldi's regiment captured over one hundred Germans and there Constantine Garibaldi was killed.

LONDON, Jan. 6. — A despatch from Paris states that developments of the highest importance are imminent in Roumania. A dozen French and British correspondents left Paris today for Roumania by way of Bulgaria.

PRIZES ARE AUCTIONED

Four German Ships Captured Sold by British,

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Baltic Exchange Building was bright yesterday with red ink notices, announcing that four German ships captured since the outbreak of war, and now lying in various British ports, would be sold at public auction at 2.30 o'clock. This is the first auction since the ships were under the Prize Court ruling, and by 2.30 the room especially prepared for the occasion and the adjacent corridors were packed with top-hatted, grey-haired and bald men, representing as the shrill call of the telegraph boys reminded one, of shipping interests from all over Great Britain. "By order of the Marshal of the Admiralty, no bids will be considered which represent an advance of less than £5," said the auctioneer.

The first ship offered for sale, after the conditions, principally designed to prevent boats falling into the hands of foreigners, were read, was the "Ulla Boog." It was a single-deck steamer of a gross tonnage of 1,698, and immediately £13,000 was bid for it. This bid was rapidly jumped £500 or £1,000 at a time until £22,500 had been offered. Then it was raised £50 to a bid of £23,150, at which price it was knocked down. The bidding for the other ships followed more or less the course of the bidding for the "Ulla Boog." The total sum realised by auction was £130,735. This sum will be divided by the Government among the whole navy. Before the outbreak of the war the prize money of this description was divided among the sailors making the capture.

The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, at the suggestion of Lord Derby, passed a resolution yesterday and sent a letter to the Government saying that there was a shortage of shipping and expressing the hope that means might be devised, in the event of the capture of enemies' ships and proceedings for sale should be expedited.

Hatters' Union Loses Case.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — The Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the $252,000 judgment awarded by the New York federal courts to D. E. Loeve & Co., hatters, Danbury, Conn., against some 186 members of the United Hatters' Union under the Sherman anti-trust law resulting from a boycott.

ELGIN MYERS IS A SUICIDE

Was Former Secretary to Hon. J. R. Stratton

PENTICTON, B.C., Jan. 6. — Annoyed by the nature of a number of letters which had been sent to prominent citizens in the district, and which reflected on the character of his room-mate, Elgin C. Myers, a former Toronto resident, shot himself in a fit of despondency here on Sunday night, in his room above the C. P. R. depot.

Myers had faced a preliminary trial on a charge of firing into the Aquatic Club Building and wounding two men, it being alleged that he shot at his room-mate, who was formerly manager of the Bank of Hamilton here, and a member of the second Canadian contingent. It is stated that Myers' mind became unbalanced owing to ill health.

Mr. Myers was at one time secretary for J. R. Stratton, when Mr. Stratton was Provincial Secretary in the Ross Government.

The tragic end of Elgin C. Myers, who shot himself at Penticton, B.C., on Sunday recalls the famous Gamey-Stratton sensation of about ten years ago, Myers at that time being private secretary to Hon. James R. Stratton, who was Provincial Secretary. His testimony at the trial of the Gamey charges attracted considerable attention.

When he left Hon. Mr. Stratton, Myers became private secretary to Mr. J. J. Warren, and afterwards went to the Pacific coast Province, where until recently he was secretary of the Kettle Valley Railway Company. He had numerous connections who are highly regarded in Ontario.

Was Awaiting Trial.

A series of exciting circumstances led to Myers' suicide. Several weeks ago he appeared for preliminary hearing on a charge of firing into the Aquatic Club building at Penticton and wounding two men. It was alleged that Myers shot at his room mate, J. H. McCoy, former manager of the Bank of Hamilton at Penticton and a member of the second Canadian contingent.

Anonymous letters reflecting on McCoy's character were received by prominent people of the place some months ago and placards of a similar nature were posted up throughout the district. Suspicion pointed to Myers as being responsible for them. His trial was to have been resumed on the 21st inst.

STEAM INJECTION FOR ICE TROUBLES.

THE METHOD of injecting steam into the water-wheel case is the correct one for keeping the surface of the metal sufficiently warm to prevent the ice from attaching or forming there. The steam pipes are also run into the manhole covers or water-wheel domes, with which the cylinder-gates are moved when they are opened. Steam is admitted when the gates begin to freeze, and immediate relief is always afforded. Holes are bored through the end plates, which serve the purpose of keeping the water in the penstocks from entering the power house, and which also form the bearing through which the turbine shaft runs, and through these holes steam pipes are led. Steam is admitted when a unit begins to lose capacity, and normal load is picked up again within five minutes of the time of the admission of the steam. Water-wheels which were shut down during the night, when frazil was running in great quantities, have been started up as soon as steam was injected, in spite of the fact that the frazil had filled the penstock and settled on the wheel-cases, and blocked up the openings between the chutes. During eleven days of frazil fighting in the year 1905 Mr. Murphy stated that only twenty tons of coal were used. These eleven days occurred in a period of four months, while the previous year saw only one or two bad days of frazil fighting.

This took place at the Ottawa Electric Company's central station, where there are three sets of horizontal turbines, each set consisting of three 39-inch wheels, operating under a thirty-foot head. The volume of water passed is about 100,000 cubic feet per minute. It was possible to turn steam into any set of wheels from the power-house at will, by means of globe valves beside each set. An old horizontal boiler, rated from 20 to 30 horse-power, was used to supply the steam.

It is not necessary to keep steam passing all the time, but only on such occasions, usually at night, when the frazil is agglomerating and in an adhesive state.

Electrical rack heating has been also used with success, the ice being melted from a single rack bar by sending a current of 500 ampheres through it.

From the data we have placed before the people of the city, it is quite evident that there need be little or no difficulty in operating the power plants of Peterborough.

A POLICY PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH.

IN ORDER TO reach the people of any place, there is no advertising medium better than the local newspapers. They go into the homes, and, in comparison with such a method as using billboards, far exceed the latter in thoroughness, and consequently in benefit received. If the people of Peterborough are to be reached, it must be by local newspapers. It appears that the Board of Education had some idea of reaching the people when it resorted to billboards to advertise its night school classes. This is another example of a mistaken policy of cheapness, a penny wise and pound foolish policy. There are only a few billboards in the city ,while there is scarcely a home that does not receive one of the local newspapers. Advertising of this character is distinctly the kind that should be placed in the local newspapers. The majority of the people do not see these bills, and boards are being removed every little while, due to the erection of buildings. If the Board of Education thought it well to advertise night school classes, it would have been better to advertise them properly or not at all. It is hoped that the new Board will not follow this mistaken plan, and, doubtless if the old Board had thought twice about the matter, the local newspapers would not have been overlooked for a poorer method that, in the long run, is more expensive and less beneficial.

LA PRESSE LOSES AN ABLE EDITOR.

MONTREAL journalism has lost one of its leading men in the death of the Hon. T. Berthiaume, editor and president of La Presse. La Presse is one of the most widely circulated newspapers in Canada. It has enjoyed a long period of great influence and power, but, as La Patrie points out editorially in "Recollections Since 1884," La Presse was not started in the lap of luxury, but had its inception in the political strife between the Hon. J. A. Chapleau and Sir Hector Langevin, and for a number of years had a hard fight before it attained a position of strength and prosperity. Under the late Mr. Berthiaume, La Presse has enjoyed great influence and prosperity, its editorial page has been a distinct credit to Canadian newspapers, and a power among the French people of Canada.

THE COMING YEAR.

ABOUT THE TIME the present war broke out, there appeared in the newspapers of both hemispheres accounts of a number of prophesies concerning the war. These were taken for what they were—prophesies, and created more or less thought and discussion. Now, we have compilations of data about the mystic significance of the fifteenth year of the century. While we do not believe that there is any importance to be attached to this particular number, because there is no reason for it, yet an account of some of the events that have happened in the fifteenth year of the century may be of value as a refreshener of historical knowledge.

First in importance, probably, is the signing of Magna Charta, says the Hamilton Herald, the grand charter of English liberties, in 1215. Under the feudal law established by William the Conqueror, the mass of the English people were reduced to a state of vassalage hardly distinguishable from slavery, and even the Norman barons were unduly subject to the monarch's power, which was little short of absolute. This condition lasted about a century and a half. The Great Charter was wrung by the barons from King John, whose necessities compelled him to sign it in order to avert civil war and keep his crown. Its terms were agreed to after a conference at Runymede, on the banks of the Thames between Staine and Windsor, on July 15, 1215. The most important clause reads thus: "No freeman shall be taken or imprisoned, or be divested of his freedom or liberties, or free customs, or be outlawed or exiled, or any otherwise destroyed; nor will we pass upon him or send upon him but by lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land. We will sell to no man, we will not deny or delay to any man, justice or rights." The original manuscript of the Great Charter has been lost, but a copy is preserved in the British museum.

Two hundred years later, on October 15, 1415, King Henry V. of England, having laid claim to the crown of France, and landed an army to enforce his claim, fought and won the great battle of Agincourt. Disease, exposure, famine and fighting had worn down Henry's army from 30,000 to less than 9,000 men. He faced a French army six times as strong, numerically. But the English archers carried the day. "Never," says Hume, "was a more brilliant victory won over more overwhelming odds." Upwards of ten thousand of the enemy were slain, including the flower of the French nobility. The English loss is variously estimated at from a hundred to a thousand. This great victory did not, however, complete the conquest of France. Not until five years later did Henry enter Paris in triumph. All the fruits of his conquest of France (which should never have been undertaken) were lost in the reign of his weak son and successor.

Four hundred years after Agincourt, another great English (or British) victory was gained on the continent — a victory in a better cause than that of mere conquest — when, on June 18, 1815, Napoleon was decisively beaten by Wellington, and Europe was freed forever from the tyranny of the Corsican conqueror.

What Bannockburn is to Scotland, the great battle of the Pass of Morgarten is to Switzerland. Here, on November 15, 1315, a little army of sturdy Swiss peasants put to rout a great Austrian force many times their number. Duke Leopold returned to Austria with only a handful of his followers. All the flower of Austria's nobility were left dead within the country of which they had hoped to make an easy conquest. Thus did the Swiss win their liberty.

Two memorable events of world-importance occurred in 1415. July 6 of the coming year will be the 500th anniversary of the burning of John Huss, the first martyr of the Reformation on the continent Huss was a Bohemian, a doctor of philosophy and theology, and dean of the faculty of philosophy at the university of Prague. He was influenced by the teachings of Wycliffe, and for some years he thundered against abuses in the church. Being excommunicated, he appealed to a general council which assembled at Constance. Although granted a safe conduct by the emperor, Huss was thrown into prison, where he lingered from November, 1414, until June of the following year, when he was brought before the council. Although sick, and deserted by his friends, he defended his principles with spirit and great ability at three successive sittings, but on July 6 he was condemned to be degraded and burned at the stake, and the sentence was executed upon him the same day. Huss was a man of rare beauty and loftiness of character.

Even though the great war may continue to rage throughout the year 1915, it is probable that something will be done in Germany — in Prussia at least — to commemorate the establishment of the House of Hohenzollern in Brandenburg, the nucleus of the kingdom of Prussia and the present German empire. The electorate of Brandenburg was inhabited originally by the Wends, a Slavic people, from whom it was taken in the tenth century by Henry the Fowler, king of Germany, of which kingdom it became a margravate, its first margrave being Albert the Bear, under whom it became an electorate. At the beginning of the fifteenth century King Sigismund mortgaged all tho land of Brandenburg to Frederick VI. of Hohenzollern, burggraf of Nuremberg, for about $100,000, and in 1415 the territory was united to Nuremberg, and Frederick, the new ruler, assumed the title of Elector. This was the beginning of Prussia's marvellous advancement.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IN REFERENCE to Mr. G. N. Gordon's letter in reply to Dr. Morrison, Mr. Gordon was in error in drawing the inference that Dr. Morrison came to the Review and tried to stifle a reporter's report. This was not the case.

WHO would have thought it? "Mr. J. H. Garbutt a good man to lose," says the Examiner. But it was ever thus. Deserted in the hour of his agony, as though his defeat was not enough for him to bear, without being publicly deserted by his former friend and adviser, adds to his great discomfort.

RECRUITING.

Editor Review,

Sir,—It is about time something was done to waken up someone in authority. I with a half dozen other men, some who came in by train, from outside points, who wanted to enlist in the cavalry, went up to the armouries and sat around all morning, went back again in the afternoon and sat around all afternoon, and again all evening. We were then told that as the head medical doctor was not there we could not be passed.

This is a great way to have things done. The other fellows were so disgusted that I don't suppose they will go again. I should think that if the head medical man is so busy that he cannot attend to his military duties, that he ought to get out and let someone else do it. This is no time to fool with a job like this.

We are told the country needs us, and surely someone can be found, who will think enough about his country to attend to getting men, willing to defend her.

I suppose the medical officer is being paid for his services, the same as other officers.

Yours truly,
RECRUIT.

TEMPTING DISHES FOR INVALIDS

Children, invalids and very old people can practically be classed under one heading when it comes to the selection and preparation of foods. Light soups, broths and creamed purees, lean meat, if meat is allowed, chicken and fresh fish, fresh vegetables, seasonable fruit, preferably cooked, bland egg and milk dishes, constitute ideal diet for the above-named group, and sponge cakes, light puddings, hot or cold, with some simple ice creams, wafers and sweet toast, gives sufficient variety without offering heavy sweets, such as cakes and pastry. Often you may have a capricious appetite to deal with. In that case select some pretty dishes, contrive a few novel decorations of the otherwise plain foods and always have fresh and imaculate table service and linen. To save washing you may use some of the pretty napkins, especially for children, and they, as well as the sick, will enjoy their glass of milk or cup of broth much more if it is served with the little sippets, or lemonade straw.

(Remember to use a graded one-half pint measuring cup. All measurements are level.)

Beef and Veal Soup

Ingredients—One knuckle of veal, one-half pound of lean beef, six cupfuls of water, one cupful of diced vegetables, salt and nutmeg to taste.

Method—Wash the meat and pour on the cold water, place in covered kettle and simmer very slowly. After two hours add the vegetables, which may consist of celery, peas, carrots and a small potato and onion. Now simmer another two hours, then strain through a cheese cloth that has been wrung out of cold water, season to taste and add a little boiled rice, fine noodles or vermicelli. If preferred, this may be served plain as a broth in cups or a well beaten egg can be stirred into each portion just before removing from fire. If noodles or vermicelli are used, cook in rapidly boiling water before adding to soup, as both increase materially in cooking. Only a very little will be required for one portion.

Milk Punch

Ingredients—One fresh egg, three-quarters capful of rich milk, one teaspoon of sugar, a pinch of salt.

Method—Beat egg with a revolving egg beater until thick and creamy, add sugar and beat in well, add salt and milk and continue to beat until frothy. Serve in tall glass. Some like a few gratings of nutmeg or a pinch of cinnamon with this.

Fruit Whip

Ingredients—One-fourth cup of fruit pulp, white of one egg, sugar as needed or one-fourth cup of thick cream.

Method—Use stewed prunes, peaches or apple sauce, rub fruit through fruit press and sweeten to taste, whip stiff, beat in the fruit, then mould in a saucer or sherbet cup and place the stiffly whipped cream on top. This may also be served with this custard.

Custard Sauce

Ingredients—One cup of milk, two tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoon of corn starch, yolk of one egg.

Method—Beat yolk with the sugar, dissolve the starch with three spoonfuls of the milk, place the rest of milk in double boiler. When hot stir in the starch. As soon as it begins to thicken add the yolk and sugar. Beat in well. Then let cool

First Practical Use of Armored Autos

Armored cars are undoubtedly a progressive offshoot of the armored trains, and are said to have been first designed and tested by the German army for the use of officers in the field.

Covered with thick armored plates, or further defended by steel hoods, these vehicles provide admirable protection to the occupants, and are capable of carrying a driver and five men comfortably.

The chassis, which is long, low, and strong enough to travel over really rough ground, is driven by an engine of high horse-power, which enables the car to travel at great speed. The wheels are of the artillery pattern, and are protected with circular steel shields, so that the tires are the only vulnerable points; but, even when these are burst, new wheels can be shipped at a moment's notice. The bonnet and wooden body are entirely cased in steel, the latter being provided with flap loopholes for rifle fire.

As will be readily understood, four or five riflemen placed in a mobile and practically impregnable fort can do an enormous amount of execution in a very short space of time; but, in addition to rifle fire, they can bring the mitrailleuse, with which each car is equipped, to bear also.

EMERGENCY TREATMENTS

Clean Cuts

Wash carefully with boracic powder dissolved in hot water, cold added when powder is dissolved. Dip clean rag or lint into the warm solution and apply. To remove dirt, never use a sponge from the washstand.

Burns or Scalds

If clothing sticks, soak in sweet oil. Never tear off clothes; cut away clothing all round; do not break any blister or tear away any loose skin, cover all burned parts with old clean clean linen soaked well in any sweet oil (not paraffin oil). Cover up with cotton wool or wadding, put to bed, and keep warm. Give hot milk or broth. Send for doctor.

Fainting

Lay flat, with head on floor, raise the legs, and open windows to give fresh air. Loosen clothing and dash cold water in face. Rub limbs. If able to swallow, give weak whisky and water. Never try to make an unconscious person drink.

Shock From Burns or Injury

Symptoms: Face pale, skin cold and clammy, pulseless. Give hot milk, if conscious. (Never try to make an unconscious person drink; you might choke him.) Lay the patient flat on his back, head on floor, put hot bottles to feet, wrap up warmly, and moisten the lips with brandy. Send for doctor at once.

How Edgerton Got His Start

By THOMAS R. DEAN

Jimmie Edgerton's father died when Jimmie was fifteen years old. He had no mother, brother or sister, and he had not a hundred dollars in the world. His father told him on his deathbed that he would find in a stocking in the chimney some money that no one but the two of them knew was there. After the father's death Jimmie found enough to pay his father's funeral expenses and leave a small balance.

Realizing that he must go to work, the boy went about seeking a position. He was a delicate looking youth, his features being finely molded. Everywhere he was told that he was not rugged enough to do hard work, and he noticed that all the positions that did not require bodily strength were given to girls. He kept up his hunt for a week, then gave it up—that is, he gave up trying to get a job under his own identity.

He was not a boy to be discouraged, and if he couldn't make a living in one way he determined to try another. If the only positions for which he was fitted were given to girls, why not make a girl of himself and get a job as such? He spent the remainder of what he had found in the stocking in such woman's apparel as he needed and started out again on his search.

Jimmie made up as a very pretty girl. He possessed a pair of mild blue eyes, a sensitive mouth, and, his light hair being cut like a man's, he used a curling iron to make it wavy. His voice was naturally soft and readily mistaken for a girl's contralto. He was of medium height and for a boy was very well shaped. One who had not seen him in boy's dress would surely believe him to be a girl.

Arrayed as a member of the gentler sex, Jimmie, under the name of Ellen Forsythe, started again on his errand. This time he met with better success. A storekeeper, Henry Perkins, was keeping his own books and getting tired of working nights on them. He hired Jimmie to make such entries as would facilitate the work on his books, intending to teach him the principles of double entry. The salary was small, but enough to pay for his keep.

The only barrier to Jimmie's getting on in his position was that he made too pretty a girl. Perkins, who was a bachelor twenty-seven years old, employed a saleswoman, Sara Cartright, a few years younger than himself. Miss Cartright had set her cap for her employer and was much disgruntled when he took into his service the pretty assistant.

It was not long before Jimmie found himself between two fires. Perkins began to show him little attentions and to express a fear that he was working too hard. Every attention, every bit of solicitude her employer expressed for the assistant bookkeeper was to the saleswoman like a red rag waved before a mad bull. Then, too, the performances of a man who supposed his employee to be a woman were not only disagreeable to Jimmie, but must result, sooner or later, in a revelation of his sex and a consequent probable loss of his position.

Miss Cartright made herself especially disagreeable to the supposed Ellen Forsythe. If Jimmie made a mistake in an account Miss Cartright would make as much of it as there was in it and as much more as she dared. Perkins would mildly reprove Jimmie and do what he could to pacify Sara, but he dared not openly defend his bookkeeper—why, no one knew, though it was surmised that, since he had been devoted to Miss Cartright before Jimmie's appearance, he might have been too seriously involved with her to shake her off.

Whenever Perkins would show a disposition to make love to Jimmie the boy would do what he could to stave him off. This only added zest to Perkins' passion. At last he became so marked in his attentions that he brought about a rebellion on the part of Miss Cartright.

One day Perkins appeared to be much disgruntled, Miss Cartright appeared to be much disturbed, and an atmosphere preceding a storm pervaded the store. The same evening, when Jimmie was working on the books, Perkins came into the store and after a few commonplace remarks said:

"Ellen, Miss Cartright has insisted upon my discharging you."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; she says that either you or she must go."

"Why not send her off instead of me?"

"It's a delicate matter to talk about, but if you'll promise to keep the secret I'll tell you."

"I promise."

"Before you came here I was foolish enough to make love to her. She's jealous of you."

"What can she do to harm you?"

"She's got a letter from me making a proposal. If I send her away she'll ruin me."

"How?"

"Oh, there are lots of ways a woman can ruin a man if she chooses to do so. In this case she can sue me for breach of promise. If she does she may get damages, but I wouldn't care so much for that if the suit did not ruin my business on account of the public scandal involved."

"You're in a hole, aren't you?"

"I surely am."

"Well, Mr. Perkins, I think you'd better discharge me."

"That would be only putting off the evil day."

"Don't you wish to marry Miss Cartright?"

"I'd rather marry Satan's widow."

"It's a problem. Let me sleep over it. I'll see if I can find a solution."

"Being a woman yourself, you will know how a woman may be handled."

"Just so."

The next morning while Miss Cartright was busy with a customer Jim beckoned Perkins to come into the office and when there said:

"Discharge me."

"Discharge you?"

"Yes, ostensibly. I'll go away for awhile. You can keep up my salary. I'm going to try to work out a scheme."

Perkins brightened with hope. "I thought you would be smart enough to circumvent her," he said.

"I haven't done it yet."

Half an hour later Jim walked out of the store. Stopping before a counter where stood Miss Cartright, he bade her goodby, thanking her for the many kinds acts for which he was indebted [illegible]

Kidneys Wrong?—

If they are you are in danger. When through weakness or disease the kidneys fail to filter the impurities from the blood, trouble comes at once. Backache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones and the deadly Bright's Disease are some of the results of neglected kidneys. "Why do you go?"

"I'm discharged."

"Oh! Well, goodby!"

Miss Cartright was all smiles the rest of the day. Mr. Perkins appeared neither very cross nor very amiable. Miss Cartright was affable to him and did what she could to win a smile from him.

A few days later Jim in male costume appeared at Miss Cartright's boarding house and asked to see her. She entered the room where he was and looked at him in surprise.

"Is this Miss Sara Cartright?" he asked.

"Why, of course I'm Sara Cartright. And you're Ellen Forsythe. What are you doing in those clothes?"

Jim smiled. "You're not the first person who has mistaken me for my sister. I have come to you to learn where I can find her. I have been told that you work in a store where she keeps the books."

The woman looked at him, puzzled. He returned her look through his own honest gaze and won.

"You must be twins," she said.

"We are."

"Your sister has left the store, and I don't know where she has gone."

"How unfortunate!" said Jim, evidently much disappointed. "Do you know of any one who can put me on her track?"

"No, I do not unless Mr. Perkins, for whom she worked, can do so."

"Where can I find him?"

Miss Cartright told Jim where he could find the store. Before leaving he asked her if he could get a room in the house where she lodged, and he was referred to the landlady, who gladly took him in. This being arranged, he departed.

But he didn't go to Perkins' store. He wrote Perkins a note (in a disguised hand) asking him if he could let him know the whereabouts of Ellen Forsythe and received a reply from his employer that he could not. This note he showed the next evening to Miss Cartright and made her joyful that Miss Forsythe had not only left Perkins' employ, but they had evidently parted in other respects. Jim told Miss Cartright that he would remain where he was until he had found his sister. An uncle had died and left the twins a large fortune.

Jim was anxious to find his sister because their property had been left to them jointly and one could not touch it without the other's assent.

From time to time Perkins received communications from his ex-bookkeeper stating that all was working well and it was to be expected that his enemy would be outwitted. Then one evening when Perkins was at the store working on the books there came a rap on the door. When it was opened there stood Miss Forsythe's twin brother.

"Ellen," exclaimed the astonished Perkins, "what does this mean?"

"I'm not Ellen Forsythe. I'm Jim Edgerton."

He pushed his way into the store and shut the door after him. Then he told Perkins his story from first to last. From his pocket he took a letter from Sara Cartright, accepting from him a proposition of marriage, and handed it to Perkins. The latter read it and, throwing his arms around Jim, exclaimed:

"I loved you as a girl, and now I love you as a man! You've got me out of the biggest scrape of my life."

"Do you know what Benjamin Franklin said to his fellow American Revolutionists?" asked Jim.

"No. What did he say?"

"He said, 'We must hang together or hang separately.' In other words, if she goes for you I'll prove she was engaged to me. If she goes for me I'll depend upon you to clear me. But she won't go for me. I'm sure of that."

"Why not?"

"I won her on the ground that I and my sister were heirs to a big fortune."

The next day Sara Cartright was discharged from Perkins' service, and Jim was made junior partner in the business. He proved to have excellent business qualifications, and Perkins, being under a great obligation to him, advanced him rapidly. It was not long before Jim was the real manager, and his partner deferred to him in all things. Jim was of an inventive turn of mind and inclined to enter upon new paths. His ventures were successful, and he made for himself and Perkins a large fortune.

But he never let up on the latter for making love to him.

DISTINGUE COAT.

Creation of Green Duvetyn After the Redingote Style.

FOREST GREEN COAT.

The cramped shouldered effect, so marked in many coats of the last few years has been noticeably absent in most coats of the present season. There is, in fact, a very obvious breadth of shoulders, due no doubt to the popularity of the redingote or kimono effect. There are, of course, some set-in sleeves, but the style tendency is toward the long shoulder lines.

Illustrated here is a handsome coat of forest green duvetyn made in the modish redingote style. The body of the coat is semifitted, and the skirt has a decided flare. The wide cuffs are faced with black velvet. The collar is also velvet faced. Large smoked pearl buttons are used as ornaments and trimming.

THE CORRECT SKIRT.

Comparatively Short, but Worn With Coats Long in Line.

In having street skirts cut see that the short skirt, the one which emphasizes the latest ruling as to length, is worn only with a high weighted top and with a coat whose skirts are long.

All of the new models which were responsible for the introduction of the short skirt styles for fall were made with either coat skirts which fell to the knees or else simulated the effect by elevating the waist line to the directoire line and attaching long skirts from this position, which reached below the hip line.

The first of these styles, introduced last spring by Paquin of Paris, deferred to this rigid style line by providing the tailleur with a long incroyable coattail, thus preserving the long line effect considered such an essential point of the short skirted models.

Flounced skirts also show circular cut propensities.

For evening wear a circular cut skirt is le dernier cri. Would you be gowned in the very latest, have a circular skirt mounted upon a circular cut hip length yoke, worn with a bodice of very tightly fitting characteristics, really early Victorian in guise and provided with a normal waist line.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

To repair a tablecloth, lay it quite flat and cover the hole with a piece of plain Brussels net; tack it on and darn with fine flax.

To revive withered flowers plunge the stalks in boiling water and leave them in it till it becomes cold. Then cut about one inch from the ends of the stalks.

To clean white enameled furniture, use a solution made by dissolving one tablespoonful of soda in a pint of warm water. Saturate a soft cloth and wash off the furniture.

Destroy the smell of paint by placing pailfuls of cold water in the rooms which are being painted. Change the water night and morning, and when possible add a handful of hay to the water in each pail.

Get some bitter apple from the druggist, crush it and sprinkle it among the clothes. You will find it the finest thing on record for keeping moths away from everything, and one can use garments at a minute's notice, as there is no smell left by bitter apple.

To tint curtains cream color mix a bowl of cream starch and another of white. Add a small quantity of the cream starch to the white before each curtain is starched. This makes the curtains all the same tone, which would not be the case were they put directly into the cream starch.

SOME HEALTHOGRAMS

Pernicious Anæmia

The symptoms of this disease are pallor, weakness and debility. They suggest the need of blood examination. The examination shows the blood to be poor in corpuscles and in coloring matter.

The decrease in corpuscles is greater than the decrease in coloring matter. The best sign is that given by the blood examination.

Arsenic dieting, and persistent use of proper laxatives are of great service. Some cases seem to get well. They look and feel well. But later the disease grows worse again. The research work being done on this disease is mainly to find a cause and cure. Neither is known now.

A Stye

A stye is due to an infection of the root of an eyelash or of an eyelid gland. It is not different from a small boil. It is not helpful in any way. Eye strain is one of the contributary causes. Unclean lashes and lashes which should be removed are another cause.

Brown Patches on Face

Brown patches on the face and neck are due to constipation or congestion of the liver. External applications are of no value. Proper treatment under the care of a family physician should be taken for the underlying conditions.

Worth Remembering

The clever girl who wishes to attract a man knows that a glance can convey more admiration than a volume of words.

She does not write letters which she has to ask to be destroyed after they are read.

She knows that haughtiness, disdain, and condescension, are but other words for common everyday use.

She never expects her husband to be in a good temper when paying housekeeping bills.

She is always bright and hopeful, and never oppresses her friends by pouring out her troubles to them.

She is not too confiding in her friends, but tells her husband or her sweetheart everything they ought to know.

She does not imagine that everyone should show consideration for her feelings at all times.

Care of Boots

It is economy to keep all your boots and shoes on trees; it preserves the shape and the leather.

There are trees which can be bought very cheaply, with a knob at one end to fit into the heel, and a wooden toe at the other, the two being connected by a flexible piece of steel, which bends upwards according to the length of the shoe. These answer their purpose just as well as trees costing a considerable sum.

Softening Flannels

When flannels have become hard and shrunken, they may be restored to their former softness by soaking them in gasoline.

Sweet Sachets

These can be made by mixing equal quantities of powdered orrisroot and ground cloves with a little musk and attar of roses, the whole being moistened with a little alcohol and then rolled and kneaded to a paste.

The latter in time will harden, when it can be broken up and packed into sachets.

Care of Clothes

A rubber sponge is an excellent thing to use when dry-cleaning woollen material, if it is rubbed briskly against the grain of the material, then wiped with a clean cloth.

Mackintosh coats which have become hard can be cleaned and made to look new with lime and water. A handful of the best grey lime should be dissolved in half a bucketful of water, and applied to the material by means of a sponge, the application being repeated after a few hours.

MRS. HOUSEKEEPER:

Holiday time you will have a little extra money. Why not make the home a present of an EDDY WASHBOARD and an EDDY INDURATED FIBREWARE TUB?

YOU WILL FEEL THE BENEFIT every washday in the year, for the Indurated Tub keeps the water hot so long that it saves much lifting and carrying of water, and the Washboard has a special crimp which, without tearing the clothes, loosens the dirt very easily.

YOU WILL BE DOING SOMETHING PATRIOTIC, too, because EDDY'S make these, and many other articles, at their works at Hull, Canada, where from 1,600 to 1,800 men and women are employed constantly.

Buy yourself a New Year's present, MRS. HOUSEKEEPER.

BUT BE SURE THEY ARE EDDY'S.

OXYGEN GAS.

The Value of Rev. Joseph Priestley's Momentous Discovery.

Oxygen was discovered in the year 1774. Joseph Priestley, a dissenting English clergyman who had turned scientist, obtained the hitherto unknown gas by igniting mercuric oxide. The oxygen he thus produced he called "dephlogisticated air."

He and Benjamin Franklin had often discussed the mysterious composition of air and water. No one up to that time had determined what element it was in both which so invigorated the physical energies of man. It is said that Priestley made his actual discovery of the oxygen while experimenting in a brewery near his home in England. He spent the last ten years of his life in the United States, a voluntary exile.

Today a monument stands in England to commemorate Priestley's discovery. Were he alive, he could read of thousands of lives saved by his work. Oxygen is the only gas capable of supporting respiration, and is repeatedly used in the sick chamber to pull a patient through a crisis. Helmets equipped with oxygen attachments enable the diver to go to ocean depths, the aviator to ascend into rarified air, the fireman to stand in dense smoke, and rescuers to descend into gas filled mines. So wide are its uses that some 4,000,000 cubic feet of this gas are bottled in the United States every year.—New York Post.

Damage To Warships Serious.

GENEVA, Jan. 6.—(Via Paris.)—Recent reports that the Austrian battleships Viribus, Unitis and Radetzky bad been damaged during the attack of the Anglo-French fleet on Pola were confirmed in a despatch received by The Geneva Tribune yesterday from Trieste.

The message says that both battleships were torpedoed and greatly damaged. They are now docked at Pola and will be useless for a long time.

TURKS MADE HARD FIGHT

Desperate Rearguard Actions Marked Battle at Sari Kamysh

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petrograd says:

"Accounts received here of the Turkish defeat at Sari Kamysh say that the Turks displayed great bravery when their position was seriously threatened, and made frequent desperate bayonet sorties. When they were compelled to vacate they made valiant but futile efforts to cover their retreat by a rearguard action, even the wounded continuing firing from the ground when they were struck down.

"According to a telegram from Tiflis, the persistence with which the Turks pressed their attack in the Sari Kamysh district was due to their purpose to enable their troops in the Ardahan region to retire without heavy losses. Their operations were conducted under tremendous difficulties. They lacked proper equipment and had no transport trains. Everything had to be carried on the backs of soldiers or of civilians commandeered for the purpose. Most of the trophies of war captured by the Russians were of German make.

"Northwards of Kars, the Turkish force at Ardahan is also threatened with disaster. The enemy in his disorderly flight has been almost surrounded by the Russians, who hold the main roads. The Turks frantically are striving to find an outlet, but have to face passes deep in snow. The Russians have attacked Ardanan on two sides, their artillery playing a prominent part."

"What makes us so high strung?" is the query propounded by a New York psychologist. It must be because we're strung so often.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO CLEAR THE AIR, FAREWELLS SAID

Remembering the board of education's present overdraft of $17,000, ratepayers will doubtless take another deep breath when they learn that the estimated expenditures for school purposes this year amount to over $84,000. That figure was submitted at the farewell meeting of the 1914 board, held last night in the Toronto Savings and Loan board room. It was an interesting meeting, everything considered and the retiring chairman, Dr. M. A. Morrison, used it as opportunity to clear away allegations and veiled insinuations that were made against the board of education by Mr. G. N. Gordon during the recent elections.

Mr. J. J. Turner, who was defeated at the polls and Dr. Morrison, both said farewell to their fellow members in suitable terms and there appeared to be a general feeling of regret at the turn affairs had taken as the result of the chairman's withdrawal and Mr. Turner's removal. Sly remarks concerning "oratorical fireworks," "ring smashing" episodes were passed a couple of times, the members remembering certain quotations which appeared in the press emanating from a new member who will occupy a seat on the board of education for 1915. Nothing that might be termed unusual developed and the meeting broke up at nine o'clock with a discernible underlying feeling of restraint resting upon some of the members.

The following reports and resolutions were adopted:

SAY SEARCH OF SHIPS IS THE ONLY SURE WAY

Acceptance of U.S. Treasury Certificate That a Ship Carried no Contraband Would not Protect Allies Against Smugglers Transferring Cargoes While at Sea

LONDON, Jan. 6. — Although the Foreign Office regards with high favor the American Government's plan of certifying cargoes loaded under the direction of officials of the Treasury Department and destined for European ports, it was said yesterday that Britain cannot accept such certification as an absolute guaranty of the nature of the cargo in case any cause for suspicion arises after a vessel leaves America. In other words, the right of search cannot be waived, because of the possibility of shifting cargoes at sea and the impossibility of having the Treasury officer who issues the certificate accompany the ships to her destination to guard against smugglers who may carry copper or other contraband on small ships to be transferred at sea.

The waiving of the right to search of ships bearing contraband cargoes, in the opinion of several prominent British officials, would be an invitation for smugglers to ply their trade, whereas the retention of the right would tend to prevent dishonesty.

This position is precisely the same as that taken by the Foreign Office concerning the certification of manifests of American cargoes by British consuls at American ports.

The Government is constantly in communication with representatives of Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Holland. It is reported that all of the nations are to take steps to revise their lists of prohibited exports so that they will correspond with the British contraband list, thus making possible a resumption of shipping to neutral European countries from America so as to avoid delay or the danger of seizure.

List of Charges Ready

PARIS, Jan. 6. — Premier Viviani has received a report from the Government commission, which has been investigating the charges against the Germans of violation of the laws of war and humanity. This report comprises about 80 pages, and will be published at an early date in The Journal Official.

Premier Viviani, writing to Deputy Henri Galli, with reference to the report, says that the testimony upon which the findings of the commission are based will be published in book form.

WAS MARRIED AT THE FRONT

French Private Weds Dressmaker at Arras

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The first marriage under fire has just occurred near Arras. At midday the bridegroom, Private Lenoir, emerged from the trenches, scraped the mud off his clothing washed up and marched with a couple of his soldier comrades to the City Hall, where he met the bride, a Parisian dressmaker, who had journey thither by special permit.

Shells fell thick in the village during the ceremony and the subsequent Mass.

After the wedding breakfast Lenoir shouldered his rifle and returned to the trenches. The bride proceeded to Paris.

CUT SALARIES

If That Fails G.T.R. May Ask for Increase in Freight Rates

MONTREAL, Jan. 6—Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific officials were yesterday working on the pay reductions that these companies have notified their men are desirable because of the falling off of business owing to the war.

There were also rumors abroad yesterday that if the men refused to accept a cut and were upheld by a conciliation board appointed under the Lemieux Act, an increase in freight rates would be demanded. United States railways have already been granted an increase and railway officials have begun to argue that a similar increase should be allowed in Canada.

As the Grand Trunk employes are not to be reduced till April 1 there is possibility of a settlement before that time. The men in their replies to the communication outlining the cuts refuse to accept them, but do not threaten to strike.

On this mundane sphere it is not the woman alone who reserves the right to change her mind with or without provocation.

SIGNIFICANT ATTACK IS MADE AT ST. MIHIEL

Capture of Quarry is Possibly the First Step in a General Advance Diagonally Into the German Lines Which Will Compel Hasty Retreat --- German Staff Alarmed

LONDON, Jan. 6.—On the western battle front the French official communique last night records the capture of a quarry at the crossing to St. Mihiel, the first progress made in that section of the front for several weeks. It was at this point the Germans took a stand four months ago, and so far they had defied all attempts to dislodge them. It remains to be determined whether Gen. Joffre massed large forces at this point for the operation, whether a general advance will be made up the Meuse, and whether the present progress in Alsace is really a feint to weaken the German lines, stretching like a snake across northern France, so as to give the French room for progress into Belgium along the Meuse, a process, which if completed with rapidity with a strong force, would compel the Germans on the Belgian coast and in Brussels to beat a hasty retreat, or run the danger of being cut off from Germany and compelled to surrender.

It became evident that the French operations in Alsace were alarming the German General Staff, for reports were allowed to filter through, telling of a large German concentration in Alsace to resist the French advance.

Gen. Joffre told the Alsatians that the French had come there to stay, and this speech would tend further to make the Germans believe in the imminence of a French invasion of Germany by way of the upper Rhine. The dispositions of the enemy to meet this supposed advance may have led to the weakening of the lines where the natural defence seemed strongest, and thus give Joffre room for a vigorous drive through mid-Belgium. It is to destroy the German armies that Gen. Joffre is primarily aiming at, then Alsace-Lorraine, the country along the Rhine, lies at his feet and the invasion of Germany will be an easy matter.

In the other parts of the battlefield, despite the frightfully bad weather, the allies are prompt to seize any advantage to press themselves forward and are continuing the process of wearing down the enemy.

Yesterday's bulletins from the French War Office were as follows:—

"Last night our troops took possession of a quarry situated at the crossing of the road from Rouvrois to St. Mihiel, and that from Maizey to St. Mihiel, and also some neighboring trenches.

"There is no other operation to report. The weather continues to be very bad, with incessant rains.

"In Belgium, in spite of the condition of the ground and the difficulties which result, our infantry made progress in the sand dunes in front of Nieuport. In the region of St. Georges our men advanced at different places, 200, 300 and 500 yards, occupying houses and some trenches. At several points the Belgian artillery reduced to silence the artillery of the Germans.

"From the Lys to the Oise, in the region of Notre Dame De Lorette, to the west of Lens, we were successful, thanks to our mortars and our hand grenades, in completely stopping the sapping labors of the enemy. In the vicinity of the Lille highway the Germans blew up one of our trenches and then took possession of it, but an immediate counter-attack again put us in possession of it.

"From the Oise to the Vosges no infantry activity has been reported. In the region of Craonne and in the vicinity of Rheims there have been artillery engagements. Our batteries effectively bombarded the positions of the enemy in the town of La Suippe, as well as in the region of Perthes, and in the vicinity of Beausejour. There was similar activity in the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse.

"In Alsace, to the southeast of the Col (Mount) Du Bonhomme, we have entered the hamlet of Creux D'Argent, two kilometres west of Ordey, where we are organizing our position. The gains realized by us on the road from Thann to Cernay have been maintained at a distance one kilometre to the east of Old Thann. Furthermore the fire of our heavy artillery at a point two kilometres east of Purnhaunt le Haut silenced the artillery of the enemy.

BOYS WENT HOME TO SEE MOTHER

Kitchener Allowed Soldiers to go to Deathbed

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Chronicle says: "Earl Kitchener is so generally credited with an iron character devoid of sentiment in matters affecting his great purpose that the following story of his thoughtfulness is of special interest.

"A Sunderland woman with five sons in the army lay dying. Her one desire was to see her boys again, and through the offices of a local Salvation Army officer four of the sons serving in England reached home within twenty-four hours. Their expenses were paid by the authorities. The fifth son, however, was at the front, and there seemed little chance of the old woman's wish being fulfilled. But the Salvationist officer wired to the War Office, and back came a reply over Lord Kitchener's signature saying that if the son could be found he would be sent home. Afterwards came a wire to say the man was on his way home, and eventually he landed in time to see his mother before her death. The authorities had paid his expenses and gave him seven days' furlough and rations."

NEW PLAN TO STOP THE WAR

Rev. R. J. Campbell Favors General Council of Churches

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A striking proposal is put forward in The Christian Commonwealth this week by Rev. R. J. Campbell, with the object of putting an end to the war. He suggests that a general council of the Christian Churches of the world be summoned to discuss the war. Mr. Campbell writes: "Who is to summon such a council? There is only one person who could with any chance of success, and perhaps he would not dream of attempting it. I mean the Roman pontiff. The Archbishop of Canterbury could not do it. Rome would not listen. The Metropolitan of the Eastern Church, or the largest portion of it, could not do it. Rome holds the key of the situation. Let her try and the Protestants will think better of her than has been the case for nearly 400 years, and there is precedent for it. Is it generally known that the Protestants were summoned to the Council of Trent in the sixteenth century? They did not come, but they were invited. Had they come who knows but what the scandal of a divided Christendom might have been averted."

Lieut. Bernard W. Greathed, saved from the battleship, was born and educated in Winnipeg.

It appears that any tavern keeper who sells absinthe in Paris is to have his place closed while the war lasts. But why the limit?

Belgium can never complain that she doesn't have enough iron in her soil.

38th Annual Convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario

WILL BE HELD IN THE

City of Peterborough

ON WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY 1915 JANUARY 6th and 7th

Opening Session takes place at 10 o'clock a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 6th, in the OPERA HOUSE

J. A. Sanderson, President. [illegible] A. Thompson, [illegible]

DAIRYMEN GATHER IN

served. The cow should have a fair chance to live as it should. No dairy animal deserved more consideration. But unless adequate equipment was supplied, good dairying was an impossibility.

Tainted milk placed in good milk would destroy the selling qualities of it. There would be loss in both quantity and quality. Sound flavored cheese and butter could not be manufactured from unsound milk cream.

Unless methods could be adopted or suggested of bettering milk production, dairymen's conventions would be of no avail.

Following Mr. Publow's remarks, an opportunity for discussion was allowed. Mr. Publow declared that the butter produced in Eastern Ontario was not fit for shipment to the foreign markets. He threw out a note of warning to dairymen to awaken to their responsibility. The western provinces would soon outstrip the east in the production of butter, at the present rate.

He urged farmers to be careful in selecting their cows, else a good herd could not be built up. The need of modern milking machines was essential before the herd could be placed on a higher level. Nothing would save Ontario's reputation for cream or butter but better grading. New Zealand butter, Saskatchewan and Alberta butter, was largely graded, hence its increasing superiority.

About Separators.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie thought 75 per cent. of the separators being used were not in proper running condition. Mr. Publow said he was unable to say much on that, but he thought one of the greatest weaknesses in separators was their lack of uniformity of speed. They were not kept clean enough. Mr. Gillespie said a speedometer should be attached to separators so that their speed might be regulated.

Photo Taken.

During the noon recess a group photo of those present was taken outside the Opera House.

Some of those present are: T. A. Thompson, Almonte; C. F. Whitney, Ottawa; Prof. J. H. Grisdale, F. R. Mallory, R. G. Leggett, Newboro; J. N. Stone, Norham; Jos. McGrath, Mt. Chesney; Henry Glendenning, Manilla, and G. A. Gillespie, Peterborough.

The citizens are invited to the meeting tonight. Mayor Buller will give an address of welcome.

Prize Court Detains Ship.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—The Norwegian steamer Sandejord, which was seized by a British cruiser and has been held at Halifax on suspicion of containing contraband, has been detained for the prize court to decide whether it is contraband or not. The difficulty there is in searching steamers at the present day is shown by the fact that the steamer has been held at Halifax now for a month. The cargo had to be all unloaded and then reloaded. The Sandejord sailed from New York with an American cargo and was bound for Norway.

Wants To Get Even.

AYLMER, Jan. 6.—Geo. Swadling, president of the local Sons of England lodge, heard yesterday that his brother had been killed in action, and has left for London to enlist in the hope of, as he put it, "getting back" at the Germans.

ELLIOT'S

THE GERMAN TRIBUTE TO TOMMY ATKINS

Kaiser's Soldiers Found Out Quickly That Britons Long Legs Not Always Used to Run Away

In the earlier days of the war the German press was by no means prone to praise the fighting qualities of the British soldier, but nowadays it is different—the English soldier has compelled the unwilling respect and appreciation of his enemies.

The following article appeared in The Berliner Zeitung am Mittag, under the title of "The Fights With the English around Ypres, by a combatant," the combatant in question being one of the editors of that newspaper serving as a first lieutenant with the German forces.

Full of fight and confident of easy victory our young regiments started to march against the enemy, to "catch the English," as our soldiers put it. All were certain that providence had gifted the English with long legs solely to facilitate their running away the faster.

We thought of the pictures that the comic papers are wont to give of Tommy Atkins, and looked forward to the prospect of gathering in a first-class tennis raquet from the war equipment of one of these "smooth-faced rascals." There were a few who warned us against a possible underestimation of the English, but their misgivings were quieted by pointing out that these were mercenary troops before us, men hired for a few pence a day to fight, bare of patriotism and incapable of sacrifice.

The First Englishman

Sooner than we thought we were upon the enemy. One morning on our march someone called out: "Here is the first dead Englishman!" We galloped across the field where one of our patrols had halted a few hundred yards from the roadway. There he lay, the Englishman, the first we had seen in this campaign, dead, stretched out on his right side. The bullet had gone clean through his heart. Very young, slim and sinewy of body, becomingly clad in his field-grey khaki uniform. The young, beardless face was snowy white and his left hand cramped on his chest. One more mother will soon be shedding bitter tears! Shortly after we discovered in a house two wounded English officers, and confiscated their diaries, which contained many valuable notes, while an hour later the first English prisoner was picked up by a patrol and passed along our column. He naturally was of great interest to our soldiers. "Looks like a chauffeur—wonder whether the mercenary can shoot—looks more cut out for the football and cricket field!" Another hour passed and then the comrades of our prisoner gave us an answer to that question. In fact, they gave us a practical demonstration—such a clear demonstration that our battalion was reduced to half its size after the first few encounters. One suddenly realized that the English mercenary could not be routed with just a hurrah and a yell, and we learned from personal experience that these smooth faced gentlemen used their long legs not always for running away, but sometimes for desperate and dangerous charges. Within a few hours we learned that we had facing us an opponent not to be under-estimated.

Praise For Both Branches

The English infantry who opposed us must be considered among the best troops. Particular stress must be laid on the energy with which the English infantry defended the hills occupied by them and when driven back tried again and again, especially at night, to recover the lost ground. In these endeavors they were efficiently supported by the fire of their field artillery which, like the French, is quite equal to the German. They had also transported heavy naval guns and the English shells and shrapnel caused enormous damage among our own infantry. As the surrounding of the English forces by our troops made itself more and more felt the English infantry tried again and again to break through our lines, particularly in the vicinity of Becleere, though without success.

The English trenches were mostly so arranged as to be quite invisible to the naked eye. When we had got into the first trenches we were astounded at their systematic construction as regards depth, side protection against splintering of shells, breastwork, and flooring. The trenches were nearly all excellently arranged for a long stand. We were particularly astonished at the steel and iron plates built into the breastworks. The floors of the trenches were designed with an eye to maximum comfort. Our men captured there a mass of excellent preserves, corned beef and ham, and many also secured one of the shaving outfits which nearly every English soldier carries.

Used "Dummy" Trenches

In some cases the English had dug trenches but had not occupied them, and to deceive us had put large round turnips and similar objects along the breastworks. Their firing line was then placed either before or behind this trench, so well assimilated to the land as to be practically invisible, so that it was almost untouched by the fire which we directed against what we considered the occupied trench. Frequently it happened that severe infantry machine gun firing broke forth from the wood, and we then advanced against it in short rushes, only to find on arrival that the ground was practically clear of soldiers and that nearly all the shots had been fired down from the trees.

BLUNDERS ON BATTLEFIELDS

It was at Beacon Hill during the Boer War that there happened one of the saddest incidents in the history of the British army.

The East Surreys were in a hollow between two hills, creeping up the valley. The West Surrey regiment half a mile away, caught sight of the crouching figures, and took them for Boers.

In a moment a heavy volley rang out, and it was not until an officer, realizing the mistake, rushed out in front of the West Surreys that the firing ceased.

A nurse, writing afterward from the Estcourt Hospital, said it was pitiful to see the West Surreys coming in one after another, bringing cigarettes, dainties, any present they could find for the wounded men, then hearing their groans, turn away, saying, "God forgive us! This is our work!"

In such a gigantic conflict as this present war, with battle lines stretching 160 miles and more, similar mistakes are bound to occur. When the French were fighting near Muelhausen one regiment got far in advance of the others, and was ordered to go back. As they returned some of their comrades fired at them, under the impression that they were Germans. Twenty men were killed and a large number wounded.

It was this blunder which caused General Joffre to have cards printed in colors showing the uniforms and head-dress of the various branches of the French service. These have been distributed all through the army.

Another case happened in Belgium. We have it on fairly good authority that a Saxon regiment fired upon some Bavarians, taking them for Belgians. As it was dark at the time the mistake is hardly to be wondered at.

Kitchener's Rise in Egypt

No doubt Lord Kitchener was destined to be Sirdar of the Egyptian army, but his appointment as such was precipitated in a curious manner.

He was in command of the Frontier Force when the Khedive paid a visit of inspection. The Khedive was then bitter against Britain, and he went out of his way to be exceedingly rude to Kitchener in front of his troops.

Kitchener promptly resigned. Lord Cromer, however, forced the Khedive to apologize, and Kitchener withdrew his resignation. A little later the then Sirdar, Sir Francis Grenfell, retired, and Lord Cromer insisted on the Khedive offering the Sirdarship to Kitchener, thus "rubbing it into" the Khedive, though, of course, Cromer knew his choice was the best one possible.

Belgians Trust British

The deaconess of a Liverpool home for incurables, tells a delightful story, showing the trust and affection which the British soldier has inspired in the hearts of the people of Belgium. A neighbor has adopted two Belgian children, a boy and a girl. The little girl cried all through the first night and all the next day; she could neither eat nor sleep, and utterly refused to be comforted. Late in the evening the family doctor called, clad in khaki. Scarcely had he entered the room when she ran to him with outstretched arms, crying, "Brittish! Brittish!" She nestled in the doctor's arms, almost immediately fell asleep, and slept the clock round.

TREASURES SENT TO ENGLAND

Even the Germans Forward Valuables to the "Tight Little Isle"

Probably one of the most remarkable incidents of the war is the fact that a considerable number of wealthy Germans sent their private property for safe keeping to England. They felt that it would be safer there than in Germany, for at home it would run the chance of being seized by the invading enemy or impounded by the German Government.

Rather than accept this double risk the Germans sought the opportunity of entrusting valuable paintings and other objects of art to English friends who were returning home on the outbreak of war, and it is estimated that there is several millions of dollars' worth of German property held in England. The chief custodian is Lord Rothschild, who, of course, has relatives as well as friends in Germany, and whose own home at Tring is one of the great treasure houses of the world.

Lord Rothschild notified the British Government of all the German property entrusted to him, and it remains at the owner's risk of seizure.

It is said that Princess Lichnowsky the wife of the former German Ambassador, left all her valuable jewels with a member of Queen Mary's household, and that Lord Stamfordham is the custodian of a great collection of miniatures which belong to the former Austrian Ambassador, who had asked King George to take charge of them, as the Ambassador and the King were on very cordial terms. The King, however, declined to do so, and Lord Stamfordham accepted the trust.

On the outbreak of war the Queen of Italy desired to send some of her most valuable possessions to the English monarch, but again King George declined until Italy was found aiding the allies. Nevertheless, a couple of cases of treasure arrived, and had to be turned over to the Italian Minister by King George.

Almost priceless collections arrived from France and Belgium. For a small country Belgium was as rich in her art treasures as in her cathedrals, and all the paintings, statuary, china, gold and silver ornaments, jewels, tapestry and other objects of value that could be moved were sent across the Channel.

LITERARY SOLDIERS

Captain Owen Wheeler is the author of an interesting article in "Chamber's Journal" on "Poets and Penmen Who Have Soldiered."

First on our list, he writes, comes Geoffrey Chaucer, who is known to have taken part in Edward III.'s French campaign of 1359, which ended rather fruitlessly the following year in the Treaty of Bretigny. Chaucer was then probably about nineteen, and had served previously.

From Chaucer it is a long step to Sir Philip Sidney, and the interval between their military records is not only wide in the matter of time. Sidney may be reckoned, according to contemporary standards, quite a distinguished military man, although, as a matter of fact, he does not seem to have soldiered actively before the campaign of 1585-86 in which he met his death.

Sir Walter Raleigh was a much more experienced soldier than Sidney, but we find only scanty records of his military services, which, again, are largely overshadowed by his naval exploits.

The military experiences of another great Elizabethan, Ben Johnson, are also rather obscure, as well as being somewhat insignificant. Employed in the yard of his stepfather, who was a bricklayer, the future great dramatist ran away about 1591 to Flanders, where the English troops were fighting with Spain, and served for a time as a private soldier. It is recorded that in the course of the campaign he challenged one of the enemy to single combat and slew him.

Such a "totally incapable horseman" as Samuel Taylor Coleridge always was never should have thought of entering a cavalry regiment, yet it was in the 15th Dragoons that this wayward individual enlisted when he fled from Cambridge to London in 1793. The name he gave was Silas Tonkyn Comberbach or Comberbatch, and when he joined his regiment at Reading he probably found his new life hard enough at first to make him regret the step he had taken. But he won favor with his comrades in the ranks by writing their letters and tending them in hospital, and the officers seem to have taken kindly notice of him.

Preserving Railroad Ties

In Canada last year about 10 per cent. of the cross-ties purchased by both electric and steam railways were given a preservative treatment to retard decay. The practice is a fairly recent one, as is seen by the fact that in 1910 practically no ties were treated at all, and that the percentage of treated material has increased steadily since that time. The treatment is most profitable when applied to the harder, stronger woods that if used untreated would decay before the end of their mechanical life.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Prices said not to have been equaled for cash wheat, especially at this time of the year, since the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, were reached today on 'change.

Domestic millers were the chief buyers of the cash wheat that was bargained for in Chicago. Exporters were said to have continued to buy large amounts at the seaboard, but 800,000 bushels was the greatest total known. Meanwhile speculative values here swept higher, and altho unsettled at the finish, were 1⅝c to 2⅝c above last night. Corn closed unchanged to 1-16c up, oats ⅛c to ⅝c up and provisions dearer by 7½c to 55c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 5.—The wheat market at the opening was wild, and the excitement continued for some time following. May wheat opened from $1.33 to $1.34¼, and advanced fractionally later, showing nervousness the most part of the day. The contributing causes of the advance were the continued export trade and higher Liverpool cables.

The European visible supply shows a decrease of 7,264,000 bushels, which was also a factor.

In exporting circles the opinion is freely expressed that a large volume of business would be transacted but for the freight difficulties. Later it was established that considerably over 1,000,000 bushels were worked for export today, and it is claimed to be a record. May wheat on the Winnipeg market was sold at $1.35, which is the record for years.

Winnipeg wheat futures closed 2⅛c to 2⅝c higher; cash wheat, 2¼c to 2⅝c higher; oats, ½c higher, and flax 1⅝c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL Jan. 5.—Export business in Manitoba spring wheat was good today, there being a brisk demand from overseas buyers at an advance in prices of 1s 6d to 2s per quarter, with sales of No. 1 northern to London at 54s 3d and No. 2 northern at 53s 9d, and No. 3 northern was sold to Liverpool at 53s, all January-February shipment. All the offers made by exporters last night were accepted and the above prices were renewed for more, but exporters would not accept them, owing to the further advance in the Winnipeg market, and are asking 1s 9d per quarter more tonight. A much stronger feeling developed in the local market for oats today and prices advanced ½c per bushel, with an improved demand from local and country buyers. English importers wanted spring wheat flour, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight to some ports the volume of business was checked some. Cables were stronger and sales of export patent were made at 27s per sack and choice patent at 29s 6d. The local and country trade in flour is still quiet and prices show no change, but the undertone of the market is strong. The demand for millfeed is fair at firm prices. Butter is fairly active and firm, while cheese is quiet, and the demand for eggs is good.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 5.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.33½; No. 1 northern, $1.32; No. 2 do., $1.29½ to $1.30½; May, $1.34 to $1.35.

CANADIAN ART

Why It Is Not Popular With Canadian Collectors

To follow up Mr. John Lane's rather remarkable pronouncement on Canadian art, the writer paid a visit to the Studio Building, on Severn street, Toronto, to discuss Mr. Lane's criticism with some of the younger Canadian artists who work there. It will be remembered that Mr. Lane, the well-known English publisher and art collector, said that the only thing lacking in the private collections of Canada was a representation of Canadian art! Mr. Lane expressed also his high appreciation of Canadian art, and wondered at the slight recognition it received in its own land.

Tolerance is growing in Canada. It used to be that a man could not not eat a bun on the streets of a city without exciting the public. An Indian in full feathers can parade the streets to-day, however, and be calmly accepted. Artists are no longer considered fritterers. Art exhibitions are becoming customary events of the season. Music in particular, and literature to some extent, are entering into our life. Our private collectors are attracting renowned visitors. All in all, Canada is not neglecting her spiritual expression.

Mr. Lane's comparison of the Canadian school of art with the modern Dutch school does not meet with the same approval as do his other criticisms. Dutch art, says the three interviewed, is essentially commercial. It has no aspirations. Its only virtue is a picturesque field of activity. But Canada is nevertheless flooded with it, mediocre as it may be. One story is told of a picture dealer who brought to Toronto a number of the works of a certain Dutch artist and sold them all, the least at $700 and the greatest at $1,400. It turns out that these canvases were painted for a picture-post-card firm at the rate of $40 apiece, one a week. The dealer bought them from the card company. Such a thing argues a good deal of cupidity on the part of Canadian picture buyers, who are enslaved to foreign names. It is such prejudice as Canadian artists have to meet at every turn, even though the awakening to things Canadian has begun.

The new fields, fresh motives, original subjects that are at hand on every side, the sane and healthy outlook of Canada, neither academic nor super-refined and erotic, both of which extremes are upsetting European art; and the enthusiasm that accompanies the growth of a national spirit, are all important factors whose existence presages much for the future of Canadian art. There is a certain puritanism about Canada, a puritanism as distinct compared even with the United States as is the spirit of the States compared with Europe's. An interesting question arises—whether any art can flourish in a puritanical atmosphere? Are not art and puritanism almost a contradiction in terms? Possibly not, although the experience of Europe in all ages would prove it so. But Canada, with her breadth of spirit, her great distance of growth yet to come, may maintain her puritanism, and then any art not puritan would not be an expression of the national spirit. Certain it is that an austerity, almost a puritanism of spirit, has dominated the truer Canadian art so far.—Gregory Clark in Toronto Star.

HE.

Oh, will you walk a mile with me?
The wind is from the west;
The lark is singing merrily;
A song is in my breast;
The day is fair, the sky is blue,
And sweetly nature calls.
I long to walk a mile with you
Beyond the city's walls.

SHE.

Excuse me, kind sir, if you please,
And think me not unfair.
I have a chance to loll at ease
And breathe the country air.
I lately have received a call
From one whose car is new,
And I possess no wish at all
To walk a mile with you.

The Count—Come, dear, let us get married on the 17th.

His Fiancee—Is that the anniversary of some great historical event in your family?

The Count—No, but I have a note due the 18th.—Puck.

Ungrateful Underdog.

As I walked out the other night
I found two big dogs in a fight.
A large crowd stood,
But wouldn't to the rescue go
Or even try to stop the flow
Of canine blood.
I tried to help the underdog,
Which had the neighborhood agog.
He bit me.
So after this I'll let him yelp,
No underdogs I'll ever help.
You git me?

Evenly Balanced.

Some years ago the "Bathurst School Question" was a very live issued in the Province of New Brunswick, and the matter was finally taken to the Supreme Court of that province.

The Protestants claimed that Mr. O'Brien, a trustee of the Bathurst schools, was unduly favoring the Catholic teachers and endeavoring to introduce religious teaching in the Public Schools.

In referring to this part of the case, Judge Barker, the present chief justice, said:

"It seems that he (O'Brien) was born a Roman Catholic, but afterwards became a member of the Church of England, to which he still belongs; his wife is a Catholic, and of his six children one-half are Roman Catholic and the other Protestant. One would suppose that a gentleman whose religious balance was so admirably adjusted had especial qualifications for a position in which the rule of the road required such strict observance:

"Steer straight as the wind will allow; but be ready
To veer just a point to let travelers pass.
Each sees his own star—a stiff course is too steady
When this one to Meeting goes—that one to Mass."

A Silent Indian.

There is a real Indian chief in the fourth battalion of the Canadians at Salisbury. He is Captain Smith, chief of the Mohawk tribe of Ontario. Here he has charge of a company, but often the men under him make a mistake and address him as "chief." He is very popular among the officers and men of the battalion, but is known as the most silent man on the force. He never says anything, except when he is giving an order.

"Silent as a clam," was the way a brother officer described the big Indian. "The only thing that he apparently ever says is 'huh.' I was out for a long stroll with him yesterday and I don't think that he said a word during the whole journey. Now and then it was just 'huh.'"

CANADIAN LEAGUE WILL BE SURE THING THIS SUMMER

Manager Shaughnessy of the Ottawa Team is Securing Players and Expects to Have a Good Outfit

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—Baseball fans in Ottawa have made inquiries of late whether the Canadian League will carry out its schedule this season in view of the war. There has never been any expression on the part of the league it would not be at the old stand as usual, and indications are it will be quite as strong as ever. President Fitzgerald has warned the magnates however to curb extravagance and court economy not on account of any expected depression, but in view of the fact all the clubs were run at a loss last season despite the fact Ottawa, London and Hamilton showed greater crowds than the previous year. The local club is already taking steps to send out another fast team on the diamond. Manager Shaughnessy has been in touch with President Navin of the Detroit Tigers and has secured Pitcher Betzel whom Detroit drafted from Ottumwa and Outfielder Carleton who was purchased from Kalamazoo of the Southern Michigan, by Navin last July. One week after he was purchased he broke his arm and was out of the game till the last week of the American League season which he finished on the bench of the tigers. Both are good men and sent to Ottawa on optional agreement. Navin also promises a shortstop and hopes to land Frank Buller, the fleet youngster Detroit drafted from Dubuque, in the Three Eye League. Jack Mitchell tried to get this kid for Ottawa when he left here, but the Detroit scouts had him under surveillance. Outside the fact the season will be delayed two weeks in opening on account of the bad weather that always accompanies the early days of May, the Canadian League can be put down as the surest thing in the world this summer.

COMMENT

As You Like it

CRITICISM on "Shorty" Tackaberry's work as a referee has been very prevalent since Monday night's game. Fans were very sore to think no one was penalized for the fight which featured the dying moments of the encounter. It will be recalled that Jackson and Darch fell near the Port Hope goal and before they regained their feet the Port Hope forward line broke away for a combined rush. When Jacwson and Darch did stand up they faced each other for a moment before either made a move to scrap. Tackaberry followed the play as he should have done and as the Port Hope forwards were rushing away from the incident, the referee did not have an opportunity to look back up the ice till Rowden had scored. In the meantime Jackson and Darch had come together, and, before the official turned several railbirds had surrounded the players. When the fight was over the referee could not penalize any of the players as he could not be expected to keep an eye on the defence of one team when the play was at the opposite goal. His duties are to watch the play and that is what he did. In our opinion the only penalty he could have made was to bench Jackson for loafing off-side.

It is not our intention to boost the O.H.A. referees whether they be good or bad. On the contrary we will point out mistakes if any occur but will not place the blame on the work of an official when the Peterborough team loses. The Petes put up a wretched exhibition of hockey Monday night and if Lou Marsh or Harvey Sproule had been handling the game the result would have been the same.

THE RIOT in Cleveland the other evening in the game between the home team and Ottawa College is a hard blow to hockey. The game is just beginning to come to its own across the border and incidents such as Saturday evening's will tend to make it very unpopular. Cleveland has gained a reputation for mixing it while Ottawa College teams are also featured by a desire to give and take. Father Stanton of the Canadian seven and Manager Shannon of Cleveland were grieved to think that the riot occurred and according to latest reports Shannon intends dealing with his culprits in a straightforward manner. Irwin and two other members of the team are to be let out. Cuddy Winters, another Cleveland man, is going to hang up his skates as his wife has voiced objections. At that a thorough house cleaning in the Cleveland camp would be quite in order.

THE NEXT GAME the Peterborough Intermediates will figure in will be on Friday evening here with Belleville as the opponents. The Belleville team gave the Petes a merry old battle last season so a hard game is anticipated. The locals lost last night to Picton and cannot afford to drop another, thus they will be out to win at all costs. On Thursday evening the Peterborough Juniors play Cobourg in Cobourg.

HANS LOBERT, the third sacker of the Phillies is now the property of John McGraw and Co. In exchange for Lobert the Philadelphia club will receive a cash consideration and Al. Demaree, pitcher; Milton Stock, infielder, and Jack Adams, a young pitcher, formerly of New Orleans.

FRED "GUINEA" BAWLF, captain of the Winnipeg Victorias, has retired from the game on account of the death of his father. Western Canada thus loses one of her most prominent hockeyists.

Locals Suffered 3-0 Defeat at Hands of New Entry — Janes Had Big Night

Picton, Ont., Jan. 6.—The O.H.A. game here last night between Peterborough and Picton intermediates resulted in a win for Picton by the score of 3 to 0. The home team scored one goal in each period, while Capt. Hunter's Peterborough bunch could not find the nets for a counter. The game was fast, with close checking and back-checking the features. It was very clean hockey. Janes, in the Peterborough goal, had a very busy sixty minutes, the Picton forwards raining the shots at him, especially in the second period, while Scott's duties were comparatively light. Lou Marsh, of Toronto, made an excellent referee. The line-up:

Peterborough—Goal, Janes; point, Hunter; cover-point, Pethick; rover, Halpin; centre, Rose; right wing Kennealley; left wing, Kelly.

ATTACKING DARDANELLES.

Franco-British Fleet Making Attempt To Force the Straits.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A Berlin wireless despatch says:

An Athens despatch reports that the Franco-British fleet is attempting to force the Dardanelles. It is being blocked by the heavy bombardment of the fortresses. It is said that one torpedo boat was slightly damaged.

It has been previously reported that the allied fleets were bombarding the interior Dardanelles forts, and that the archives and public documents were being removed from Constantinople.

Mediators Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Secretary of Labor Wilson yesterday named Daniel J. Keefe, ex-commissioner of immigration, and Hywell E. Davies as Federal conciliators to intervene in the Ohio and West Virginia coal miners' strikes. This action was taken at the request of the Wheeling, W.Va., chamber of commerce.

Davies was one of the mediators originally appointed in the Colorado coal strike.

Maj.-Gen. Hughes' Son Hurt.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Word has just been received by Maj.-Gen. Hughes that his son, Col. Garnet Hughes, who is with the first Canadian contingent, was struck by a piece of shrapnel shell while over on the firing line with Col. Leckie of Vancouver. They were studying the country and the actual fighting conditions. Col. Hughes has a scalp wound several inches in length, but he was not seriously injured.

Coal Operators Prepare for War.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 6. — After deciding that at least some of the mines in eastern Ohio, where a strike of 15,000 miners has been on since April 1 last, should be operated—either by striking miners or other non-union men—the coal operators at their meeting here yesterday delegated to a committee of seven of their number the task of formulating plans for action.

Englishmen Caught by Dutch.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6.—Two Englishmen, who were in the internment camp at Groningen, in the northern part of Holland, yesterday morning escaped, procured bicycles and speeded southward. They were caught by Dutch soldiers at Moppell, Mores, 40 miles from camp, and taken back.

THE TIME THAT PARIS STARVED

During the last stage of Paris, in 1870-71, the craving for flesh food amongst the famishing people was so great that practically every known beast and bird was greedily devoured.

Cat and dog butchers established themselves. Rat-pies made their appearance. The latter, made from sewer-rats, very fat and very large, were highly esteemed, although some few fastidious people objected to the musky odor they exhaled. Stewed cat was voted "not bad," and ere long every pussy in Paris had passed from the tiles to the saucepan.

Prices ruled high. Rats retailed at from two to three shillings apiece. A full-grown cat, not too old, fetched fifteen shillings. A young, plump dog was worth from ten to fifteen shillings, according to size and breed.

A litter of wolf cubs born in the Jardin des Plantes—the Paris equivalent to the London "Zoo"—averaged $2.50 a pound. Afterwards all the grown animals in the gardens were slaughtered for food ,and there appeared on the tables of Paris restaurateurs such unaccustomed "delicacies" as camel steaks, yak chops, zebra fillets, and ragout of elephant flesh.

The carcasses of the two biggest elephants, named Castor and Pollux were bought by a certain M. Deboos, proprietor of a shop called the "English Butchery," in the Avenue Friedland. He paid 27,000 francs for them—about $5,400—at public auction, and the flesh was retailed at from $5 to $7.50 a pound, the trunk and feet fetching the highest prices.

This establishment became a sort of institution during the siege, being always hung round with strange, if not very appetizing, meats. Here were to be found the plumpest pussies, the tenderest dogs, the most succulent rats. M. Deboos also had on sale at different times two nilgaus, for which he paid $200, a couple of wapitis that cost him $500, besides zebras, buffaloes, yaks, bears, wolves, etc., for all of which he paid high figures, and on all of which he made big profits.

His best bargain, however, was a little live lamb, weighing 25 pounds, which a franc-tireur had looted from a German advance post. He paid the lucky captor $100 for his prize, and sold it for $225 directly afterwards.

Trees and Lightning.

It is not generally known that the electric fluid which is prevalent during thunderstorms has a varying affinity for different trees. M. Camille Flammarion, the famous French scientist, once investigated the proportion of trees struck in France during recent years, and his figures show that the lime is the safest and the oak the most dangerous tree under which to stand in a thunderstorm. During the period covered by M. Flammarion's inquiry only two limes were struck, six pines and the same number of ash and beech trees. After that came seven willows, ten firs, eleven walnuts, fourteen elms, twenty-four poplars and fifty-four oaks.

From Bad to Worse.

At golf and the people who play.
But now he describes the phenomenal strokes
He's made since he learned how to play.

Tired of the Domestic Battlefield.

"No, he isn't."

"Then why does he stay?"

"Says he'd rather be where the fighting is more general."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

And many things you will endure.
But also some one should have said,
Of what is right don't be too sure.

CARPATHIANS THE SCENE OF AUSTRIAN REVERSES

Russians Have Gained Control of Valuable Oil Fields and Have Also Administered a Crushing Blow to the Turkish Armies in the Caucasus, Where an Entire Army Corps Has Been Captured

LONDON, Jan. 6. — The Russians report another victory over the Austrians in the Uzsok Pass of the Carpathians. Emperor Francis Joseph's army in this region is declared to be in full retreat in a mountain pass deep in snow, while a violent snowstorm rages and the Russian cavalry is attacking on the flank and rear.

By forcing this pass the Russians gain control of some of the most valuable oil fields in the Austrian empire, and thus shuts off another of the sources of fuel supply of which the Austro-German armies are said to be so much in need. This, however, has only been part of the Russian task. While forcing back the Turks and Austrians, the Russian troops are holding the line of the Mazurian Lakes in east Prussia; are fighting strenuously to withstand the German offensive in north Poland; are advancing toward Cracow and have crossed Bukowina, which is now virtually in their possession.

In north Poland, where Russia is confronted with the most serious task, the weather is proving a useful ally. The Germans, according to their own accounts, are making only slow progress with their offensive operations, while the Russians, an unofficial despatch received from Berlin by way of Copenhagen says, are advancing toward Cracow and southern Silesia.

Military men look for bigger events between the lower Vistula and the east Prussian frontier. The Russians are in possession of the greater part of the intervening territory, and unless engaged, would, when the river freezes, fall on the German flank to the south of the river. It is therefore believed here that the Germans are planning a movement from Thorn and east Prussia, which would prevent its possibility, and as the fighting would take place in the open it would afford a contrast to the trench warfare which prevails along the rest of the front.

Defeat of the Turks in the Caucasus at Sari Kamysh with the capture of the entire 9th army corps and the vigorous pursuit of the 10th army corps and a severe repulse of the invaders at Ardahan, forty-five miles northwest of Kars, on the road to Tiflis, were reported in despatches from the commander of the Russian forces on the frontier received in Petrograd last night.

This rapid success is considered most gratifying by Grand Duke Nicholas, who had kept his forces at a minimum strength along the three hundred mile Turkish frontier in order not to weaken his armies opposing the Germans and Austrians in the west.

At the outset of the war it was determined in order not to fall in with the designs of the Germans in bringing Turkey into the war to stand on the defensive against the Turks for the present and to devote the energies of Russia to the crushing of the Austrians and Germans. As soon as this was accomplished the Turks would be forced to collapse speedily beneath the superior weight of Russia and Great Britain.

The Turks, led by German officers, took the offensive amid the rigors of a winter of the Caucasus, and the inferior Russian force in compliance with the plans of the General Staff at once fell back and concentrated against the Turkish column so as to defeat them in detail.

When one column of two army corps, it is believed here, advanced as far as Ardahan on Sunday, driving in the Russian advanced outposts, the bear, by a lusty stroke with his claws, smashed this formidable force. This was followed by an immediate offensive at Sari Kamysh before the leaders of that column of invasion could have time to fall back after hearing the result at Ardahan, with the result that the Muscovite entangled over sixty thousand men in his net, or what was left of them, and chased sixty thousand more for their lives. The predicament of the Turks who have escaped from Kamysh is believed to be very bad.

The effect of these defeats to Turkish arms upon Constantinople is awaited with interest. The Russian successes are considered a severe blow to the prestige of the German officers, who held the high commands, and this will not be lost on the Turkish populace.

"WENT ON SHOOTING."

Private R. G. Tipper, of the Coldstream Guards, writes from the front as follows:—

There was a man in the trenches with us who had not got a clean sheet; he always seemed to be getting into trouble for one thing and another.

This time it took him longer, but at last he got back, and with difficulty handling his rifle with his mauled limbs, he grimly went on shooting.

He got hit in the left arm. He crawled back out of the trenches to the nearest field ambulance and had his wound dressed.

We advised him to go to the rear, but he refused, and with difficulty made his way back to the firing line. There, despite his wounded arm, he steadily went on firing at the enemy.

Some time passed, and he was shot in the right arm. Again he made the difficult and painful journey to the field hospital, and again, with both arms injured, he stubbornly insisted on crawling back to the trench.

By and by he collapsed, shot clean through the body. Several comrades ran to him and raised him. They told him he must get back, but he said, "No, let me be. The beggars have done me in this time, Jack."

He nodded towards two wounded men a little way off in the trench and said, "Get these chaps out, they'll be good for something again. But for me, I'm done."

His chums were laying him down when he muttered, "Hoist me up before you go. I'll give them another round, so help me. Prop me up quick, and look to those two chaps."

They propped him up beside his rifle, which rested in the loophole. The poor fellow with fumbling hands pointed his rifle and let it drive two more rounds. Then he slipped down dead.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The official information bureau announced last night that an agreement had been reached between Great Britain and Germany providing for the exchange of prisoners of war who were incapitated for further service. The announcement is as follows:

"On Dec. 10 the British Government proposed to the German Government, through the United States, that arrangements be made for the exchange of British and German officers and men, prisoners of war, who were physically incapitated for further military service. The acceptance of this offer by the German Government was conveyed to the British Government on the 31st. Arrangements are being made to give effect to it."

ALBERT SAVIGNY, M.P.

for Dorchester who probably will become Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, succeeding Hon. P. E. Blondin recently appointed to the Cabinet.

CARDINAL ARRESTED.

Archbishop Mercier, Primate of Belgium, Imprisoned By Germans.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6. — (Via London.)—A despatch received by The Tijd from Rosendaal says that Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium and Archbishop of Malines, has been arrested by the German authorities and held a prisoner in his own archepiscopal palace at Malines under a military guard.

The report, which has not been confirmed, says the cardinal's arrest was the result of a pastoral letter issued by him and read in the churches of Belgium on Sunday. In this letter the cardinal is said to have referred to the occupation of Belgium as follows:

"This power has no legal authority and consequently you owe it in your heart neither allegiance nor obedience. The only legal authority in Belgium is that appertaining to the king, his Government and the representatives of the nation."

Most of the leading Christian nations seem to have mislaid the other cheek.

FATHER OF WM. STONE DISPLAYED LITTLE CONCERN

Investigation Into Operator's Death Adjourned for Two Weeks

Whitby, Jan. —Harry Birmingham spent an uneasy hour yesterday afternoon at the enquiry into the death of William Stone, the young night operator, whose chum the witness was. Expectation had been fanned to fever heat as to what Birmingham's evidence might disclose, and the courtroom was thronged with curious listeners. Crown Attorney Farewell's questions probed into the intimate relations existing between Stone and the witness, but the latter proved to be a big negation. He knew nothing as to the murderer, or the cause of the crime. The witness spent many evenings with the young operator, who was teaching him telegraphy and the duties of reporting trains. Often when Stone had leave of absence, or overstayed his leave, the witness reported trains for him. He believed that Stone's best girl lived at Port Huron, but he never heard of a rival or of any trouble over the girl. Birmingham owned an old rusty revolver, but had not been able to get cartridges to fit it. He never saw a revolver in Stone's possession. He had been with Stone till 12.30 the night of the murder, and then went home and to bed. He had not heard a shot during the night.

The Crown attorney stated that he believed the witness knew more about the crime than he was telling, and that he would be again called to the witness stand, and the Crown has taken steps to keep him handy.

A bit of evidence that caused some sensation in the court was that of Nightwatchman John Patterson, who was sent to the home of the murdered youth to apprise the family of the crime. The young man's father, in response to the knock, appeared at the door, and when he was told that he was wanted at the station immediately there arose a loud outcry in a woman's voice and weeping within the house. Stone could be heard talking to the woman; in two minutes he appeared at the door dressed ready for the journey to the station. When outside he was told that his son was shot and killed, but the father made no comment whatever, and appeared very little concerned, when he saw the dead body of his son. That these circumstances are so unusual as to be suspicious is the view the Crown evidently takes, for Stone is being held in jail here on a charge which will keep him as long as the Crown desires.

Two young men, Elwood Henderson and Herb Willis, who were said to be intimate with the murdered youth, were examined, but nothing was learned from them which threw light upon the crime. There have been rumors of further arrests, but as yet none have occurred. The enquiry was adjourned for two weeks, and in the interim the Crown will pursue the clues which have developed.
